Preface

Replacement Volume 1B, published in 1969, accumulated a supplement equalling the bound volume in size. This 1981 replacement volume is issued to incorporate the new material, including statutes passed at the 1981 Session of the General Assembly through July 10, 1981, in the bound volume and to eliminate what is obsolete.

Beginning with formal opinions issued by the North Carolina Attorney General on July 1, 1969, such opinions which construe a specific statute will be cited as an annotation to that statute. For a copy of an opinion or of its headnotes write the Attorney General, P.O. Box 629, Raleigh, N.C. 27602.

The recompiled volume has been prepared and published under the supervision of the Department of Justice of the State of North Carolina. The members of the North Carolina Bar are requested to communicate any defects they may find in the General Statutes, and any suggestions they may have for improving them, to the Department.

RUFUS L. EDMISTEN
Attorney General

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Historical Background. — See Resort Dev. Co. v. Parmele, 235 N.C. 689, 71 S.E.2d 474 (1952).

The term "common law" refers to the common law of England. State v. Willis, 255 N.C. 473, 121 S.E.2d 854 (1961); State v. Lackey, 271 N.C. 171, 155 S.E.2d 465 (1967); State ex. rel. Bruton v. Flying "W" Enterprises, Inc., 273 N.C. 399, 160 S.E.2d 482 (1968).

Common Law Adopted as of Date of Signing of Declaration of Independence. — This section adopted the common law of England as of the date of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Steelman v. City of New Bern, 279 N.C. 589, 184 S.E.2d 239 (1971).

Extent of Common Law in Force and Effect. — So much of the common law as is not destructive of, repugnant to, or inconsistent with our form of government, and which has not been repealed or abrogated by statute or become obsolete, is in full force and effect in this jurisdiction. State v. Hampton, 210 N.C. 283, 186 S.E. 251 (1936).

So much of the common law as has not been abrogated or repealed by statute is in full force and effect in this State. Hoke v. Atlantic Greyhound Corp., 226 N.C. 332, 38 S.E.2d 105 (1946); Scholtens v. Scholtens, 230 N.C. 149, 52 S.E.2d 350 (1949), overruled on other grounds, Foster v. Foster, 264 N.C. 694, 142 S.E.2d 638 (1965); Henson v. Thomas, 231 N.C. 173, 56 S.E.2d 432, 12 A.L.R.2d 1171 (1949); Friendly Fin. Corp. v. Quinn, 232 N.C. 407, 61 S.E.2d 192 (1950); Ionic Lodge No. 72 F.A. & A.M. v. Ionic Lodge F.A. & A.M. No. 72 Co., 232 N.C. 648, 62 S.E.2d 73 (1950); Cooperative Whse., Inc. v. Lumberton Tobacco Bd. of Trade, Inc., 242 N.C. 123, 87 S.E.2d 25 (1955).

A common-law rule which has not been abrogated or repealed by statute in North Carolina, is still in effect under the terms of this section. Elliott v. Elliott, 235 N.C. 153, 69 S.E.2d 224 (1952); Redding v. Redding, 235 N.C. 638, 70 S.E.2d 676 (1952); McMichael v. Proctor, 243 N.C. 479, 91 S.E.2d 231 (1956); Mullen v. Sawyer, 8 N.C. App. 458, 174 S.E.2d 646 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 277 N.C. 623, 178 S.E.2d 425 (1971). See note in 30 N.C.L. Rev. 417 (1952).

Extent to Which Common Law May Be Modified. — So much of the common law as is in force by virtue of this section may be modified or repealed, but those parts of the common law which are imbedded in the Constitution are not subject to control. State v. Mitchell, 202 N.C. 439, 163 S.E. 581 (1932).

Effect of Legislation with Respect to Subject Matter of Common-Law Rule. — Where the North Carolina General Assembly has legislated with respect to the subject matter of a common-law rule, the statute supplants the common law with respect to the particular rule, but so much of the common law as has not been abrogated or repealed by statute is in full force and effect. Allen v. Standard Crankshaft & Hydraulic Co., 210 F. Supp. 844 (W.D.N.C. 1962), aff'd, 323 F.2d 29 (4th Cir. 1963).

Statutes Construed According to Common-Law Definition. — When a statute punishes an act, giving it a name known to the common law without otherwise defining it, the statute is construed according to the common-law definition. State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971); State v. Roberts, 286 N.C. 265, 210 S.E.2d 396 (1974).

Presumption as to Common Law in Sister States. — Where there is no evidence to the contrary, the presumption is that the common law is in force in a sister state. Hipps v. Southern Ry., 177 N.C. 472, 99 S.E. 335 (1919).

Applied in Wells v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., 213 N.C. 178, 195 S.E. 394, 116 A.L.R. 130 (1938); State v. Sullivan, 229 N.C. 251, 49 S.E.2d 458 (1948).

Quoted in Lutz Indus., Inc. v. Dixie Home Stores, 242 N.C. 332, 88 S.E.2d 333 (1955); State v. Lowry, 263 N.C. 536, 139 S.E.2d 870 (1965).

Stated in In re Johnston, 16 N.C. App. 38, 190 S.E.2d 879 (1972); State v. Fulcher, 34 N.C. App. 233, 237 S.E.2d 909 (1977).

Emery, 224 N.C. 581, 31 S.E.2d 858 (1944); State v. Sneed, 38 N.C. App. 230, 247 S.E.2d 658 (1978); Nash County Bd. of Educ. v. Biltmore County, 464 F. Supp. 1027 (E.D.N.C. 1978).

II. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

A. Civil.

The common-law rights and disabilities of husband and wife are in force in this State except insofar as they have been abrogated or repealed by statute. Scholtens v. Scholtens, 230 N.C. 149, 52 S.E.2d 350 (1949), overruled on other grounds, Foster v. Foster, 264 N.C. 694, 142 S.E.2d 638 (1965).

The common-law doctrine of survivorship between husband and wife as tenants by entireties has not been changed by statute and is in force in this State. Dorsey v. Kirkland, 177 N.C. 520, 99 S.E. 407 (1919).

Presumption of Death. — The doctrine of the common law as to presumptive death is not repealed or affected by statute, and obtains in our courts. Steele v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 196 N.C. 408, 145 S.E. 787 (1928).

Obligation of Father to Support Child. — At common law it is the duty of a father to support his minor children. The common-law obligation of a father to support his child is not a debt in the legal sense, but an obligation imposed by law. It is not a property right of the child but is a personal duty of the father which is terminated by his death. These common-law principles have not been abrogated or modified by statute and are in full force and effect in this jurisdiction. Mullen v. Sawyer, 277 N.C. 623, 178 S.E.2d 425 (1971).

Tort Action by Child against Parent. — The common-law rule that an unemancipated, minor child, living in the household of its parents, cannot maintain an action in tort against its parents or either of them, still prevails in North Carolina. Redding v. Redding, 235 N.C. 638, 70 S.E.2d 676 (1952).

Exemption of Nonresidents from Civil Process. — The common-law privilege of the exemption of nonresidents from service of civil process while attending upon litigation in the courts of this State, as suitors or witnesses, was not repealed by implication by §§ 8-64, 9-18. Cooper v. Wyman, 122 N.C. 784, 29 S.E. 947 (1898).

Limitation Over in Personal Property. — The common-law rule that there can be no limitation over in personal property after reservation of a life estate therein is in force in this State, under this section, and has been recognized by judicial decision and by statutory implication. Speight v. Speight, 208 N.C. 132, 179 S.E. 461 (1935).

The common-law rule that future interests in personal property may be created by will but not by deed prevails in this State, since it has not been abrogated or repealed by statute or become obsolete, and is not destructive of, or repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the freedom and independence of this State. Woodard v. Clark, 236 N.C. 190, 72 S.E.2d 433 (1952).

Trademarks. — State statutes providing for registration of trademarks are in affirmance of the common law. Allen v. Standard Crankshaft & Hydraulic Co., 210 F. Supp. 844 (W.D.N.C. 1962), aff'd, 323 F.2d 29 (4th Cir. 1963).

The remedies given by statutes providing for registration of trademarks are either declaratory or are cumulative and additional to those recognized by the common law. Allen v. Standard Crankshaft & Hydraulic Co., 210 F. Supp. 844 (W.D.N.C. 1962), aff'd, 323 F.2d 29 (4th Cir. 1963).

Implied Warranty in Sale of Food. — The common-law rule of implied warranty in the sale of food by a retailer to a consumer, even though the food may be sold in a sealed container, has not been rendered obsolete by the changes in the manner and method of the manufacture, preparation and distribution of food. Rabb v. Covington, 215 N.C. 572, 2 S.E.2d 705 (1939).

Survival of Actions. — Since at common law, causes of action for wrongful injury, whether resulting in death or not, did not survive the injured party, the survival of such actions is solely by virtue of statute. Hoke v. Atlantic Greyhound Corp., 226 N.C. 332, 38 S.E.2d 105 (1946).

Tortious Killing. — The common law, adopted as the law of North Carolina in this section, gave no right of action for the tortious killing of a human being. Gay v. Thompson, 266 N.C. 394, 146 S.E.2d 425 (1966).

Right of Father of Illegitimate Child to Visitation Privileges. — The common law principle that the father of an illegitimate child is not entitled to visitation privileges absent consent of the mother has been abrogated by statutes as well as case law. Conley v. Johnson, 24 N.C. App. 122, 210 S.E.2d 88 (1974).

Preference to Debts Due to State Abrogated. — The English common law which gave a debt due to the sovereign a preference over the debts due to others is not in force as applied to a debt due to this State, since the rule as it existed at common law is antagonistic to the spirit of our governmental institutions. North Carolina Corp. Comm'n v. Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 193 N.C. 513, 137 S.E. 587 (1927).

Exemption of Attorneys from Arrest. — The common law exemption of an attorney from arrest in a civil action, should, under our institutions and because of obsoleteness by nonusage, not prevail, except where the attorneys are actually in attendance upon court in the due course of their employment as attorneys. Greenleaf v. People's Bank, 133 N.C. 292, 45 S.E. 638 (1903).

B. Criminal.

Punishment When No Penalty Expressly Provided. — The common-law rule obtains in this State that where a statute enacted in the public interest commands an act to be done or proscribes the commission of an act, and no penalty is expressly provided for its breach, its violation may be punished as for a misdemeanor. State v. Bishop, 228 N.C. 371, 45 S.E.2d 858 (1947).

The solicitation of another to commit a felony is a crime, although the solicitation is of no effect, and the crime is not committed, the common-law rule being in effect and controlling. State v. Hampton, 210 N.C. 283, 186 S.E. 251 (1936); State v. Furr, 292 N.C. 711, 235 S.E.2d 193, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 924, 98 S. Ct. 402, 54 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1977); State v. Tyner, 50 N.C. App. 206, 272 S.E.2d 626 (1980).

The offense of solicitation of another to commit a felony has been cognizable at common law at least since Rex v. Higgins, 2 East 5, 102 Eng. Rep. 269 (1801) and is still an indictable offense under the common law in this State. State v. Furr, 292 N.C. 711, 235 S.E.2d 193, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 924, 98 S. Ct. 402, 54 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1977).

False Imprisonment. — North Carolina does not have a criminal statute making false imprisonment a crime and, therefore, the common law with respect to false imprisonment is the law of this State. State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971).

Kidnapping. — Since this section adopted the common law as the law of this State, the common law with respect to kidnapping and false imprisonment was the law of this State. State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971).

The failure of § 14-39, prior to its 1975 amendment, to define kidnapping did not render the statute vague or uncertain, and the common-law definition of the offense was incorporated into the statute by construction. State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971).

Since § 14-39, prior to its 1975 amendment, did not define kidnapping, the common-law definition of that crime was the law of this State. State v. Murphy, 280 N.C. 1, 184 S.E.2d 845 (1971); State v. Hudson, 281 N.C. 100, 187 S.E.2d 756 (1972), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1160, 94 S. Ct. 920, 39 L.Ed.2d 112 (1974).

Rape. — By this section the common-law death penalty for rape was adopted in North Carolina. State v. Waddell, 282 N.C. 431, 194 S.E.2d 19 (1973).

Burglary. — Since 1889, burglary has been divided into two degrees by § 14-51. If the burglarized dwelling is occupied, it is burglary in the first degree; if unoccupied, it is burglary in the second degree. To constitute burglary in either degree, however, the common law required the felonious breaking and entering to occur in the nighttime, and this common law requirement is still the law in North Carolina. State v. Jones, 294 N.C. 642, 243 S.E.2d 118 (1978).

The common-law definition of arson is still in force in this State. State v. Long, 243 N.C. 393, 90 S.E.2d 739 (1956); State v. Arnold, 285 N.C. 751, 208 S.E.2d 646 (1974).

Attempt to Commit Arson. — The common-law rule that an attempt to commit arson is a misdemeanor was changed by § 14-67, which made an attempt to commit arson a felony. State v. Arnold, 285 N.C. 751, 208 S.E.2d 646 (1974).

Champerty is an offense at common law, and prevails in this State, being retained under this section. Merrell v. Stuart, 220 N.C. 326, 17 S.E.2d 458 (1941).

Barratry. — The common-law offense of barratry obtains in this State, since it has never been the subject of legislation in North Carolina and is not repugnant nor inconsistent with our form of government. State v. Batson, 220 N.C. 411, 17 S.E.2d 511, 139 A.L.R. 614 (1941).

Stop and Frisk. — The absence of a stop and frisk statute is not fatal to the authority of law-enforcement officers in North Carolina to stop suspicious persons for questioning and to search those persons for dangerous weapons, since those practices are valid under the common law. State v. Streeter, 283 N.C. 203, 195 S.E.2d 502 (1973).

Right of Bail in Capital Cases. — At common law bail might be granted in capital cases only by a high judicial officer upon thorough scrutiny of the facts and great caution. This right, though once modified by former statutes against its existence in capital offenses where the proof was evident and the presumption was great, now prevails in this State as it existed at common law. State v. Herndon, 107 N.C. 934, 12 S.E. 268 (1890). See § 15A-533.

Habeas Corpus. — It is an admitted principle of common law that every court of record of superior jurisdiction has the power to issue the writ of habeas corpus. This power is preserved in this State and can be exercised by all courts of record of superior jurisdiction. In re Bryan, 60 N.C. 1 (1863).

The common-law writ of error coram nobis to challenge the validity of petitioner's conviction for matters extraneous the record, is available under our procedure. In re Taylor, 230 N.C. 566, 53 S.E.2d 857 (1949), overruled on other grounds, Dantzic v. State, 279 N.C. 212, 182 S.E.2d 563 (1971); State v. Daniels, 231 N.C. 17, 56 S.E.2d 2 (1949), cert. denied, 339 U.S. 954, 70 S. Ct. 837, 94 L. Ed. 2d 1366 (1950), overruled on other grounds, Dantzic v. State, 279 N.C. 619, 184 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

The availability of a writ of error coram nobis in this State stems from this section which adopts the common law as the law of this State, and authority for the writ stems from N.C. Const., Art. IV, § 12, which gives the Supreme Court authority to exercise supervision over the inferior courts of the State. State v. Green, 277 N.C. 188, 176 S.E.2d 756 (1970).

There is no requirement that, in every instance, the approval of the Supreme Court must first be obtained before application can be made to the trial court for issuance of a writ of error coram nobis. Prior to In re Taylor, 229 N.C. 297, 49 S.E.2d 749 (1948), it does not appear that authority for the issuance of the writ, long recognized as an available common-law writ, was derived from the supervisory powers granted in the Constitution but rather from this section which, with certain exceptions, adopted the common law as the law of this State. Dantzic v. State, 279 N.C. 212, 182 S.E.2d 563, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 619, 184 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

Forfeiture for felony, which was the established rule at common law, has had no force in this State since 1778. White v. Fort, 10 N.C. 251 (1824).

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This Chapter replaces Chapter 5 of the North Carolina General Statutes. The Commission deals with the full range of contempt, both criminal and civil, for two reasons. First, criminal contempt is clearly within the subject matter which the Commission was charged to study, and many aspects of civil contempt are necessary to the enforcement of orders in criminal cases. Second, once the Commission began to deal with criminal contempt, it became necessary also to deal with civil contempt since the two are inextricably bound together in Chapter 5. The provisions in Chapter 5A are not directly drawn from any other statute, but they are drafted in light of Chapter 5 and of the American Bar Association's standards on the function of the trial judge. This Chapter does not carry forward the provisions of Chapter 5 which grant contempt powers to boards of county commissioners and the Utilities and Industrial Commissions. The application of those powers was sufficiently unclear under Chapter 5 that the Commission thought it best that those bodies either initiate statutes specifically dealing with that authority or that those bodies rely on court orders or criminal statutes dealing with the disruption of meetings.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 36, contains a severability clause.

The "Official Comments" under this Chapter are reprinted from the Legislative Program and Report of the Criminal Code Commission to the 1977 General Assembly.

Criminal Contempt.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The establishment of this Article represents one of the basic purposes of the Commission in drafting the Chapter on contempt — to draw a sharp distinction between proceedings for criminal contempt and the proceedings for civil contempt (or "as for contempt"). This Article deals with those matters for which a sanction is imposed purely as punishment. The sanction occurs without regard to what the contemnor will do after imposition of the sanction.

§§ 5A-1 to 5A-10: Reserved for future codification purposes.

§ 5A-11. Criminal contempt.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b), each of the following is criminal contempt:

(1) Willful behavior committed during the sitting of a court and directly tending to interrupt its proceedings.

(2) Willful behavior committed during the sitting of a court in its immediate view and presence and directly tending to impair the respect due its authority.

(3) Willful disobedience of, resistance to, or interference with a court's lawful process, order, directive, or instruction or its execution.

(4) Willful refusal to be sworn or affirmed as a witness, or, when so sworn or affirmed, willful refusal to answer any legal and proper question when the refusal is not legally justified.

(5) Willful publication of a report of the proceedings in a court that is grossly inaccurate and presents a clear and present danger of imminent and serious threat to the administration of justice, made with knowledge that it was false or with reckless disregard of whether it was false. No person, however, may be punished for publishing a truthful report of proceedings in a court.

(6) Willful or grossly negligent failure by an officer of the court to perform his duties in an official transaction.

(7) Willful or grossly negligent failure to comply with schedules and practices of the court resulting in substantial interference with the business of the court.

(8) Willful refusal to testify or produce other information upon the order of a judge acting pursuant to Article 61 of Chapter 15A, Granting of Immunity to Witnesses.

(9) Willful communication with a juror in an improper attempt to influence his deliberations.

(10) Any other act or omission specified elsewhere in the General Statutes of North Carolina as grounds for criminal contempt.

The grounds for criminal contempt specified here are exclusive, regardless of any other grounds for criminal contempt which existed at common law.

(b) No person may be held in contempt under this section on the basis of the content of any broadcast, publication, or other communication unless it presents a clear and present danger of an imminent and serious threat to the administration of criminal justice.

(c) This section is subject to the provisions of G.S. 7A-276.1, Court orders prohibiting publication or broadcast of reports of open court proceedings or reports of public records banned. (1977, c. 711, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section is based on Section 5-1. Generally this section merely compresses the existing statement of grounds for criminal contempt, including the consolidation of previously separate grounds. Under subdivision (4), refusal to answer a question when that answer is privileged would not be contempt since the refusal would be "legally justified." Subdivision (5) adds the clause "made with knowledge that it was false. . ." thus engrafting the standard of New York Times v. Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254 (1964), onto cases of alleged contempt in publishing reports of proceedings. Subdivision (7) does not have a counterpart in Chapter 5; it was added to make clear, for example, that the failure to appear in court at the proper time by one, including counsel, whose nonappearance would interfere with the court's schedule, could be subject to criminal contempt. Subdivision (9) is new and gives the court authority to step in immediately in cases of improper communication with jury. It is intended to complement the provision of a new G.S. 14-225.1, enlarging the Chapter 14 provisions dealing with jury tampering. The provisions of G.S. 5A-12(e) dictate the relationship between the two sanctions for jury tampering. Subdivision (10) is also new and is intended to insure that this Chapter does not reject attempts elsewhere in the General Statutes to make certain acts criminal contempt. The final sentences of this section are intended to effect the same purpose as the final two sentences of G.S. 5-1. Subsection (b) supplements or clarifies G.S. 5A-11(a)(4) by prohibiting as punishment as contempt for a communication which does not pose a "clear and present danger" to justice. Subsection (c) operates as a reminder of the existence of another new provision, G.S. 7A-276.1, which prohibits "gag orders" of reports of open-court proceedings or of records required to be open to public inspection. Especially important is the final sentence of the section making such an order void, thus overcoming the usual rule that a person subject to an order must comply with that order, even though it may be illegal, until a higher court declares its illegality.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the annotations under this section are from cases decided under former § 5-1.

This section should be strictly construed as a criminal statute. West v. West, 199 N.C. 12, 153 S.E. 600 (1930). See In re Hege, 205 N.C. 625, 172 S.E. 345 (1934); North Carolina v. Carr, 264 F. Supp. 75 (W.D.N.C.), appeal dismissed, 386 F.2d 129 (4th Cir. 1967).

The power to punish for contempt is inherent in all courts. Ex parte Terry, 128 U.S. 289, 9 S. Ct. 77, 32 L. Ed. 405 (1888).

Statutory provisions regulating proceedings for contempt confer on the courts all the inherent powers to attach for contempt that were recognized by the common law as essential to the due and orderly exercise of their jurisdiction and functions. State v. Little, 175 N.C. 743, 94 S.E. 680 (1917).

For discussions of the history, nature, and extent of the power of courts to punish for contempt, see Ex parte McCown, 139 N.C. 95, 51 S.E. 957 (1905); In re Brown, 168 N.C. 417, 84 S.E. 690 (1915). See also 12 N.C.L. Rev. 260.

And Courts Cannot Be Deprived of Power. — It is essential for an effective administration of justice in an orderly and efficient way that the court possess certain powers to enforce its mandate. A legislative interference to the extent of depriving the courts of these powers is tantamount to depriving the judicial department of the means of self-preservation and cannot be constitutionally justified. See Ex parte McCown, 139 N.C. 95, 51 S.E. 957 (1905); Snow v. Hawkes, 183 N.C. 365, 111 S.E. 621 (1922).

The power to punish for a contempt committed in the presence of the court, or near enough to impede its business, is essential to the existence of every court. In re Hennis, 6 N.C. App. 683, 171 S.E.2d 211 (1969), rev'd on other grounds, 276 N.C. 571, 173 S.E.2d 785 (1970).

But Legislature May Regulate. — These powers, however, as they existed at common law, while they may not be abrogated, may be reasonably regulated by legislation. Thus, statutes such as those in former Chapter 5 were regulatory legislation upon the subject, and being in accord with modern doctrine, could not be assailed on the grounds of unconstitutionality. See In re Oldham, 89 N.C. 23 (1883); In re Robinson, 117 N.C. 533, 23 S.E. 453 (1895); In re Brown, 168 N.C. 417, 84 S.E. 690 (1915).

Limit of District Court's Authority. — A judge of the district court has no authority, except in his own district, to punish for contempt. In re Rhodes, 65 N.C. 518 (1871); Morris v. Whitehead, 65 N.C. 637 (1871).

Acts constituting contempt committed before a referee in supplementary proceedings are to be punished by the court making the reference. LaFontaine v. Southern Underwriters Ass'n, 83 N.C. 132 (1880).

Authority of Commissioner Not Exclusive. — The power of a commissioner, appointed by the court, to commit for refusal to testify is not given exclusively, if at all; but he may invoke the power of the judge, even though he may be given concurrent authority, under statute. Bradley Fertilizer Co. v. Taylor, 112 N.C. 141, 17 S.E. 69 (1893).

Authority of Nisi Prius Judge. — The right of a nisi prius judge to order a witness or anyone else into immediate custody for a contempt committed in the presence of the court in session is unquestioned. State v. Dick, 60 N.C. 440 (1864); State v. Ownby, 146 N.C. 677, 61 S.E. 630 (1908); State v. Swink, 151 N.C. 726, 66 S.E. 448 (1909).

Contempt of Subordinate Officer Regarded as Contempt of Appointing Court. — A contempt against a subordinate officer appointed by a court, such as a commissioner, ordinarily is regarded as contempt of the authority of the appointing court, and the appointing court has power to punish such contempt. This is true even where such subordinate officer is vested with the power to punish. Galyon v. Stutts, 241 N.C. 120, 84 S.E.2d 822 (1954).

Applied in Osmar v. Crosland-Osmar, Inc., 43 N.C. App. 721, 259 S.E.2d 771 (1979).

II. NATURE AND PURPOSE OF PROCEEDINGS.

Nature of Proceedings. — The fact that contemptuous conduct arises in a civil action does not alter the fact that contempt proceedings are criminal in nature. Blue Jeans Corp. of America v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Although contempt of court, in its essential character, is divided into various kinds, such as direct or constructive, and civil or criminal, nevertheless in every species of contempt there is said to be necessarily inherent an element of offense against the majesty of the law savoring more or less of criminality. Therefore it is said that the process by which the party charged is reached and tried is essentially criminal or quasi-criminal. Blue Jeans Corp. of America v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

A contempt proceeding is sui generis. It is criminal in its nature in that the party is charged with doing something forbidden, and if found guilty, is punished. Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966).

A contempt proceeding under this section is sui generis, criminal in its nature, which may be resorted to in civil or criminal actions. Blue Jeans Corp. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 4 N.C. App. 245, 166 S.E.2d 698, aff'd, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Although labeled "civil" contempt, the proceeding formerly designated "as for contempt" was by no means a civil action or proceeding to which § 6-18 (when costs shall be allowed to plaintiff as a matter of course), or § 6-20 (allowance of costs in discretion of court) would apply. United Artists Records, Inc. v. Eastern Tape Corp., 18 N.C. App. 183, 196 S.E.2d 598, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 666, 197 S.E.2d 880 (1973).

Contempt proceedings may be resorted to in civil or criminal actions. Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966).

Purpose. — Punishments for contempt of court have two aspects, namely: 1. To vindicate the dignity of the court from disrespect shown to it or its orders. 2. To compel the performance of some order or decree of the court which it is in the power of the party to perform and which he refuses to obey. See In re Chiles, 89 U.S. (22 Wall.) 157, 22 L. Ed. 819 (1874); Bessette v. W.B. Conkey Co., 194 U.S. 324, 24 S. Ct. 665, 48 L. Ed. 997 (1904).

Contempt Proceeding as Part of Original Injunction Suit. — While some jurisdictions hold that a criminal contempt proceeding is independent and not a part of the case out of which the alleged contempt arose, there is authority that a contempt proceeding based on the violation of an injunction, regardless of whether the proceeding is civil or criminal in nature, is a part of the original injunction suit and properly triable as such. Blue Jeans Corp. of America v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Criminal and Civil Contempt Distinguished. — Proceedings for contempt are of two classes, criminal and civil. Criminal proceedings are those brought to preserve the power and to vindicate the dignity of the court and to punish for disobedience of its processes or orders. Civil proceedings are those instituted to preserve and enforce the rights of the parties to actions and to compel obedience to orders and decrees made for the benefit of the suitors. Galyon v. Stutts, 241 N.C. 120, 84 S.E.2d 822 (1954).

Criminal contempt is a term applied where the judgment is in punishment of an act already accomplished, tending to interfere with the administration of justice. Civil contempt is a term applied where the proceeding is had to preserve and enforce the rights of private parties to suits and to compel obedience to orders and decrees made for the benefit of such parties. Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966); Blue Jeans Corp. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 4 N.C. App. 245, 166 S.E.2d 698, aff'd, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Contempt proceedings are of two classes: those brought to vindicate the dignity and authority of the court; and those brought to enforce the rights of private parties. The former are as a rule held criminal in their nature and are generally governed by the rules applicable to criminal cases. North Carolina v. Carr, 264 F. Supp. 75 (W.D.N.C.), appeal dismissed, 386 F.2d 129 (4th Cir. 1967).

Criminal proceedings, involving as they do offenses against the courts and organized society, are punitive in their nature, and the government, the courts, and the people are interested in their prosecution. Whereas civil proceedings, having as their underlying purpose the preservation of private rights, are primarily remedial and coercive in their nature, and are usually prosecuted at the instance of an aggrieved suitor. Galyon v. Stutts, 241 N.C. 120, 84 S.E.2d 822 (1954).

Criminal contempt is the commission of an act tending to interfere with the administration of justice, while civil contempt is the remedy for the enforcement of orders in the equity jurisdiction of the court, and the willful refusal to pay alimony as ordered by the court is civil contempt. Dyer v. Dyer, 213 N.C. 634, 197 S.E. 157 (1938).

Punishment for Both Criminal and Civil Contempt. — There are certain instances where contemnors may be punished for both criminal contempt and for civil contempt. Blue Jeans Corp. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 4 N.C. App. 245, 166 S.E.2d 698 (1969).

When Criminal Contempt Sanctions Applied. — Criminal contempt or punishment for contempt is applied where the judgment is in punishment of an act already accomplished, tending to interfere with the administration of justice. Rose's Stores, Inc. v. Tarrytown Center, Inc., 270 N.C. 201, 154 S.E.2d 320 (1967); Blue Jeans Corp. of America v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

III. RIGHTS OF ACCUSED.

Criminal contempts are crimes. North Carolina v. Carr, 264 F. Supp. 75 (W.D.N.C.), appeal dismissed, 386 F.2d 129 (4th Cir. 1967).

Accordingly, accused is entitled to benefits of all constitutional safeguards. North Carolina v. Carr, 264 F. Supp. 75 (W.D.N.C.), appeal dismissed, 386 F.2d 129 (4th Cir. 1967).

Summary Proceedings Not Repugnant to Principle of Due Process. — Summary proceedings for contempt, are not within the constitutional prohibition contained in the due process clause. The power to punish summarily for contempt has existed at common law "as far as the annals of the law extend." State v. Little, 175 N.C. 743, 94 S.E. 680 (1917).

But Safeguards Required Where Adjudication and Sentencing Delayed. — Due process safeguards must be extended to persons cited for direct contempt of court in cases where final adjudication and sentencing for the contemptuous conduct is delayed until after trial. In re Paul, 28 N.C. App. 610, 222 S.E.2d 479, appeal dismissed, 289 N.C. 614, 223 S.E.2d 767 (1976).

Notice and Hearing but Not Trial Required. — Before an attorney is finally adjudicated in contempt and sentenced after trial for conduct during trial, he should have reasonable notice of the specific charges and opportunity to be heard in his own behalf. This is not to say, however, that a full scale trial is appropriate. In re Paul, 28 N.C. App. 610, 222 S.E.2d 479, appeal dismissed, 289 N.C. 614, 223 S.E.2d 767 (1976).

The United States Supreme Court has held that serious contempts are so merely like other serious crimes that they are subject to the jury trial provisions of U.S. Const., Art. 3, § 2 and of the Sixth Amendment thereto, which is binding upon the states by virtue of the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Blue Jeans Corp. of America v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

The maximum punishment authorized for criminal contempt under former §§ 5-1 and 5-4 was a fine of $250 or imprisonment for 30 days, or both. This made it a petty offense with no constitutional right to a jury trial. Blue Jeans Corp. of America v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

The possibilities that striking workers adjudged guilty of criminal contempt under former § 5-1 might be denied the right to return to work or might be disqualified from drawing unemployment benefits for as long as 12 weeks were held irrelevant on the issue of whether the strikers were entitled to trial by jury in the contempt proceedings, since the possibilities were no part of the punishment which the court could impose for criminal contempt. Blue Jeans Corp. of America v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Contempt proceedings may be resorted to in civil or criminal actions, and though contempt is criminal in its nature, respondents therein are not entitled to trial by jury. Safie Mfg. Co. v. Arnold, 228 N.C. 375, 45 S.E.2d 577 (1947).

In a North Carolina contempt proceeding, the contemnor is not entitled to a jury trial. Blue Jeans Corp. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 4 N.C. App. 245, 166 S.E.2d 698, aff'd, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Due Process Requirements Met. — Due process requirements of notice and opportunity to be heard on a contempt charge were adequately met where petitioner received actual notice, including the time and place, that he would be cited for contempt, and a written transcript provided formal notice of the specific actions for which petitioner was being cited. In re Paul, 28 N.C. App. 610, 222 S.E.2d 479, appeal dismissed, 289 N.C. 614, 223 S.E.2d 767 (1976).

Right to Confront Witnesses. — A person denying his asserted violation of a restraining order in contempt proceedings has the right under the provisions of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19, synonymous with due process of law under the United States Constitution, to confront and cross-examine witnesses by whose testimony the asserted violation is to be established. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980).

The North Carolina Constitution preserves the right of confrontation of the witnesses against an accused and this right is applicable to contempt proceedings so that an adjudication of contempt against defendant based on the affidavit of the receiver of a corporation was invalid. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

But Such Right Is Waivable. — See Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980).

Self-Incrimination. — Where defendant was accused of mismanaging, diverting, converting and wasting corporate with the trial court's order to produce tax returns was not protected by the Fifth Amendment proscription against compulsory self-incrimination and, thus, he could be found in contempt since there was no evidence tending to show defendant was under any physical or mental coercion at the time he prepared his tax returns, and he therefore could not rely upon the contents of the tax returns to support his claim of Fifth Amendment protection. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Where defendant was accused of mismanaging, diverting, converting and wasting corporate assets and he was ordered by the trial court to produce his tax returns, the production of the returns did not amount to such authentication as to be compelled testimonial self-incrimination which would support a claim of Fifth Amendment privilege, thus, defendant could be found in contempt. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

IV. ACTS CONSTITUTING CONTEMPT.

A. In General.

Grounds Exhaustive. — The enumeration of the acts punishable for contempt is exhaustive; hence no other act than those specifically designated may be the subject matter of contempt proceedings. See In re Odum, 133 N.C. 250, 45 S.E. 569 (1903).

A person guilty of any of the acts or omissions enumerated in this section may be punished for contempt because such acts or omissions have a direct tendency to interrupt the proceedings of the court or to impair the respect due to its authority. Luther v. Luther, 234 N.C. 429, 67 S.E.2d 345 (1951); Rose's Stores, Inc. v. Tarrytown Center, Inc., 270 N.C. 201, 154 S.E.2d 320 (1967).

The acts and omissions enumerated in this section correspond to criminal contempt and involve offenses against the court and organized society, punishable for contempt for the purpose of preserving the power and vindicating the dignity of the court. Galyon v. Stutts, 241 N.C. 120, 84 S.E.2d 822 (1954).

"Willful" and "Unlawful" Distinguished. — The word willful, when used in a statute creating an offense, implies the doing of the act purposely and deliberately in violation of law. The term "unlawfully" implies that an act is done, or not done as the law allows, or requires; while the term "willfully" implies that the act is done knowingly and of stubborn purpose. In re Hege, 205 N.C. 625, 172 S.E. 345 (1934).

As to direct and indirect contempt, see § 5A-13 and the notes thereto.

Trial courts must be on guard against confusing offenses to their sensibilities with obstruction to the administration of justice. In re Little, 404 U.S. 553, 92 S. Ct. 659, 30 L. Ed. 2d 708 (1972).

The vehemence of the language used is not alone the measure of the power to punish for contempt. The fires which it kindles must constitute an imminent, not merely a likely, threat to the administration of justice. The danger must not be remote or even probable; it must immediately imperil. In re Little, 404 U.S. 553, 92 S. Ct. 659, 30 L. Ed. 2d 708 (1972).

Accused Conducting His Own Defense. — Where the accused defended himself at his criminal trial when his motion for continuance, by reason of another trial engagement of his retained counsel, was denied, and he was adjudged in contempt for stating in summation after the close of evidence that the court was biased and had prejudged his case, and that he was a political prisoner, the court held that he was entitled to as much latitude in conducting his defense as is enjoyed by counsel vigorously espousing a client's cause, and that his statements did not constitute criminal contempt, as they were not uttered in a boisterous tone, did not actually disrupt the court proceeding, or constitute an imminent threat to the administration of justice. In re Little, 404 U.S. 553, 92 S. Ct. 659, 30 L. Ed. 2d 708 (1972).

A contempt citation delivered to a drunk who had been put into a holding cell at the far end of the room from the booking area, and who was behaving in a boisterous, rude, profane and obscene manner, by a magistrate who never engaged in any work on the drunk's warrant, was an unconstitutional act fundamentally unfair which violated due process of law. Thompson v. Stahl, 346 F. Supp. 401 (W.D.N.C. 1972).

B. Disruptive Conduct.

Disturbances Calculated to Interrupt Proceedings. — Acts which are punishable under this section include all cases of disorderly conduct, breaches of the peace, noise and other disturbance near enough, designed and reasonably calculated to interrupt the proceedings of the court then engaged in the administration of justice and the dispatch of the business presently before it. State v. Little, 175 N.C. 743, 94 S.E. 680 (1917).

Assaulting Judge during Recess of Court. — Where the respondent visited the judge at his boardinghouse during a recess of the court, before the adjournment of the term and assaulted the judge, it was held that this conduct was a direct contempt of the court as much as if the assault had been committed in the court during trial. Ex parte McCown, 139 N.C. 95, 51 S.E. 957 (1905).

Protection Extended to Officers of Court, Witnesses, etc. — It is an act of contempt to interfere with the functioning of the business not only of the judge but also of all the officers of the court, and persons such as attorneys, jurors and witnesses, who in the line of their duty are assisting the court in the dispatch of its business. State v. Little, 175 N.C. 743, 94 S.E. 680 (1917); Snow v. Hawkes, 183 N.C. 365, 111 S.E. 621 (1922).

Fighting in Courthouse Yard. — In State v. Woodfin, 27 N.C. 199 (1844), fighting in the yard of the courthouse, before the courthouse door, constituted the basis of the offense of contempt.

C. Disobedience of Orders.

Willful disobedience of an order lawfully issued by the court is contemptuous conduct. Blue Jeans Corp. of America v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Failure to obey a court order cannot be punished for contempt unless the disobedience is willful, which imports knowledge and a stubborn purpose. Lamm v. Lamm, 229 N.C. 248, 49 S.E.2d 403 (1948); Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966).

Impossibility to Comply with the Order of Process. — Where the disobedience to the process or order is due to circumstances which make it impossible for the contemnor to obey such order or process, he may not be punished for contempt. Thus where the clerk issued a notice to the respondent to produce a certain will which was in the custody of some other clerk, it was held that the order to adjudge the respondent guilty of contempt was reversible on appeal. In re Scarborough's Will, 139 N.C. 423, 51 S.E. 931 (1905).

The defendant must have been able to obey the order, and in spite of his ability must have disobeyed it. Inability to obey is a good excuse — for example, payment of money. Kane v. Haywood, 66 N.C. 1 (1872); Boyett v. Vaughan, 89 N.C. 27 (1883); Smith v. Smith, 92 N.C. 304 (1885).

One does not act willfully in failing to comply with a judgment if it has not been within his power to do so since the judgment was rendered. Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966).

The excuse is sufficient where the defendant has been unable to pay money according to an order. Kane v. Haywood, 66 N.C. 1 (1872); Boyett v. Vaughan, 89 N.C. 27 (1883); Smith v. Smith, 92 N.C. 304 (1885).

Where defendant testifies that his failure after knowledge to obey a court order for the payment of alimony pendente lite was due to his lack of financial means, and no evidence is presented at the hearing tending to negative the truth of defendant's explanation or to establish as an affirmative fact that he possessed the means wherewith to comply with the order, the court's finding that defendant willfully disobeyed the order is not supported by the record, and judgment committing him to imprisonment for contempt must be set aside. Lamm v. Lamm, 229 N.C. 248, 49 S.E.2d 403 (1948).

Where the husband, in proceedings against him for contempt for disobeying an order to pay moneys for the support of his child, shows by the uncontradicted testimony of himself and a witness that he had no property nor income except what he could earn, and that he had been unable to obtain employment and was therefore unable to comply with the terms of the order, the evidence fails to show that the disobedience was willful, and he may not be adjudged in contempt of court and a sentence imposed upon him. West v. West, 199 N.C. 12, 153 S.E. 600 (1930).

But where the impossible circumstances are removed prior to the arrest for contempt the defendant will not be excused. Thomasville Shooting Club v. Thomas, 120 N.C. 334, 26 S.E. 1007 (1897).

Disavowal of Disrespectful Intent. — The willful disobedience of a restraining order by the party on whom it had been served, and who was aware of its meaning and import, is in itself an act of contempt, from which he may not purge himself by disavowing a disrespectful intent. In re Parker, 177 N.C. 463, 99 S.E. 342 (1919).

Advice of Counsel No Excuse. — The failure to obey the order of the court placing property in possession of a receiver is contempt, even though the contemnor acted under an advice of counsel. Such advice is no protection to the intentional violation of the order. Delozier v. Bird, 123 N.C. 689, 31 S.E. 834 (1898).

In such a case the counsel himself may be subjected to contempt proceedings. This fact, however, will be considered by the judge in imposing the punishment. Weston v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 158 N.C. 270, 73 S.E. 799 (1912). See Green v. Griffin, 95 N.C. 50 (1886).

An order of court not lawfully issued may not be the basis on which to found a proceeding for contempt. Patterson v. Patterson, 230 N.C. 481, 53 S.E.2d 658 (1949); State v. Black, 232 N.C. 154, 59 S.E.2d 621 (1950).

Where an order is void ab initio, one may not be held for contempt for disobeying such order, and the fact that he did not appeal from the granting of the order does not affect his liability, the order not being one lawfully issued. In re Longley, 205 N.C. 488, 171 S.E. 788 (1933).

Where a subpoena issued by a municipal-county court and running outside the county is a nullity because not attested by the seal of the court, neither service of the process nor voluntary appearance thereunder, can waive the defect or vitalize the process so as to make the willful disobedience of the subpoena a basis for contempt proceedings. State v. Black, 232 N.C. 154, 59 S.E.2d 621 (1950).

Thus, disobeying an order entered by a court without jurisdiction is not contempt. Harding v. Harding, 46 N.C. App. 62, 264 S.E.2d 131 (1980).

Upon application for custody of children after decree of divorce, the resident judge entered a temporary order awarding the custody to the father, and issued an order to defendant wife to appear outside the county and outside the district to show cause why the temporary order should not be made permanent. It was held that the judge was without jurisdiction to hear the matter outside the district, and an order issued upon the hearing of the order to show cause was void ab initio. Patterson v. Patterson, 230 N.C. 481, 53 S.E.2d 658 (1949).

Failure to Comply with Discovery Order Punishable for Both Civil and Criminal Contempt. — One act may be punishable both for civil contempt, and for criminal contempt. This kind of duality particularly inheres in a party litigant's willful failure to comply with a discovery order. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

Where defendant was accused of mismanaging, diverting and wasting corporate assets and the trial court ordered him to cooperate with receivers of the corporation and to provide them and plantiffs with copies of his tax returns and a list of his assets, defendant's contempt, if any, in failing to provide the required materials could be criminal or civil, and contemnor waived procedural requirements when he came into court to answer charges of the trial court's show cause order. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Disobeying Order of Clerk. — Where, in supplementary proceedings, the defendant has willfully disobeyed an order of the clerk of the superior court having jurisdiction, in disposing of his property, he is guilty of contempt of court. Bank of Zebulon v. Chamblee, 188 N.C. 417, 124 S.E. 741 (1924).

Urging Witness to Disobey Subpoena. — Where there was evidence that defendant telephoned a witness in a civil action and tried to get her not to obey a subpoena to be issued by the court, defendant was held to be in indirect contempt of court in accordance with § 5A-13. State v. Wall, 49 N.C. App. 672, 272 S.E.2d 152 (1980).

Noncompliance with Order to Produce Records of Business. — Where, in response to an order to produce records of his business for a designated period, defendant appears and testifies that the only business records kept by him were the cash register tapes, that these had been destroyed by rats, and therefore, he had no records or documents with which to comply with the order, and there is no evidence to the contrary, it is error for the court to find and conclude defendant was in contempt within the purview of this section for noncompliance with the order. Galyon v. Stutts, 241 N.C. 120, 84 S.E.2d 822 (1954).

Injunctions. — Where courts of competent jurisdiction successively issued three injunctive orders for the purpose of protecting persons who desired to work, and who had a right to work, if they so desired, in plaintiff's plant, while the orders were by their terms temporary and effective only until final trial of the cause, they were lawful orders of a court of competent jurisdiction. Any person guilty of willful disobedience of such orders may be punished for contempt of court. Blue Jeans Corp. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 4 N.C. App. 245, 166 S.E.2d 698, aff'd, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Willfully Preventing Receiver from Taking Possession. — A judgment debtor, fixed with knowledge as a party upon whom notice was served, is guilty of contempt of court in willfully preventing the receiver from taking possession of the property in conformity with a lawful order of the court, even though the order may be erroneous, if no appeal therefrom was perfected by him. Nobles v. Roberson, 212 N.C. 334, 193 S.E. 420 (1937).

Support Payments. — The mere fact that defendant, ordered to pay a certain sum monthly for the necessary subsistence of his wife and child, has a right to move at any time for modification of the order does not support the conclusion that defendant's failure to comply with the order is willful. Smithwick v. Smithwick, 218 N.C. 503, 11 S.E.2d 455 (1940).

Failure to Comply with Separation Agreement. — Husband could not be adjudged in contempt for failure to comply with separation agreement entered into prior to the institution of divorce action, judgment in which provided that it should not affect or invalidate the separation agreement. Brown v. Brown, 224 N.C. 556, 31 S.E.2d 529 (1944).

Cases Involving Violations of Order Restraining Strikers. — For a series of cases involving violations of a restraining order which sought to prohibit violence and mass picketing on the part of strikers, see Harriet Cotton Mills v. Local No. 578, Textile Workers Union, 251 N.C. 218, 111 S.E.2d 457 (1959), cert. denied, 362 U.S. 941, 80 S. Ct. 806, 4 L. Ed. 2d 770 (1960); Harriet Cotton Mills v. Local No. 578, Textile Workers Union, 251 N.C. 231, 111 S.E.2d 465 (1959), cert. denied, 362 U.S. 941, 80 S. Ct. 806, 4 L. Ed. 2d 770 (1960); Henderson Cotton Mills v. Local No. 584, Textile Workers Union, 251 N.C. 234, 111 S.E.2d 476 (1959); Henderson Cotton Mills v. Local No. 584, Textile Workers Union, 251 N.C. 240, 111 S.E.2d 471 (1959); Harriet Cotton Mills v. Local No. 578, Textile Workers Union, 251 N.C. 248, 111 S.E.2d 467 (1959), cert. denied, 362 U.S. 941, 80 S. Ct. 806, 4 L. Ed. 2d 770 (1960); Henderson Cotton Mills v. Local No. 584, Textile Workers Union, 251 N.C. 254, 111 S.E.2d 480 (1959), cert. denied, 362 U.S. 941, 80 S. Ct. 806, 4 L. Ed. 2d 770 (1960).

Other Actions Held to Constitute Contempt. — Disobeying an injunction or restraining order such as cutting timber after injunction against the same. Fleming v. Patterson, 99 N.C. 404, 6 S.E. 396 (1888); In re Carolina, C. & O. Ry., 151 N.C. 467, 66 S.E. 438 (1909); Weston v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 158 N.C. 270, 73 S.E. 799 (1912). Failure to pay alimony, Zimmerman v. Zimmerman, 113 N.C. 432, 18 S.E. 334 (1893). Failure of clerk to make transcript of record, Worth v. Piedmont Bank, 121 N.C. 343, 28 S.E. 488 (1897). See also generally Murray v. Berry, 113 N.C. 46, 18 S.E. 78 (1893). Failure to deliver property, McLean v. Douglass, 28 N.C. 233 (1846). Failure to return process, Ex parte Summers, 27 N.C. 149 (1844). Failure to settle estates by public administrator, In re Brinson, 73 N.C. 278 (1875).

D. Recalcitrant Witnesses.

Refusal to Testify after Having Been Sworn. — It has been uniformly held by the Supreme Court and by courts of other jurisdictions that the power to punish for contempt committed in the presence of the court, is inherent in the court, and not dependent upon statutory authority. Without such power the court cannot perform its judicial function. This principle is especially applicable when the contempt consists in the refusal of the witness in attendance upon the court, after having been duly sworn, to answer a question propounded to him for the purpose of eliciting evidence material to the issue to be decided by the court. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967).

The giving of testimony which is obviously false or evasive can constitute contempt. In re Edison, 15 N.C. App. 354, 190 S.E.2d 235 (1972).

Since the power of the court over a witness in requiring proper responses is inherent and necessary for the furtherance of justice, it must be conceded that testimony which is obviously false or evasive is equivalent to a refusal to testify. In re Edison, 15 N.C. App. 354, 190 S.E.2d 235 (1972).

Obviously False or Evasive Testimony Is Equivalent to Refusal to Testify. — The power of the court to require a witness to give proper responses is inherent and necessary for the furtherance of justice, and therefore, testimony which is obviously false or evasive is equivalent to a refusal to testify. Galyon v. Stutts, 241 N.C. 120, 84 S.E.2d 822 (1954).

Although It Is Also a Crime. — Making a false statement under oath may constitute contempt, notwithstanding that the conduct may also be a crime, such as perjury or false swearing. In re Edison, 15 N.C. App. 354, 190 S.E.2d 235 (1972).

And Can Be Punished Civilly or Criminally. — Giving "obviously false" testimony can be punishable by contempt civilly or criminally. In re Edison, 15 N.C. App. 354, 190 S.E.2d 235 (1972).

False Testimony as Direct or Indirect Contempt. — See note to § 5A-13.

Commissioner May Ask Aid of Judge; Declaration of Power. — The commissioner before whom the witness had refused to answer, may invoke the aid of the judge to punish for contempt. But the judge has no right to delegate the judicial power to punish for contempt to an executive officer. Bradley Fertilizer Co. v. Taylor, 112 N.C. 141, 17 S.E. 69 (1893).

No Distinction between Refusing to Be Sworn and Refusing to Answer. — This section makes no distinction between one who, in the presence of the court, pursuant to its lawful subpoena, refuses to be sworn as a witness and one who, having been sworn, refuses to answer a proper question. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967).

Motive of Recalcitrant Witness Immaterial. — Whatever the motive of the recalcitrant witness or party may be, it does not determine whether he may lawfully be adjudged in contempt and punishment. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967).

The refusal of one subpoenaed as a witness to take the oath or to answer proper questions propounded to him, when done knowingly and intentionally, is willful even though such person believes it to be his moral duty to refuse to testify. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967).

Decrease in Esteem No Justification for Refusing to Testify. — The fact that one called as a witness fears that his testimony may decrease the esteem in which he is held in the community, or may decrease his ability to render service therein, does not justify refusal by him to testify in response to questions otherwise proper. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967).

Nor Religious Conscience. — The State has a compelling interest that a person called as a witness should be sworn and should testify in the administration of justice between the State and one charged with a serious offense; therefore a minister called as a witness in such prosecution may be held in contempt of court upon his refusal to be sworn as a witness, notwithstanding he asserts that his refusal is a matter of religious conscience. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967).

Other Actions Held to Constitute Contempt. — Refusal to testify before a commissioner, Bradley Fertilizer Co. v. Taylor, 112 N.C. 141, 17 S.E. 69 (1893). Refusal to testify before a referee, LaFontaine v. Southern Underwriters Ass'n, 83 N.C. 132 (1880).

E. Inaccurate Publications.

Publication after Adjournment of Court. — For constructive contempt by publication of false matter relating to the conduct of the presiding judge, published after the adjournment of the court, the judge must seek redress by the ordinary method and bring his cause before an impartial tribunal. He may not proceed to determine the matter summarily without the intervention of a jury. In re Brown, 168 N.C. 417, 84 S.E. 690 (1915).

Publication of Past Matter. — There no longer exists the power to punish summarily for defamatory reports and publications about a matter which is past and ended. To justify contempt proceedings the publication must have been pendente lite. In re Brown, 168 N.C. 417, 84 S.E. 690 (1915).

Trial of Issue by the Court Instead of the Jury. —If on the face of the publication there is nothing to show that it was grossly incorrect or calculated to bring the court into contempt, the respondent is entitled to have the issue tried not by a jury but by a court. In re Robinson, 117 N.C. 533, 23 S.E. 453 (1895).

F. Failure of Officer to Perform Duties.

Gross negligence of attorneys is a sort of contempt, and courts may order them to pay the costs of cases in which they are guilty of such negligence. Ex parte Robins, 63 N.C. 310 (1869).

G. Failure to Comply with Schedules.

Willful Absence of Attorney from Trial. — Generally, the willful absence of an attorney from a scheduled trial constitutes contempt of court, although disputes arise over whether it is direct or indirect contempt. In re Smith, 45 N.C. App. 123, 263 S.E.2d 23 (1980).

V. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

The court must specify the particulars of the offense on the record by stating the words, acts or gestures amounting to direct contempt, and when the record contains only conclusions that contemnor was contemptuous, contemnor is entitled to his discharge. Rose's Stores, Inc. v. Tarrytown Center, Inc., 270 N.C. 201, 154 S.E.2d 320 (1967).

Facts Must Be Found and Filed. — In contempt proceedings the facts upon which the contempt is based must be found and filed, especially the facts concerning the purpose and object of the contemnor, and the judgment must be founded on those findings. In re Odum, 133 N.C. 250, 45 S.E. 569 (1903); Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966).

In contempt proceedings it is necessary for the court to find the facts supporting the judgment and especially the facts as to the purpose and object of the contemner, since nothing short of willful disobedience will justify punishment. Smith v. Smith, 247 N.C. 223, 100 S.E.2d 370 (1957).

Conclusions of Law Not So Denominated. — Where the judgment in contempt fully states the facts found and the conclusions of law based thereon, adjudging defendants in contempt for a willful disobedience of an order lawfully issued by the superior court having jurisdiction, exception on the ground that the court did not specifically denominate his conclusions of law as such cannot be sustained. Glendale Mfg. Co. v. Bonano, 242 N.C. 587, 89 S.E.2d 116 (1955).

Review of Findings of Fact. — In proceedings for contempt the facts found by the trial judge are not reviewable by the appellate division except for the purpose of passing upon their sufficiency to warrant the judgment. Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966).

§ 5A-12. Punishment; circumstances for fine or imprisonment; reduction of punishment; other measures.

(a) A person who commits criminal contempt, whether direct or indirect, is subject to censure, imprisonment up to 30 days, fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), or any combination of the three, except that a person who commits a contempt described in G.S. 5A-11(8) is subject to censure, imprisonment not to exceed six months, fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), or any combination of the three and a person who has not been arrested who fails to comply with a nontestimonial identification order, issued pursuant to Article 14 of G.S. 15A is subject to censure, imprisonment not to exceed 90 days, fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), or any combination of the three.

(b) Except for contempt under G.S. 5A-11(5) or 5A-11(9), fine or imprisonment may not be imposed for criminal contempt, whether direct or indirect, unless:

(1) The act or omission was willfully contemptuous; or

(2) The act or omission was preceded by a clear warning by the court that the conduct is improper.

(c) The judicial official who finds a person in contempt may at any time withdraw a censure, terminate or reduce a sentence of imprisonment, or remit or reduce a fine imposed as punishment for contempt if warranted by the conduct of the contemnor and the ends of justice.

(d) A person held in criminal contempt under this Article may nevertheless, for the same conduct, be found in civil contempt under Article 2 of this Chapter, Civil Contempt. If a person is found in both civil contempt and criminal contempt for the same conduct, the total period of imprisonment is limited as provided in G.S. 5A-21(c).

(e) A person held in criminal contempt under G.S. 5A-11(9) may nevertheless, for the same conduct, be found guilty of a violation of G.S. 14-225.1, but he must be given credit for any imprisonment resulting from the contempt. (1977, c. 711, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Subsection (b) is drawn from the recommendations of the American Bar Association. It intends to preclude fine or punishment in response to what is essentially innocent conduct although censure alone would still be possible. Subsection (c) makes clear that a judge may change his mind and reduce or remove any punishment he imposed in response to contempt. Subsection (d) makes clear that, although civil contempt and criminal contempt proceedings are distinct, each may be imposed for the same conduct.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the annotations under this section are from cases decided under former § 5-4.

No Constitutional Right to Jury Trial. — In view of the punishment, contempt is a petty offense for which there is no constitutional right to a jury trial. Thompson v. Thompson, 25 N.C. App. 79, 212 S.E.2d 243, appeal dismissed, 288 N.C. 120, 215 S.E.2d 606 (1975).

Punishment Immediate. — The punishment in contempt cases, must be immediate, or it would be ineffectual, as it is designed to suppress an outrage, which impedes the business of the court. State v. Yancy, 4 N.C. 133 (1814). Blue Jeans Corp. of America v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Punishment for Both Criminal and Civil Contempt. — As recognized in subsection (d) of this section and § 5A-21(c), a person may be found to be in both criminal and civil contempt, although only a single act was committed. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980).

One act may be punishable both as civil contempt, and as criminal contempt. This kind of duality particularly inheres in a party litigant's willful failure to comply with a discovery order. Punishment is not, therefore, limited to criminal sanctions. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

No Defense to Criminal Prosecution. — The fact that a person has been punished for contempt of court, is no defense to a criminal indictment for the act constituting the contempt. State v. Yancy, 4 N.C. 133 (1814); In re Griffin, 98 N.C. 225, 3 S.E. 515 (1887).

Power of Industrial Commission. — The Industrial Commission proceeding under the Worker's Compensation Act, being expressly given the authority to subpoena witnesses and have them give evidence at the hearing, acts in a judicial capacity in adjudging in contempt a witness who refuses to give material evidence, and has power to punish by a fine or imprisonment under the provisions of this section. In re Hayes, 200 N.C. 133, 156 S.E. 791 (1931).

A sentence of ten days in jail, imposed by the superior court for contempt by refusal to be sworn as a witness, was well within the statutory maximum. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967).

Imprisonment for Indefinite Period Erroneous. — A judgment entered is erroneous in directing that the defendant be committed to jail for an indefinite period rather than for the statutory period. Basnight v. Basnight, 242 N.C. 645, 89 S.E.2d 259 (1955).

Effect of Abolishment of Imprisonment for Debt. — The abolishment of imprisonment for debt does not include commitment under attachments for failure to comply with an order of court. Wood v. Wood, 61 N.C. 538 (1868).

A fine for contempt goes to the State, being a punishment for a wrong to the State, and should not be directed to be paid to a party to the suit. In re Rhodes, 65 N.C. 518 (1871); Morris v. Whitehead, 65 N.C. 637 (1871).

§ 5A-13. Direct and indirect criminal contempt; proceedings required.

(a) Criminal contempt is direct criminal contempt when the act:

(1) Is committed within the sight or hearing of a presiding judicial official; and

(2) Is committed in, or in immediate proximity to, the room where proceedings are being held before the court; and

(3) Is likely to interrupt or interfere with matters then before the court.

The presiding judicial official may punish summarily for direct criminal contempt according to the requirements of G.S. 5A-14 or may defer adjudication and sentencing as provided in G.S. 5A-15. If proceedings for direct criminal contempt are deferred, the judicial official must, immediately following the conduct, inform the person of his intention to institute contempt proceedings.

(b) Any criminal contempt other than direct criminal contempt is indirect criminal contempt and is punishable only after proceedings in accordance with the procedure required by G.S. 5A-15. (1977, c. 711, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section specifies that only direct criminal contempt may be the subject of summary proceedings and defines direct criminal contempt. The three factors listed in subsection (a)(1), (2) and (3) must all be present before an act can be direct contempt. Subsection (a) also permits the judge who is authorized to punish summarily to defer the proceedings if he choose. The last sentence of subsection (a) establishes the rule that a person be cited for contempt at the time the contempt occurs even if the proceedings are to be held later.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the annotations under this section are from cases decided under provisions of former Chapter 5.

False Testimony as Direct or Indirect Contempt. — Where all the facts necessary to establish false testimony were not before the court, it was impossible to say that there were words spoken or acts committed in the actual presence of the court which would constitute direct contempt. In re Edison, 15 N.C. App. 354, 190 S.E.2d 235 (1972), decided under former § 5-5.

Failure to comply with a prior court order would amount to an act committed outside the presence of the court, at a distance from it, which tends to degrade the court or interrupts, prevents or impedes the administration of justice and would be classified an indirect contempt. Ingle v. Ingle, 18 N.C. App. 455, 197 S.E.2d 61 (1973), decided under former § 5-7; Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980).

Urging Witness to Disobey Subpoena as Indirect Contempt. — Where there was evidence that defendant telephoned a witness in a civil action and tried to get her not to obey a subpoena to be issued by the court, defendant was held to be in indirect contempt of court in accordance with this section. State v. Wall, 49 N.C. App. 672, 272 S.E.2d 152 (1980).

§ 5A-14. Summary proceedings for contempt.

(a) The presiding judicial official may summarily impose measures in response to direct criminal contempt when necessary to restore order or maintain the dignity and authority of the court and when the measures are imposed substantially contemporaneously with the contempt.

(b) Before imposing measures under this section, the judicial official must give the person charged with contempt summary notice of the charges and a summary opportunity to respond and must find facts supporting the summary imposition of measures in response to contempt. The facts must be established beyond a reasonable doubt. (1977, c. 711, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

If the contempt proceedings are to be summary, subsection (a) requires that they occur substantially at the same time as the contempt itself. Subsection (b) follows the American Bar Association recommendation that the person charged with contempt be given notice of what the contemptuous action was and an opportunity to respond. This was intended not to provide for a hearing, or anything approaching that, in summary contempt proceedings, but merely to assure that the alleged contemnor had an opportunity to point out instances of gross mistake about who committed the contemptuous act or matters of that sort.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the annotations under this section are from cases decided under former § 5-5.

Constitutionality. — Summary punishment for direct contempt committed in the presence of the court does not contemplate a trial at which the person charged with contempt must be represented by counsel, and therefore sentence for contempt does not deprive the contemner of his liberty without due process of law. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967).

Jury Trial. — It is well settled that the defendant in contempt proceedings is not entitled to a jury trial upon the controverted facts. In re Deaton, 105 N.C. 59, 11 S.E. 244 (1890).

What Findings of Fact Must Include. — A requirement that the judicial official's findings should indicate that the standard of proof required by subsection (b) was applied to his findings of fact is implicit in this section. State v. Verbal, 41 N.C. App. 306, 254 S.E.2d 794 (1979).

It is implicit in this section that the judicial official's findings in a summary contempt proceeding should clearly reflect that the contemnor was given an opportunity to be heard, along with a summary of whatever response was made and the judicial official's finding that the excuse or explanation proffered was inadequate or disbelieved. State v. Verbal, 41 N.C. App. 306, 254 S.E.2d 794 (1979).

Cited in State ex rel. Andrews v. Chateau X, Inc., 296 N.C. 251, 250 S.E.2d 603 (1979).

§ 5A-15. Plenary proceedings for contempt.

(a) When a judicial official chooses not to proceed summarily against a person charged with direct criminal contempt or when he may not proceed summarily, he may proceed by an order directing the person to appear before a judge at a reasonable time specified in the order and show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court. A copy of the order must be furnished to the person charged. If the criminal contempt is based upon acts before a judge which so involve him that his objectivity may reasonably be questioned, the order must be returned before a different judge.

(b) Proceedings under this section are before a district court judge unless a court superior to the district court issued the order, in which case the proceedings are before that court. Venue lies throughout the judicial district where the order was issued.

(c) The person ordered to show cause may move to dismiss the order.

(d) The judge is the trier of facts at the show cause hearing.

(e) The person charged with contempt may not be compelled to be a witness against himself in the hearing.

(f) At the conclusion of the hearing, the judge must enter a finding of guilty or not guilty. If the person is found to be in contempt, the judge must make findings of fact and enter judgment. The facts must be established beyond a reasonable doubt.

(g) The judge presiding over the hearing may appoint a prosecutor or, in the event of an apparent conflict of interest, some other member of the bar to represent the court in hearings for criminal contempt. (1977, c. 711, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section provides for a show-cause hearing in instances in which the judge either chooses not to proceed by summary proceedings or may not so proceed because the contempt was not direct. Plenary proceedings may not be held by a magistrate or clerk; they must always be held before a judge. The final sentence of subsection (a) responds to the constitutional requirement of Bloom v. Illinois, 391 U.S. 194 (1968), that contempt proceedings be held before another judge when the one citing the contemnor was involved in the act in question. Subsection (f) permits the judge, in addition to using the prosecutor, who traditionally represents the court in contempt actions, to appoint another member of the Bar when there is a conflict of interest. The central example of this would be when the prosecutor himself or a law-enforcement officer with whom he worked closely was involved in the contempt.

CASE NOTES

Verification Not Prerequisite to Issuance of Show Cause Order. — The filing of a petition, an affidavit, or other proper verification is not required as a prerequisite to issuance of a show cause order under this section, although they may be a proper basis for issuance of the show cause order. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980).

Service under § 1A-1, Rule 4(j)(1)c Proper. — Where the court issued an order pursuant to § 1A-1 Rule 4(j)(1)c notifying a foreign attorney of the contempt charges and allowing him 60 days to respond to the charges, which order was mailed to the attorney at the address he gave the court in a motion to be admitted in a case pro hac vice, this method of service was proper to comply with the requirement of subsection (a) that "[a] copy of the order must be furnished to the person charged" where the court had personal jurisdiction as provided in § 1-75.4. In re Smith, 45 N.C. App. 123, 263 S.E.2d 23 (1980).

Contempt Following Chapter 19 Injunction. — The plenary proceedings provided for in this section apply to contempt actions following a Chapter 19 injunction. State ex rel. Andrews v. Chateau X, Inc., 296 N.C. 251, 250 S.E.2d 603 (1979), vacated, 445 U.S. 947, 100 S. Ct. 1593, 63 L. Ed. 2d 782 (1980).

§ 5A-16. Custody of person charged with criminal contempt.

(a) A judicial official may orally order that a person he is charging with direct criminal contempt be taken into custody and restrained to the extent necessary to assure his presence for summary proceedings or notice of plenary proceedings.

(b) If a judicial official who initiates plenary proceedings for contempt under G.S. 5A-15 finds, based on sworn statement or affidavit, probable cause to believe the person ordered to appear will not appear in response to the order, he may issue an order for arrest of the person, pursuant to G.S. 15A-305. A person arrested under this subsection is entitled to release under the provisions of Article 26, Bail, of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes. (1977, c. 711 s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The authority for taking custody of a person charged with contempt has been unclear. This section is aimed to fill that gap. Subsection (a) clarifies the legality of seizing a person charged with direct contempt and bringing him before the judge. Subsection (b) makes clear the propriety of issuing an order for arrest of a person when the proceedings are not to be summary. A concurrent change in G.S. 15A-305, providing for the order for arrest, makes clear that an order may be used for this purpose.

§ 5A-17. Appeals.

A person found in criminal contempt may appeal in the manner provided for appeals in criminal actions, except appeal from a finding of contempt by a judicial official inferior to a superior court judge is by hearing de novo before a superior court judge. (1977, c. 711, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section rejects present law and permits appeal from all convictions for criminal contempt.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The annotations under this section are from cases decided under former § 5-2.

Finding of Fact Not Disturbed. — Where the judge has found sufficient facts to attach the defendant for direct contempt of court, upon imposing punishment therefor, the finding will not be disturbed by appeal. In re Deaton, 105 N.C. 59, 11 S.E. 244 (1890); State v. Little, 175 N.C. 743, 94 S.E. 680 (1917). Nor will the finding of fact by the judge be disturbed upon an appeal on an indirect contempt. In re Parker, 177 N.C. 463, 99 S.E. 342 (1919).

It is otherwise however on appeals from a subordinate court to the superior court. In such a case the facts as well as the law will be reviewed, and even additional testimony may be heard. In re Deaton, 105 N.C. 59, 11 S.E. 244 (1890).

Article 2.

Civil Contempt.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The Commission felt that it was proper, once they had to deal with civil contempt in some respect as a consequence of severing it in Chapter 5 from the related criminal contempt provisions, to resolve some of the uncertainties that surround the present civil contempt procedures.

§ 5A-21. Civil contempt; imprisonment to compel compliance.

(a) Failure to comply with an order of a court is a continuing civil contempt as long as:

(1) The order remains in force;

(2) The purpose of the order may still be served by compliance with the order; and

(3) The person to whom the order is directed is able to comply with the order or is able to take reasonable measures that would enable him to comply with the order.

(b) A person who is found in civil contempt may be imprisoned as long as his civil contempt continues, unless the contempt is failure by a person not arrested for the crime to comply with a nontestimonial identification order issued pursuant to Article 14, Nontestimonial Identification Order, of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes. In that case, he may not be imprisoned more than 90 days unless he is arrested on probable cause.

(c) A person who is found in civil contempt under this Article may, nevertheless, for the same conduct, be found in criminal contempt under Article 1 of this Chapter, but the total period of imprisonment arising from the conduct may not exceed the greater of:

(1) The period during which the contemnor may be imprisoned for civil contempt; or

(2) The period of imprisonment provided in G.S. 5A-12(a). (1977, c. 711, s. 3; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1080, s. 1.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section is based on the Commission's recognition that civil contempt should be solely a matter of forcing the contemnor to comply with a court order and, unlike criminal contempt, is not a form of punishment. Subsections (a) and (b) make clear that civil contempt is appropriate only so long as the court order is capable of being complied with. The section rejects the approach of the present Chapter 5 specifying particular grounds for civil contempt. Instead, the only issue in determining whether imprisonment for civil contempt is proper is whether or not there is a court order which may be complied with. Subdivision (3) of subsection (a), by specifying that the contempt continues while the person is "able to take reasonable measures that would enable him to comply," is intended to make clear, for example, that the person who does not have the money to make court-ordered payments but who could take a job which would enable him to make those payments, remains in contempt by not taking such a job. In most cases, a person in civil contempt may be held for so long as his civil contempt continues; he holds the keys to his own jail by virtue of his ability to comply. The Commission felt, however, in the case of failure to comply with nontestimonial identification order by one who is only suspected of a crime, that this unlimited jailing would be improper. Therefore, unless probable cause for arrest arises, the person subject to a nontestimonial identification order who remains noncompliant must be released after 90 days. Concurrent amendments to G.S. 15A-279 (the section dealing with nontestimonial identification orders) point out that resisting compliance with a nontestimonial identification order may be used in determining whether there is probable cause that the person subject to the order committed the crime in question. This means that in many cases the person who resists the order for the full 90 day period will become subject to arrest on probable cause, at which time the 90 day limitation will no longer apply. Another concurrent amendment to G.S. 15A-279 provides, however, that a nontestimonial identification order may not be reissued unless there is newly available evidence to support it. In subsection (c), the Commission was seeking to insure that a person could not serve a longer period of imprisonment by being found in both civil and criminal contempt for the same conduct than he could if he had been found to be in only civil or criminal contempt. An earlier draft of this subsection had specified that a finding of civil or criminal contempt did not preclude disciplinary proceedings if the contemnor were a member of the Bar. The Commission approved this policy but felt it more appropriate that it be mentioned in commentary rather than in the body of the section.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment substituted "a person who is found in civil contempt may be" for "A judge may order a civil contemnor" at the beginning of subsection (b).

I. General Consideration.
II. Orders Enforceable as Civil Contempt.
III. Purging Contempt.
IV. Practice and Procedure.
V. Appeal and Error.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Nature and Purpose of Proceeding. — Civil contempt is applied to a continuing act, and the proceeding is used to compel obedience to orders and decrees made for the benefit of private parties and to preserve and enforce private rights. Blue Jeans Corp. of America v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Civil contempt proceedings are without question civil in nature. Jolly v. Wright, 300 N.C. 83, 265 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

This section makes clear that civil contempt is not a form of punishment; rather, it is a civil remedy to be utilized exclusively to enforce compliance with court orders. Jolly v. Wright, 300 N.C. 83, 265 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

The purpose of civil contempt is not to punish; rather, its purpose is to use the court's power to impose fines or imprisonment as a method of coercing the defendant to comply with an order of the court. Jolly v. Wright, 300 N.C. 83, 265 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

Acts and omissions constituting civil contempt involve matters tending to defeat, impair, impede, or prejudice the rights or remedies of a party to an action pending in court, and are punishable with the underlying purpose of preserving private rights by coercion. Galyon v. Stutts, 241 N.C. 120, 84 S.E.2d 822 (1954).

Criminal and Civil Contempt Distinguished. — The line of demarcation between civil and criminal contempts is hazy at best. A major factor in determining whether a contempt is civil or criminal is the purpose for which the power is exercised. Where the primary purpose is to preserve the court's authority and to punish for disobedience of its orders, the contempt is criminal. Where the primary purpose is to provide a remedy for an injured suitor and to coerce compliance with an order, the contempt is civil. Blue Jeans Corp. of America v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Criminal contempt is a term applied where the judgment is in punishment of an act already accomplished, tending to interfere with the administration of justice. Civil contempt is a term applied where the proceeding is had to preserve and enforce the rights of private parties to suits and to compel obedience to orders and decrees made for the benefit of such parties. Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966).

Civil contempt is applied to a continuing act, and the proceeding is had to preserve and enforce the rights of private parties to suits and to compel obedience to orders and decrees made for the benefit of such parties. Rose's Stores, Inc. v. Tarrytown Center, Inc., 270 N.C. 201, 154 S.E.2d 320 (1967); Blue Jeans Corp. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 4 N.C. App. 245, 166 S.E.2d 698, aff'd, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Disobedience Must Be Willful. — A failure to obey an order of a court cannot be punished by contempt proceedings unless the disobedience is willful, which imports knowledge and a stubborn resistance. Cox v. Cox, 10 N.C. App. 476, 179 S.E.2d 194 (1971).

Thus, Defendant Must Possess Means to Comply. — To support a finding of willfulness in failing to comply with a support order, there must be evidence to establish as an affirmative fact that defendant possessed the means to comply with the order at some time after the entry of the order. Teachey v. Teachey, 46 N.C. App. 332, 264 S.E.2d 786 (1980).

For civil contempt to be applicable, the defendant must have the present ability to comply, or the present ability to take reasonable measures that would enable him to comply, with the order. Teachey v. Teachey, 46 N.C. App. 332, 264 S.E.2d 786 (1980).

In order to punish by contempt proceedings, the trial court must find as a fact that the defendant possessed the means to comply with orders of the court during the period when he was in default. Cox v. Cox, 10 N.C. App. 476, 179 S.E.2d 194 (1971).

For a defendant to be held in contempt for failure to comply with a court order, the trial judge must make particular findings that defendant possessed the means to comply with them. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Where the court enters judgment for civil contempt, the court must find not only failure to comply with the order but that the defendant presently possesses the means to comply. Cox v. Cox, 10 N.C. App. 476, 179 S.E.2d 194 (1971).

Manifestly, one does not act willfully in failing to comply with a judgment if it has not been within his power to do so since the judgment was rendered. Cox v. Cox, 10 N.C. App. 476, 179 S.E.2d 194 (1971).

Even if he does not have the money to make court ordered payments, a person will be guilty of civil contempt if he could take a job which would enable him to make those payments. Frank v. Glanville, 45 N.C. App. 313, 262 S.E.2d 677 (1980).

Disobedience of an order made without, or in excess of, jurisdiction is not punishable as contempt. In re Smith, 301 N.C. 621, 272 S.E.2d 834 (1981).

Confrontation of Witnesses. — The North Carolina Constitution preserves the right of confrontation of the witnesses against an accused and this right is applicable to contempt proceedings so that an adjudication of contempt against defendant based on the affidavit of the receiver of a corporation was invalid. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Applied in Monds v. Monds, 46 N.C. App. 301, 264 S.E.2d 750 (1980).

II. ORDERS ENFORCEABLE AS CIVIL CONTEMPT.

Child Support Orders. — Willful failure and refusal of a party to make payments for the support of his child in accordance with decree of court is civil contempt and the court may order him into custody until he shows compliance or is otherwise discharged according to law. Smith v. Smith, 248 N.C. 298, 103 S.E.2d 400 (1958).

Civil contempt proceedings to enforce orders for payment of support to children pursuant to consent judgment are authorized by this section. Smith v. Smith, 248 N.C. 298, 103 S.E.2d 400 (1958).

Alimony. — A judgment ordering the payment of alimony may be enforced by the contempt power. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Where the trial judge found that the party was a healthy and able-bodied man for his age, and further found that he could pay at least a portion of the alimony, it was error to imprison him until he should pay the whole amount. Cox v. Cox, 10 N.C. App. 476, 179 S.E.2d 194 (1971).

A breach of contract is not punishable as civil contempt. Luther v. Luther, 234 N.C. 429, 67 S.E.2d 345 (1951); In re Will of Smith, 249 N.C. 563, 107 S.E.2d 89 (1959).

Where the proceeding for civil contempt is set in motion to compel a person to substitute a binding agreement for an invalid one, an order penalizing the plaintiff runs counter to the sound rule that the court will not entertain contempt proceedings where the mover's purpose is to coerce his adversary into making a contract. Luther v. Luther, 234 N.C. 429, 67 S.E.2d 345 (1951).

Refusal to effectuate an agreement to sign a consent judgment may not be made the basis for contempt proceedings where it does not appear that the parties ever agreed to the exact terms of such judgment. State v. Clark, 207 N.C. 657, 178 S.E. 119 (1935).

Failure to Comply with Discovery Order Punishable as Both Civil and Criminal Contempt. — Where defendant was accused of mismanaging, diverting and wasting corporate assets and the trial court ordered him to cooperate with receivers of the corporation and to provide them and plaintiffs with copies of his tax returns and a list of his assets, defendant's contempt, if any, in failing to provide the required materials could be criminal or civil, and contemnor waived procedural requirements when he came into court to answer charges of the trial court's show cause order. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Refusal of municipal officers to surrender their offices in accordance with the results of an election held pursuant to the provisions of a decree of court cannot be made the basis for contempt proceedings, since upon the hearing of the order to show cause the court must first adjudicate the rights of the parties to the offices and such adjudication can be made only in a direct proceeding for that purpose under article 41, chapter 1, of the General Statutes. Corey v. Hardison, 236 N.C. 147, 72 S.E.2d 416 (1952).

Order to Produce Tax Returns. — Where defendant was accused of mismanaging, diverting, converting and wasting corporate assets and he was ordered by the trial court to produce his tax returns, the production of the returns did not amount to such authentication as to be compelled testimonial self-incrimination which would support a claim of Fifth Amendment privilege, thus, defendant could be found in contempt. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Where defendant was accused of mismanaging, diverting, converting and wasting corporate assets, defendant's refusal to comply with the trial court's order to produce tax returns was not protected by the Fifth Amendment proscription against compulsory self-incrimination and, thus, he could be found in contempt since there was no evidence tending to show defendant was under any physical or mental coercion at the time he prepared his tax returns, and he therefore could not rely upon the contents of the tax returns to support his claim of Fifth Amendment protection. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Order to Appear As Attorney. — An out-of-state attorney could not be held in and punished for willful contempt of court for failure to comply with an order of the trial court that he appear as an attorney in a criminal case where there had been no general appearance by local counsel as required by § 84-4.1 and the out-of-state attorney thus never acquired eligibility to appear in the case and was never an attorney in the case admitted to limited practice in North Carolina. In re Smith, 301 N.C. 621, 272 S.E.2d 834 (1981).

III. PURGING CONTEMPT.

Payment of Counsel Fees as Condition to Being Purged of Contempt. — The contempt power includes the authority for a district court judge to require one whom he has found in willful contempt of court for failure to comply with a child support order entered pursuant to § 50-13.1 et seq., to pay reasonable counsel fees to opposing counsel as a condition to being purged of contempt. Blair v. Blair, 8 N.C. App. 61, 173 S.E.2d 513 (1970).

Effect of Payment of Fine. — A party to a proceeding as for contempt undoubtedly waives his right to have the judgment in the proceeding reviewed on appeal by voluntarily paying the fine imposed upon him by the judgment. But where the record reveals that the fine was paid under protest at the precise moment an appeal was noted from the order imposing it, and that the party took this course to avoid being committed to jail until the fine was paid, inasmuch as the payment was the product of coercion, the right of appeal was not waived by making it. Luther v. Luther, 234 N.C. 429, 67 S.E.2d 345 (1951).

IV. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

Jury Trial. — Respondents in proceedings for civil contempt are not entitled to a jury trial. In re Gorham, 129 N.C. 481, 40 S.E. 311 (1901).

Appointment of Counsel for Indigents. — Due process requires appointment of counsel for indigents in nonsupport civil contempt proceedings only in those cases where assistance of counsel is necessary for an adequate presentation of the merits, or to otherwise ensure fundamental fairness. Jolly v. Wright, 300 N.C. 83, 265 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

Section 7A-451, concerning the scope of entitlement of indigent persons to representation, does not grant to indigent persons the right to be represented by appointed counsel in civil contempt proceedings. Jolly v. Wright, 300 N.C. 83, 265 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

Right to Confront Witnesses. — A person denying his asserted violation of a restraining order in contempt proceedings has the right under the provisions of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19, synonymous with due process of law under the United States Constitution, to confront and cross-examine witnesses by whose testimony the asserted violation is to be established. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980).

But This Right Is Waivable. — See Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980).

Punishment for Both Criminal and Civil Contempt. — As recognized in § 5A-12(d) and subsection (c) of this section, a person may be found to be in both criminal and civil contempt, although only a single act was committed. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980).

There are certain instances where contemnors may be punished for both criminal contempt and for civil contempt. Blue Jeans

Corp. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 4 N.C. App. 245, 166 S.E.2d 698, aff'd, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

One act may be punishable as both civil contempt and criminal contempt. This kind of duality particularly inheres in a party litigant's willful failure to comply with a discovery order. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

District Court May Enforce Judgment Entered in Superior Court. — A district court judge may hold a party to a proceeding before him in civil contempt for failure to comply with court orders issued pursuant to a confession of judgment regarding payment of alimony which was entered in the superior court prior to the establishment of a district court for the district in which the order was entered. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Disobeying an order entered by a court without jurisdiction is not contempt. Harding v. Harding, 46 N.C. App. 62, 264 S.E.2d 131 (1980).

The violation of a provision of a judgment which is void cannot be made the basis for contempt. Corey v. Hardison, 236 N.C. 147, 72 S.E.2d 416 (1952).

V. APPEAL AND ERROR.

The findings of fact by the judge in contempt proceedings are conclusive on appeal when supported by any competent evidence, and are reviewable only for the purpose of passing on their sufficiency to warrant the judgment. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

In proceedings for contempt, the facts found by the judge are not reviewable except for the purpose of passing upon their sufficiency to warrant the judgment. Cox v. Cox, 10 N.C. App. 476, 179 S.E.2d 194 (1971).

§ 5A-22. Release when civil contempt no longer continues.

(a) A person imprisoned for civil contempt must be released when his civil contempt no longer continues. The order of the court holding a person in civil contempt must specify how the person may purge himself of the contempt. Upon finding compliance with the specifications, the sheriff or other officer having custody may release the person without a further order from the court.

(b) On motion of the contemnor, the court must determine if he is subject to release and, on an affirmative determination, order his release. The motion must be directed to the judge who found civil contempt unless he is not available. Then the motion must be made to a judge of the same division in the same judicial district. The contemnor may also seek his release under other procedures available under the law of this State. (1977, c. 711, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Subsection (a) permits the one who has custody of a jailed contemnor to release him without a court order or any formal proceedings, if the custodian finds that the contemnor has purged himself of the contempt by complying with the contempt order's specifications. This is intended to apply mainly to the situation in which compliance with the order calls for payment to the court. It was felt that this action was so clear that the custodian should be able to proceed on his own. The possibility that a person will be released when a release was not proper was outweighed by the importance of seeing to it that a person did not remain jailed longer than was necessary. Subsection (b) establishes the machinery for a civil contemnor to seek his own release if he has complied or if compliance is no longer possible, but he has still not been released.

§ 5A-23. Proceedings for civil contempt.

(a) Proceedings for civil contempt are either by the order of a judicial official directing the alleged contemnor to appear at a specified reasonable time and show cause why he should not be held in civil contempt or by the notice of a judicial official that the alleged contemnor will be held in contempt unless he appears at a specified reasonable time and shows cause why he should not be held in contempt. The order or notice must be given at least five days in advance of the hearing unless good cause is shown. The order or notice may be issued on the motion and sworn statement or affidavit of one with an interest in enforcing the order, including a judge, and a finding by the judicial official of probable cause to believe there is civil contempt.

(b) Except when the General Statutes specifically provide for the exercise of contempt power by the clerk of superior court, proceedings under this section are before a district court judge, unless a court superior to the district court issued the order in which case the proceedings are before that court. When the proceedings are before a superior court, venue is in the judicial district of the court which issued the order. Otherwise, venue is in the county where the order was issued.

(c) The person ordered to show cause may move to dismiss the order.

(d) The judicial official is the trier of facts at the show cause hearing.

(e) At the conclusion of the hearing, the judicial official must enter a finding for or against the alleged contemnor. If civil contempt is found, the judicial official must enter an order finding the facts constituting contempt and specifying the action which the contemnor must take to purge himself of the contempt.

(f) A person with an interest in enforcing the order may present the case for a finding of civil contempt for failure to comply with an order.

(g) A judge conducting a hearing to determine if a person is in civil contempt may at that hearing, upon making the required findings, find the person in criminal contempt for the same conduct, regardless of whether imprisonment for civil contempt is proper in the case. (1977, c. 711, s. 3; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1080, ss. 2-4.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Subsection (a) draws a distinction between an order to appear for a show of cause hearing and a notice that the show-cause hearing will be held. The Commission wanted to make clear the propriety of a person's not appearing if he was notified of the show-cause hearing rather than ordered to appear at it. Since the Commission felt that there were some instances in which the court would want the contemnor present regardless of his wishes, the order was left as an option. Application of subsection (b) results in magistrates and clerks being unable to hold proceedings for civil contempt. The Commission particularly intended "a person with an interest" under subsection (f) to include the State, as represented by the district attorney, in a criminal case. Subsection (g) permits, in essence, consolidated hearings for civil and criminal contempt, thus permitting a judge who has begun a civil contempt hearing to continue and find the person in criminal contempt even though he is beyond the reach of civil contempt because of inability at that time to comply with the order.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment added "Except when the General Statutes specifically provide for the exercise of contempt power by the clerk of superior court," at the beginning of subsection (b), and substituted "judicial official" for "judge" in subsection (d) and in two places of subsection (e).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the annotations under this section are from cases decided under former § 5-9.

Requirement for Proper Verification. — Although the language used in this section seems to be permissive in nature, prior case law under the antecedent statute established that, in cases of civil contempt, previously denominated as cases as for contempt, a petition, affidavit, or other proper verification charging a willful violation of an order of court was necessary in order for an order to show cause to issue. The legislature has not altered this requirement. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980).

An order issued on the basis of unsworn testimony given ex parte to the court could not lawfully have been one based on civil contempt. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980).

The procedure to punish for civil contempt is by order to show cause based upon a petition, affidavit, or other proper verification charging a willful violation of an order of court. Rose's Stores, Inc. v. Tarrytown Center, Inc., 270 N.C. 201, 154 S.E.2d 313 (1967).

Precedent decrees that a judge should recuse himself in contempt proceeding involving his personal feelings which do not make for an impartial and calm judicial consideration and conclusion in the matter. Ponder v. Davis, 233 N.C. 699, 65 S.E.2d 356 (1951).

No judge should sit in his own case, or participate in a matter in which he has a personal interest, or has taken sides therein. Ponder v. Davis, 233 N.C. 699, 65 S.E.2d 356 (1951).

Trial court did not have jurisdiction to conduct contempt proceedings while appeal was pending, because, under § 1-294, all proceedings below are stayed; therefore order finding defendant in contempt was void, at least until appeal was perfected. Collins v. Collins, 18 N.C. App. 45, 196 S.E.2d 282 (1973), decided under former § 5-9.

Waiver. — Where defendant was accused of mismanaging, diverting and wasting corporate assets and the trial court ordered him to cooperate with receivers of the corporation and to provide them and plaintiffs with copies of his tax returns and a list of his assets, defendant's contempt, if any, in failing to provide the required materials could be criminal or civil, and contemnor waived procedural requirements when he came into court to answer charges of the trial court's show cause order. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

A person found in civil contempt may appeal in the manner provided for appeals in civil actions. (1977, c. 711, s. 3.)

§ 5A-25. Proceedings as for contempt and civil contempt.

Whenever the laws of North Carolina call for proceedings as for contempt, the proceedings are those for civil contempt set out in this Article. (1977, c. 711, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section makes clear that all of the existing references to "as for contempt" in the General Statutes should be interpreted to call for the procedures provided in this Article for civil contempt.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

For discussion of costs generally, see State v. Massey, 104 N.C. 877, 10 S.E. 608 (1889).

Costs Follow the Judgment. — In general this section states the rule that costs follow the judgment, a rule which is founded on policy and natural justice, designed to prevent the unsuccessful litigant from escaping the consequence ensuing from the unfavorable termination of a suit, and which, to a great extent, acts as deterrent to the prosecution or appeal of promiscuous and frivolous litigation. Criminal actions and civil suits alike are controlled by the principle. In State v. Horne, 119 N.C. 853, 26 S.E. 36 (1896), it is said: "There is no exception in State cases to the rule prevailing in civil cases that the costs follow the result of the final judgment." The true and only test of liability for costs depends upon the nature of the final judgment, and the party cast in the suit is the one upon whom the costs must fall. Kincaid v. Graham, 92 N.C. 154 (1885); Williams v. Hughes, 139 N.C. 17, 51 S.E. 790 (1905); Smith v. Cashie & Cowan R.R. & Lumber Co., 148 N.C. 334, 62 S.E. 416 (1908); Kinston Cotton Mills v. Rocky Mount Hosiery Co., 154 N.C. 462, 70 S.E. 910 (1911); Ritchie v. Ritchie, 192 N.C. 538, 135 S.E. 458 (1926).

This basic rule of costs is underlying throughout and apparent from the other provisions of this chapter, and, as stated in Costin v. Baxter, 29 N.C. 111 (1846), "in no instance found in the books has the losing party recovered his costs or any part of them."

At common law neither party to a civil action could recover costs. Costin v. Baxter, 29 N.C. 111 (1846); State v. Massey, 104 N.C. 877, 10 S.E. 608 (1889); Charwick v. Life Ins. Co., 158 N.C. 380, 74 S.E. 115 (1912); Waldo v. Wilson, 177 N.C. 461, 100 S.E. 182 (1919); City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

And each party paid his own witnesses. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Costs are entirely creatures of legislation, without which they do not exist. Clerk's Office v. Commissioners of Carteret County, 121 N.C. 29, 27 S.E. 1003 (1897).

Today in this State, all costs are given in a court of law by virtue of some statute. Costs, in this State, are entirely creatures of legislation, and without this they do not exist. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

An award of costs is an exercise of statutory authority; if the statute is misinterpreted, the judgment is erroneous. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Statutes Strictly Construed. — Since the right to tax costs did not exist at common law and costs are considered penal in their nature, statutes relating to costs are strictly construed. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Costs May Not Be Adjudged on Mere Equitable or Moral Grounds. — Since costs may be taxed solely on the basis of statutory authority, it follows a fortiori that courts have no power to adjudge costs against anyone on mere equitable or moral grounds. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Parties Entitled to Actual Costs Reasonably Incurred and Specifically Authorized. — Parties to whom judgment is given are entitled to recover their actual costs reasonably incurred and specifically authorized by statutes. Such reimbursement is the limit of their entitlement. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Costs and Expenses Unnecessarily Incurred. — Even when allowed by statute, costs and expenses unnecessarily incurred by the prevailing party will not be taxed against the unsuccessful party. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Applied in In re Cox, 17 N.C. App. 687, 195 S.E.2d 132 (1973); Brady v. Smith, 18 N.C. App. 293, 196 S.E.2d 580 (1973).

Cited in Gay v. Thompson, 266 N.C. 394, 146 S.E.2d 425 (1966).

II. PARTICULAR COSTS.

A. Attorneys' Fees.

In the absence of express statutory authority, attorneys' fees are not allowable as part of the court costs in civil actions. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

The power to make an allowance of counsel fees from a fund brought into court is susceptible of great abuse, and should be exercised with jealous caution. With the power of award being limited to items of reasonable attorney fees and expenses, so as to exclude compensation or allowance of any kind for the time and effort of the suing taxpayer, thus fixing it so the taxpayer may not capitalize on the suit, there is no real danger of abuse. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

B. Witness Fees.

In General. — The losing party is taxed with the costs of his adversary's witness only if the witness was subpoenaed and examined or tendered. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Witness Fees Not Allowed and Taxed for Party Testifying in His Own Case. — The general rule is that, unless authorized by express statute provision, witness fees cannot be allowed and taxed for a party to the action. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

In construing this section, it is not necessary to resort to rules of construction. Clearly, the legislature did not contemplate that a party would disburse or become liable to himself for a fee when he testified as a witness for himself in his own case. Neither did it contemplate that a party would pay an officer to subpoena himself as a witness. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

If a successful party is not entitled to have a witness fee for himself taxed against his losing adversary, he is not entitled to have taxed an expert witness fee for himself. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Expert witness fees can be taxed against an adverse party only when the testimony of the witness examined or tendered was or would have been material and competent. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

The testimony of the expert civil engineer that his plan for widening the street was as good as city's, was totally irrelevant to the question of city's right to condemn the property in question. The record disclosed no facts which would justify taxing, as a part of the costs for which the city was liable, an expert witness fee. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Expense of Transporting Witnesses. — A provision in an order for removal that movant should pay "costs" of transporting the witnesses of the adverse party, held to mean "expense," since such "costs" are no part of the costs of the action. Nichols v. Goldston, 231 N.C. 581, 58 S.E.2d 348 (1950).

This section does not include expenses for returning defendant to this State from points without the State. State v. Patterson, 224 N.C. 471, 31 S.E.2d 380 (1944).

C. Other Costs.

Compensation for Time and Effort Devoted to Litigation. — Parties are not entitled to recover an hourly wage or per diem for the time they expended in attending hearings, or securing evidence or exhibits; a party is not entitled to compensation for the time and effort he devotes to the litigation. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Mileage, Meals and Hotel Bills. — No statute authorizes the inclusion of expenses of parties for mileage, meals and hotel bills expended in securing evidence and attending hearings, in court costs. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

The expense of procuring surveys, maps, plans, photographs and documents are not taxable as costs unless there is clear statutory authority therefor or they have been ordered by the court. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Nominal Damages Entitling Plaintiff to Costs Not Allowed in Action for Wrongful Death. — Where, in an action for wrongful death the sole issue is that of damages and there is no pecuniary loss on which recovery could be based, nominal damages, which would entitle plaintiff to costs, would not be allowed. Armentrout v. Hughes, 247 N.C. 631, 101 S.E.2d 793 (1958).

Where the appellate court allows improvements claimed in partition proceedings, claimant is not to be taxed with the costs of trial in the superior court involving her claim. Jenkins v. Strickland, 214 N.C. 441, 199 S.E. 612 (1938).

An action upon a contract sounding in damages is one at law, and the costs are taxable under this section, and are not in the discretion of the court as an equity proceeding controlled by § 6-20. Highland Cotton Mills v. Ragan Knitting Co., 194 N.C. 80, 138 S.E. 428 (1927).

§ 6-2: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 269, s. 15.

§ 6-3. Sureties on prosecution bonds liable for costs.

When an action is brought in any court in which security is given for the prosecution thereof, or when any case is brought up to a court by an appeal or otherwise, in which security for the prosecution of the suit has been given, and judgment is rendered against the plaintiff for the costs of the defendant, the appellate court shall also give judgment against the surety for said costs, and execution may issue jointly against the plaintiff and his surety. (1831, c. 46; R. S., c. 31, s. 133; R. C., c. 31, s. 126; Code, s. 543; Rev., s. 1251; 1913, c. 189, s. 1; C. S., s. 1227.)

Cross References. — As to use of mortgages in lieu of security for costs, etc., see § 109-25. As to appeal bonds, see § 1-297.

CASE NOTES

Section Applies in Supreme Court. — This section cannot be restricted in its application to appeals from the court of a justice of the peace, for the first sentence of the section would not apply to such a court, as no prosecution bond for costs is given there, but only in the superior court, or in the Supreme Court if an action is brought there against the State, or perhaps in some other cases not cognizable by a justice of the peace. Kenney v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 166 N.C. 566, 82 S.E. 849 (1914); Grimes v. Andrews, 171 N.C. 367, 88 S.E. 513 (1916).

The words "appellate court," as used by the amendment of this section in 1913, in view of the context could mean only the Supreme Court. Kenney v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 166 N.C. 566, 82 S.E. 849 (1914).

It Is Not Limited to Cases Where Plaintiff Appeals. — This section is so broadly worded as to apply to all cases where the costs are adjudged for the defendant against the plaintiff, and not simply to those where the plaintiff appeals. Kenney v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 166 N.C. 566, 82 S.E. 849 (1914).

But it does not apply where the defendant does not gain an entire reversal in the appellate court; where a partial new trial only is awarded, the costs are in the discretion of the appellate court as provided in § 6-33. Rayburn v. Casualty Co., 142 N.C. 376, 55 S.E. 296 (1906).

Application Where Judgment is asked against sureties in Quo Warranto. — Where an action is brought to recover fees of an office, and in the same action judgment is asked against the sureties on a bond given in a quo warranto proceeding, the superior court has jurisdiction and judgment may be rendered against the sureties. McCall v. Zachary, 131 N.C. 466, 42 S.E. 903 (1902).

The words "security for the prosecution" mean the prosecution bond. Kenney v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 166 N.C. 566, 82 S.E. 849 (1914).

Increasing Penalty of Bond. — Where the defendant has been successful on his appeal to the appellate court, and his judgment for costs against the sureties on the prosecution bond of the plaintiff results in making insecure the costs in the superior court, the remedy is by application to increase the penalty of the bond. Kenney v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 166 N.C. 566, 82 S.E. 849 (1914).

Appeal by Surety. — Though a surety on a prosecution bond is not a party to the action, yet, when he is made a party to a proceeding to tax the costs in a case, he may appeal from the order allowing the motion to retax. Smith v. Arthur, Coffin & Co., 116 N.C. 871, 21 S.E. 696 (1895).

§ 6-4. Execution for unpaid costs; bill of costs to be attached.

When costs are not paid by the party from whom they are due, the clerk of superior court shall issue an execution for the costs, and attach a bill of costs to each execution. The sheriff shall levy the execution as in other cases. (R. C., c. 102, s. 24; Code, s. 3762; Rev., s. 1252; C. S., s. 1228; 1969, c. 44, s. 17; 1971, c. 269, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Every execution presupposes a judgment of some sort, and the right given by this section to issue the one implies the existence of the other. Sheppard v. Bland, 87 N.C. 163 (1882).

§§ 6-5, 6-6: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 269, s. 15.

§ 6-7. Clerk to enter costs in case file.

The clerk of superior court shall enter in the case file, after judgment, the costs allowed by law. (Code, s. 532; Rev., s. 1255; C. S., s. 1231; 1971, c. 269, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Authority of Assistant Clerk to Tax Cost of Deposition. — An assistant clerk of the superior court had the authority to tax the cost of a deposition against a plaintiff who took a voluntary dismissal of his case before it reached the trial calendar. Thigpen v. Piver, 37 N.C. App. 382, 246 S.E.2d 67, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 653, 248 S.E.2d 257 (1978).

Costs Properly Adjudged after Decision of Appellate Court. — After decision of the appellate court modifying and affirming a judgment of the superior court on appeal from the referee, allowances constituting items of costs may be adjudged as provided by this section. Clark v. Cagle, 226 N.C. 230, 37 S.E.2d 672 (1946).

Referee's Fee as Part of Costs. — In Young v. Connelly, 112 N.C. 646, 17 S.E. 424 (1893), the court cites this section to the following statement: "The referee's fee was a part of the costs. It was necessary for the clerk to tax the costs and insert the amount in the entry of judgment in addition to the sum adjudged by his honor."

Applied in Thigpen v. Piver, 37 N.C. App. 382, 246 S.E.2d 67 (1978).

§§ 6-8 to 6-12: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 269, s. 15.

ARTICLE 2.

When State Liable for Costs.

§ 6-13. Civil actions by the State; joinder of private party.

In all civil actions prosecuted in the name of the State, by an officer duly authorized for that purpose, the State shall be liable for costs in the same cases and to the same extent as private parties. If a private person be joined with the State as plaintiff, he shall be liable in the first instance for the defendant's costs, which shall not be recovered of the State till after execution is issued therefor against such private party and returned unsatisfied. (Code, s. 536; Rev., s. 1259; C. S., s. 1236.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — In State ex rel. Blount v. Simmons, 119 N.C. 50, 25 S.E. 789 (1896), it was held that nothing in the Constitution deprived the legislature of power to enact this section.

Judgment May Be Rendered against State for Costs. — Upon the failure of the litigation, the State is, under this section, liable for the costs of an action authorized by act of the General Assembly and prosecuted in its name by the district attorney, and judgment may be rendered in such action against the State for such costs. State ex rel. Blount v. Simmons, 119 N.C. 50, 25 S.E. 789 (1896).

State's Liability Dependent upon Statute. — The general statutes giving costs do not include the sovereign, and the State is only liable for costs in the event of express statutory provisions. State ex rel. Blount v. Simmons, 120 N.C. 19, 26 S.E. 649 (1897).

Disbarment Proceedings. — Where the proceedings for disbarment of an attorney have not been sustained, the costs are taxable against the State under the provisions of this section, and an order erroneously taxing them against the county in which the matter was tried will be vacated. State ex rel. Committee on Grievances v. Strickland, 201 N.C. 619, 161 S.E. 76 (1931).

Actions to Vacate Oyster-Bed Entry. — Where, in an action by the solicitor in the name of the State to vacate an oyster-bed entry, the plaintiff was nonsuited, it was error to tax the costs against the county, which was not a party to the action. State ex rel. Blount v. Simmons, 118 N.C. 9, 23 S.E. 923 (1896).

Under this section the State is liable for the costs of an action instituted by the State solicitor to vacate an oyster-bed entry. In such case, it seems that the persons making the required affidavit, alleging that the entry is a fraud upon the State, might be held liable as relators if it should appear that the action was for their benefit and at their instance. State ex rel. Blount v. Simmons, 120 N.C. 19, 26 S.E. 649 (1897).

§ 6-14. Civil action by and against State officers.

In all civil actions depending, or which may be instituted, by any of the officers of the State, or which have been or shall be instituted against them, when any such action is brought or defended pursuant to the advice of the Attorney General, and the same is decided against such officers, the cost thereof shall be paid by the State Treasurer upon properly drawn warrants. (1874-75, c. 154; Code, s. 3373; Rev., s. 1260; C. S., s. 1237; 1971, c. 269, s. 4.)

§ 6-15. Actions by State for private persons, etc.

In an action prosecuted in the name of the State for the recovery of money or property, or to establish a right or claim for the benefit of any county, city, town, village, corporation or person, costs awarded against the plaintiff shall be a charge against the party for whose benefit the action was prosecuted, and not against the State. (Code, s. 537; Rev., s. 1261; C. S., s. 1238.)

§ 6-17. Costs of State on appeals to federal courts.

In all cases, whether civil or criminal, to which the State of North Carolina is a party, and which are carried from the courts of this State, or from the district court of the United States, by appeal or writ of error, to the United States circuit court of appeals, or to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the State is adjudged to pay the costs, it is the duty of the Attorney General to certify the amount of such costs to the Treasurer, who shall pay them upon properly drawn warrants. (1871-2, c. 26; Code, s. 538; Rev., s. 1263; C. S., s. 1240; 1971, c. 269, s. 5.)

§ 6-17.1. Costs and expenses of State in connection with federal litigation arising out of State cases.

In all cases of litigation in any court of the United States arising out of or by reason of any cases pending or tried in any court of the State of North Carolina, or in any action originally instituted in any court of the United States, the expenses for State court costs, securing of court records and transcripts, and other necessary expenses in representing the State of North Carolina or any of its departments, officials or agencies shall be allocated from and paid out of the State Contingency and Emergency Fund. (1963, c. 844.)

Civil Actions and Proceedings.

§ 6-18. When costs allowed as of course to plaintiff.

Costs shall be allowed of course to the plaintiff, upon a recovery, in the following cases:

(1) In an action for the recovery of real property, or when a claim of title to real property arises on the pleadings, or is certified by the court to have come in question at the trial.

(2) In an action to recover the possession of personal property.

(3) In an action for assault, battery, false imprisonment, libel, slander, malicious prosecution, criminal conversation or seduction, if the plaintiff recovers less than fifty dollars ($50.00) damages, he shall recover no more costs than damages.

(4) When several actions are brought on one bond, recognizance, promissory note, bill of exchange or instrument in writing, or in any other case, for the same cause of action against several parties who might have been joined as defendants in the same action, no costs other than disbursements shall be allowed to the plaintiff in more than one of such actions, which shall be at his election, provided the party or parties proceeded against in such other action or actions were within the State and not secreted at the commencement of the previous action or actions.

(5) In an action brought under Article 1 of Chapter 19A. (R. C., c. 31, s. 78; 1874-5, c. 119; Code, s. 525; Rev., s. 1264; C. S., s. 1241; 1971, c. 269, s. 6; 1979, c. 808, s. 5.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Actions for Recovery of Real Property, etc.
III. Recovery of Personalty.
IV. Costs When Damages Are Less than $50.00.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Section 6-20 Governs Where This Section Inapplicable. — Where the action is not of such a nature that it falls within any of the subdivisions of this section or of the following section, it comes within the terms and is included by § 6-20. Parton v. Boyd, 104 N.C. 422, 10 S.E. 490 (1889); Yates v. Yates, 170 N.C. 533, 87 S.E. 317 (1915).

Section Inapplicable to Contempt Proceeding. — Although labeled "civil" contempt, a proceeding as for contempt is by no means a civil action or proceeding to which this section or § 6-20, allowing costs in discretion of court, would apply. United Artists Records, Inc. v.

Eastern Tape Corp., 18 N.C. App. 183, 196 S.E.2d 598, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 666, 197 S.E.2d 880 (1973).

Meaning of Recovery. — The recovery referred to in this section is a final determination upon the merits, and success in the appellate court is by no means equivalent to a recovery in the court below. Williams v. Hughes, 139 N.C. 17, 51 S.E. 790 (1905).

A recovery within the meaning of the section cannot be predicated upon anything coming to the plaintiff which was not in the contemplation of the plaintiff when he filed his complaint, and especially of a thing to which he virtually disclaimed any right or title. Patterson v. Ramsey, 136 N.C. 561, 48 S.E. 811 (1904).

In order to determine who should pay the costs, the general result must be considered and inquiry made as to who has, in the view of the law, succeeded in the action. Patterson v. Ramsey, 136 N.C. 561, 48 S.E. 811 (1904).

Partial Recovery. — There is no provision that limits the allowance of costs in favor of the plaintiff in case of only a partial recovery. The language of the statute as to them is comprehensive and without exceptive provision. In Wall v. Covington, 76 N.C. 150 (1877), it was held that no part of the costs in such actions can be taxed against the party recovering. And in Horton v. Horne, 99 N.C. 219, 5 S.E. 927 (1888), it was decided in an action to recover personal property, that if the plaintiff establishes his title to only a portion of the property delivered to him under claim and delivery proceedings, he will be entitled to costs. Wooten v. Walters, 110 N.C. 251, 14 S.E. 734 (1892); Ferrabow v. Green, 110 N.C. 414, 14 S.E. 973 (1892); Kinston Cotton Mills v. Rocky Mount Hosiery Co., 154 N.C. 462, 70 S.E. 910 (1911).

Action by Executor. — Where the action involves the question as to the recovery of a portion of the estate of a deceased person, and judgment is rendered in favor of the executor, the plaintiff, he is entitled to a judgment for costs under this section. White v. Mitchell, 196 N.C. 89, 144 S.E. 526 (1928).

Applied, as to action of slander, in Wolfe v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 211 N.C. 295, 189 S.E. 772 (1937).

II. ACTIONS FOR RECOVERY OF REAL PROPERTY, ETC.

Section States Common-Law Rule. — Subdivision (1) of the section is in affirmance of the principle established before its enactment. Moore v. Angel, 116 N.C. 843, 21 S.E. 699 (1895).

Construed with § 6-21. — This section, allowing plaintiffs' costs as of course, upon recovery, in an action involving title to real estate, and § 6-21, providing apportionment of costs in a special proceeding for the division or sale of realty or personalty are related sections, pertain to the same subject matter, and must be construed in pari materia. Bailey v. Hayman, 222 N.C. 58, 22 S.E.2d 6 (1942).

Actions to Recover Both Realty and Personalty. — Under this section the plaintiff in an action to recover both real and personal property is entitled to recover costs, although he recovers the real property only. Wooten v. Walters, 110 N.C. 251, 14 S.E. 734 (1892).

Partial Recovery. — Where the plaintiff is adjudged entitled to a part of the land sued for, whether such land is a portion of one tract or is one of several tracts for which the action is brought, then the plaintiff is exonerated as to costs and no part thereof should be found against him. Ferrabow v. Green, 110 N.C. 414, 14 S.E. 973 (1892); Moore v. Angel, 116 N.C. 843, 21 S.E. 699 (1895); Field v. Wheeler, 120 N.C. 264, 26 S.E. 812 (1897); Vanderbilt v. Johnson, 141 N.C. 370, 54 S.E. 298 (1906). See Staley v. Staley, 174 N.C. 640, 94 S.E. 407 (1917).

Where the plaintiff has been required to introduce evidence of his title to the whole of the locus in quo, and then the defendant consents that the court charge the jury to find for the plaintiff if they believe the evidence as to a certain part, and the issue is found for the defendant as to the remaining land, the costs of the action are properly awarded against the defendant. Swain v. Clemmons, 175 N.C. 240, 95 S.E. 489 (1918).

When There Is More than One Issue. — In an action of trespass to real property, where the plaintiff's title and the fact of trespass are both put in issue by the defendant's answer, and the jury find the issue as to the title in favor of the plaintiff, and the issue as to the trespass in favor of the defendant, the defendant is entitled to judgment for costs. To entitle the plaintiff to recover costs, both issues must be found in his favor. Murray v. Spencer, 92 N.C. 264 (1885).

Boundary Dispute. — Where, in an action in ejectment and for damages for cutting of timber, defendant files answer defending plaintiffs' title to the land in dispute, and verdict is entered in favor of plaintiffs, plaintiffs, as a matter of law, are not liable for any of the costs notwithstanding that upon the trial each party admitted the title of the other within the boundaries of their respective grants and the only controversy was as to the location of the boundary between their respective grants. Cody v. England, 221 N.C. 40, 19 S.E.2d 10 (1942).

Necessity for Disclaimer In Order to Avoid Costs. — A defendant in an action concerning land should enter a disclaimer if he does not claim the land in controversy, or does not intend to litigate with the plaintiff, in order to escape the payment of costs. Swain v. Clemmons, 175 N.C. 240, 95 S.E. 489 (1918).

This rule is forcibly illustrated by the case of Moore v. Angel, 116 N.C. 843, 21 S.E. 699

(1895), where, in an action in trespass, the defendant failed to disclaim title to all the land declared for by plaintiff, but recovered according to the boundaries set up in his answer, with a greater amount for damages on his counterclaim than was allowed the plaintiff, and the plaintiff was nevertheless held entitled to costs.

But if the defendant disclaims title to all the land declared for, except that for which he proves his right, no issue as to the plaintiff's title will arise, and the findings that the defendant's title, disputed by the plaintiff, is good and that the defendant has sustained greater damages than his adversary, upon both necessarily, perhaps on either, will entitle the defendant to costs. Moore v. Angel, 116 N.C. 843, 21 S.E. 699 (1895).

So in ejectment, where the defendant denies the right to possession and denies that the plaintiff holds the title in trust for him, and judgment is rendered that the defendant is entitled to the land upon payment of an amount found due the plaintiff, no part of the cost is taxable against the defendant. Patterson v. Ramsey, 136 N.C. 561, 48 S.E. 811 (1904).

It would seem that in order to escape potential liability for costs the defendant must enter his disclaimer of all the lands declared for, and that a disclaimer of half the locus in quo will not suffice to enable him to escape upon the unfavorable adjudication of the other half. See In re Hurley, 185 N.C. 422, 117 S.E. 345 (1923).

One who successfully maintains an equitable defense against the recovery of land on the bare legal title is entitled to judgment for his costs. Vestal v. Sloan, 83 N.C. 555 (1880).

Liability of Intervener. — Where the defendant intervenes in an action to recover real property and files a joint answer with his codefendant, and makes a joint defense, the plaintiff is entitled to the costs under this subdivision of the section. Having joined in the controversy, and made common cause in the defense, interveners must abide the result. Spruill v. Arrington, 109 N.C. 192, 13 S.E. 779 (1891). See Willis v. Coleburn, 169 N.C. 670, 86 S.E. 596 (1915).

III. RECOVERY OF PERSONALTY.

Partial Recovery. — There is no exception to the partial recovery rule when the action is for the recovery of personalty, and when the plaintiff establishes title to any part of the property sued for, he is entitled to judgment for costs. Wooten v. Walters, 110 N.C. 251, 14 S.E. 734 (1892); Field v. Wheeler, 120 N.C. 264, 26 S.E. 812 (1897). This is not the case where some of the defendants recover judgment, in which case, of course, they recover costs. Phillips v. Little, 147 N.C. 282, 61 S.E. 49 (1908).

As an example of the application of this rule to claims for personal property it has been held that the plaintiff on being adjudged entitled to only a portion of a crop in a suit for claim and delivery was entitled to costs. Field v. Wheeler, 120 N.C. 264, 26 S.E. 812 (1897).

Claim and Delivery. — Judgment in an action of claim and delivery carries all costs under this section. Rawlings v. Neal, 126 N.C. 271, 35 S.E. 597 (1900).

Enforcement of Lien. — Where the controversy depended upon the right of the mechanic to repossess an automobile that he repaired, in order that he could enforce his lien thereon, and the jury found in the plaintiff's favor upon determinative issues, but in the defendant's favor upon an issue of fraud, the question of taxing the cost did not depend upon the finding of the jury upon the issue of the defendant's fraud, and the plaintiff, having established his right to the possession, was entitled to recover the costs, under this section. Maxton Auto Co. v. Rudd, 176 N.C. 497, 97 S.E. 477 (1918).

IV. COSTS WHEN DAMAGES ARE LESS THAN $50.00.

In General. — In a civil action, if the provocation is great, the jury will usually see fit to return nominal or small damages, and if the amount is less than fifty dollars the plaintiff, under this section, recovers no more costs than damages. Palmer v. Winston-Salem Ry. & Elec. Co., 131 N.C. 250, 42 S.E. 604 (1902). The subdivision was applied where the recovery for slander was less than fifty dollars in Smith v. Myers, 188 N.C. 551, 125 S.E. 178 (1924). And again when one dollar damages were sustained by the erection of a mill. See Bridgers v. Purcell, 23 N.C. 232 (1840). The former rule as to slander is stated in Coates v. Stephenson, 52 N.C. 124 (1859), where it was held that the costs of the plaintiff, under R.C., c. 31, § 78, could not be taxed against the defendant.

Where the plaintiff is entitled to nominal damages, such damages will carry with it the costs under this section. Wilson v. Forbes, 13 N.C. 30 (1828); Britton v. Ruffin, 123 N.C. 67, 21 S.E. 271 (1898).

Instructed Verdict for One Penny Damages and One Penny Costs. — For a case where an instructed verdict for one penny damages and one penny costs, under this section, was held erroneous because actual and not nominal damage was shown, see Osborn v. Leach, 135 N.C. 628, 47 S.E. 811 (1904).

§ 6-19. When costs allowed as of course to defendant.

Costs shall be allowed as of course to the defendant, in the actions mentioned in the preceding section [6-18] unless the plaintiff be entitled to costs therein. In all actions where there are several defendants not united in interest, and making separate defenses by separate answers, and the plaintiff fails to recover judgment against all, the court may award costs to such of the defendants as have judgment in their favor or any of them. (C. C. P., s. 277; Code, ss. 526, 527; Rev., s. 1266; C. S., s. 1242.)

CASE NOTES

Where plaintiff fails to recover in an action involving title to real property in which a court survey is ordered, the clerk is without authority to tax the surveyor's fees in the bill of costs, but on appeal from the clerk's order, the superior court, while properly affirming the clerk's order, should pass upon the motion for taxing such fees as a part of the costs as a matter of right. Ipock v. Miller, 245 N.C. 585, 96 S.E.2d 729 (1957). See § 38-4 and note.

Where the plaintiff fails in an action upon a covenant, the defendant recovers costs under this section. Britton v. Ruffin, 123 N.C. 67, 31 S.E. 271 (1898).

Unsuccessful Action to Set Aside Deed. — Costs were properly awarded to the grantee in a deed in an unsuccessful action to set aside such deed. D. B. Brisco & Co. v. Norris, 112 N.C. 671, 16 S.E. 850 (1893).

Cited in Gold v. Kiker, 218 N.C. 204, 10 S.E.2d 650 (1940).

§ 6-20. Costs allowed or not, in discretion of court.

In other actions, costs may be allowed or not, in the discretion of the court, unless otherwise provided by law. (Code, s. 527; Rev., s. 1267; C. S., s. 1243.)

Cross References. — As to costs where new trial is granted, see § 6-33 and the note thereto.

CASE NOTES

The purpose of this provision is to give the court authority to allow costs, as the justice of the case may require. Gulley v. Macy, 89 N.C. 343 (1883); Parton v. Boyd, 104 N.C. 422, 10 S.E. 490 (1889).

Section Inapplicable to Contempt Proceeding. — Although labeled "civil" contempt, a proceeding as for contempt is by no means a civil action or proceeding to which § 6-18, providing when costs shall be allowed to plaintiff as a matter of course, or this section would apply. United Artists Records, Inc. v. Eastern Tape Corp., 18 N.C. App. 183, 196 S.E.2d 598, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 666, 197 S.E.2d 880 (1973).

Exercise of Discretion Presumed. — Nothing to the contrary appearing, it will be taken that the court gave judgment in the exercise of its discretion as provided in this section. Gulley v. Macy, 89 N.C. 343 (1883); Wooten v. Walters, 110 N.C. 251, 14 S.E. 734 (1892).

Discretion Not Reviewable. — By this section the taxing of the costs is placed in the discretion of the trial judge, which discretion is not reviewable. Kluttz v. Allison, 214 N.C. 379, 199 S.E. 395 (1938); Chriscoe v. Chriscoe, 268 N.C. 554, 151 S.E.2d 33 (1966).

The exercise of the court's discretionary authority is not reviewable. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1963).

Taxation of costs against the plaintiff is within the court's discretion and is not reviewable on appeal, the action being equitable in nature. Bumgarner & Bowman Bldrs. v. Hollar, 7 N.C. App. 14, 171 S.E.2d 60 (1969).

Costs Discretionary in Actions of an Equitable Nature. — In equity there was a broad discretion on the subject of costs, Little v. Lockman, 50 N.C. 433 (1858), and the allowance rested with the court. Worthy v. Brower, 93 N.C. 492 (1885); Hooper v. Davies, 166 N.C. 236, 81 S.E. 1063 (1914). Even since the abolition of the courts of equity in this State, it is held that where the case partakes of an equitable nature, the question of costs is in the court's discretion. Thus where the jury found that each party was entitled to an undivided half in land, and the appeal was from taxing the defendant with costs, there being no element of an action in ejectment, neither party was permitted to recover costs from the other, especially as the question was of an equitable nature, and the taxing of costs was, under this section, in the sound discretion of the court. Hare v. Hare, 183 N.C. 419, 111 S.E. 620 (1922).

In actions of an equitable nature the costs are in the discretion of the court. Yates v. Yates, 170 N.C. 533, 87 S.E. 317 (1915).

If an action is equitable in nature the taxing of the costs is within the discretion of the court, and the court may allow costs in favor of one party or the other or require the parties to share the costs. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1963).

Apportionment of Costs. — Where a jury found that the allegations of the complaint with respect to the maintenance of the nuisance were true, the trial court, when it ordered the personal property sold, had discretionary power with respect to the apportionment of the costs. State ex rel. Morris v. Shinn, 262 N.C. 88, 136 S.E.2d 244 (1964).

A consolidated action, tried before the referee, in which judgments are rendered, is not an equitable proceeding, in which costs may be allowed or not, in the discretion of the court under this section. Highland Cotton Mills v. Ragan Knitting Co., 194 N.C. 80, 138 S.E. 428 (1927).

Creditor's Bill. — It is within the discretion of the trial court to tax the costs accruing upon either of the parties litigant, in an action in the nature of a creditor's bill, brought by materialmen, claiming under the statutory lien, the unpaid balance due by the owner of a dwelling, etc., to his contractor for its erection; and the action of the judge in taxing the trust funds in the owner's hands with the cost is commended in this suit. Bond v. Pickett Cotton Mills, Inc., 166 N.C. 20, 81 S.E. 936 (1914).

Specific Performance Generally. — Where the purpose of an action was simply to compel the specific performance of an executory contract, and to adjust certain rights involved in an account of moneys collected and certain indebtedness incident to that contract, it was clearly within this section. Parton v. Boyd, 104 N.C. 422, 10 S.E. 490 (1889).

Where one of defendants in injunction suit seeks affirmative relief by way of specific performance, the taxing of costs is in the discretion of the trial court since the controversy is of an equitable nature. Consequently the order of the court apportioning the costs will not ordinarily be disturbed on appeal upon affirmance of the judgment. Chandler v. Cameron, 229 N.C. 62, 47 S.E.2d 528, 3 A.L.R.2d 571 (1948).

Setting Aside Proceedings of Probate Court. — Where the action is to set aside certain proceedings in the probate court, the court is vested with discretion in the matter of allowing costs, under this section; each party is ordered to pay his own and each to pay one half of the allowance to the referee. Gulley v. Macy, 89 N.C. 343 (1883).

§ 6-21. Costs allowed either party or apportioned in discretion of court.

Costs in the following matters shall be taxed against either party, or apportioned among the parties, in the discretion of the court:

(1) Application for years' support, for surviving spouse or children.

(2) Caveats to wills and any action or proceeding which may require the construction of any will or trust agreement, or fix the rights and duties of parties thereunder; provided, that in any caveat proceeding under this subdivision, the court shall allow attorneys' fees for the attorneys of the caveators only if it finds that the proceeding has substantial merit.

(3) Habeas corpus; and the court shall direct what officer shall tax the costs thereof.

(4) In actions for divorce or alimony; and the court may both before and after judgment make such order respecting the payment of such costs as may be incurred by either spouse from the sole and separate estate of either spouse, as may be just.

(5) Application for the establishment, alteration or discontinuance of a public road, cartway or ferry. The board of county commissioners may order the costs incurred before them paid in their discretion.

(6) The compensation of referees and commissioners to take depositions.

(7) All costs and expenses incurred in special proceedings for the division or sale of either real estate or personal property under the Chapter entitled Partition.

(8) In all proceedings under the Chapter entitled Drainage, except as therein otherwise provided.
(9) In proceedings for reallotment of homestead for increase in value, as provided in the Chapter, Civil Procedure.
(10) In proceedings regarding illegitimate children under Article 3, Chapter 49 of the General Statutes.
(11) In custody proceedings under Chapter 50A of the General Statutes.
(12) In actions brought for misappropriation of a trade secret under Article 22 of Chapter 66 of the General Statutes.

The word "costs" as the same appears and is used in this section shall be construed to include reasonable attorneys' fees in such amounts as the court shall in its discretion determine and allow: provided that attorneys' fees in actions for alimony shall not be included in the costs as provided herein, but shall be determined and provided for in accordance with G.S. 50-16.4. (Code, ss. 533, 1294, 1323, 1422, 1660, 2039, 2056, 2134, 2161; 1889, c. 37; 1893, c. 149, s. 6; Rev., s. 1268; C. S., s. 1244; 1937, c. 143; 1955, c. 1364; 1965, c. 633; 1967, c. 993, s. 2; c. 1152, s. 5; 1977, c. 576; 1979, c. 110, s. 3; 1981, c. 809, s. 1; c. 890, s. 2.)

Local Modification. — Edgecombe: 1953, c. 737; Johnston: 1967, c. 835; Nash: 1939, c. 46; 1941, c. 18; 1953, c. 737.

Editor's Note. — It appears that the purpose of the first 1981 amendment was to change the rule announced in In re Will of Ridge, 302 N.C. 375, 275 S.E.2d 424 (1981), that this section did not require a specific finding as to whether a caveat had substantial merit before attorney's fees could be awarded.

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1981 amendment substituted "provided, that in any caveat proceeding under this subdivision, the court shall allow attorneys' fees for the attorneys of the caveators only if it finds that the proceeding has substantial merit" for "provided, however, that in any caveat proceeding under this subdivision, if the court finds that the proceeding is without substantial merit, the court may disallow attorneys' fees for the attorneys for the caveators" at the end of subdivision (2). Session Laws 1981, c. 809, s. 2, provides: "This act is effective upon ratification and applies to all proceedings filed on and after that date." The act was ratified July 3, 1981.

The second 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, added subdivision (12). Session Laws 1981, c. 890, s. 3, makes the act applicable only to causes of action arising after Oct. 1, 1981.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Discretion Not Reviewable. — The exercise of the court's discretionary authority is not reviewable. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1962).

Attorneys' Fees Generally. — Ordinarily attorney fees are taxable as costs only when expressly authorized by statute. Horner v. Chamber of Commerce, 236 N.C. 96, 72 S.E.2d 21 (1952). For note commenting on case, see 31 N.C.L. Rev. 115 (1952).

Except as otherwise provided by this section, attorney fees are not now regarded as part of the court costs in North Carolina. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Schneider, 235 N.C. 446, 70 S.E.2d 578 (1952); Horner v. Chamber of Commerce, 236 N.C. 96, 72 S.E.2d 21 (1952); Rider v. Lenoir County, 238 N.C. 632, 78 S.E.2d 745 (1953); Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1963); Perkins v. American Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 4 N.C. App. 466, 167 S.E.2d 93 (1969).

However, this section authorizes attorneys' fees in certain enumerated actions to be taxed as a part of the costs, to be paid out of the fund which is the subject matter of the action. Rider v. Lenoir County, 238 N.C. 632, 78 S.E.2d 745 (1953).

In the types of cases enumerated in this section, attorneys' fees may be included as a part of the costs in such amounts as the court in its discretion determines and allows. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1963).

As to award of attorney's fees in particular actions, see annotations under analysis lines II (A)-(F).

II. COSTS IN PARTICULAR ACTIONS

A. Caveats to Wills.

Discretion of Court. — It is within the discretionary power of a court, before which an issue of devisavit vel non is tried, to direct the payment of the costs out of the estate. Mayo v. Jones, 78 N.C. 406 (1878). See In re Will of Hargrove, 206 N.C. 307, 173 S.E. 577 (1934), for dicta on this point.

Subdivision (2) of this section leaves the taxing of court costs and the apportionment thereof to be made in the discretion of the court. Moreover, the fixing of reasonable attorney fees in applicable cases is likewise a matter within the sound discretion of the trial court. Godwin v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 259 N.C. 520, 131 S.E.2d 456 (1963).

Where appellant did not contend that the fees allowed counsel were unreasonable and nothing to the contrary appeared in the record, it was taken that the court taxed the costs and attorneys' fees in the exercise of its discretion and that there was no abuse of this discretion. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Dodson, 260 N.C. 22, 131 S.E.2d 875 (1963).

When an executor's right to qualify is contested and judicially denied, whether the court will exercise its discretion to award costs, including attorney's fees, incurred in his unsuccessful litigation, will depend in each case upon the grounds for the opposition and the reasonableness of his resistance to it, his good faith in pressing his appointment and whether his efforts were in the interest of the estate. In re Estate of Moore, 292 N.C. 58, 231 S.E.2d 849 (1977).

Albeit subdivision (2) authorizes the trial judge in his discretion to award costs, including attorneys' fees, in the instances specified therein, it is quite clear (1) that he should not award costs and attorneys' fees to an executor-designate whose claim for appointment is rejected unless the claim was reasonable, made in good faith and prima facie in the interest of the estate; and (2) that the judge has no discretion to tax costs against an estate when the nominated executor was disqualified to act as a matter of law. In re Estate of Moore, 292 N.C. 58, 231 S.E.2d 849 (1977).

Where a surviving spouse is forced to engage in litigation to determine whether a right of dissent from the will of the deceased spouse exists, the discretionary power given the trial judge under this section includes the power to award attorney's fees for the surviving spouse when, in the opinion of the trial court, the proceeding was one of substantial merit. In re Kirkman, 302 N.C. 164, 273 S.E.2d 712 (1981).

Caveat Unsuccessful. — Under this section, even though judgment is entered in favor of propounders, the trial court may tax the costs, including an allowance to counsel representing caveators, against the estate upon finding that the filing of the caveat was apt and proper and done in good faith. In re Will of Slade, 214 N.C. 361, 199 S.E. 290 (1938).

The allowance of attorney fees to counsel for the propounders is in the sound discretion of the trial court. In re Will of Coffield, 216 N.C. 285, 4 S.E.2d 870 (1939).

Same — Attorneys' Fees. — This statute authorizes the trial court in its discretion to allow attorneys' fees to counsel for unsuccessful caveators to a will. In re Will of Ridge, 47 N.C. App. 183, 266 S.E.2d 766 (1980).

It is a matter in the discretion of the court, both as to whether to allow attorneys' fees to counsel for unsuccessful caveators to a will and the amount of such fees. In re Will of Ridge, 47 N.C. App. 183, 266 S.E.2d 766 (1980).

Attorneys' Fees as Costs Paid by Executor. — The language of subdivision (2) of this section is sufficient to vest in the trial court the discretionary authority to tax reasonable attorneys' fees as a part of the costs to be paid by the executor. McWhirter v. Downs, 8 N.C. App. 50, 173 S.E.2d 587 (1970).

Attorneys' Fees Fixed By Mutual Agreement Not Taxable Costs. — Fees for services rendered by attorneys to the parties in a caveat to a will do not automatically become costs of the proceeding merely because they are incurred and paid. This section commits the allowance and apportionment of the fees and the determination of the amounts thereof to the discretion of the court. Where the court had made no determination of the matter, but the amounts were fixed by contingent agreement between attorneys and clients prior to suit and the allowance of the fees as part of the costs of the proceeding was intentionally excluded from the judgment of the court, the amounts paid to the attorneys did not and could not become part of the taxable costs of the suit under this section. Commercial Nat'l Bank v. United States, 196 F.2d 182 (4th Cir. 1952).

B. Construction of Will or Trust.

Sale of Trust Property. — The trial court had authority to tax a reasonable attorney's fee as part of the costs and to apportion it among the parties in an action for a declaratory judgment and for instructions to the trustees in connection with the sale of certain trust property. Tripp v. Tripp, 17 N.C. App. 64, 193 S.E.2d 366 (1972).

Testamentary Trusts. — In an action pursuant to the Uniform Declaratory Judgment Act for construction of certain trust provisions of a will, the taxing of costs, the inclusion therein of attorneys' fees, and the fixing of reasonable counsel fees, are matters within the sound discretion of the trial court. Little v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 252 N.C. 229, 113 S.E.2d 689 (1960).

C. Habeas Corpus.

A reasonable allowance for attorney's fees may be made as a part of the costs in habeas corpus proceedings, but not until there is a proper hearing or an opportunity for defendant to be heard. Murphy v. Murphy, 261 N.C. 95, 134 S.E.2d 148 (1964).

D. Divorce or Alimony.

Husband Formerly Always Liable for His Own Costs. — Prior to the 1977 amendment to this section, in actions for divorce the husband, whether successful or unsuccessful, was liable for his own costs, and whether he should pay the wife's costs was in all cases in the discretion of the court. Broom v. Broom, 130 N.C. 562, 41 S.E. 673 (1902).

E. Compensation of Referees.

Subdivision (6) must be considered in pari materia with at least two other statutes, §§ 1-7 and 1A-1, Rule 41(d). Thigpen v. Piver, 37 N.C. App. 382, 246 S.E.2d 67, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 653, 248 S.E.2d 257 (1978).

Referees' Fees May Be Apportioned. — Originally, under the Code of 1883, § 533, referees' fees were taxed, like other costs, against the losing party, but by amendment (Laws 1889, ch. 37) the court was authorized to apportion them in its discretion. Cobb v. Rhea, 137 N.C. 295, 49 S.E. 161 (1904).

Where, in a suit to obtain advice and instruction of the court for the proper distribution of the assets of the estate, the cause is referred to a referee, the taxing of the referee's fee is within the discretion of the court, and order of the court prorating the referee's fee between the funds derived from sale of realty to make assets and the personal property of the estate will not be disturbed. Williams v. Johnson, 230 N.C. 338, 53 S.E.2d 277 (1949).

The apportionment of the compensation for a referee and the court reporter employed by him is within the discretionary power given the court by this section. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1963).

Same — Analogy to Allowance to Receiver. — The allowance to the receiver is a part of the costs of the action, and usually taxable against the losing party. Whether the receiver's fees should be divided is a matter in the discretion of the presiding judge, as is now the case also with referees' fees. Simmons v. Allison, 119 N.C. 556, 26 S.E. 171 (1896).

Apportionment Not Precluded by Former Judgment. — A former judgment, Horner v. Oxford Water & Elec. Co., 153 N.C. 535, 69 S.E. 607, 138 Am. St. R. 681 (1910), appealed from and affirmed by the Supreme Court, "that the defendants do recover against the plaintiff and the surety on his prosecution bond the costs of this action," does not preclude a subsequent trial judge from taxing the cost of reference "against either party or apportioning it among the parties in his discretion" under this section. Horner v. Oxford Water & Elec. Co., 156 N.C. 494, 72 S.E. 624 (1911).

Award of Costs on Appeal Does Not Include Referee's Fee. — Where, upon the trial in the superior court upon appeal from the referee, judgment is entered in the superior court in favor of plaintiffs, entitling plaintiffs to recover costs in the trial, such recovery does not include compensation of the referee. Cody v. England, 221 N.C. 40, 19 S.E.2d 10 (1942).

Fee Ordered Paid by Estate Not to Be Taxed Against Executor. — Ordinarily, in litigation over a fund in the nature of an in rem proceeding, such items of costs as referee's allowances and stenographic reporter's bills, are paid out of the fund, although taxable in the discretion of the court, but in Lightner v. Boone, 222 N.C. 421, 23 S.E.2d 313 (1942), it was held that, when such costs have been ordered paid from the estate, they cannot afterwards be taxed against an executor personally.

Authority of Assistant Clerk to Tax Cost of Deposition. — An assistant clerk of the superior court had the authority to tax the cost of a deposition against a plaintiff who took a voluntary dismissal of his case before it reached the trial calendar. Thigpen v. Piver, 37 N.C. App. 382, 246 S.E.2d 67, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 653, 248 S.E.2d 257 (1978).

F. Partition or Sale of Property.

Costs in Partition. — The taxing of costs among the parties to proceedings to partition land is left in the discretion of the court, and will not be reviewed on appeal. Fortune v. Hunt, 152 N.C. 715, 68 S.E. 213 (1910).

Where, in a petition for partition, defendant pleads sole seizin, and the trial of such issue results in a verdict for plaintiffs, and in judgment that the parties are tenants in common and appointing a commissioner to make sale, plaintiff is entitled to all costs from the filing of the answer through the final judgment below, that is, while the case was pending on the civil issue docket. This does not include costs of reference, which may be taxed in the discretion of the court. Costs of the partition proceeding, exclusive of the issue of sole seizin, may be apportioned. Bailey v. Hayman, 222 N.C. 58, 22 S.E.2d 6 (1943).

G. Actions Not Covered by This Section.

A civil action to enjoin the issuance of county bonds and to restrain the disbursement of county funds is not one of the actions enumerated by this section in which attorney's fees may be taxed as part of the costs. Rider v. Lenoir County, 238 N.C. 632, 78 S.E.2d 745 (1953).

Defense of Tort Action. — The expense of employing attorneys in the successful defense of a suit for damages for tort is allowable as part of the costs or recoverable in the absence of an express agreement therefor. Queen City Coach Co. v. Lumberton Coach Co., 229 N.C. 534, 50 S.E.2d 288 (1948).

Specific Performance of Property Agreement. — An action between husband and wife seeking specific performance of an agreement between them to "pool" their property and assets, to declare a resulting trust, and for an accounting, did not involve construction of a trust agreement and the attorneys' fees of the respective parties did not come within the statutory exceptions to the general rule and could not be taxed as a part of the costs. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1963).

Writing Insufficient as Trust Instrument. — In a declaratory judgment action in which the paper writing in question was insufficient as a trust instrument and was not executed as a will, the trial judge erred in ordering that plaintiff's counsel fees should be taxed against decedent's estate since the action did not involve a caveat or the construction of a trust instrument within the purview of this section. Baxter v. Jones, 283 N.C. 327, 196 S.E.2d 193 (1973).

§ 6-21.1. Allowance of counsel fees as part of costs in certain cases.

In any personal injury or property damage suit, or suit against an insurance company under a policy issued by the defendant insurance company and in which the insured or beneficiary is the plaintiff, upon a finding by the court that there was an unwarranted refusal by the defendant insurance company to pay the claim which constitutes the basis of such suit, instituted in a court of record, where the judgment for recovery of damages is five thousand dollars ($5,000) or less, the presiding judge may, in his discretion, allow a reasonable attorney fee to the duly licensed attorney representing the litigant obtaining a judgment for damages in said suit, said attorney's fee to be taxed as a part of the court costs. (1959, c. 688; 1963, c. 1193; 1967, c. 927; 1969, c. 786; 1979, c. 401.)

Legal Periodicals. — For a note on the availability of general and punitive damages for an insurer's unjustified failure to pay policy benefits, see 13 Wake Forest L. Rev. 685 (1977).

For survey of 1979 administrative law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1185 (1980).

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Who May Award.
III. Procedure.
IV. Settlement.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

The obvious purpose of this section is to provide relief for a person who has sustained injury or property damage in an amount so small that, if he must pay his attorney out of his recovery, he may well conclude that it is not economically feasible to bring suit on his claim. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973); Hubbard v. Lumbermen's Mut. Cas. Co., 24 N.C. App. 493, 211 S.E.2d 544, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 723, 213 S.E.2d 721 (1975); In re Kirkman, 302 N.C. 164, 273 S.E.2d 712 (1981).

In such a situation the legislature apparently concluded that the defendant, though at fault, would have an unjustly superior bargaining power in settlement negotiations. A great majority of such claims arise out of automobile accidents in which the alleged wrongdoer is insured and his insurance carrier controls the litigation. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

Section Does Not Guarantee Compensation in All Cases. — While this section is aimed at encouraging injured parties to press their meritorious but pecuniarily small claims, it was not intended to encourage parties to refuse reasonable settlement offers and give rise to needless litigation by guaranteeing that counsel will, in all cases, be compensated. Harrison v. Herbin, 35 N.C. App. 259, 241 S.E.2d 108, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 90, 244 S.E.2d 258 (1978).

This section, being remedial, should be construed liberally to accomplish the purpose of the legislature and to bring within it all cases fairly falling within its intended scope. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973); Hubbard v. Lumbermen's Mut. Cas. Co., 24 N.C. App. 493, 211 S.E.2d 544, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 723, 213 S.E.2d 721 (1975); In re Kirkman, 302 N.C. 164, 273 S.E.2d 712 (1981).

This section should be construed liberally by the presiding judge to accomplish the obvious purpose to provide relief for a person who has a claim so small that, if he must pay an attorney out of his recovery, it may not be economically feasible to bring suit. DeBerry v. American Motorists Ins. Co., 33 N.C. App. 639, 236 S.E.2d 380 (1977).

Attorneys' Fees Not Recoverable As Costs In Absence of Statute. — Attorneys' fees are not now regarded as part of court costs in this jurisdiction, except as otherwise provided by statute. Perkins v. American Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 4 N.C. App. 466, 167 S.E.2d 93 (1969).

Ordinarily, attorneys' fees are not recoverable as an item of damages or part of the costs in litigation. U.S. Piping, Inc. v. Travelers Indem. Co., 9 N.C. App. 561, 176 S.E.2d 835 (1970); Hicks v. Albertson, 18 N.C. App. 599, 197 S.E.2d 624, aff'd, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

In the absence of statutory authority therefor, a court may not include an allowance of attorneys' fees as part of the costs recoverable by the successful party to an action or proceeding. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

But the legislature has enacted an exception to this general rule and allows the trial judge to award attorneys' fees in certain situations under this section. U.S. Piping, Inc. v. Travelers Indem. Co., 9 N.C. App. 561, 176 S.E.2d 835 (1970).

This section creates an exception to the general rule that attorney's fees are not allowable as part of the costs in civil actions. Hill v. Jones, 26 N.C. App. 168, 215 S.E.2d 168, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 240, 217 S.E.2d 664 (1975).

Discretion of Judge. — The allowance of counsel fees under the authority of this section is, by express language of this section, in the discretion of the presiding judge. Callicutt v. Hawkins, 11 N.C. App. 546, 181 S.E.2d 725 (1971); Hubbard v. Lumbermen's Mut. Cas. Co., 24 N.C. App. 493, 211 S.E.2d 544, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 723, 213 S.E.2d 721 (1975); Black v. Standard Guar. Ins. Co., 42 N.C. App. 50, 255 S.E.2d 782, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 293, 259 S.E.2d 910 (1979).

Without a showing of any abuse of the trial judge's discretion, an assignment of error to a denial of a motion for allowance of attorneys' fees is overruled. Callicutt v. Hawkins, 11 N.C. App. 546, 181 S.E.2d 725 (1971).

Because this section provides for the award of "a reasonable attorney fee," the court has a large measure of discretion in fixing or recommending the amount to be paid. Hill v. Jones, 26 N.C. App. 168, 215 S.E.2d 168, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 240, 217 S.E.2d 664 (1975).

Former § 25-8 Became Part of Contracts. — Provisions in notes executed prior to the repeal in 1965 of former § 25-8 that required the debtors to pay reasonable attorneys' fees for collection of the notes were rendered unenforceable by that section, notwithstanding the enactment in 1967 of this section permitting such provisions, since the former section became a part of the contracts between the parties and this section could not vary the terms of those contracts. Register v. Griffin, 10 N.C. App. 191, 178 S.E.2d 95 (1970).

Section Not Applicable to Workmen's Compensation Cases. — This section refers to personal injury damage suits and property damage suits tried in a court where there is a presiding trial judge and is not applicable in Workmen's Compensation cases. Bowman v. Comfort Chair Co., 271 N.C. 702, 157 S.E.2d 378 (1967).

II. WHO MAY AWARD.

"Presiding Judge" Means Judge Presiding over Court in Which Action Instituted. — The term "presiding judge" means the judge presiding over the court in which the action is instituted. Such judge can, without danger of injustice, fix a reasonable fee for the attorney of the party recovering damages by settlement prior to trial. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

The legislature contemplated that the judge who presided at the trial would determine whether a fee for the attorney of the party recovering damages should be allowed and, if so, the amount. Such judge would be in a better position than any other to make this determination. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

When Judge Other Than Trial Judge May Make Allowance. — While it is proper that the trial judge in an action which proceeds to trial may allow a reasonable attorney fee to the successful litigant under this section, the presiding judge of the court in which the suit is instituted may allow such fee when judgment is obtained without the necessity for trial. In cases where the judge who presided at the trial is unable because of death, disability, or other valid reason to make such allowance, the presiding judge of the court in which the suit is instituted would have such authority. Hicks v. Albertson, 18 N.C. App. 599, 197 S.E.2d 624, aff'd, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

Presiding judge may award compensation for legal services rendered on appeal. Hill v. Jones, 26 N.C. App. 168, 215 S.E.2d 168, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 240, 217 S.E.2d 664 (1975).

The clerk has no authority to determine whether a fee should be allowed as part of the costs or to fix the amount of such fee. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

III. PROCEDURE.

Plaintiff Need Not Plead for Award in Complaint. — This section does not require that a plaintiff seeking attorney fees under the statute affirmatively plead for such an award as a separate claim in the complaint. Black v. Standard Guar. Ins. Co., 42 N.C. App. 50, 255 S.E.2d 782, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 293, 259 S.E.2d 910 (1979).

Findings of Fact Required. — In awarding reasonable counsel fees under this section, the judge presiding must make some findings of fact to support the award. Hill v. Jones, 26 N.C. App. 168, 215 S.E.2d 168, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 240, 217 S.E.2d 664 (1975).

And Such Findings May Be Limited. — Since this section determines the nature of an action and limits the amount involved, the findings of fact may be limited to the quantity and quality of all the services rendered by the attorney for his client until the final determination of the action for which the judge presiding, in his discretion, allows an attorney fee. Hill v. Jones, 26 N.C. App. 168, 215 S.E.2d 168, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 240, 217 S.E.2d 664 (1975).

But Separate Findings under Rule 52(a) Not Required. — This section does not require the trial judge to make separate findings and conclusions to support an award of attorney fees in accordance with § 1A-1, Rule 52(a). Black v. Standard Guar. Ins. Co., 42 N.C. App. 50, 255 S.E.2d 782, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 293, 259 S.E.2d 910 (1979).

Finding of Unwarranted Refusal to Pay Claim Required. — It is only when the suit is brought against an insurance company by the insured or beneficiary, as plaintiff, under a policy issued by such insurance company, that there must be a finding by the court that there was an unwarranted refusal by the defendant insurance company to pay the claim before attorney fees may be allowed as a part of the costs when the judgment for recovery of damages is one thousand dollars or less (now $5,000 or less). Rogers v. Rogers, 2 N.C. App. 668, 163 S.E.2d 645 (1968).

Under this section to support an award for an attorney fee from an insurance company the presiding judge must first find "an unwarranted refusal" to pay the claim. DeBerry v. American Motorists Ins. Co., 33 N.C. App. 639, 236 S.E.2d 380 (1977).

A trial court improperly awarded attorneys' fees to a judgment holder in the latter's action against an automobile liability insurer, where it made no finding that there was an unwarranted refusal by the insurer to pay the claim constituting the basis of the judgment holder's suit against the insured. U.S. Piping, Inc. v. Travelers Indem. Co., 9 N.C. App. 561, 176 S.E.2d 835 (1970).

The plaintiff may properly move for an award of attorney's fees after a verdict has been returned in its favor. Black v. Standard Guar. Inc. Co., 42 N.C. App. 50, 255 S.E.2d 782, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 293, 259 S.E.2d 910 (1979).

IV. SETTLEMENT.

Effect of Settlement. — To hold that use of the adjective "presiding" shows the legislature intended that no fee be allowed in any case settled without actual trial is to give this word an unreasonably strict construction and would defeat its purpose. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

This section refers specifically to the "institution" of a suit, not its trial, and allows an attorney fee to be awarded without regard to how that judgment is obtained. To permit an offer of judgment, or indeed any settlement prior to a completed trial, to avoid the payment of a reasonable attorney fee in the discretion of the court would defeat in large measure the purpose of the statute. Hicks v. Albertson, 18 N.C. App. 599, 197 S.E.2d 624, aff'd, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

Attorneys' Fees Allowed. — Where there is a clear indication in the record that an application for attorney fee as a part of the costs was to be considered by the court, and the settlement was effected with knowledge of this proposed application, allowance should be made for fees. Hicks v. Albertson, 18 N.C. App. 599, 197 S.E.2d 624, aff'd, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

Fee Is Allowed as Part of Costs. — This section does not provide for the recovery of a reasonable attorney's fee in addition to the court costs but "as a part of the court costs." Where the acceptance by the plaintiff of an offer of judgment for a specified sum plus "costs" proceeded from a reasonable interpretation by the plaintiff that "costs" included attorneys' fees, then if such interpretation was not intended by the defendant, the misunderstanding was due to ambiguous language used by the defendant in making his offer and the defendant must bear any loss resulting therefrom. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

If a party wishes to avoid payment of attorney fee in cases in which this section may be applicable, he should make his offer of settlement before the suit is instituted. Hicks v. Albertson, 18 N.C. App. 599, 197 S.E.2d 624, aff'd, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

Applied in Smith v. Whisenhunt, 259 N.C. 234, 130 S.E.2d 334 (1963); Brady v. Smith, 18 N.C. App. 293, 196 S.E.2d 580 (1973).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Section Is Applicable to Actions against Hospital Service Corporation Organized under § 57-1. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Bobby H. Griffin, Union County Attorney, 43 N.C.A.G. 357 (1974).

§ 6-21.2. Attorneys' fees in notes, etc., in addition to interest.

Obligations to pay attorneys' fees upon any note, conditional sale contract or other evidence of indebtedness, in addition to the legal rate of interest or finance charges specified therein, shall be valid and enforceable, and collectible as part of such debt, if such note, contract or other evidence of indebtedness be collected by or through an attorney at law after maturity, subject to the following provisions:

(1) If such note, conditional sale contract or other evidence of indebtedness provides for attorneys' fees in some specific percentage of the "outstanding balance" as herein defined, such provision and obligation shall be valid and enforceable up to but not in excess of fifteen percent (15%) of said "outstanding balance" owing on said note, contract or other evidence of indebtedness.

(2) If such note, conditional sale contract or other evidence of indebtedness provides for the payment of reasonable attorneys' fees by the debtor, without specifying any specific percentage, such provision shall be construed to mean fifteen percent (15%) of the "outstanding balance" owing on said note, contract or other evidence of indebtedness.

(3) As to notes and other writing(s) evidencing an indebtedness arising out of a loan of money to the debtor, the "outstanding balance" shall mean the principal and interest owing at the time suit is instituted to enforce any security agreement securing payment of the debt and/or to collect said debt.

(4) As to conditional sale contracts and other such security agreements which evidence both a monetary obligation and a security interest in or a lease of specific goods, the "outstanding balance" shall mean the "time price balance" owing as of the time suit is instituted by the secured party to enforce the said security agreement and/or to collect said debt.

(5) The holder of an unsecured note or other writing(s) evidencing an unsecured debt, and/or the holder of a note and chattel mortgage or other security agreement and/or the holder of a conditional sale contract or any other such security agreement which evidences both a monetary obligation and a security interest in or a lease of specific goods, or his attorney at law, shall, after maturity of the obligation by default or otherwise, notify the maker, debtor, account debtor, endorser or party sought to be held on said obligation that the provisions relative to payment of attorneys' fees in addition to the "outstanding balance" shall be enforced and that such maker, debtor, account debtor, endorser or party sought to be held on said obligation has five days from the mailing of such notice to pay the "outstanding balance" without the attorneys' fees. If such party shall pay the "outstanding balance" in full before the expiration of such time, then the obligation to pay the attorneys' fees shall be void, and no court shall enforce such provisions.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, however, if debtor has defaulted or violated the terms of the security agreement and has refused, on demand, to surrender possession of the collateral to the secured party as authorized by § 25-9-503, with the result that said secured party is required to institute an ancillary claim and delivery proceeding to secure possession of said collateral; no such written notice shall be required before enforcement of the provisions relative to payment of attorneys' fees in addition to the "outstanding balance." (1967, c. 562, s. 4.)

Purposes. — Some of the purposes underlying the enactment of this section are to simplify, clarify, and modernize the law governing commercial transactions among the various jurisdictions, and to permit the continued expansion of commercial practices through custom, usage, and agreement of the parties. Stillwell Enterprises, Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980).

Supplements Principles Applicable to Commercial Transactions. — Although this section was not itself codified as a constituent section of Chapter 25 of the General Statutes (the Uniform Commercial Code), its legislative history clearly demonstrates that it was intended to supplement those principles of law generally applicable to commercial transactions. Stillwell Enterprises, Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980).

Liberal Construction. — This section, being remedial, should be construed liberally to accomplish the purpose of the legislature and to bring within it all cases fairly falling within its intended scope. Stillwell Enterprises, Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980).

Attorneys' fees are not now regarded as part of court costs in this jurisdiction, except as otherwise provided by statute. Perkins v.

American Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 4 N.C. App. 466, 167 S.E.2d 93 (1969).

This section represents a far reaching exception to the well-established rule against attorney's fees obligations. State Whsle. Supply, Inc. v. Allen, 30 N.C. App. 272, 227 S.E.2d 120 (1976).

But this section only validates attorney's fees obligations in certain carefully defined instances and imposes a ceiling on the amount of attorney's fees a party can obtain. State Whsle. Supply, Inc. v. Allen, 30 N.C. App. 272, 227 S.E.2d 120 (1976).

Meaning of "Evidence of Indebtedness." — The term "evidence of indebtedness" as used in this section has reference to any printed or written instrument, signed or otherwise executed by the obligor(s), which evidences on its face a legally enforceable obligation to pay money. Stillwell Enterprises, Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 N.E.2d 812 (1980).

Evidence of indebtedness within the meaning of this section signifies a written agreement or acknowledgment of debt, such as a promissory note or conditional sales contract, which is executed and signed by the party obligated under the terms of the instrument. State Whsle. Supply, Inc. v. Allen, 30 N.C. App. 272, 227 S.E.2d 120 (1976).

Same — A paragraph of a construction contract providing for a 10 percent attorney's fee in the event of litigation was held not to be "other evidence of indebtedness" within the meaning of this section. Yeargin Constr. Co. v. Futren Dev. Corp., 29 N.C. App. 731, 225 S.E.2d 623, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 660, 228 S.E.2d 459 (1976). But see Stillwell Enterprises, Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980).

Same — A "note" and "conditional sales contract" are the primary types of "evidence of indebtedness" contemplated by this section. State Whsle. Supply, Inc. v. Allen, 30 N.C. App. 272, 227 S.E.2d 120 (1976).

Same — Sales receipt and three-day invoice containing provision for attorney's fees is not an "evidence of indebtedness" within the meaning of this section. State Whsle. Supply, Inc. v. Allen, 30 N.C. App. 272, 227 S.E.2d 120 (1976). But see Stillwell Enterprises, Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980).

Same — A formal credit agreement executed by the parties prior to the establishment of the open account would suffice as an evidence of indebtedness; and if such an agreement contains a provision for attorney's fees, it will be valid and enforceable pursuant to this section. State Whsle. Supply, Inc. v. Allen, 30 N.C. App. 272, 227 S.E.2d 120 (1976).

Same — Lease Contract. — A contract for the lease of personalty constitutes an "evidence of indebtedness" within the meaning of this section since the contract acknowledges a legally enforceable obligation by the lessee to remit rental payments to the lessor as they become due in exchange for the use of the property which is the subject of the lease. Therefore, a provision of the lease allowing the lessor reasonable attorney fees should the lease obligation be collected by an attorney after maturity is enforceable under the provision of this section. Stillwell Enterprises, Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980).

A lease does not constitute evidence of indebtedness within the meaning of this section, and attorney's fees may not be allowed, even though they were expressly provided for in the contract. Equitable Leasing Co. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240 (1980). But see Stillwell Enterprises, Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980).

Meaning of "Security Agreement". — As used in the Commercial Code, the general term "security agreement" is ordinarily understood to embrace chattel mortgages, conditional sales contracts, assignments of accounts receivable, trust receipts, etc. The term has a similar connotation in subdivision (5) of this section. EAC Credit Corp. v. Wilson, 281 N.C. 140, 187 S.E.2d 752 (1972).

A guaranty contract is not a "security agreement" within the language of subdivision (5) of this section. EAC Credit Corp. v. Wilson, 281 N.C. 140, 187 S.E.2d 752 (1972).

Guaranty of Payment Alone Does Not Render Guarantors Liable for Attorneys' Fees. — This section does not authorize collection of attorneys' fees if the guaranty contract sued upon does not so provide. Guaranty of payment alone does not render the guarantors liable for attorneys' fees which the principal debtor, by the terms of the note, is bound to pay. EAC Credit Corp. v. Wilson, 281 N.C. 140, 187 S.E.2d 752 (1972).

Nor Does Provision in Promissory Note Requiring Debtor to Pay Attorneys' Fees. — Where a promissory note contained a provision requiring the debtor to pay reasonable attorneys' fees of the creditor in collection of the note, but a guaranty of payment of the note contained no such provision, the guarantors were not liable under this section for attorneys' fees incurred by the creditor in an action on the guaranty contract. EAC Credit Corp. v. Wilson, 281 N.C. 140, 187 S.E.2d 752 (1972).

This section contemplates liability on the part of endorsers of a note since it provides for the giving of notice to endorsers by the holder or his attorney that the provision for attorneys' fees, in addition to the outstanding balance, shall be enforced. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Peace Broadcasting Corp., 32 N.C. App. 655, 233 S.E.2d 687, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 734, 235 S.E.2d 788 (1977).

Specific Percentage Not Specified in Unsecured Promissory Note. — Where an unsecured promissory note provided for the payment of reasonable attorneys' fees upon default by the debtor, without specifying any specific percentage, the trial court properly allowed the plaintiff to recover as reasonable attorneys' fees 15% of the balance due on the note, as provided by this section. Binning's, Inc. v. Roberts Constr. Co., 9 N.C. App. 569, 177 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

Notice Need Not Be Given prior to Institution of Action. — The only requirement in this section as to when notice is to be given is that it be given "after maturity of the obligation by default or otherwise." This does not mean that the notice must be given prior to the institution of an action. Binning's, Inc. v. Roberts Constr. Co., 9 N.C. App. 569, 177 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

Subdivision (5) of this section sets no time limit on the giving of the notice required. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Larson, 22 N.C. App. 371, 206 S.E.2d 775, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 214, 209 S.E.2d 315 (1974).

Applied in Armel Mgt. Corp. v. Stanhagen, 35 N.C. App. 571, 241 S.E.2d 713 (1978).

Cited in International Harvester Credit Corp. v. Ricks, 16 N.C. App. 491, 192 S.E.2d 707 (1972); Phil Mechanic Constr. Co. v. Gibson, 30 N.C. App. 385, 226 S.E.2d 837 (1976); Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Dan-Cleve Corp., 31 N.C. App. 634, 230 S.E.2d 559 (1976); North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Burnette, 38 N.C. App. 120, 247 S.E.2d 648 (1978).

In an action by a holder to recover the sum payable of a check drawn by the defendant on which payment has been refused by the payor bank because the drawer had no account or insufficient funds, upon a determination that the plaintiff has prevailed the presiding judge or magistrate shall add to the amount due to the plaintiff the sum of ten dollars ($10.00) to defray the costs of processing the returned check, and the presiding judge or magistrate shall tax to the defendant, as part of the court costs payable, a reasonable attorney's fee to the duly licensed attorney representing the plaintiff in such suit upon a finding (i) that at least 10 days prior to instituting the action the plaintiff mailed the defendant written notice at the defendant's last known address of the intent to file such suit if payment for the check was not received, and (ii) that the defendant failed to deliver payment or evidence of bank error to the plaintiff within 10 days after mailing of such notice. (1975, c. 129, s. 1; 1981, c. 781, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "ten dollars ($10.00)" for "five dollars ($5.00)" near the middle of the section. Session Laws 1981, c. 781, s. 3, makes the act applicable to checks written on or after July 1, 1981.

§ 6-21.4. Allowance of counsel fees and costs in certain cases involving principals or teachers.

In any civil action brought against a public school principal or teacher as defined in G.S. 115C-390 arising or resulting from the use of corporal punishment, upon a determination that the principal or teacher has prevailed and that the plaintiff's action was frivolous or without substantial merit, the presiding judge may, in his discretion, allow a reasonable attorney fee to the duly licensed attorney representing the principal or teacher. The attorney's fee shall be taxed as part of the court costs. (1981, c. 381, s. 1; c. 682, s. 22.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "G.S. 115C-390" for "G.S. 115-146" near the beginning of the section.

§ 6-22. Petitioner to pay costs in certain cases.

The petitioner shall pay the costs in the following proceedings:

(1) In petitions for draining or damming lowlands where the petitioner alone is benefited.

(2) In petitions for condemnation of water millsites when the petitioner is allowed to erect the mill; but when he is not allowed to erect the mill, the costs shall be paid by the person who is allowed to do so.

(3) In petitions for condemnation of land for railroads, street railways, telegraph, telephone or electric power or light companies, or for water supplies for public institutions, or for the use of other quasi-public or municipal corporations; unless in the opinion of the superior court the defendant improperly refused the privilege, use or easement demanded, in which case the costs must be adjudged as to the court may appear equitable and just.

(4) When the petition is refused. (Code, ss. 1299, 1855, 2013; 1893, c. 63; 1903, c. 562; Rev., s. 1269; C. S., s. 1245; 1945, c. 635.)

CASE NOTES

Condemnation Proceedings. — In proceedings brought by a railroad where it was found by the jury on appeal that the defendant's benefit exceeded his damages and then found they were equal, it was held that the plaintiff was taxable with costs up to the time of appeal. Madison County Ry. v. Gahagan, 161 N.C. 190, 76 S.E. 696 (1912).

§ 6-23. Defendant unreasonably defending after notice of no personal claim to pay costs.

In case of a defendant, against whom no personal claim is made, the plaintiff may deliver to such defendant with the summons, a notice subscribed by the plaintiff or his attorney, setting forth the general object of the action, a brief description of the property affected by it, if it affects real or personal property, and that no personal claim is made against such defendant. If a defendant on whom such notice is served unreasonably defends the action, he shall pay costs to the plaintiff. (Code, s. 216; Rev., s. 1270; C. S., s. 1246.)

Right Not Extended to Appeals. — The leave to sue as a pauper does not extend in civil actions beyond the trial in the superior court. Speller v. Speller, 119 N.C. 356, 26 S.E. 160 (1896).

Costs of Witnesses Not to Be Recovered. — One suing in forma pauperis is not entitled to recover costs of his witnesses. Draper v. Buxton, 90 N.C. 182 (1884). Nor does the section excuse the pauper from liability for his witnesses. Bailey v. Brown, 105 N.C. 127, 10 S.E. 1054 (1890).

This provision deprives all officers of costs, and the last clause is very sweeping, and manifestly embraces the costs of witnesses. Compensation to witnesses is part of the cost of an action, as much so as any other statutory charges in and about the same. Booshee v. Surles, 85 N.C. 90 (1881); Hall v. Younts, 87 N.C. 285 (1882); Draper v. J.A. Buxton & Co., 90 N.C. 182 (1884).

No costs shall be recovered by any party, whether plaintiff or defendant, who may endeavor to recover upon any usurious contract. (1895, c. 69; Rev., s. 1271; C. S., s. 1248.)

Cross References. — As to usury generally, see §§ 24-1, 24-2.

§ 6-26. Costs in special proceedings.

The costs in special proceedings shall be as allowed in civil actions, unless otherwise specially provided. (Code, s. 541; Rev., s. 1272; C. S., s. 1249.)

Cross References. — As to special proceedings generally, see § 1-393 et seq.

§ 6-28. Costs of laying off homestead and exemption.

The costs and expenses of appraising and laying off the homestead or personal property exemptions, when the same is made under execution, shall be charged and included in the officer's bill of fees upon such execution or other final process; and when made upon the petition of the owner, they shall be paid by such owner, and the latter costs shall be a lien on said homestead. (Code, s. 510; Rev., s. 1274; C. S., s. 1251.)

Local Modification. — Pitt: 1953, c. 1276.

Cross References. — As to appraisal and laying off of homestead and personal property exemptions, see §§ 1-372, 1-378. As to costs in reallotment of homestead for increase in value, see § 6-21, subdivision (9).

CASE NOTES

Payment of Fees as Condition. — Where the judgment debtor claims his personal property from execution, the sheriff is justified in refusing to proceed further till such exemptions are properly set apart, and the payment of his fees for the purpose by the plaintiff in the action, except when the suit is brought in forma pauperis. Whitmore-Ligon Co. v. Hyatt, 175 N.C. 117, 95 S.E. 38 (1918).

Applied in Beavans v. Goodrich, 98 N.C. 217, 3 S.E. 516 (1887); Long v. Walker, 105 N.C. 90, 10 S.E. 658 (1890).

§ 6-29. Costs of reassessment of homestead.

If the superior court at term shall confirm the appraisal or assessment, or shall increase the exemption allowed the debtor or claimant, the levy shall stand only upon the excess remaining, and the creditor shall pay all the costs of the proceeding in court. If the amount allowed the debtor or claimant is reduced, the costs of the proceeding in court shall be paid by the debtor or claimant, and the levy shall cover the excess then remaining. (Code, s. 521; Rev., s. 1275; C. S., s. 1252.)

Cross References. — As to reassessment of homestead, see § 1-381. As to costs in reallotment of homestead for increase in value, see § 6-21, subdivision (9).

CASE NOTES

Applied in Beavans v. Goodrich, 98 N.C. 217, 3 S.E. 516 (1887).

§ 6-30. Costs against infant plaintiff; guardian responsible.

When costs are adjudged against an infant plaintiff, the guardian by whom he appeared in the action shall be responsible therefor. (Code, s. 534; Rev., s. 1276; C. S., s. 1253.)

§ 6-31. Costs where executor, administrator, trustee of express trust, or person authorized by statute a party.

In an action prosecuted or defended by an executor, administrator, trustee of an express trust, or a person expressly authorized by statute, costs shall be recovered as in an action by and against a person prosecuting or defending in his own right; but such costs shall be chargeable only upon or collected out of the estate, fund or party represented, unless the court directs the same to be paid by the plaintiff or defendant, personally, for mismanagement or bad faith in such action or defense. And when any claim against a deceased person is referred, the prevailing party shall be entitled to recover the fees of referees and witnesses, and other necessary disbursements, to be taxed according to law. (Code, s. 535; Rev., s. 1277; C. S., s. 1254.)

As to liability of guardian for costs for defaults, see § 33-30. As to reference of disputed claim generally, see §§ 28A-19-15, 28A-19-16.

CASE NOTES

When Fiduciary Personally Liable. — By virtue of this section costs should be taxed against the estate in the hands of a trustee, and not against him personally, except when the court adjudges that the trustee has been guilty of mismanagement, or bad faith, in such action or defense. Smith v. King, 107 N.C. 273, 12 S.E. 57 (1890); Sugg v. Bernard, 122 N.C. 155, 29 S.E. 221 (1898); Lance v. Russell, 165 N.C. 626, 81 S.E. 922 (1914).

The same rule is applied to actions against administrators and executors, State v. Roberts, 106 N.C. 662, 10 S.E. 900 (1890); Varner v. Johnston, 112 N.C. 570, 17 S.E. 483 (1893), with the additional limitation prescribed by § 28-115 (now § 28A-19-18), Whitaker v.

Whitaker, 138 N.C. 205, 50 S.E. 630 (1905). See § 28A-19-18 and note.

This Section Includes Next Friends. — While "next friends" may not be embraced in the strict letter of this section, they come within its purview. Smith v. Smith, 108 N.C. 365, 12 S.E. 1045, 13 S.E. 113 (1891). And it is error to tax "next friends" who are not parties without a finding of mismanagement or bad faith. Hockoday v. Lawrence, 156 N.C. 319, 72 S.E. 387 (1911).

Limitation on Payment of Costs. — A trustee, as against those for whose benefit the trust is created, will be allowed to apply so much of the funds to the payment of costs and expenses, including counsel fees, as may be necessary to protect it, but he will not be allowed such disbursements against one who establishes an adverse title to the property. Chemical Co. v. Johnson, 101 N.C. 223, 7 S.E. 770 (1888).

§ 6-32. Costs against assignee after action brought.

In actions in which the cause of action becomes by assignment after the commencement of the action, or in any other manner, the property of a person not a party to the action, such person shall be liable for the costs in the same manner as if he were a party. (Code, s. 539; Rev., s. 1278; C. S., s. 1255.)

CASE NOTES

Assignments Must Be Absolute and Complete. — The assignments contemplated by this section are only such as are absolute, and that such as are intended to be a collateral security only for a continuing obligation or claim are not within the purview of the section. Nor does the section apply when the assignment is only of a part and not of the whole cause of action. Davis & Schenck v. Higgins, 92 N.C. 203 (1885).

ARTICLE 4.

Costs on Appeal.

§ 6-33. Costs on appeal generally.

On appeal from a magistrate or any court of the General Court of Justice, if the appellant recovers judgment, he shall recover the costs of the appeal and also those costs he ought to have recovered below had the judgment of that court been correct. If in any court of appeal there is judgment for a new trial, or for a new jury, or if the judgment appealed from is not wholly reversed, but partly affirmed and partly disaffirmed, the costs shall be in the discretion of the appellate court. (Code, s. 540; Rev., s. 1279; C. S., s. 1256; 1969, c. 44, s. 19; 1971, c. 269, s. 7.)

CASE NOTES

Judgment Prerequisite to Awarding of Costs. — The first part of this section manifestly refers not only to a reversal of the judgment below, but to a judgment in favor of the appellant on the merits and not merely to an order for a new trial. The trial court cannot ordinarily tax the costs of an action in favor of either party unless there is a judgment, costs being an incident of the judgment. Williams v. Hughes, 139 N.C. 17, 51 S.E. 790 (1905).

Where the subject matter of the action is destroyed before the appeal is heard, the judgment below is presumed to be correct until reversed, and no part of the costs should be adjudged against the appellee. Taylor v. Vann, 127 N.C. 243, 37 S.E. 263 (1900).

Where Lower Court Judgment Modified. — In McLean v. Breece, 113 N.C. 390, 18 S.E. 694 (1893), where the judgment was modified in the Supreme Court, the costs were taxed against the appellee. And where the plaintiffs recovered a part judgment on their demand, by establishing a mechanic's lien, they were entitled to costs of appeal. See Hogsed v. Gloucester Lumber Co., 170 N.C. 529, 87 S.E. 337 (1915).

Where the judgment of the court below is modified and affirmed, the appellate division may apportion the costs on appeal between the parties in the exercise of its discretion. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1963).

The superior court is without power to modify former orders of the appellate court taxing costs on former appeals, as costs thus incurred are no part of superior court costs, but are taxed by, and executions issue out of, the appellate court. Bailey v. Hayman, 222 N.C. 58, 22 S.E.2d 6 (1942).

Partial Affirmance and Partial Reversal. — Where the judgment appealed from is partly affirmed and partly reversed, in the exercise of the discretion permitted by this section, the costs in the appellate court may be divided so that each party pays his own costs. Smith v. Old Dominion Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 119 N.C. 249, 26 S.E. 41 (1896); Hawkins v. Richmond Cedar Works, 122 N.C. 87, 30 S.E. 13 (1898).

Reversal Necessary to Tax Costs Against Appellee. — Unless the court upon the merits reverses the judgment below, it cannot adjudge any part of the costs against the appellee. Commissioners of Vance County v. Gill, 126 N.C. 86, 35 S.E. 228 (1900).

Case Remanded. — Where an appellant fails to show that he was prejudiced by the order appealed from, he may be taxed with the costs of the appeal, though the case be remanded. Harrington v. Rawls, 136 N.C. 65, 48 S.E. 571 (1904).

New Trial. — The taxing of the costs on appeal, by partial new trial being granted, is in the discretion of the court. Satterthwaite v. Goodyear, 137 N.C. 302, 49 S.E. 205 (1904).

Under this section, where the appellant was awarded a partial new trial only, as to one issue only out of several, the costs of the appeal are in the discretion of the court. Rayburn v. Casualty Co., 142 N.C. 376, 55 S.E. 296 (1906).

Where a new trial is granted, the awarding of costs is discretionary. Universal Metal Co. v. Durham & C.R.R., 145 N.C. 293, 59 S.E. 50 (1907).

Motion in Superior Court to Recover Costs of Appellate Transcript Prohibited. — The cost of preparing the transcription of the record is a part of the costs in the appellate division, and the judge of the superior court upon the subsequent trial is without jurisdiction to entertain a motion for the recovery of such costs. Ward v. Cruse, 236 N.C. 400, 72 S.E.2d 835 (1952).

§§ 6-34, 6-35: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 269, s. 15.

ARTICLE 5.

Liability of Counties in Criminal Actions.

§§ 6-36 to 6-39: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 269, s. 15.

§ 6-40. Liability of counties, where trial removed from one county to another.

When a prisoner is sent from one county to another to be held for trial, or for any other cause or purpose, the county from which he is sent shall pay his jail expenses, unless they are collected from the prisoner. (1889, c. 354; 1901, c. 718; Rev., s. 1285; C. S., s. 1263; 1971, c. 269, s. 8.)

§§ 6-41 to 6-44: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 269, s. 15.

ARTICLE 6.

Liability of Defendant in Criminal Actions.

§ 6-47. Judgment confessed; bond given to secure fine and costs.

In cases where a court permits a defendant convicted of any criminal offense to give bond or confess judgment, with sureties to secure the fine and costs which may be imposed, the acceptance of such security shall be upon the condition that it shall not operate as a discharge of the original judgment against the defendant nor as a discharge of his person from the custody of the law until the fine and costs are paid. (1879, c. 264; Code, s. 749; 1885, c. 364; Rev., s. 1293; C. S., s. 1269; 1971, c. 269, s. 9.)

CASE NOTES

The power of the courts to suspend judgment in criminal cases should only be upheld when sanctioned by usage, and where the consent of the defendant was expressly given or would be implied from the fact that the order was made in the defendant's presence without his objection, and that its evident purpose was to save the defendant from a more grievous penalty permitted or required by law. State v. Hilton, 151 N.C. 687, 65 S.E. 1011 (1909).

§ 6-48. Arrest for nonpayment of fine and costs.

In default of payment of such fine and costs, it is the duty of the court at any subsequent term thereof, on motion of the solicitor of the State, to order a capias to issue to the end that such defendant may be again arrested and held for the fine and costs until discharged according to law. (1879, c. 264; Code, s. 750; 1885, c. 364; Rev., s. 1294; C. S., s. 1270; 1971, c. 269, s. 10.)

ARTICLE 7.

Liability of Prosecuting Witness for Costs.

§ 6-49. Prosecuting witness liable for costs in certain cases; court determines prosecuting witness.

In all criminal actions in any court, if the defendant is acquitted, nolle prosequi entered, or judgment against him is arrested, or if the defendant is discharged from arrest for want of probable cause, the costs, including the fees of all witnesses whom the judge before whom the trial took place shall certify to have been proper for the defense and prosecution, shall be paid by the prosecuting witness, whether marked on the bill or warrant or not, whenever the judge is of the opinion that there was not reasonable ground for the prosecution, or that it was not required by the public interest. If a greater number of witnesses have been summoned than were, in the opinion of the court, necessary to support the charge, the court may, even though it is of the opinion that there was reasonable ground for the prosecution, order the prosecuting witness to pay the attendance fees of such witnesses, if it appear that they were summoned at the prosecuting witness's special request.

Every judge is authorized to determine who the prosecuting witness is at any stage of a criminal proceeding, whether before or after the bill of indictment has been found, or the defendant acquitted: Provided, that no person shall be made a prosecuting witness after the finding of the bill, unless he shall have been notified to show cause why he should not be made the prosecuting witness of record. (1799, c. 4, s. 19, P. R.; 1880, c. 558, P. R.; R. C., c. 35, s. 37; 1868-9, c. 277; 1874-5, c. 151; 1879, c. 49; Code, s. 737; 1889, c. 34; Rev., s. 1295; C. S., s. 1271; 1947, c. 781; 1953, c. 675, s. 1; 1971, c. 269, s. 11.)

CASE NOTES

General Consideration. — This section was intended to enlarge the power of the courts over the question of costs in criminal actions. State v. Norwood, 84 N.C. 794 (1881). Its enactment was within the power of the legislature. State v. Cannady, 78 N.C. 539 (1878).

Standing to Challenge Constitutionality of Section. — The plaintiff lacks standing to put in issue the constitutionality of this section where he is under no present threat of prosecution under these statutes, the likelihood that he will run afoul of them in the future is remote and speculative in the extreme, and it can be safely assumed that he does not contemplate either presently or in the future the institution of a prosecution in this State. Fowler v. Alexander, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

The mere fact that earlier the plaintiff was caught in the net of the challenged statutes gives him no standing, where his earlier encounter with the statutes has become moot, the costs assessed have been paid, and he is no longer restrained. Fowler v. Alexander, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

Intervention by Federal Court in Operation of Section. — The taxing of costs to a prosecuting witness is a constituent part of the criminal procedure of North Carolina. Comity precludes not only the injunction of criminal proceedings in the state courts, but also any disruptive interference thereof. Therefore only when the whole proceeding may be enjoined does the federal district court have jurisdiction to intervene in any way in the operation of this section. Fowler v. Alexander, 340 F. Supp. 168 (M.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

Declaratory Judgment as to Validity of Section Denied. — A grant of declaratory relief that this section was invalid and unconstitutional was held to be outside the equitable jurisdiction of the court for the reasons that no bad faith had been alleged, nor any harassment, nor was there shown any impediment to the resolution of the constitutional validity of this section in the general district courts of North Carolina. Fowler v. Alexander, 340 F. Supp. 168 (M.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

Certifying Witnesses as Proper for Defense. — Where the court below taxed the costs of an unsuccessful prosecution against the prosecutor without finding that the defendant's witnesses were proper for the defense, as required by this section, judgment would still be allowed to stand if the court below would make and certify the requisite finding that the said witnesses were proper for the defense. State v. Jones, 117 N.C. 768, 23 S.E. 247 (1895).

In State v. Owens, 87 N.C. 565 (1882), it was stated that this section included such witnesses for the defense as were certified by the counsel to have been proper for the defense, and the Supreme Court approved that judgment. But this was not the point in the appeal, and was only incidentally presented. See State v. Massey, 104 N.C. 877, 10 S.E. 608 (1889). In State v. Roberts, 106 N.C. 662, 10 S.E. 900 (1890), which was also a judgment taxing the prosecutor with the costs, the judge did not find and certify that the prosecution was frivolous, malicious or was not for the public good. The Supreme Court held that this judgment was erroneous, and that the statute only allowed a party to be taxed as prosecutor with the costs upon the findings of these facts. State v. Jones, 117 N.C. 768, 23 S.E. 247 (1895).

Notice to Prosecutor Prior to Taxing Costs. — It is necessary for the trial court, in order to adjudge the prosecution of a criminal action to be frivolous and malicious and tax the costs against the prosecutors who have employed attorneys to assist the solicitor, to give the prosecutors notice of such action and hear the matter according to the "law of the land." State v. Collins, 169 N.C. 323, 84 S.E. 1049 (1915).

The object of notice is only to give the party a day in court, and it matters not how he gets the notice, if he appears and defends under it. This may be done on motion of the defendant's counsel or by the court of its own motion. State v. Hughes, 83 N.C. 665 (1880); State v. Hamilton, 106 N.C. 660, 10 S.E. 854 (1890). The court should find the facts, and when this is done the findings are not reviewable in the appellate court. State v. Owens, 87 N.C. 565 (1882); State v. Roberts, 106 N.C. 662, 10 S.E. 900 (1890); State v. Jones, 117 N.C. 768, 23 S.E. 247 (1895).

A notice to mark one as prosecutor under this section need not be in writing. Where it was announced in open court, upon the calling and continuance of a State case, that a motion would be made at the next term to mark a witness as prosecutor (all the witnesses being present), and on the argument of the motion it was announced that all the parties were present, it was held to be sufficient evidence that such notice was given, and warranted the court in ordering the witness to be marked as prosecutor. State v. Norwood, 84 N.C. 794 (1881).

Not Required by the Public Interest. — A finding by the trial judge that a prosecution of a criminal action "was not for the public interest" is equivalent to a finding that it "was not required by the public interest." State v. Baker, 114 N.C. 812, 19 S.E. 145 (1894).

Conclusiveness of Court Finding. — A judgment that a prosecution is frivolous and not required by the public interest, and that the prosecutor pay the costs, is conclusive and not appealable. State v. Hamilton, 106 N.C. 660, 10 S.E. 854 (1890).

The finding by the judge below that a criminal prosecution was frivolous and malicious is conclusive, and will support a judgment that the prosecutor pay costs, or in default thereof be imprisoned. State v. Lance, 109 N.C. 789, 14 S.E. 110 (1891).

But where the trial judge has dismissed a criminal action as being frivolous and malicious, and taxed the prosecutors with costs, and it appears from his findings of record that he has done so without any proper consideration of their affidavits in support of their position, and relevant to the issue, so as to deprive them of the benefits of the due process of law, his order will be set aside on appeal, leaving the matter open for proper adjudication. State v. Collins, 169 N.C. 323, 84 S.E. 1049 (1915).

In this latter case it is said: "In the disposition made of this appeal we do not intend to impair or qualify our former decisions on the subject, notably State v. Hamilton, 106 N.C. 660, 10 S.E. 854 (1890), and State v. Roberts, 106 N.C. 662, 10 S.E. 900 (1890), to the effect that, on a hearing of this character, the findings of fact by the trial judge are conclusive. In the disposition of these and like motions there must necessarily be some tribunal having the power to determine the ultimate facts on which the rights of the parties depend, and we think the cases which refer this power to the trial judge, who is present and has opportunity to personally observe and note the circumstances and attendant conditions, are grounded in good reason; but, on the facts as they appear from his honor's findings, and we think it not improper to say that he has spread them on the record with commendable candor, we are of opinion that these men, as heretofore stated, have had no proper hearing, within the meaning of the constitutional provision, and that the judgment against them must be set aside."

Insolvent Prosecutor — County Liable. — When a judge below orders an insolvent prosecutor to pay costs, and he fails or is unable to pay, the county in which the offense was committed becomes liable to pay the same. Pegram v. Commissioners of Guilford County, 75 N.C. 120 (1876).

Applied in State v. Darr, 63 N.C. 516 (1869).

Findings of Fact Required. — The presiding judge, prior to taxing costs against a prosecuting witness, is required to make specific findings of fact. See opinion of Attorney General to Gary B. Tash, Judge, 21st Judicial District Court, 49 N.C.A.G. 142 (1980).

Mere Failure to Convict Not Ground For Assessment. — This section does not empower the court to assess costs against the prosecuting witness solely because prosecution does not result in a conviction of the accused. See opinion of Attorney General to Gary B. Tash, Judge, 21st Judicial District Court, 49 N.C.A.G. 142 (1980).

§ 6-50. Imprisonment of prosecuting witness for willful nonpayment of costs if prosecution frivolous.

Every such prosecuting witness may be adjudged not only to pay the costs, but he shall also be imprisoned for the willful nonpayment thereof, when the judge before whom the case was tried shall adjudge that the prosecution was frivolous or malicious. (1800, c. 558; R. C., c. 35, s. 37; 1879, c. 49; 1881, c. 176; Code, s. 738; Rev., s. 1297; C. S., s. 1272; 1971, c. 269, s. 11.1.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section is constitutional. State v. Cannady, 78 N.C. 539 (1878); State v. Hamilton, 106 N.C. 660, 10 S.E. 854 (1890).

Same — Standing to Challenge. — The plaintiff lacked standing to put in issue the constitutionality of this section where he was under no present threat of prosecution under these statutes, the likelihood that he would run afoul of them in the future was remote and speculative in the extreme, and it could be safely assumed that he did not contemplate either presently or in the future the institution of a prosecution in North Carolina. Fowler v. Alexander, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

The mere fact that earlier the plaintiff was caught in the net of the challenged statutes gave him no standing, where his earlier encounter with the statutes had become moot, the costs assessed were paid, and he was no longer restrained. Fowler v. Alexander, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

The mere fact that the statutes may chill in some indefinable way the urge to prosecute is of no moment in the absence of any real likelihood that plaintiff has or will have reason to prosecute someone in North Carolina. Fowler v. Alexander, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

Same — Jurisdiction of Federal Court. — A grant of a declaratory judgment that this section was invalid and unconstitutional was held to be outside the equitable jurisdiction of the federal court for the reasons that no bad faith had been alleged, nor any harassment, nor any impediment to the resolution of the constitutional validity in the General Court of Justice of North Carolina. Fowler v. Alexander, 340 F. Supp. 168 (M.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

The taxing of costs to a prosecuting witness is a constituent part of the criminal procedure of North Carolina. Comity precludes not only the injunction of criminal proceedings in the state courts, but also any disruptive interference thereof. Therefore only when the whole proceeding may be enjoined does the federal district court have jurisdiction to intervene in any way in the operation of this section. Fowler v. Alexander, 340 F. Supp. 168 (M.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

Costs of Prosecution Not a Debt. — Costs of prosecution against a prosecutor (upon acquittal of the accused or nolle prosequi entered), or against the accused upon a verdict of guilty, or a fine imposed, do not constitute a debt within the meaning of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 16, (now Art. 1, § 28) and hence the defendant may be imprisoned for nonpayment of the same. State v. Wallin, 89 N.C. 578 (1883).

Where Bill Ignored. — No power is conferred by this section to tax a prosecutor with costs when the bill is ignored. State v. Cockerham, 23 N.C. 381 (1841); State v. Horton, 89 N.C. 581 (1883); State v. Gates, 107 N.C. 832, 12 S.E. 319 (1890).

ARTICLE 8.

Fees of Witnesses.

§ 6-51. Not entitled to fees in advance.

Witnesses are not entitled to receive their fees in advance; but no witness in a civil action or special proceeding, unless summoned on behalf of the State or a municipal corporation, shall be compelled to attend more than one day, if the party by or for whom he was summoned shall, after one day's attendance, on request and presentation of a certificate, fail or refuse to pay what then may be due for traveling to the place of examination and for the number of days of attendance. (1868-9, c. 279, subch. 11, s. 3; Code, s. 1368; Rev., s. 1298; C. S., s. 1273.)

Cross References. — As to attendance of witnesses, see § 8-63.

§ 6-53. Witness to prove attendance; action for fees.

Every person summoned, who shall attend as a witness in any suit, shall, before the clerk of the court, or before the referee or officer taking the testimony, ascertain by his own oath or affirmation the sum due for traveling to and from court, attendance and ferriage, which shall be certified by the clerk; and on failure of the party, at whose instance such witness was summoned (witnesses for the State and municipal corporations excepted), to pay the same previous to the departure of the witness from court, such witness may at any time sue for and recover the same from the party summoning him; and the certificate of the clerk shall be sufficient evidence of the debt. (1777, c. 115, s. 46, P. R.; 1796, c. 458, P. R.; R. C., c. 31, s. 73; 1868-9, c. 279, subch. 11, ss. 2, 4; Code, s. 1369; Rev., s. 1299; C. S., s. 1274; 1971, c. 269, s. 12.)

CASE NOTES

Right to Payment Statutory. — Payment of witnesses by the sovereign is neither given by common law nor is it an inherent right. It is granted at the discretion of the court and only within the limits authorized by statute. State v. Massey, 104 N.C. 877, 10 S.E. 608 (1889). See State v. Wheeler, 141 N.C. 773, 53 S.E. 358 (1906).

The court's power to tax costs is entirely dependent upon statutory authorization. State v. Johnson, 282 N.C. 1, 191 S.E.2d 641 (1972).

Witnesses Must Be Subpoenaed and Examined or Tendered for Examination. — It has always been the recognized practice that, inasmuch as only two witnesses of the successful party to prove any single fact can be taxed against the losing party, the purport of the evidence of the witnesses so sought to be taxed shall be demonstrated by examination on the trial, or at least that the losing party may have an opportunity to ascertain the materiality of the evidence of such witnesses and prevent being taxed with an excessive number upon any single point by such witnesses being sworn and tendered to the opposite party for examination. Porter v. Durham, 79 N.C. 596 (1878). It is true that in Loftis v. Raxter, 66 N.C. 340 (1872), it is said that the witnesses must be "sworn or tendered," but this is an inadvertent expression for "sworn and examined or tendered," i.e., witnesses subpoenaed by the successful party cannot be taxed against the losing party unless sworn and examined by the successful party, or sworn and tendered to the losing party to be examined, that their materiality may be shown. Otherwise, a successful party may oppress the losing party by subpoenaing and swearing any number of witnesses and having their attendance taxed, while examining only the few necessary to gain the action. Merely swearing the witnesses would be no assurance of this materiality. They must be examined or tendered to the opposite party to be examined, should he so choose, and if examined by the opposite party they are to be examined as the witnesses of the party summoning such witnesses, and under the rules of cross-examination pertaining to the examination of an adversary's witnesses. Sitton v. Edward-Eversole Lumber Co., 135 N.C. 540, 47 S.E. 609 (1904).

When a cause has been tried, only those witnesses of the successful party who have been sworn and either examined or tendered to the opposite party can be taxed against the other. Hobbs v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 151 N.C. 134, 65 S.E. 755 (1909); Chadwick v. Life Ins. Co., 158 N.C. 380, 74 S.E. 115 (1912).

The losing party is taxed with the costs of his adversary's witness only if the witness was subpoenaed and examined or tendered. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Same — Witnesses Who Are Not Summoned or Who Are Nonresidents. — There is no provision in our law authorizing the taxation as costs, of the fees for attendance and mileage of witnesses who have not been summoned, nor of witnesses who have been summoned but who are nonresidents of the State. Stern v. Herren, 101 N.C. 516, 8 S.E. 221 (1888).

Same — Expert Witnesses. — Where neither expert witness testified in obedience to a subpoena, the court was without authority to allow either of them an expert fee or to tax the losing party with the amount of the fee as a part of the costs. Couch v. Couch, 18 N.C. App. 108, 196 S.E.2d 64 (1973).

Witnesses Summoned by Both Parties. — A witness summoned by each party to a suit is entitled to compensation from each. Peace v. Person, 5 N.C. 188 (1808).

Party Giving Evidence in His Own Behalf. — The legislature never intended, in allowing parties to be witnesses for themselves, to put them on a par with other witnesses in respect to witness fees, when they attend the trial to give evidence in their own favor. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

If a successful party is not entitled to have a witness fee for himself taxed against his losing adversary he is not entitled to have taxed an expert witness fee for himself. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Testimony of Expert Must Be Material. — Expert witness fees can be taxed against an adverse party only when the testimony of the witness examined or tendered was or would have been material and competent. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Effect of Nonsuit. — The costs of the defendant's witnesses who are present when the case is brought for trial, but are not sworn, because the plaintiff takes a nonsuit, are properly taxed against the latter. Henderson v. Williams, 120 N.C. 339, 27 S.E. 30 (1897).

Assignment of Witness Tickets Not Necessary. — The party to an action summoning witnesses to testify in his behalf is liable for their witness fees which may be recovered in an action against him, and when it appears of record entry of the judgment by the clerk of the superior court that these fees have been taxed against the party recovering the judgment, and paid by him, such party is entitled to recover them against the losing party to the action without showing that the witnesses had transferred or assigned their tickets to him. McClure v. Fulbright, 196 N.C. 450, 146 S.E. 74 (1929).

§ 6-60. No more than two witnesses may be subpoenaed to prove single material fact; liability for fees of such witnesses; one fee for day's attendance.

No district attorney shall direct that more than two witnesses be subpoenaed for the State to prove a single material fact, nor shall the State or defendant in any such prosecution be liable for the fees of more than two witnesses to prove a single material fact, unless the court, upon satisfactory reasons appearing, otherwise directs. And no witness subpoenaed in a criminal action shall be paid by the State for attendance in more than one case for any one day. (1871-2, c. 186; 1879, c. 264; Code, s. 744; Rev., s. 1303; C. S., s. 1284; 1971, c. 269, s. 13; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

§ 6-62. District attorney to announce discharge of State's witnesses.

It is the duty of all district attorneys prosecuting in the several courts, as each criminal prosecution is disposed of by trial, removal, continuance or otherwise, to call, in open court, and announce the discharge of witnesses for the State, either finally or otherwise as the disposition of the case may require. (1879, c. 264; 1881, c. 312; Code, s. 746; Rev., s. 1305; C. S., s. 1286; 1935, c. 26; 1971, c. 269, s. 14; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

This Chapter shall be known and may be cited as the "Judicial Department Act of 1965." (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Chapter 50 of the General Statutes was extensively rewritten during the 1967 session of the General Assembly and is not a part of the Judicial Department Act of 1965, although in some respects they must be construed with reference to each other. Boston v. Freeman, 6 N.C. App. 736, 171 S.E.2d 206 (1969).

Cited in Kinney v. Goley, 4 N.C. App. 325, 167 S.E.2d 97 (1969).

This Chapter is intended to implement Article IV of the Constitution of North Carolina and promote the just and prompt disposition of litigation by:

(1) Providing a new chapter in the General Statutes into which, at a time not later than January 1, 1971, when the General Court of Justice is fully operational in all counties of the State, all statutes concerning the organization, jurisdiction and administration of each division of the General Court of Justice may be placed;

(2) Amending certain laws with respect to the superior court division to conform them to the laws set forth in this Chapter, to the end that each trial division may be a harmonious part of the General Court of Justice;

(3) Creating the district court division of the General Court of Justice, and the Administrative Office of the Courts;

(4) Establishing in accordance with a fixed schedule the various district courts of the district court division;

(5) Providing for the organization, jurisdiction and procedures necessary for the operation of the district court division;

(6) Providing for the financial support of the judicial department, and for uniform costs and fees in the trial divisions of the General Court of Justice;

(7) Providing for an orderly transition from the present system of courts to a uniform system completely operational in all counties of the State not later than January 1, 1971;

(8) Repealing certain laws inconsistent with the foregoing purposes; and

(9) Effectuating other purposes incidental and supplemental to the foregoing enumerated purposes. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

SUBCHAPTER I. GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE.

ARTICLE 1.

Judicial Power and Organization.

Except for the judicial power vested in the court for the trial of impeachments, and except for such judicial power as may from time to time be vested by the General Assembly in administrative agencies, the judicial power of the State is vested exclusively in the General Court of Justice. Provided, that all existing courts of the State inferior to the superior courts, including justice of the peace courts and mayor's courts, shall continue to exist and to exercise the judicial powers vested in them by law until specifically abolished by law, or until the establishment within the county of their situs of a district court, or until January 1, 1971, whichever event shall first occur. Judgments of inferior courts which cease to exist under the provisions of this section continue in force and effect as though the issuing court continued to exist, and the General Court of Justice is hereby vested with jurisdiction to enforce such judgments. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

The General Court of Justice constitutes a unified judicial system for purposes of jurisdiction, operation and administration, and consists of an appellate division, a superior court division, and a district court division. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

ARTICLE 1B.

Age Limits for Service as Justice or Judge.

No justice or judge of the appellate division of the General Court of Justice may continue in office beyond the last day of the month in which he attains his seventy-second birthday, and no judge of the superior court or district court division of the General Court of Justice may continue in office beyond the last day of the month in which he attains his seventieth birthday, but justices and judges so retired may be recalled for periods of temporary service as provided in Subchapters II and III of this Chapter. (1971, c. 508, s. 1; c. 1194; 1973, c. 248; 1977, c. 736, s. 5; 1981, c. 455, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1971, c. 508, s. 5, provides that the act shall become effective Jan. 1, 1973, if the amendment adding N.C. Const., Art. IV, § 8, proposed by Session Laws 1971, c. 451, was approved by the voters. The amendment was approved by the voters at the general election held November 7, 1972. Session Laws 1971, c. 508, s. 4, contains a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment rewrote this section.

CASE NOTES

Resignation of District Judge Created Legal and Actual Vacancy. — Where a district court judge resigned upon the discovery of his legal infirmity, his resignation from office created an actual vacancy in that position. Hence, upon the resignation, there was no one legally entitled to hold office by virtue of an election, nor under § 128-7 was there an incumbent with the legal right to continue in office until a successor was elected or appointed. The judge, therefore, created a legal as well as an actual vacancy in office under N.C. Const., Art. IV, § 19. People ex rel. Duncan v. Beach, 294 N.C. 713, 242 S.E.2d 796 (1978).

§ 7A-4.21. Validation of official actions of district court judges of twenty-fifth judicial district performed after mandatory retirement age.

No official action performed by any judge of the twenty-fifth judicial district of the district court division of the General Court of Justice shall be declared to be invalid by reason of the fact that the judge was beyond the mandatory retirement age set out in G.S. 7A-4.20 at the time of his performing any such act; provided this section shall only apply to those official actions performed prior to May 1, 1977. (1977, c. 389.)

SUBCHAPTER II. APPELLATE DIVISION OF THE GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE.

ARTICLE 2.

Appellate Division Organization.

The appellate division of the General Court of Justice consists of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — As enacted in 1965, this article was designated "Article 1A. Appellate Division Organization and Terms," and consisted of former § 7A-5, which read, "The appellate division of the General Court of Justice consists of the Supreme Court of North Carolina. (Chapter 7, subchapter I, articles 1-6, of the General Statutes, is applicable.)" The former section derived from c. 310, s. 1, Session Laws 1965.

ARTICLE 4.

Court of Appeals.

The Court of Appeals is created effective January 1, 1967. It shall consist initially of six judges, elected by the qualified voters of the State for terms of eight years. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court shall designate one of the judges as Chief Judge, to serve in such capacity at the pleasure of the Chief Justice. Before entering upon the duties of his office, a judge of the Court of Appeals shall take the oath of office prescribed for a judge of the General Court of Justice.

The Governor on or after July 1, 1967, shall make temporary appointments to the six initial judgeships. The appointees shall serve until January 1, 1969. Their successors shall be elected at the general election for members of the General Assembly in November, 1968, and shall take office on January 1, 1969, to serve for the remainder of the unexpired term which began on January 1, 1967.

Upon the appointment of at least five judges, and the designation of a Chief Judge, the court is authorized to convene, organize, and promulgate, subject to the approval of the Supreme Court, such supplementary rules as it deems necessary and appropriate for the discharge of the judicial business lawfully assigned to it.

Effective January 1, 1969, the number of judges is increased to nine, and the Governor, on or after March 1, 1969, shall make temporary appointments to the additional judgeships thus created. The appointees shall serve until January 1, 1971. Their successors shall be elected at the general election for members of the General Assembly in November, 1970, and shall take office on January 1, 1971, to serve for the remainder of the unexpired term which began on January 1, 1969.

Effective January 1, 1977, the number of judges is increased to 12; and the Governor, on or after July 1, 1977, shall make temporary appointments to the additional judgeships thus created. The appointees shall serve until January 1, 1979. Their successors shall be elected at the general election for members of the General Assembly in November, 1978, and shall take office on January 1, 1979, to serve the remainder of the unexpired term which began on January 1, 1977.

The Court of Appeals shall sit in panels of three judges each. The Chief Judge insofar as practicable shall assign the members to panels in such fashion that each member sits a substantially equal number of times with each other member. He shall preside over the panel of which he is a member, and shall designate the presiding judge of the other panel or panels.

Three judges shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of the business of the court, except as may be provided in § 7A-32.

In the event the Chief Judge is unable, on account of absence or temporary incapacity, to perform the duties placed upon him as Chief Judge, the Chief Justice shall appoint an acting Chief Judge from the other judges of the Court, to temporarily discharge the duties of Chief Judge. Jurisdiction.

The Supreme Court has original jurisdiction to hear claims against the State, but its decisions shall be merely recommendatory; no process in the nature of execution shall issue thereon; the decisions shall be reported to the next session of the General Assembly for its action. CASE NOTES

Section Unconstitutional. — Even if the General Assembly did not intend to repeal this section by ratification of the 1971 revision of N.C. Const., Art. IV, this section is unconstitutional. Smith v. State, 289 N.C. 303, 222 S.E.2d 412 (1976).

This section was rendered null and void when the electorate approved revised N.C. Const., Art. IV, which deleted the provision granting the Supreme Court original jurisdiction of claims against the State. Smith v. State, 289 N.C. 303, 212 S.E.2d 412 (1976).

Legislative Intent to Repeal. — It was the intent of the General Assembly that upon the ratification of the 1971 revision of N.C. Const., Art. IV, this section be repealed, since the jurisdiction which this section purports to give to the Supreme Court exceeded that granted to it in revised Article IV of the State Constitution. Smith v. State, 289 N.C. 303, 222 S.E.2d 412 (1976).

No Execution to Enforce Judgment Available from Supreme Court. — In the event a plaintiff is successful in establishing a claim for breach of contract against the State, he cannot obtain execution from the Supreme Court to enforce the judgment. Smith v. State, 289 N.C. 303, 222 S.E.2d 412 (1976).

The Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals respectively have jurisdiction to review upon appeal decisions of the several courts of the General Court of Justice and of administrative agencies, upon matters of law or legal inference, in accordance with the system of appeals provided in this Article. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Appeals in Civil Causes Distinguished from Appeals in Criminal Causes. — The constitutional and statutory structure of the General Court of Justice provides that, generally, appeals from the district court in civil causes go to the Court of Appeals, while appeals in criminal causes must first go to the superior court. State v. Killian, 25 N.C. App. 224, 212 S.E.2d 419 (1975).

Supreme Court Has Authority to Give Relief for Error of Law. — Supreme Court has authority to review the record on appeal and to give appropriate relief for an error of law committed by the trial court. State v. Lampkins, 286 N.C. 497, 212 S.E.2d 106 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 909, 96 S. Ct. 3220, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1216 (1976).

But No Authority to Grant Relief from Criminal Trial Free from Error of Law. — Supreme Court has no authority to grant relief to a defendant convicted of a criminal offense in a trial free from an error of law for the reason that it disagrees with the jury concerning the credibility of a witness for the State. State v. Lampkins, 286 N.C. 497, 212 S.E.2d 106 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 909, 96 S. Ct. 3220, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1216 (1976).

Supreme Court must accept as conclusive the verdict of the jury, so far as the credibility of witnesses is concerned. State v. Lampkins, 286 N.C. 497, 212 S.E.2d 106 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 909, 96 S. Ct. 3220, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1216 (1976).

Objections and Exceptions Necessary to Preserve Legal Questions on Appeal. — Jurisdiction of the Supreme Court on appeal is limited to questions of law or legal inference, which, ordinarily, must be presented by objections duly entered and exceptions duly taken to the rulings of the lower court. State v. Hedrick, 289 N.C. 232, 221 S.E.2d 350 (1976).

When Findings of Trial Court Conclusive on Appeal. — Where evidence properly in the record fully supports the findings of fact which the trial court made, and the record itself does not disclose that these findings were based on information obtained by the trial judge in a manner violative of plaintiff's rights, the trial court's findings are conclusive on appeal. Horton v. Horton, 12 N.C. App. 526, 183 S.E.2d 794, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 727, 184 S.E.2d 884 (1971).

It is not the function of the Court of Appeals to make findings of fact. Horton v. Horton, 12 N.C. App. 526, 183 S.E.2d 794, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 727, 184 S.E.2d 884 (1971).

The Court of Appeals has no jurisdiction to entertain a motion for summary judgment made for the first time on appeal. Britt v. Allen, 12 N.C. App. 399, 183 S.E.2d 303 (1971).

(a) From a judgment of a superior court which includes a sentence of death or imprisonment for life, unless the judgment was based on a plea of guilty or nolo contendere, appeal lies of right directly to the Supreme Court.

(b) From any final judgment of a superior court, other than one described in subsection (a) of this section, or one based on a plea of guilty or nolo contendere, including any final judgment entered upon review of a decision of an administrative agency, appeal lies of right to the Court of Appeals.

(c) From any final judgment of a district court in a civil action appeal lies of right directly to the Court of Appeals.

(d) From any interlocutory order or judgment of a superior court or district court in a civil action or proceeding which

(1) Affects a substantial right, or

(2) In effect determines the action and prevents a judgment from which appeal might be taken, or

(3) Discontinues the action, or

(4) Grants or refuses a new trial, appeal lies of right directly to the Court of Appeals.

(e) From any other order or judgment of the superior court from which an appeal is authorized by statute, appeal lies of right directly to the Court of Appeals. (1967, c. 108, s. 1; 1971, c. 377, s. 3; 1973, c. 704; 1977, c. 711, s. 4.)

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

This section was not repealed or nullified by the enactment of Chapter 1A of the General Statutes prescribing the presently effective Rules of Civil Procedure. Wachovia Realty Invs. v. Housing, Inc., 292 N.C. 93, 232 S.E.2d 667 (1977).

For all practical purposes there is an unlimited right of appeal in North Carolina to the Appellate Division of the General Court of Justice from any final judgment of the superior court or the district court in civil and criminal cases. State v. Black, 7 N.C. App. 324, 172 S.E.2d 217 (1970).

The right to appeal must be exercised in accordance with the established rules of practice and procedure. State v. Black, 7 N.C. App. 324, 172 S.E.2d 217 (1970).

Right to Counsel. — Section 7A-450 et seq. has generally been construed to limit the right to appointed counsel in criminal cases to direct appeals taken as of right. Ross v. Moffitt, 417 U.S. 600, 94 S. Ct. 2437, 41 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1974).

Duty to Dismiss Appeal. — It is the duty of an appellate court to dismiss an appeal if there is no right to appeal. Pasour v. Pierce, 46 N.C. App. 636, 265 S.E.2d 652 (1980).

Where an appealing party has no right to appeal, an appellate court should on its own motion dismiss the appeal even though the question of appealability has not been raised by the parties themselves. Metcalf v. Palmer, 46 N.C. App. 622, 265 S.E.2d 484 (1980).

II. Sentence of Death or Life Imprisonment.

The term "imprisonment for life" as it is used in this section means only a determinate life sentence and does not include an indeterminate sentence merely because the stated maximum is a life term. State v. Ferrell, 300 N.C. 157, 265 S.E.2d 210 (1980).

Petitions to Review Judgments in Habeas Corpus Proceedings. — By analogy, subsection (a) of this section, § 15-180.2 (now repealed) and App. R. 21(b) are logically applicable to petitions for certiorari to review judgments in habeas corpus proceedings involving the restraint of prisoners under sentences of death or life imprisonment. State v. Niccum, 293 N.C. 276, 238 S.E.2d 141 (1977).

Appeal to Supreme Court under § 15A-979 When Charge Is Death or Life Imprisonment. — Section 15A-979 does not specify whether an appeal lies to the Court of Appeals or to the Supreme Court. Subsection (a) of this section, however, stipulates that there is an appeal of right to the Supreme Court from a superior court judgment imposing a sentence of death or life imprisonment. When these two statutes are considered together, it is proper to appeal directly to the Supreme Court if the punishment for the charge(s) is either death or life imprisonment. State v. Silhan, 295 N.C. 636, 247 S.E.2d 902 (1978).

III. Final Judgments.

Denial of Application for Certiorari Is Not Final Judgment. — A "judgment" of the superior court denying defendant's application to that court for a writ of certiorari to review the proceedings of the district court in a criminal case was not a final judgment within the meaning of subsection (b) of this section, and defendant was not authorized to appeal therefrom to the Court of Appeals as a matter of right; defendant's only remedy was by petition for certiorari to the Court of Appeals. State v. Flynt, 8 N.C. App. 323, 174 S.E.2d 120 (1970).

Appeal from Order of Superior Court Affirming Annexation Ordinance. — By this section initial appellate jurisdiction of an appeal from an order of the superior court affirming an annexation ordinance is given to the Court of Appeals, subject, however, to the provisions of § 7A-31. Adams-Millis Corp. v. Town of Kernersville, 281 N.C. 147, 187 S.E.2d 704 (1972).

IV. Interlocutory Orders.

A. Generally.

"Interlocutory Order" Defined. — An order is interlocutory if it does not determine the issues but directs some further proceeding preliminary to final decree. Waters v. Qualified Personnel, Inc., 294 N.C. 200, 240 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

When Interlocutory Order Appealable Generally. — Ordinarily, an appeal lies only from a final judgment, but an interlocutory order which will work injury if not corrected before final judgment is appealable. Wachovia Realty Invs. v. Housing, Inc., 292 N.C. 93, 232 S.E.2d 667 (1977).

Ordinarily, an appeal from an interlocutory order will be dismissed as fragmentary and premature unless the order affects some substantial right and will work injury to appellant if not corrected before appeal from final judgment. Wachovia Realty Invs. v. Housing, Inc., 292 N.C. 93, 232 S.E.2d 667 (1977).

This section in effect provides that no appeal lies to an appellate court from an interlocutory order or ruling of the trial judge unless such ruling or order deprives the appellant of a substantial right which he would lose if the ruling or order is not reviewed before final judgment. Waters v. Qualified Personnel, Inc., 294 N.C. 200, 240 S.E.2d 338 (1978); Citicorp Person-to-Person Fin. Center, Inc. v. Stallings, 601 Sales, Inc., 49 N.C. App. 187, 270 S.E.2d 567 (1980).

An appeal does not lie from an interlocutory order unless such order affects some substantial right claimed by the appellant and will work an injury to him if not corrected before an appeal from the final judgment. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

A nonappealable interlocutory order which involves the merits and necessarily affects the judgment is reviewable on appropriate exception upon an appeal from the final judgment in the cause. An earlier appeal from such an interlocutory order is fragmentary and premature, and will be dismissed. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

The General Assembly did not restrict the right of appeal provided by § 1-277 and subsection (d) of this section by engrafting Rule 54(b) requirements upon them. Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

The effect of both § 1-277 and subsection (d) of this section is to provide that no appeal will lie to an appellate court from an interlocutory order or ruling of a trial court unless such order or ruling deprives the appellant of a substantial right which he will lose if the order or ruling is not reviewed before final judgment. Clark v. Clark, 42 N.C. App. 84, 255 S.E.2d 568 (1979).

An interlocutory order which does not affect a "substantial right" of one of the parties under § 1-277 and subsection (d) of this section is not appealable, and the avoidance of a rehearing or trial is not considered to be such a "substantial right." Davis v. Mitchell, 46 N.C. App. 272, 265 S.E.2d 248 (1980).

Appellate Court as Dispatcher of Appeals. — To the extent that judgments as to one or more but fewer than all parties are determined by the appellate courts of this State to affect a "substantial right" of one of the litigants under § 1-277 and subsection (d) of this section, the procedure for trial court certification of such judgments as appealable established in § 1A-1, Rule 54(b), is bypassed and the appellate court is substituted as the true dispatcher of appeals. Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240 (1980).

Rule against Allowing Appeal from Interlocutory Orders Strictly Construed. — Strict construction of the rule against allowing appeal from an interlocutory order of the trial court serves the purpose of eliminating the unnecessary delay and expense of fragmented appeals and of presenting the whole case for determination in a single appeal from a final judgment. Funderburk v. Justice, 25 N.C. App. 655, 214 S.E.2d 310 (1975).

Effect of Procedures for Staying Execution of Judgment. — The existence of the procedures under §§ 1-269, 1-289 and 1A-1, Rule 62, for staying execution on the judgment does not prevent the entry of the judgment from affecting a substantial right of the judgment debtor. Wachovia Realty Invs. v. Housing, Inc., 292 N.C. 93, 232 S.E.2d 667 (1977).

No Appeal as Matter of Right from Interlocutory Orders in Criminal Cases. — In this section there is no provision for an appeal as a matter of right from interlocutory orders in criminal cases. State v. Lance, 1 N.C. App. 620, 162 S.E.2d 154 (1968); State v. Smith, 4 N.C. App. 491, 166 S.E.2d 870 (1969).

In a criminal case there is no provision in the statute for an appeal to the Court of Appeals as a matter of right from an interlocutory order entered therein. State v. Black, 7 N.C. App. 324, 172 S.E.2d 217 (1970).

Subsection (d) of this section makes no provision for an appeal as a matter of right from an interlocutory order in a criminal action. State v. Bryant, 12 N.C. App. 530, 183 S.E.2d 824 (1971), rev'd on other grounds, 280 N.C. 407, 185 S.E.2d 854 (1972).

B. Particular Orders.

Order Denying Motion for Change of Venue. — Defendant's purported appeal from an interlocutory order denying defendant's motion for a change of venue pursuant to § 1-83(2) for the convenience of the witnesses and the ends of justice was dismissed as premature. Furches v. Moore, 48 N.C. App. 430, 269 S.E.2d 635 (1980).

Order Regarding Interrogatories Interlocutory. — Trial court's order sustaining objections to, and granting a motion to strike, certain interrogatories, denying defendants' motion to compel answers to those interrogatories, and also denying defendants' motion to permit them to respond to plaintiff's request for admissions was interlocutory, and defendants' appeal was fragmentary and premature. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Olive, 42 N.C. App. 574, 257 S.E.2d 100 (1979).

Order granting the right of intervention is not appealable, as any of the original parties may appeal from an adverse decision granting the intervenor relief on the merits. Wood v. City of Fayetteville, 35 N.C. App. 738, 242 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 264, 245 S.E.2d 781 (1978).

An order granting intervention may be reviewed upon appeal from the final judgment in the cause. Wood v. City of Fayetteville, 35 N.C. App. 738, 242 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 264, 245 S.E.2d 781 (1978).

Although the rule is not absolute, ordinarily no appeal will lie from an order permitting intervention of parties unless the order adversely affects a substantial right which the appellant may lose if not granted an appeal before final judgment. The rule applies with equal vigor without regard to whether the trial court grants a motion to intervene as a matter of right pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 24(a) or as permissive intervention pursuant to § 1A-1, Rule 24(b). Wood v. City of Fayetteville, 35 N.C. App. 738, 242 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 264, 245 S.E.2d 781 (1978).

Denial of Motion to Dismiss. — Ordinarily, there is no right of appeal from the refusal of a motion to dismiss. The refusal to dismiss the action generally will not seriously impair any right of defendant that cannot be corrected upon appeal from final judgment. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

An order denying defendant's motion to dismiss plaintiff's claim for punitive damages is not immediately appealable. Williams v. East Coast Sales, Inc., 50 N.C. App. 565, — S.E.2d — (1981).

Where defendant was ordered by the trial court through an interlocutory order to pay plaintiff's legal fees, and where defendant did not perfect his appeal from such judgment, defendant did not lose his right to attack the judgment since the record indicated that the appeal was not taken because of an agreement between the parties' counsel to vacate the order in question. Stroupe v. Stroupe, 301 N.C. 656, 273 S.E.2d 434 (1981).

Same — Failure to State Claim. — The trial court's refusal to allow defendant's motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted pursuant to subsection (b)(6) of § 1A-1, Rule 12 did not put an end to the action or seriously impair any substantial right of defendant that could not be corrected upon appeal from final judgment.

Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

Same — Failure to Join Necessary Party. — No substantial right of the defendant was impaired by the trial court's denial of the motion to dismiss for failure to join a necessary party pursuant to subsection (b)(7) of § 1A-1, Rule 12. The trial court did not rule that other parties were not necessary to be joined. It ruled that the action should not be dismissed for that purpose. Defendant still had adequate opportunity in the trial court for a determination on the question of joinder of parties. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

Order Granting Motion to Amend and Denying Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings. — An order granting a motion to amend and denying a motion for judgment on the pleadings is obviously not a final judgment but is interlocutory. Consequently, no appeal lies of right. Funderburk v. Justice, 25 N.C. App. 655, 214 S.E.2d 310 (1975).

But denial of motion to amend answer to allege compulsory counterclaim affects a substantial right and is immediately appealable. Hudspeth v. Bunzey, 35 N.C. App. 231, 241 S.E.2d 119, appeal dismissed, 294 N.C. 736, 244 S.E.2d 154 (1978).

Appeal from Contempt Order. — See Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

Appeal from Order Granting Summary Judgment. — The order granting summary judgment denies plaintiff a jury trial on the issue of its claim against the bank and, in effect, determines the claim in favor of the bank. Thus the order affects a substantial right and is appealable under § 1-277 and this section. Nasco Equip. Co. v. Mason, 291 N.C. 145, 229 S.E.2d 278 (1976).

Order Granting Partial Summary Judgment. — The trial court's entry of summary judgment for a monetary sum against one of two defendants affected a "substantial right" of that defendant, and such judgment was therefore immediately appealable under § 1-277 and this section, notwithstanding the absence of an express determination by the trial judge that there was "no just reason for delay" as required by § 1A-1, Rule 54(b). Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240 (1980).

Same — Where Injunction Part of Order. — While ordinarily, the allowance of a motion for summary judgment on the issue of liability, reserving for trial the issue of damages, will not be appealable, where a mandatory injunction was part of the order for partial summary judgment, it clearly affected a "substantial right" of the defendant and the allowance of the motion for partial summary judgment was appealable. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979).

Where defendants would immediately suffer the consequences of complying with the mandatory injunction order that they remove anchors and boat slips constructed on plaintiff's submerged lands, this affected a substantial right of defendants, giving them the right to appeal from the interlocutory order granting summary judgment for plaintiffs except on the issue of damages. Steel Creek Dev. Corp. v. James, 300 N.C. 631, 268 S.E.2d 205 (1980).

Partial summary judgment holding that third party defendant must indemnify defendant for any judgment on plaintiff's claim is interlocutory and not appealable under § 1-277 or subsection (d) of this section since the judgment will not work injury to third party defendant if not corrected before appeal from a final judgment. Cook v. Export Leaf Tobacco Co., 47 N.C. App. 187, 266 S.E.2d 754 (1980).

The denial of summary judgment is interlocutory in nature and not appealable under § 1-277 and this section, unless a substantial right of one of the parties would be affected if the appeal were not heard prior to final judgment. Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240 (1980).

An order setting aside without prejudice a summary judgment on the grounds of procedural irregularity, is interlocutory and not immediately appealable. Waters v. Qualified Personnel, Inc., 294 N.C. 200, 240 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

Order Limiting Scope of Lis Pendens in Action to Quiet Title. — In an action to quiet title to property which defendants have incorporated into a residential subdivision, an order limiting the scope of lis pendens filed by plaintiffs only to the area of the subdivision which they claim was interlocutory and not immediately appealable. Whyburn v. Norwood, 37 N.C. App. 610, 246 S.E.2d 540 (1978).

An order denying a motion to cancel a notice of lis pendens is not immediately appealable where the property owner fails to show that a substantial right of his has been impaired. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

An order requiring payment of alimony pendente lite and attorneys' fees affects a substantial right from which an appeal lies as a matter of right. Peeler v. Peeler, 7 N.C. App. 456, 172 S.E.2d 915 (1970).

An order requiring the defendant husband to vacate premises which had been occupied by him and his wife as their home affected a substantial right and was appealable to the Court of Appeals, where the order was made after a hearing and before the case was tried. Musten v. Musten, 36 N.C. App. 618, 244 S.E.2d 699 (1978).

Decisions of the Court of Appeals upon review of motions for appropriate relief listed in G.S. 15A-1415(b) are final and not subject to further review in the Supreme Court by appeal, motion, certification, writ, or otherwise. (1981, c. 470, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1981, c. 470, s. 4, provides: "This act shall become effective Oct. 1, 1981, and shall apply to all decisions of the Court of Appeals on G.S. 15A-1415(b) motions made on or after that date."

The original § 7A-28, which was substantially similar to this section, was enacted by Session Laws 1967, c. 108, s. 1, and repealed by Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 33.

From any final order or decision of the North Carolina Utilities Commission, the North Carolina Industrial Commission, the North Carolina State Bar pursuant to G.S. 84-28, the Property Tax Commission pursuant to G.S. 105-290 and 105-342, or an appeal from the Commissioner of Insurance pursuant to G.S. 58-9.4 or from the Governor pursuant to the Waste Management Act of 1981, G.S. 130-166.17B and G.S. 104E-6.2, appeal as of right lies directly to the Court of Appeals. (1967, c. 108, s. 1; 1971, c. 703, s. 5; 1975, c. 582, s. 12; 1979, c. 584, s. 1; 1981, c. 704, s. 28.)

Cross References. — As to the scope of judicial review of orders of the Property Tax Commission, see §§ 105-345 through 105-346.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment inserted "or from the Governor pursuant to the Waste Management Act of 1981, G.S. 130-166.17B and G.S. 104E-6.2" near the end of the section.

Session Laws 1981, c. 704, ss. 1 and 2, provides:

"Section 1. Short title. This act may be referred to as the Waste Management Act of 1981.

"Sec. 2. Purpose. The purpose of this act is to provide for a comprehensive system for management of hazardous and low-level radioactive waste in North Carolina as reflected in the 1981 Report of the Governor's Task Force on Waste Management."

Session Laws 1981, c. 704, s. 26, provides that the act shall be liberally construed to carry out the policies set forth in the act.

Session Laws 1981, c. 704, s. 27, contains a severability clause.

CASE NOTES

Right of Appeal Expressly Granted. — The right of appeal from any final order or decision of the Utilities Commission is expressly granted by this section. Morgan v. Duke Power Co., 22 N.C. App. 497, 206 S.E.2d 507, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 759, 209 S.E.2d 282 (1974).

No appeal lies from an interlocutory order of the industrial commission. There is a right of appeal only from a final order. Vaughn v. North Carolina Dep't of Human Resources, 37 N.C. App. 86, 245 S.E.2d 892, aff'd, 296 N.C. 683, 251 S.E.2d 792 (1978).

No appeal lies from an interlocutory order of the North Carolina Industrial Commission. Only from a final order or decision of the industrial commission is there an appeal of right to the appellate court. Lynch v. M.B. Kahn Constr. Co., 41 N.C. App. 127, 254 S.E.2d 236, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 298, 259 S.E.2d 914 (1979).

An order of the hearing commission of the State Bar denying defendant's motion to dismiss on the ground of lack of jurisdiction is interlocutory; therefore, he cannot appeal therefrom as a matter of right. North Carolina State Bar v. DuMont, 298 N.C. 564, 259 S.E.2d 280 (1979).

Applied in Morgan v. VEPCO, 22 N.C. App. 300, 206 S.E.2d 338 (1974).

Cited in State ex rel. Utilities Comm'n v. General Tel. Co., 17 N.C. App. 727, 195 S.E.2d 311 (1973).

Except as provided in § 7A-28, from any decision of the Court of Appeals rendered in a case

(1) Which directly involves a substantial question arising under the Constitution of the United States or of this State, or

(2) In which there is a dissent, or

(3) Which involves review of a decision of the North Carolina Utilities Commission in a general rate-making case, an appeal lies of right to the Supreme Court. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — The original § 7A-28, referred to in this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 33, but a new and substantially similar § 7A-28 was enacted by Acts 1981, c. 470, s. 1.

CASE NOTES

Legislative Intent. — The General Assembly of North Carolina intended to insure a review by the Supreme Court of questions on which there was a division in the intermediate appellate court; no such review was intended for claims joined or consolidated in the lower appellate court and on which that court rendered unanimous decision. Hendrix v. Alsop, 278 N.C. 549, 180 S.E.2d 802 (1971); State v. Campbell, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972).

In establishing the North Carolina Court of Appeals, defining its jurisdiction, and providing a system of appeals, the General Assembly followed the basic principle that there should be only one trial on the merits and one appeal on the law, as of right, in every case. Consequently, double appeals as of right — first to the Court of Appeals and then to the Supreme Court — are authorized only in the three instances specified by this section. State v. Cumber, 280 N.C. 127, 185 S.E.2d 141 (1971).

Had the General Assembly intended to limit double appeals in criminal cases to the defendant only, it would have said so. State v. Campbell, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972).

Requirement of Constitutional Question. — The constitutional question must be real and substantial rather than superficial and frivolous. It must be a constitutional question which has not already been the subject of conclusive judicial determination. State v. Colson, 274 N.C. 295, 163 S.E.2d 376 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1087, 89 S. Ct. 876, 21 L. Ed. 2d 780 (1969); Bundy v. Ayscue, 276 N.C. 81, 171 S.E.2d 1 (1969).

Dismissal Where Involvement of Substantial Constitutional Question Not Shown. — An appellant seeking a second review by the Supreme Court as a matter of right on the ground that a substantial constitutional question is involved must allege and show the involvement of such question or suffer dismissal. State v. Colson, 274 N.C. 295, 163 S.E.2d 376 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1087, 89 S. Ct. 876, 21 L. Ed. 2d 780 (1969); Bundy v. Ayscue, 276 N.C. 81, 171 S.E.2d 1 (1969).

This section requires that an appellant must either allege and show the existence of a real and substantial constitutional question which has not already been the subject of conclusive judicial determination or suffer dismissal. Thompson v. Thompson, 288 N.C. 120, 215 S.E.2d 606 (1975).

Respondent's appeal based solely on the assertion that the district court's allowance of an amendment to a juvenile petition deprived him of a constitutional right was dismissed by the Supreme Court, ex mero motu, because it did not directly involve a substantial constitutional question within the meaning of this section. In re Jones, 279 N.C. 616, 184 S.E.2d 267 (1971).

Mouthing of Constitutional Phrases Will Not Avoid Dismissal. — Mere mouthing of constitutional phrases like "due process of law" and "equal protection of the law" will not avoid dismissal. State v. Colson, 274 N.C. 295, 163 S.E.2d 376 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1087,

Question Should Be Raised and Passed on in Trial Court. — Appellate courts will not ordinarily pass upon a constitutional question unless it affirmatively appears that such question was raised and passed upon in the trial court. State v. Mitchell, 276 N.C. 404, 172 S.E.2d 527 (1970); State v. Cumber, 280 N.C. 127, 185 S.E.2d 141 (1971).

Where there was failure to show involvement of a substantial constitutional question which was raised and passed upon in the trial court and properly brought forward for consideration by the Court of Appeals, there was no legal basis for an appeal to the Supreme Court, and the appeal was dismissed. State v. Cumber, 280 N.C. 127, 185 S.E.2d 141 (1971).

And Preserved by Appropriate Objection, etc., Assignment of Error and Argument in Brief. — The Supreme Court will not pass upon the merits of a litigant's contention that his constitutional right has been violated by a ruling or order of a lower court, unless, at the time the alleged violation of such right occurred or was threatened by a proposed procedure, ruling or offer of evidence, or at the earliest opportunity thereafter, the litigant made an appropriate objection, exception or motion and thereafter preserved the constitutional question at each level of appellate review by an appropriate assignment of error and by argument in his brief. State v. Mitchell, 276 N.C. 404, 172 S.E.2d 527 (1970).

Dissent Allows Appeal as a Matter of Right. — The aggrieved party, whether the State or the defendant, may appeal to the Supreme Court as of right from any decision of the Court of Appeals in which there is a dissent. State v. Campbell, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972).

Scope of Review. — When the Supreme Court, after a decision of a cause by the Court of Appeals and pursuant to the petition of a party thereto as authorized by § 7A-31, grants certiorari to review the decision of the Court of Appeals, only the decision of the Court of Appeals is before the Supreme Court for review. The Supreme Court inquires into proceedings in the trial court solely to determine the correctness of the decision of the Court of Appeals. Its inquiry is restricted to rulings of the Court of Appeals which are assigned as error in the petition for certiorari and which are preserved by arguments or the citation of authorities with reference thereto in the brief filed by the petitioner in the Supreme Court, except in those instances in which the Supreme Court elects to exercise its general power of supervision of courts inferior to the Supreme Court. Supreme Court review of a decision by the Court of Appeals upon an appeal from it to the Supreme Court as a matter of right, pursuant to this section, is similarly limited. State v. Williams, 274 N.C. 328, 163 S.E.2d 353 (1968).

Once involvement of a substantial constitutional question is established, the Supreme Court will retain the case and may, in its discretion, pass upon any or all assignments of error, constitutional or otherwise, allegedly committed by the Court of Appeals and properly presented for review. State v. Colson, 274 N.C. 295, 163 S.E.2d 376 (1968); Bundy v. Ayscue, 276 N.C. 81, 171 S.E.2d 1 (1969).

(a) In any cause in which appeal is taken to the Court of Appeals, except a cause appealed from the North Carolina Utilities Commission, the North Carolina Industrial Commission, the North Carolina State Bar pursuant to G.S. 84-28, the Property Tax Commission pursuant to G.S. 105-345, or the Commissioner of Insurance pursuant to G.S. 58-9.4, or a motion for appropriate relief embracing subject matter covered by G.S. 7A-28, the Supreme Court may, in its discretion, on motion of any party to the cause or on its own motion, certify the cause for review by the Supreme Court, either before or after it has been determined by the Court of Appeals. The effect of such certification is to transfer the cause from the Court of Appeals to the Supreme Court for review by the Supreme Court. If the cause is certified for transfer to the Supreme Court before its determination in the Court of Appeals, review is not had in the Court of Appeals but the cause is forthwith transferred for review in the first instance by the Supreme Court. If the cause is certified for transfer to the Supreme Court after its determination by the Court of Appeals, the Supreme Court reviews the decision of the Court of Appeals.

Except in motions within the purview of G.S. 7A-28, the State may move for certification for review of any criminal cause, but only after determination of the cause by the Court of Appeals.

(b) In causes subject to certification under subsection (a) of this section, certification may be made by the Supreme Court before determination of the cause by the Court of Appeals when in the opinion of the Supreme Court:

(1) The subject matter of the appeal has significant public interest, or
(2) The cause involves legal principles of major significance to the jurisprudence of the State, or
(3) Delay in final adjudication is likely to result from failure to certify and thereby cause substantial harm, or
(4) The work load of the courts of the appellate division is such that the expeditious administration of justice requires certification.

(c) In causes subject to certification under subsection (a) of this section, certification may be made by the Supreme Court after determination of the cause by the Court of Appeals when in the opinion of the Supreme Court:

(1) The subject matter of the appeal has significant public interest, or
(2) The cause involves legal principles of major significance to the jurisprudence of the State, or
(3) The decision of the Court of Appeals appears likely to be in conflict with a decision of the Supreme Court.

Interlocutory determinations by the Court of Appeals, including orders remanding the cause for a new trial or for other proceedings, shall be certified for review by the Supreme Court only upon a determination by the Supreme Court that failure to certify would cause a delay in final adjudication which would probably result in substantial harm.

(d) The procedure for certification by the Supreme Court on its own motion, or upon petition of a party, shall be prescribed by rule of the Supreme Court. (1967, c. 108, s. 1; 1969, c. 1044; 1975, c. 555; 1977, c. 711, s. 5; 1981, c. 470, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 39, as amended by Session Laws 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1147, s. 32, effective July 1, 1978, provides: "This act shall become effective July 1, 1978, and applies to all matters addressed by its provisions without regard to when a defendant's guilt was established or when judgment was entered against him, except that the provisions of this act regarding parole shall not apply to persons sentenced before July 1, 1978."

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, rewrote the first sentence of subsection (a), and deleted the former second sentence of subsection (a), which read: "A cause appealed to the Court of Appeals from the Utilities Commission or the Industrial Commission may be certified in similar fashion but only after determination of the cause in the Court of Appeals." The amendment also added "Except in motions within the purview of G.S. 7A-28," at the beginning of the second paragraph of subsection (a), and deleted "the" preceding "certification" near the middle of that paragraph. Session Laws 1981, c. 470, s. 4, provides: "This act shall become effective October 1, 1981, and shall apply to all decisions of the Court of Appeals on G.S. 15A-1415(b) motions made on or after that date."

CASE NOTES

Scope of Review. — When the Supreme Court, after a decision of a cause by the Court of Appeals and pursuant to the petition of a party thereto as authorized by this section, grants certiorari to review the decision of the Court of Appeals, only the decision of the Court of Appeals is before the Supreme Court for review. The Supreme Court inquires into proceedings in the trial court solely to determine the correctness of the decision of the Court of Appeals. Its inquiry is restricted to rulings of the Court of Appeals which are assigned as error in the petition for certiorari and which are preserved by arguments or the citation of authorities with reference thereto in the brief filed by the petitioner in the Supreme Court, except in those instances in which the Supreme Court elects to exercise its general power of supervision of courts inferior to the Supreme Court. Supreme Court review of a decision by the Court of Appeals upon an appeal from it to the Supreme Court as a matter of right, pursuant to § 7A-30, is similarly limited. State v. Williams, 274 N.C. 328, 163 S.E.2d 353 (1968); Peaseley v. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co., 282 N.C. 585, 194 S.E.2d 133 (1973); State v. Miller, 282 N.C. 633, 194 S.E.2d 353 (1973).

The Supreme Court reviews the decision of the Court of Appeals for errors of law allegedly committed by it and properly brought forward for review. State v. Parrish, 275 N.C. 69, 165 S.E.2d 230 (1969); State v. Miller, 282 N.C. 633, 194 S.E.2d 353 (1973).

The Supreme Court will not ordinarily pass upon a constitutional question unless it affirmatively appears that such question was timely raised and passed upon in the trial court if it could have been, or in the Court of Appeals if the question arose after the trial. State v. Parrish, 275 N.C. 69, 165 S.E.2d 230 (1969).

When the Supreme Court grants certiorari pursuant to this section, review is ordinarily restricted to the rulings of the Court of Appeals which are assigned as error in the petition for certiorari and brought forward in petitioner's brief. State v. Muse, 280 N.C. 31, 185 S.E.2d 214 (1971), cert. denied, 406 U.S. 974, 92 S. Ct. 2409, 32 L. Ed. 2d 674, rehearing denied, 409 U.S. 898, 93 S. Ct. 99, 34 L. Ed. 2d 157 (1972).

In a criminal case in which the State petitioned for certiorari and the Court of Appeals ruled on only one of defendant's assignments of error in granting a new trial, the Supreme Court elected to depart from the general rule (that review under this section is ordinarily restricted to the rulings of the Court of Appeals which are assigned as error) and to consider the remaining assignments of error not considered by the Court of Appeals. State v. Muse, 280 N.C. 31, 185 S.E.2d 214 (1971), cert. denied, 406 U.S. 974, 92 S. Ct. 2409, 32 L. Ed. 2d 674, rehearing denied, 409 U.S. 898, 93 S. Ct. 99, 34 L. Ed. 2d 157 (1972).

As a general rule the Supreme Court will consider only those aspects of a decision of the Court of Appeals which are assigned as error in the petition for certiorari and which are preserved by argument or the citation of authority with reference thereto in the brief filed by the petitioner in the Supreme Court. Peaseley v. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co., 282 N.C. 585, 194 S.E.2d 133 (1973).

Under this section the Supreme Court is to review only those cases of substantial general or legal importance or in which review is necessary to preserve the integrity of precedent established by the Supreme Court. Peaseley v. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co., 282 N.C. 585, 194 S.E.2d 133 (1973).

The failure of plaintiff to petition for a writ of certiorari to review the interlocutory decree of the Court of Appeals does not preclude the Supreme Court from granting certiorari after final judgment and thereupon considering and rectifying any errors which occurred at any stage of the proceedings. Spartan Leasing, Inc.

v. Brown, 285 N.C. 689, 208 S.E.2d 649 (1974).

The Supreme Court may review the entire proceedings and consider any errors which have occurred during the course of the litigation, provided that the parties have taken the proper steps to preserve the questions for appellate review. Spartan Leasing, Inc. v. Brown, 285 N.C. 689, 208 S.E.2d 649 (1974).

The denial of a writ of certiorari imports no expression of opinion upon the merits of the case and such denial does not mean that the Supreme Court has determined that the decision of the Court of Appeals is correct. Denial may simply mean that in the opinion of the Supreme Court the case does not require further review under the provisions of this section. Peaseley v. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co., 282 N.C. 585, 194 S.E.2d 133 (1973).

Where defendant in its petition for certiorari to the Supreme Court assigned as error decisions of the trial court and of the Court of Appeals throughout the course of the litigation and preserved these assignments by arguments or citation of authorities in its brief filed in the Supreme Court, the previous denials of certiorari in prior appeals to the Supreme Court in this case did not constitute approval of either the reasoning or the merits of the prior decisions of the Court of Appeals. Peaseley v. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co., 282 N.C. 585, 194 S.E.2d 133 (1973).

Section 7A-451 Does Not Give Indigent Right to Counsel. — An indigent is entitled to have a lawyer at his trial, and for direct review of that trial, but § 7A-451 is not intended to cover the discretionary power of the North Carolina Supreme Court to grant a writ of certiorari under this section. Ross v. Moffitt, 417 U.S. 600, 94 S. Ct. 2437, 41 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1974).

And Equal Protection Clause Does Not Require Free Counsel for Discretionary Appeals. — The equal protection clause does not require North Carolina to provide free counsel for indigent defendants seeking to take discretionary appeals to the North Carolina Supreme Court, or to file petitions for certiorari to the Supreme Court. Ross v. Moffitt, 417 U.S. 600, 94 S. Ct. 2437, 41 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1974).

The duty of the State is not to duplicate the legal arsenal that may be privately retained by a criminal defendant in a continuing effort to reverse his conviction, but only to assure the indigent defendant an adequate opportunity to present his claims fairly in the context of the State's appellate process. Ross v. Moffitt, 417 U.S. 600, 94 S. Ct. 2437, 41 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1974).

A defendant is not denied meaningful access to the North Carolina Supreme Court simply because the State does not appoint counsel to aid him in seeking discretionary review in that court. At that stage he will have a transcript or other record of trial proceedings, a brief on his behalf in the Court of Appeals setting forth his claims of error, and often an opinion by the Court of Appeals disposing of his case. These materials, supplemented by whatever submission respondent may make pro se, would appear to provide the Supreme Court of North Carolina with an adequate basis on which to base its decision to grant or deny review. Ross v. Moffitt, 417 U.S. 600, 94 S. Ct. 2437, 41 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1974).

Equally Divided Court. — Where one member of the Supreme Court does not participate in the consideration or decision of a case, and the remaining six justices are equally divided as to whether the decision of the Court of Appeals should be affirmed or reversed, the decision of the Court of Appeals is affirmed without becoming a precedent. Greenhill v. Crabtree, 301 N.C. 520, 271 S.E.2d 908 (1980); Wayfaring Home, Inc. v. Ward, 301 N.C. 518, 272 S.E.2d 121 (1980).

(a) The Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals have jurisdiction, exercisable by any one of the justices or judges of the respective courts, to issue the writ of habeas corpus upon the application of any person described in G.S. 17-3, according to the practice and procedure provided therefor in chapter 17 of the General Statutes, and to rule of the Supreme Court.

(b) The Supreme Court has jurisdiction, exercisable by one justice or by such number of justices as the court may by rule provide, to issue the prerogative writs, including mandamus, prohibition, certiorari, and supersedeas, in aid of its own jurisdiction or in exercise of its general power to supervise and control the proceedings of any of the other courts of the General Court of Justice. The practice and procedure shall be as provided by statute or rule of the Supreme Court, or, in the absence of statute or rule, according to the practice and procedure of the common law.

(c) The Court of Appeals has jurisdiction, exercisable by one judge or by such number of judges as the Supreme Court may by rule provide, to issue the prerogative writs, including mandamus, prohibition, certiorari, and supersedeas, in aid of its own jurisdiction, or to supervise and control the proceedings of any of the trial courts of the General Court of Justice, and of the Utilities Commission and the Industrial Commission. The practice and procedure shall be as provided by statute or rule of the Supreme Court, or, in the absence of statute or rule, according to the practice and procedure of the common law. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Appeal by Trustees of Charitable Trust. — Although an appeal by the trustees of a charitable trust was subject to dismissal on the ground that there were no parties aggrieved by the order of the superior court modifying the trust, the Court of Appeals nonetheless can consider the appeal, in the exercise of its supervisory power, where the order will affect the interests of a substantial number of public and private hospitals in the State, as well as thousands of persons who will be hospitalized as charity patients. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 9 N.C. App. 460, 176 S.E.2d 860 (1970).

Review of Judicial Disciplinary Proceedings. — Under Constitution Article IV, § 12 and this section, the courts of the appellate division have power to review judicial disciplinary proceedings whether the attorney or the State has prevailed in the trial court. In re Palmer, 296 N.C. 638, 252 S.E.2d 784 (1979).

State Must Seek Review of Disciplinary Proceedings by Writ of Certiorari. — The State may seek review by the appellate division of proceedings disciplining attorneys under the judicial method. However, the State may not appeal in such cases as a matter of right but must seek appellate review by petition for writ of certiorari. In re Palmer, 296 N.C. 638, 252 S.E.2d 784 (1979).

Relief Where Issue Not Presented in Brief. — Plaintiff's failure to present and argue in its brief to the Court of Appeals the propriety of the trial court's judgment as to attorney fees precluded plaintiff from obtaining relief on this point in the Court of Appeals as a matter of right; however, the Court of Appeals, in the exercise of its general supervisory powers under subsection (c) of this section or pursuant to Appellate Rule 2, could consider on its own initiative the question of the attorney fees award and give relief as a matter of appellate grace. ARTICLE 6.

Retirement of Justices and Judges of the Appellate Division; Retirement Compensation; Recall to Emergency Service; Disability Retirement.

(a) As herein used "justice of the Supreme Court" includes the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court and "judge of the Court of Appeals" includes the Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals, unless the context clearly indicates a contrary intent.

(b) As used herein, "emergency justice" or "emergency judge" means any justice of the Supreme Court or any judge of the Court of Appeals, respectively, who has retired subject to recall for temporary service in the place of any active member of the court from which he retired. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

§ 7A-39.2. Age and service requirements for retirement of justices of the Supreme Court and judges of the Court of Appeals.

(a) Any justice of the Supreme Court or judge of the Court of Appeals who has attained the age of 65 years, and who has served for a total of 15 years, whether consecutive or not, on the Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals, or the superior court, or as Administrative Officer of the Courts, or in any combination of these offices, may retire from his present office and receive for life compensation equal to two thirds of the annual salary from time to time received by the occupant or occupants of the office from which he retired.

(b) Any justice of the Supreme Court or judge of the Court of Appeals who has attained the age of 65 years, and who has served as justice or judge, or both, in the Appellate Division for 12 consecutive years may retire and receive for life compensation equal to two thirds of the annual salary from time to time received by the occupant or occupants of the office from which he retired.

(c) Any justice or judge of the Appellate Division, who has served for a total of 24 years, whether continuously or not, as justice of the Supreme Court, judge of the Court of Appeals, judge of the superior court, or Administrative Officer of the Courts, or in any combination of these offices, may retire, regardless of age, and receive for life compensation equal to two thirds of the annual salary from time to time received by the occupant or occupants of the office from which he retired. In determining eligibility for retirement under this subsection, time served as a district solicitor of the superior court prior to January 1, 1971, may be included, provided the person has served at least eight years as a justice, judge, or Administrative Officer of the Courts, or in any combination of these offices. (1967, c. 108, s. 1; 1971, c. 508, s. 2.)

§ 7A-39.3. Retired justices and judges may become emergency justices and judges subject to recall to active service; compensation for emergency justices and judges on recall.

(a) Justices of the Supreme Court and judges of the Court of Appeals who have not reached the mandatory retirement age specified in G.S. 7A-4.20, but who have retired under the provisions of G.S. 7A-39.2, or under the Uniform Judicial Retirement Act after having completed 15 years of creditable service, may apply as provided in G.S. 7A-39.6 to become emergency justices and emergency judges of the court from which they retired, and upon being commissioned as an emergency justice or emergency judge shall be subject to temporary recall to active service on that court in the place of any justice of the Supreme Court or judge of the Court of Appeals, respectively, who is temporarily incapacitated to the extent that he cannot perform efficiently and promptly all the duties of his office.

(b) In addition to the compensation or retirement allowance he would otherwise be entitled to receive by law, each emergency justice or emergency judge recalled for temporary active service shall be paid by the State his actual expenses, plus seventy-five dollars ($75.00) for each day of active service rendered upon recall. (1967, c. 108, s. 1; 1973, c. 640, s. 3; 1977, c. 736, s. 1; 1979, c. 884, s. 1; 1981, c. 455, s. 3; c. 859, s. 46.)

Cross References. — For the Uniform Judicial Retirement Act, see §§ 135-50 to 135-71.

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1981 amendment ratified May 26, 1981, and effective on ratification, added to subsection (b) a sentence reading as follows: "However, no recalled retired or emergency justice or judge shall receive from the State total annual compensation for judicial services in excess of that received by an active justice or judge of the bench to which the justice or judge is recalled."

The second 1981 amendment, ratified July 8, 1981, and effective July 1, 1981, deleted "which" following "retirement allowed" near the beginning of subsection (b), and substituted "seventy-five dollars ($75.00) for each day" for "one hundred dollars ($100.00) for each week" near the end of subsection (b).

Session Laws 1981, c. 859, s. 46, provides "G.S. 7A-39.3(b) is amended to read:" and sets out the subsection without incorporating the sentence added by Session Laws 1981, c. 455, s. 3. The first 1981 amendment has therefore not been given effect in the text of subsection (b) as set out above.

Session Laws 1981, c. 859, s. 97, contains a severability clause.

The retirement of any justice of the Supreme Court or any judge of the Court of Appeals under the provisions of this Article shall create a vacancy in his office to be filled as provided by law. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

§ 7A-39.5. Recall of emergency justice or emergency judge upon temporary incapacity of a justice or judge.

(a) Upon the request of any justice of the Supreme Court who has been advised in writing by a reputable and competent physician that he is temporarily incapable of performing efficiently and promptly all the duties of his office, the Chief Justice may recall any emergency justice who, in his opinion, is competent to perform the duties of an associate justice, to serve temporarily in the place of the justice in whose behalf he is recalled; provided, that when the incapacity of a justice of the Supreme Court is such that he cannot request the recall of an emergency justice to serve in his place, an order of recall may be issued by the Chief Justice upon satisfactory medical proof of the facts upon which the order of recall must be based. Orders of recall shall be in writing and entered upon the minutes of the court.

(b) Upon the request of any judge of the Court of Appeals who has been advised in writing by a reputable and competent physician that he is temporarily incapable of performing efficiently and promptly all the duties of his office, the Chief Judge may recall any emergency judge who, in his opinion, is competent to perform the duties of a judge of the Court of Appeals, to serve temporarily in the place of the judge in whose behalf he is recalled; provided, that when the incapacity of a judge of the Court of Appeals is such that he cannot request the recall of an emergency judge to serve in his place, an order of recall may be issued by the Chief Judge upon satisfactory medical proof of the facts upon which the order of recall must be based. Orders of recall shall be in writing and entered upon the minutes of the court. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

No retired justice of the Supreme Court or retired judge of the Court of Appeals may become an emergency justice or emergency judge except upon his written application to the Governor certifying his desire and ability to serve as an emergency justice or emergency judge. If the Governor is satisfied that the applicant qualifies under G.S. 7A-39.3(a) to become an emergency justice or emergency judge and that he is physically and mentally able to perform the official duties of an emergency justice or emergency judge, he shall issue to such applicant a commission as an emergency justice or emergency judge of the court from which he retired. The commission shall be effective upon the date of its issue and shall terminate when the judge to whom it is issued reaches the maximum age for judicial service under G.S. 7A-4.20(a). (1967, c. 108, s. 1; 1977, c. 736, s. 2; 1979, c. 884, s. 2.)

An emergency justice or emergency judge shall not have or possess any jurisdiction or authority to hear arguments or participate in the consideration and decision of any cause or perform any other duty or function of a justice of the Supreme Court or judge of the Court of Appeals, respectively, except while serving under an order of recall and in respect to appeals, motions, and other matters heard, considered, and decided by the court during the period of his temporary service under such order; and the justice of the Supreme Court or judge of the Court of Appeals in whose behalf an emergency justice or emergency judge is recalled to active service shall be disqualified to participate in the consideration and decision of any question presented to the court by appeal, motion or otherwise in which any emergency justice or emergency judge recalled in his behalf participated. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

The Supreme Court shall prescribe rules respecting the filing of opinions prepared by an emergency justice or an emergency judge after his period of temporary service has expired, and any other matter deemed necessary and consistent with the provisions of this Article. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

§ 7A-39.9. Chief Justice and Chief Judge may recall and terminate recall of justices and judges; procedure when Chief Justice or Chief Judge incapacitated.

(a) The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court and the Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals are vested with authority to issue orders of recall to emergency justices and judges, respectively, and to perform any and all other acts deemed necessary to effectuate the purposes of this Article, and their decisions, when not in conflict herewith, shall be final.

(b) The Chief Justice or Chief Judge, may, at any time, in his discretion, cancel any order of recall issued by him or fix the termination date thereof.

(c) Whenever the Chief Justice is the justice in whose behalf an emergency justice is recalled to temporary service, the powers vested in him as Chief Justice by this article shall be exercised by the associate justice senior in point of time served on the Supreme Court. Whenever the Chief Judge is the judge in whose behalf an emergency judge is recalled to temporary service the powers vested in him as Chief Judge by this article shall be exercised by the associate judge senior in point of time served on the Court of Appeals. If two or more judges have served the same length of time on the Court of Appeals, the eldest shall be deemed the senior judge. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

All provisions of this Article shall apply to every justice of the Supreme Court who has heretofore retired and is receiving compensation as an emergency justice. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

Every justice of the Supreme Court or judge of the Court of Appeals who has served for eight years or more on the Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals, or the superior court, or as Administrative Officer of the Courts, or in any combination of these offices, and who while in active service becomes totally and permanently disabled so as to be unable to perform efficiently the duties of his office, and who retires by reason of such disability, shall receive for life compensation equal to two thirds of the annual salary from time to time received by the occupant or occupants of the office from which he retired. In determining whether a judge is eligible for retirement under this section, time served as district solicitor of the superior court prior to January 1, 1971, may be included. Whenever any justice or judge claims retirement benefits under this section on account of total and permanent disability, the Governor and Council of State, acting together, shall, after notice and an opportunity to be heard is given the applicant, by a majority vote of said body, make findings of fact from the evidence offered. Such findings of fact shall be reduced to writing and entered upon the minutes of the Council of State. The findings so made shall be conclusive as to such matters and determine the right of the applicant to retirement benefits under this section. Justices and judges retired under the provisions of this section are not subject to recall as emergency justices or judges. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

The provisions of G.S. 7A-39.2 and 7A-39.11 shall apply only to justices and judges who entered into office prior to January 1, 1974. The extent of such application is specified in Chapter 135, Article 4 (Uniform Judicial Retirement Act). (1973, c. 640, s. 5.)

§ 7A-39.13. Recall of active and emergency justices and judges who have reached mandatory retirement age.

Justices and judges retired because they have reached the mandatory retirement age, and emergency justices and judges whose commissions have expired because they have reached the mandatory retirement age, may be temporarily recalled to active service under the following circumstances:

(1) The justice or judge must consent to the recall.

(2) The Chief Justice is authorized to recall retired justices, and the Chief Judge is authorized to recall retired judges of the Court of Appeals each to serve on the court from which retired.

(3) The period of recall shall not exceed six months, but it may be renewed for an additional six months if the emergency for which the recall was ordered continues.

(4) Prior to recall, the Chief Justice or the Chief Judge, as the case may be, shall satisfy himself that the justice or judge being recalled is capable of efficiently and promptly performing the duties of the office to which recalled.

(5) Recall is authorized only to replace an active justice or judge who is temporarily incapacitated.

(6) Jurisdiction and authority of a recalled justice or judge is as specified in G.S. 7A-39.7.

(7) The Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, as the case may be, shall prescribe rules respecting the filing of opinions prepared by a retired justice or judge after his period of temporary service has expired, and respecting any other matter deemed necessary and consistent with this section.

(8) Compensation of recalled retired justices and judges is the same as for recalled emergency justices and judges under G.S. 7A-39.3(b).

(9) Recall shall be evidenced by a commission signed by the Chief Justice or Chief Judge, as the case may be. (1981, c. 455, s. 2.)

SUBCHAPTER III. SUPERIOR COURT DIVISION OF THE GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE.

ARTICLE 7.

Organization.

The Superior Court Division of the General Court of Justice consists of the several superior courts of the State. The clerk of superior court in the exercise of the judicial power conferred upon him as ex officio judge of probate, and in the exercise of other judicial powers conferred upon him by law in respect of special proceedings and the administration of guardianships and trusts, is a judicial officer of the Superior Court Division, and not a separate court. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 4; 1971, c. 377, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — This section was originally § 7A-39.1. It was transferred and renumbered § 7A-42 by Session Laws 1967, c. 691, s. 1, effective July 1, 1967. It was again transferred, and renumbered § 7A-40, by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 4, effective July 1, 1969.

In a district having more than one regular resident judge, the judge who has the most continuous service on the superior court is the senior regular resident superior court judge. If two judges are of equal seniority, the oldest judge is the senior regular resident judge. In a single-judge district, the single judge is the senior regular resident judge.

Senior regular resident judges and regular resident judges possess equal judicial jurisdiction, power, authority and status, but all duties placed by the Constitution or statutes on the resident judge of a judicial district, including the appointment to and removal from office, which are not related to a case, controversy or judicial proceeding and which do not involve the exercise of judicial power, shall be discharged by the senior regular resident judge. A senior regular resident superior court judge in a multi-judge district, by notice in writing to the Administrative Officer of the Courts, may decline to exercise the authority vested in him by this section, in which event such authority shall be exercised by the regular resident judge next senior in point of service or age, respectively.

In the event the senior regular resident judge of a multi-judge district is unable, due to mental or physical incapacity, to exercise the authority vested in him by the statute, and the Chief Justice, in his discretion, has determined that such incapacity exists, the Chief Justice shall appoint an acting senior regular resident judge from the other regular resident judges of the district, to exercise, temporarily, the authority of the senior regular resident judge. Such appointee shall serve at the pleasure of the Chief Justice and until his temporary appointment is vacated by appropriate order. (1969, c. 1171, ss. 1-3; c. 1190, s. 4; 1971, c. 377, s. 5; c. 997; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; c. 646; c. 855, s. 1; 1975, c. 529; c. 956, ss. 1, 2; 1975, 2nd Sess., c. 983, s. 114; 1977, c. 1119, ss. 1, 3, 4; c. 1130, ss. 1, 2; 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1238, s. 1; c. 1243, s. 4; 1979, c. 838, s. 119; c. 1072, s. 1; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1221, s. 1; 1981, c. 964, ss. 1, 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, c. 1119, s. 2, effective July 1, 1977, provides: "The additional judges authorized in section 1 of this act shall be appointed by the Governor and shall take office on July 1, 1977. The successors of the Governor's appointees shall be chosen in the manner prescribed by law for other resident superior court judges in the general election of 1978 to serve for the unexpired portion of the term of eight years which began as of January 1, 1977, and their successors shall be chosen thereafter in the manner and serve for terms as prescribed for other resident superior court judges."

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1980, increased by one the number of full-time assistant district attorneys in the seventh, thirteenth and sixteenth judicial districts.

The 1981 amendment, effective Sept. 1, 1981, substituted "34 judicial districts" for "33 judicial districts" in the first paragraph, and substituted the listings for judicial districts 17A and 17B for a listing for judicial district 17. The amendment also increased by one the number of resident judges in the twenty-first judicial district, increased by one the number of full-time assistant district attorneys in the fourth, seventh, ninth, tenth, thirteenth, ninetheenth-A, twenty-first, and thirtieth judicial districts, and increased by two the number of full-time assistant district attorneys in the first and eighth judicial districts.

Session Laws 1981, c. 964, s. 2(b) provides:

"All positions authorized by this act for Judicial Districts 17A and 17B are effective September 1, 1981.

"Effective September 1, 1981, the current resident superior court judge assigned to the seventeenth judicial district is allocated to judicial district 17B. The additional resident superior court judge authorized by this subsection for judicial district 17A shall be appointed by the Governor pursuant to subsection (d) of this section.

"Effective September 1, 1981, two of the four current assistant district attorneys allocated to the district attorney in the seventeenth judicial/prosecutorial district are allocated to the district attorney in judicial/prosecutorial district 17A and the remaining two to the district attorney in judicial/prosecutorial district 17B."

Session Laws 1981, c. 964, s. 2(d), provides: "The vacancies in the judgeships authorized by this section shall be filled by appointments by the Governor. The appointees shall serve until the first day of January, 1983. The appointees' successors shall be chosen in the general election of November 1982, to serve an eight-year term beginning the first day of January, 1983."

(a) Sessions of the superior court shall be held in each city in the State which is not a county seat and which has a population of 35,000 or more, according to the 1960 federal census.

(b) For the purpose of segregating the cases to be tried in any city referred to in subsection (a), and to designate the place of trial, the clerk of superior court in any county having one or more such cities shall set up a criminal docket and a civil docket, which dockets shall indicate the cases and proceedings to be tried in each such city in his county. Such dockets shall bear the name of the city in which such sessions of court are to be held, followed by the word "Division." Summons in actions to be tried in any such city shall clearly designate the place of trial.

(c) For the purpose of determining the proper place of trial of any action or proceeding, whether civil or criminal, the county in which any city described in subsection (a) is located shall be divided into divisions, and the territory embraced in the division in which each such city is located shall consist of the township in which such city lies and all contiguous townships within such county, such division of the superior court to be known by the name of such city followed by the word "Division." All laws, rules, and regulations now or hereafter in force and effect in determining the proper venue as between the superior courts of the several counties of the State shall apply for the purpose of determining the proper place of trial as between such divisions within such county and as between each of such divisions and any other county of the superior court in North Carolina.

(d) The clerk of superior court of any county with an additional seat of superior court may, but shall not be required to, hear matters in any place other than at his office at the county seat.

(e) The grand jury for the several divisions of court of any county in which a city described in subsection (a) is located shall be drawn from the whole county, and may hold hearings and meetings at either the county seat or elsewhere within the county as it may elect, or as it may be directed by the judge holding any session of superior court within such county; provided, however, that in arranging the sessions of the court for the trial of criminal cases for any county in which any such city is located a session of one week or more shall be held at the county seat preceding any session of one week or more to be held in any such city, so as to facilitate the work of the grand jury, and so as to confine its meetings to the county seat as fully as may be practicable. All petit jurors for all sessions of court in the several divisions of such county shall be drawn, as now or hereafter provided by law, from the whole of the county in which any such city is located for all sessions of courts in the several divisions of such county.

(f) Special sessions of court for the trial of either civil or criminal cases in any city described in subsection (a) may be arranged as by law now or hereafter provided for special sessions of the superior court.

(g) All court records of all such divisions of the superior court of any such county shall be kept in the office of the clerk of the superior court at the county seat, but they may be temporarily removed under the direction and supervision of the clerk to any such division or divisions. No judgment or order rendered at any session held in any such city shall become a lien upon or otherwise affect the title to any real estate within such county until it has been docketed in the office of the clerk of the superior court at the county seat as now or may hereafter be provided by law; provided, that nothing herein shall affect the provisions of G.S. 1-233 and the equities therein provided for shall be preserved as to all judgments and orders rendered at any session of the superior court in any such city.

(h) It shall be the duty of the board of county commissioners of the county in which any such city is located to provide a suitable place for holding such sessions of court, and to provide for the payment of the extra expense, if any, of the sheriff and his deputies in attending the sessions of court of any such division, and the expense of keeping, housing and feeding prisoners while awaiting trial. A judge of the superior court, regular or special, shall receive the annual salary set forth in the Budget Appropriations Act, and in addition shall be paid the same travel allowance as State employees generally by G.S. 138-6(a)(1) and (2), provided that no travel allowance be paid for travel within his county of residence. In addition, a judge of the superior court shall be allowed five thousand five hundred dollars ($5,500) per year, payable monthly, in lieu of necessary subsistence expenses while attending court or transacting official business at a place other than in the county of his residence and in lieu of other professional expenses incurred in the discharge of his official duties. The Administrative Officer of the Courts may also reimburse superior court judges, in addition to the above funds for travel and subsistence, for travel and subsistence expenses incurred for professional education. Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 7-42. It was revised and transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 36.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1980, rewrote the former first sentence as the present first and second sentences of the section.

Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1137, s. 77, contains a severability clause.

The 1981 amendment, effective Jan. 1, 1981, substituted "other professional expenses" for "other professional education expenses" near the end of the second sentence.

CASE NOTES

Additional Compensation Part of Salary. — Additional compensation of one hundred dollars given to a superior court judge by the former wording of § 7-42 for services in holding a special term was a part of his salary. Buxton v. Commissioners of Rutherford, 82 N.C. 91 (1880).

The senior regular superior court judge of each judicial district is authorized to appoint a judicial secretary to serve the secretarial and clerical needs of the superior court judges of the district under the direction of the senior regular resident superior court judge. The appointment may be full- or part-time and the compensation and allowances of such secretary shall be fixed by the senior regular resident superior court judge, within limits determined by the Administrative Office of the Courts, and paid by the State. (1975, c. 956, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — Additional secretarial positions are created by Session Laws 1981, c. 964, s. 5.

(a) The Governor may appoint eight special superior court judges. A special judge takes the same oath of office and is subject to the same requirements and disabilities as is or may be prescribed by law for regular judges of the superior court, save the requirement of residence in a particular district. Initial appointments made under this section shall be to terms of office beginning July 1, 1967, and expiring June 30, 1971. As the terms expire, the Governor may appoint successors for terms of four years each. All incumbents shall continue in office until their successors are appointed and qualified.

(b) A special judge is subject to removal from office for the same causes and in the same manner as a regular judge of the superior court, and a vacancy occurring in the office of special judge is filled by the Governor by appointment for the unexpired term.

(c) A special judge, in any court in which he is duly appointed to hold, has the same power and authority in all matters whatsoever that a regular judge holding the same court would have. A special judge, duly assigned to hold the court of a particular county, has during the session of court in that county, in open court and in chambers, the same power and authority of a regular judge in all matters whatsoever arising in that judicial district that could properly be heard or determined by a regular judge holding the same session of court.

(d) A special judge is authorized to settle cases on appeal and to make all proper orders in regard thereto after the time for which he was commissioned has expired. (1927, c. 206, ss. 1, 2, 5, 7; 1929, c. 137, ss. 1, 2, 5, 7; 1931, c. 29, ss. 1, 2, 5, 7; 1933, c. 217, ss. 1, 2, 5, 7; 1935, c. 97, ss. 1, 2, 5, 7; 1937, c. 72, ss. 1, 2, 5, 7; 1939, c. 31, ss. 1, 2, 5, 7; 1941, c. 51, ss. 1, 2, 5, 7; 1943, c. 58, ss. 1, 2, 5, 7; 1945, c. 153, ss. 1, 2, 5, 7; 1947, c. 24, ss. 1, 2, 5, 7; 1949, c. 681, ss. 1, 2, 5, 7; 1951, c. 78, s. 1; c. 1119, ss. 1, 2, 5, 7; 1953, c. 1322, ss. 1, 2, 5, 7; 1955, c. 1016, s. 1; 1959, c. 465; 1961, c. 34; 1963, c. 1170; 1969, c. 1190, s. 41; 1973, c. 82.)

Editor's Note. — This section combines former §§ 7-54, 7-55, 7-58 and 7-60. The provisions of the former sections were rewritten, combined and transferred to their present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 41.

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited in the following annotation were decided under former §§ 7-54, 7-55, 7-58 and 7-60.

No Jurisdiction When Not Holding Term of Court. — A special or emergency judge has no authority to determine a controversy without action at chambers when not holding a term of court. Greene v. Stadiem, 197 N.C. 472, 149 S.E. 685 (1929). See Bohannon v. Virginia Trust Co., 198 N.C. 702, 153 S.E. 263 (1930).

Special Judge May Hear Matter Out of Term by Consent. — Once having acquired jurisdiction at term a special or emergency judge, by consent, may hear the matter out of term nunc pro tunc. Shepard v. Leonard, 223 N.C. 110, 25 S.E.2d 445 (1943).

Judicial Notice of Appointment as Special Judge. — The appellate court will take judicial notice on appeal of the appointment of a certain person as a special judge. Greene v. Stadiem, 197 N.C. 472, 149 S.E. 685 (1929).

When necessary for the determination of a case on appeal, the appellate court will take judicial notice of the counties comprising a judicial district, and that a judge holding a term in one of the counties was a special judge appointed by the Governor. Reid v. Reid, 199 N.C. 740, 155 S.E. 719 (1930).

Motions in Cause Made at Term. — Civil actions pending on the civil issue docket of a county are always subject to motion in the cause. These motions may be made before the judge at term. In many instances they may be made out of term. When made at term the judge presiding, whether regular or special, has jurisdiction. To this extent this section has full constitutional sanction. Shepard v. Leonard, 223 N.C. 110, 25 S.E.2d 445 (1943).

Proceeding to Obtain Custody of Child. — A special judge has concurrent jurisdiction with the judge of the district to hear and determine a proceeding instituted by the mother of a child to obtain its custody, provided the proceeding can be heard and judgment rendered during the term of court the special judge is commissioned to hold. In re Cranford, 231 N.C. 91, 56 S.E.2d 35 (1949).

Motion for Alimony. — Where a special judge has been authorized under commission of the Governor to hold a term of court in only one county of a district, he may not issue an order for alimony, attorney's fees and costs in a proceeding in an action for divorce a vinculo pending in another county of the district and continued to be heard before a judge regularly holding the terms of court in that district. Public Laws 1929, c. 137, under which the special judge was commissioned, provided that writs, orders and notices should be returnable before special judges only in the county where the suit, proceeding or other cause was pending, unless such special judge was then holding the courts of that district, in which case the same might be returnable before him as before the regular judge. Reid v. Reid, 199 N.C. 740, 155 S.E. 719 (1930).

Whenever it appears to the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court that there is need for a special session of superior court in any county, he may order a special session in that county, and order any regular, special, or emergency judge to hold such session. The Chief Justice shall notify the clerk of the superior court of the county, who shall initiate action under Chapter 9 of the General Statutes to provide a jury for the special session, if a jury is required.

Special sessions have all the jurisdiction and powers that regular sessions have. (R. C., c. 31, s. 22; 1868-9, c. 273; 1876-7, c. 44; Code, ss. 914, 915, 916; Rev., ss. 1512, 1513, 1516; C. S., ss. 1450, 1452, 1455; Ex. Sess. 1924, c. 100; 1951, c. 491, ss. 1, 3; 1959, c. 360; 1969, c. 1190, s. 46.)

Editor's Note. — This section combines former §§ 7-78, 7-80 and 7-83. The former sections were revised, combined and transferred to their present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 46.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited in the following annotation were decided under former §§ 7-78, 7-80 and 7-83.

Constitutionality. — See State v. Ketchey, 70 N.C. 621 (1874).

The power to order special terms is not restricted to instances where there is accumulation of business, nor when such fact is recited as a reason in the commission is the power of the judge restricted to the trial of indictments found before that term. State v. Register, 133 N.C. 746, 46 S.E. 21 (1903).

No reason need be assigned by the Governor (now the Chief Justice) for calling special terms. State v. Watson, 75 N.C. 136 (1876). He is the sole judge of the evidence necessitating such action. State v. Lewis, 107 N.C. 967, 12 S.E. 457, 13 S.E. 247 (1890).

Regular Order Presumed. — When it appears from the record that a cause was tried at a special term of a superior court, it is presumed prima facie that an order for holding it was duly made, and that it was duly held. Sparkman v. Daughtry, 35 N.C. 168 (1851).

Plea Denying Existence of Court. — A plea of the defendant that the court was unlawfully called because the Governor (now the Chief Justice) was absent from the State when he attempted to order the holding of the court is properly overruled. State v. Hall, 142 N.C. 710, 55 S.E. 806 (1906).

Appointment of Judge. — When the Governor (now the Chief Justice) has ordered a special term to be held in any county of this State, it is his duty to appoint one of the judges of the superior court to hold such term, and to issue to the judge appointed by him a commission authorizing him to hold such court. State v. Baxter, 208 N.C. 90, 179 S.E. 450 (1935).

Court Held Outside Judge's District. — A judge specially commissioned to hold court in a certain county outside his district has the same jurisdiction of matters transferred to that court, by consent, from another county, as the judge of the district comprising both counties. Henry v. Hilliard, 120 N.C. 479, 27 S.E. 130 (1897).

Arraignment at Regular Term Not Required. — It is not necessary that a prisoner should be arraigned and plead at a preceding regular term to the special term at which he is tried. State v. Ketchey, 70 N.C. 621 (1874).

Removal of Cause. — A superior court at a special term has the same power to remove a cause to another county that it has at a regular term. Sparkman v. Daughtry, 35 N.C. 168 (1851).

Judgment by Default. — Whether at a regular or special term of the court, notice to the adverse party of a motion in term for judgment by default for want of an answer is not necessary. Reynolds v. Greensboro Boiler & Mach. Co., 153 N.C. 342, 69 S.E. 248 (1910).

Applied in State v. Boykin, 211 N.C. 407, 191 S.E. 18 (1937).

A regular superior court judge, duly assigned to hold the courts of a county, or holding such courts by exchange, shall have the same powers in the district in open court and in chambers as the resident judge or any judge regularly assigned to hold the courts of the district has, and his jurisdiction in chambers shall extend until the session is adjourned or the session expires by operation of law, whichever is later. (1951, c. 740; 1969, c. 1190, s. 42.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 7-61.1. It was revised and transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 42.

In any case in which the superior court in vacation has jurisdiction, and all the parties unite in the proceedings, they may apply for relief to the superior court in vacation, or during a session of court, at their election. The resident judge of the judicial district and any special superior court judge residing in the district and the judge regularly presiding over the courts of the district have concurrent jurisdiction in all matters and proceedings in which the superior court has jurisdiction out of session; provided, that in all matters and proceedings not requiring a jury or in which a jury is waived, the resident judge of the district and any special superior court judge residing in the district shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the judge holding the courts of the district and the resident judge and any special superior court judge residing in the district in the exercise of such concurrent jurisdiction may hear and pass upon such matters and proceedings in vacation, out of session or during a session of court. (1871-2, c. 3; Code, c. 10, s. 230; Rev., s. 1501; C. S., s. 1438; 1939, c. 69; 1945, c. 142; 1951, c. 78, s. 2; 1969, c. 1190, s. 47.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 7-65. It was revised and transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 47.

CASE NOTES

"Vacation" or "in Chambers" Jurisdiction Generally. — "It may be said that a regular judge holding the courts of the district has general jurisdiction of all 'in chambers' matters arising in the district. The general 'vacation' or 'in chambers' jurisdiction of a regular judge arises out of his general authority. Usually it may be exercised anywhere in the district and it is never dependent upon and does not arise out of the fact that he is at the time presiding over a designated term of court or in a particular county. As to him, it is limited, ordinarily, to the district to which he is assigned by statute. It may not be exercised even within the district of his residence except when specially authorized by statute." Baker v. Varser, 239 N.C. 180, 79 S.E.2d 757 (1954).

Matters and proceedings not requiring the intervention of a jury, or in which trial by jury has been waived, may be heard in vacation. In re Burton, 257 N.C. 534, 126 S.E.2d 581 (1962).

Consent of Parties Required. — A judge has no power to render judgment after the expiration of the term of court without the consent of parties. Hardin v. Ray, 89 N.C. 364 (1883).

By consent, the superior court can grant judgment in civil cases in vacation. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 94 N.C. 174 (1886).

After leaving the bench for a term of the superior court to expire by limitation, the judge cannot hear motions or other matters outside of the courtroom except by consent, unless they are such as are cognizable at chambers. May v. National Fire Ins. Co., 172 N.C. 795, 90 S.E. 890 (1916).

The judge holding the courts of a judicial district has authority to act in all matters within the jurisdiction of the superior court, with the consent of the parties, by signing judgments out of term and in or out of the county and out of the district. Edmundson v. Edmundson, 222 N.C. 181, 22 S.E.2d 576 (1942).

Demurrers May Be Heard in Chambers. — A special judge has jurisdiction in the county of his residence to hear and determine in chambers a demurrer to the complaint in an action pending in the county. Parker v. Underwood, 239 N.C. 308, 79 S.E.2d 765 (1954); Scott v. Scott, 259 N.C. 642, 131 S.E.2d 478 (1963).

As May Controversies without Action. — A special judge in the county of his residence has jurisdiction to hear and determine in chambers a controversy without action. Scott v. Scott, 259 N.C. 642, 131 S.E.2d 478 (1963).

And Motions for Judgment of Voluntary Nonsuit. — A resident judge has jurisdiction to hear and determine in chambers a motion for judgment of voluntary nonsuit. Scott v. Scott, 259 N.C. 642, 131 S.E.2d 478 (1963).

And Actions Involving Title to Bank Accounts. — A regular judge has jurisdiction to hear and determine in chambers an action involving title to a bank account in which the answer raised no issues of fact. Scott v. Scott, 259 N.C. 642, 131 S.E.2d 478 (1963).

Interlocutory Order. — The superior court has power to make an amendment to an interlocutory order in an ancillary proceeding out of term. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 94 N.C. 174 (1886).

Resident judge issued order to defendant wife to appear outside county and outside district to show cause why temporary order awarding custody of children to husband should not be made permanent. It was held that the judge was without jurisdiction to hear the matter outside the district, and an order issued upon the hearing of the order to show cause was void ab initio. Patterson v. Patterson, 230 N.C. 481, 53 S.E.2d 658 (1949).

Mandamus Proceedings in Another District Not within Jurisdiction. — A regular judge of the superior court while assigned by rotation to hold the courts of the judicial district of his residence has no jurisdiction to hear a petition for mandamus in chambers in another judicial district to which he is not assigned to hold court. Baker v. Varser, 239 N.C. 180, 79 S.E.2d 757 (1954).

No Jurisdiction to Order Payment of Expenses Out of the Recovery. — In an action by taxpayers against public officers under § 128-10, to recover public funds unlawfully expended, plaintiffs disclaimed in their complaint any right personally to participate in the recovery. After recovery, and the entry of a consent judgment dismissing appeals, and after payment of the judgment, the resident judge, on petition of one of the original taxpayer plaintiffs, is then without jurisdiction under this section to order payments, out of the recovery, of such petitioner's expenses and counsel fees. Hill v. Stanbury, 224 N.C. 356, 30 S.E.2d 150 (1944), commented on in 23 N.C.L. Rev. 40.

Power of Resident Judge. — The resident judge of a district has no other power within such district in vacation than any other judge of the superior court. State v. Ray, 97 N.C. 510, 1 S.E. 876 (1887).

Concurring Jurisdiction of Judges. — The resident judge of a judicial district and the judge regularly presiding over the courts of the district and any special judge residing in the district have concurrent jurisdiction in all matters and proceedings wherein the superior court has jurisdiction out of term. In re Burton, 257 N.C. 534, 126 S.E.2d 581 (1962).

Same — Proceeding to Obtain Custody of Child. — A special judge has concurrent jurisdiction with the judge of the district to hear and determine a proceeding instituted by the mother of a child to obtain its custody, provided the proceeding can be heard and judgment rendered during the term of court the special judge is commissioned to hold. In re Cranford, 231 N.C. 91, 56 S.E.2d 35 (1949).

Emergency superior court judges have the same power and authority in all matters whatsoever, in the courts which they are assigned to hold, that regular judges holding the same courts would have. An emergency judge duly assigned to hold the courts of a county or judicial district has the same powers in the district in open court and in chambers as the resident judge or any judge regularly assigned to hold the courts of the district would have, but his jurisdiction in chambers extends only until the session is adjourned or the session expires by operation of law, whichever is later. (Ex. Sess. 1921, c. 94, s. 1; C. S., s. 1435(b); 1925, c. 8; 1941, c. 52, s. 2; 1951, c. 88; 1969, c. 1190, s. 39.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 7-52. It was revised and transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 39.

CASE NOTES

Limitations on Jurisdiction. — The power and authority given to emergency judges are to be exercised only "in the courts in which they are assigned to hold." The jurisdiction of an emergency judge "in chambers" terminates with the adjournment or termination of the term of court which he is assigned to hold. Lewis v. Harris, 238 N.C. 642, 78 S.E.2d 715 (1953). But the statute places no such limitation on the "in term" jurisdiction of an emergency judge. Strickland v. Kornegay, 240 N.C. 758, 83 S.E.2d 903 (1954).

When any special or emergency judge makes any matter returnable before him, and thereafter he is called upon by the Chief Justice to hold court elsewhere, he shall order the matter heard before some other judge, setting forth in the order the time and place where it is to be heard, and he shall send copies of the order to the attorneys representing the parties in such matter. (Ex. Sess. 1921, c. 94, s. 2; C. S., s. 1435(c); 1951, c. 491, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 40.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 7-53. It was revised and transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 40.

Whenever a judge before whom a motion is made, either in open court or in chambers, disqualifies himself from determining it, he may in his discretion refer the motion for disposition to the resident judge or any judge regularly holding the courts of the district or of any adjoining district, who shall have full power and authority to hear and determine the motion in the same manner as if he were the presiding judge of the district in which the cause arose. (1939, c. 48; 1961, c. 50; 1969, c. 1190, s. 43.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 7-62. It was revised and transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 43.

(a) At criminal sessions of court, motions in civil actions may be heard upon due notice, and trials in civil actions may be heard by consent of parties. Motions for confirmation or rejection of referees' reports may also be heard upon 10 days' notice and judgment may be entered on such reports. The court may also enter consent orders and consent judgments, and try uncontested civil actions.

(b) For sessions of court designated for the trial of civil cases only, no grand juries shall be drawn and no criminal process shall be made returnable to any civil session. (1901, c. 28; Rev., ss. 1507, 1508; 1913, c. 196; Ex. Sess. 1913, c. 23; 1915, cc. 68, 240; 1917, c. 13; C. S., ss. 1444, 1445; 1931, c. 394; 1947, c. 25; 1969, c. 1190, s. 44; 1973, c. 503, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — This section combines former §§ 7-72 and 7-73. The former sections were revised, combined and transferred to their present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 44.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited in the following annotation were decided under former sections 7-72 and 7-73.

Failure to Give Notice. — Due notice must be given of motions in civil actions to be heard at a criminal term of court, and where the movant failed to give the statutory notice of his motion, and the superior court ordered a dismissal of the action, the judgment was reversed on appeal. Dawkins v. Phillips, 185 N.C. 608, 116 S.E. 723 (1923).

The superior court has authority to hear motions in civil actions at criminal terms only after due notice to the adverse party, and therefore when it did not affirmatively appear that due notice was given of plaintiff's motion to be allowed to amend, the granting of the motion at a term of court for criminal cases only would be held to be error as being presumptively outside the authority of the court. Beck v. Lexington Coca-Cola Bottling Co., 216 N.C. 579, 5 S.E.2d 855 (1939).

Under § 1A-1, Rule 7, an application for default judgment is considered a motion in a civil action; therefore, where subsection (a) of this section requires notice to be given before motions in civil actions may be heard at criminal sessions of court and no notice was given defendant, default judgment granted plaintiff must be vacated. Miller v. Belk, 18 N.C. App. 70, 196 S.E.2d 44, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 665, 197 S.E.2d 874 (1973).

Motion for New Trial in Criminal Case May Not Be Determined at Civil Term. — A motion which, if allowed, would set aside a verdict and judgment in a case on the criminal docket, specifically, a motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, may not be determined at a term expressly restricted by statute as a term "for the trial of civil cases only." Such a motion is for determination at a term of the court (in which the verdict and judgment to which the motion is addressed were rendered) provided for the trial of criminal cases. In re Renfrow, 247 N.C. 55, 100 S.E.2d 315 (1957).

Contested Divorce Action at Civil Session. — The purported trial of a contested divorce action conducted over defendant's protest and in disregard of his motion for continuance for trial at a civil session was a nullity. Branch v. Branch, 282 N.C. 133, 191 S.E.2d 671 (1972).

(a) At least one week before the beginning of any session of the superior court for the trial of criminal cases, the district attorney shall file with the clerk of superior court a calendar of the cases he intends to call for trial at that session. The calendar shall fix a day for the trial of each case listed thereon. The district attorney may place on the calendar for the first day of the session all cases which will require consideration by the grand jury without obligation to call such cases for trial on that day. No case on the calendar may be called for trial before the day fixed by the calendar except by consent or by order of the court. Any case docketed after the calendar has been filed with the clerk may be placed on the calendar at the discretion of the district attorney.

(b) All witnesses shall be subpoenaed to appear on the date listed for the trial of the case in which they are witnesses. Witnesses shall not be entitled to prove their attendance for any day or days prior to the day on which the case in which they are witnesses is set for trial, unless otherwise ordered by the presiding judge.

(c) Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the authority of the court in the call of cases for trial. (1949, c. 169; 1969, c. 1190, s. 45; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 7-73.1. It was revised and transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 45.

Legal Periodicals. — For brief comment on section, see 27 N.C.L. Rev. 451.

CASE NOTES

Prosecutor Controls Calendar. — Under North Carolina practice, sanctioned by this section, the prosecutor controls the criminal calendar and decides when to set cases for trial. Shirley v. North Carolina, 528 F.2d 819 (4th Cir. 1975).

Filing of Calendar Six Days before Session. — Defendant was not prejudiced by the fact that the district attorney filed the calendar of cases to be tried six days before the beginning of the session of the court rather than a full week before the session began as required by this section, particularly where he was not tried until a full week after the calendar had been filed. State v. Miller, 42 N.C. App. 342, 256 S.E.2d 512 (1979).

No Defense Subpoenas until Case Calendared. — Until the prosecutor files his calendar, criminal defendants are unable to subpoena witnesses, for this section requires defense subpoenas to state the date of trial, a detail which, of course, cannot be known until the case is calendared. Shirley v. North Carolina, 528 F.2d 819 (4th Cir. 1975).

ARTICLE 8.

Retirement of Judges of the Superior Court; Retirement Compensation for Superior Court Judges; Recall to Emergency Service of Judges of the District and Superior Court; Disability Retirement for Judges of the Superior Court.

As used in this Article "emergency judge" means any judge of the superior court who has retired subject to recall to active service for temporary duty. (1967, c. 108, s. 2.)

§ 7A-51. Age and service requirements for retirement of judges of the superior court and of the Administrative Officer of the Courts.

(a) Any judge of the superior court, or Administrative Officer of the Courts, who has attained the age of sixty-five years, and who has served for a total of fifteen years, whether consecutive or not, as a judge of the superior court, or as Administrative Officer of the Courts, or as judge of the superior court and as Administrative Officer of the Courts combined, may retire and receive for life compensation equal to two thirds of the annual salary from time to time received by the occupant of the office from which he retired.

(b) Any judge of the superior court, or Administrative Officer of the Courts, who has served for twelve years, whether consecutive or not, as a judge of the superior court, or as Administrative Officer of the Courts, or as judge of the superior court and as Administrative Officer of the Courts combined may, at age sixty-eight, retire and receive for life compensation equal to two thirds of the annual salary from time to time received by the occupant of the office from which he retired.

(c) Any person who has served for a total of twenty-four years, whether continuously or not, as a judge of the superior court, or as Administrative Officer of the Courts, or as judge of the superior court and as Administrative Officer of the Courts combined, may retire, regardless of age, and receive for life compensation equal to two thirds of the annual salary from time to time received by the occupant of the office from which he retired. In determining whether a person meets the requirements of this subsection, time served as district attorney of the superior court prior to January 1, 1971, may be included, so long as the person has served at least eight years as a judge of the superior court, or as Administrative Officer of the Courts, or as judge of the superior court and Administrative Officer of the Courts combined.

§ 7A-52. Retired district and superior court judges may become emergency judges subject to recall to active service; compensation for emergency judges on recall.

(a) Judges of the district court and judges of the superior court who have not reached the mandatory retirement age specified in G.S. 7A-4.20, but who have retired under the provisions of G.S. 7A-51, or under the Uniform Judicial Retirement Act after having completed 15 years of creditable service, may apply as provided in G.S. 7A-53 to become emergency judges of the court from which they retired. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court may order any emergency judge of the district or superior court who, in his opinion, is competent to perform the duties of a judge of the court from which such judge retired, to hold regular or special sessions of such court, as needed. Order of assignment shall be in writing and entered upon the minutes of the court to which such emergency judge is assigned.

(b) In addition to the compensation or retirement allowance he would otherwise be entitled to receive by law, each emergency judge of the district or superior court who is assigned to temporary active service by the Chief Justice shall be paid by the State his actual expenses, plus seventy-five dollars ($75.00) for each day of active service rendered upon recall. (1967, c. 108, s. 2; 1973, c. 640, s. 4; 1977, c. 736, s. 3; 1979, c. 878, s. 2; 1981, c. 455, s. 6; c. 859, s. 47.)

Cross References. — For the Uniform Judicial Retirement Act, see §§ 135-50 through 135-71.

Effect of Amendments. The first 1981 amendment, ratified May 26, 1981, and effective on ratification, added to subsection (b) a sentence reading as follows "No recalled retired trial judge shall receive from the State total annual compensation for judicial services in excess of that received by an active judge of the bench to which the judge is recalled."

The second 1981 amendment, ratified July 8, 1981, and effective July 1, 1981, deleted "which" following "retirement allowed" near the beginning of subsection (b), and substituted "seventy-five dollars ($75.00) for each day" for "one hundred dollars ($100.00) for each week" near the end of subsection (b).

Session Laws 1981, c. 859, s. 47, provides "G.S. 7A-52(b) is amended to read:" and sets out the subsection without incorporating the sentence added by Session Laws 1981, c. 455, s. 6. The first 1981 amendment has therefore not been given effect in the text of subsection (b) as set out above.

Session Laws 1981, c. 859, s. 97, contains a severability clause.

No retired judge of the district or superior court may become an emergency judge except upon his written application to the Governor certifying his desire and ability to serve as an emergency judge. If the Governor is satisfied that the applicant qualifies under G.S. 7A-52(a) to become an emergency judge and that he is physically and mentally able to perform the official duties of an emergency judge, he shall issue to such applicant a commission as an emergency judge of the court from which he retired. The commission shall be effective upon the date of its issue and shall terminate when the judge to whom it is issued reaches the maximum age for judicial service under G.S. 7A-4.20(a). (1967, c. 108, s. 2; 1977, c. 736, s. 4; 1979, c. 878, s. 3.)

Emergency district court judges have the same power and authority in all matters whatsoever, in the courts which they are assigned to hold, that regular district court judges holding the same courts would have. An emergency district court judge duly assigned to hold district court in a particular county or district has the same powers in the county or district in open court and in chambers as a resident district court judge or any district court judge regularly assigned to hold district court in that district, but his jurisdiction in chambers extends only until the session is adjourned or the session expires by operation of law, whichever is later. (1981, c. 455, s. 5.)

All judges of the superior court who have heretofore retired and who are receiving retirement compensation under the provisions of any judicial retirement law previously enacted shall be entitled to the benefits of this article. All such judges shall be subject to assignment as emergency judges by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, except judges retired for total disability. (1967, c. 108, s. 2.)

Every judge of the superior court or Administrative Officer of the Courts who has served for eight years or more on the superior court, or as Administrative Officer of the Courts, or on the superior court and as Administrative Officer of the Courts combined, and who while in active service becomes totally and permanently disabled so as to be unable to perform efficiently the duties of his office, and who retires by reason of such disability, shall receive for life compensation equal to two thirds of the annual salary from time to time received by the occupant of the office from which he retired. In determining whether a person meets the requirements for retirement under this section, time served as district solicitor of the superior court prior to January 1, 1971, may be included. Whenever any judge claims retirement benefits under this section on account of total and permanent disability, the Governor and Council of State, acting together, shall, after notice and an opportunity to be heard is given the applicant, by a majority vote of said body, make findings of fact from the evidence offered. Such findings of fact shall be reduced to writing and entered upon the minutes of the Council of State. The findings so made shall be conclusive as to such matters and determine the right of the applicant to retirement benefits under this section. Judges retired under the provisions of this section are not subject to recall as emergency judges. (1967, c. 108, s. 2.)

The provisions of G.S. 7A-51 and 7A-55 shall apply only to judges (and any Administrative Officer of the Courts) who entered office prior to January 1, 1974. The extent of such application is specified in Chapter 135, Article 4 (Uniform Judicial Retirement Act). (1973, c. 640, s. 6; 1975, c. 19, s. 2.)

Superior and district court judges retired because they have reached the mandatory retirement age, and emergency superior and district court judges whose commissions have expired because they have reached the mandatory retirement age, may be recalled to preside over regular or special sessions of the court from which retired under the following circumstances:

(1) The judge must consent to the recall.
(2) The Chief Justice is authorized to order the recall.
(3) Prior to ordering recall, the Chief Justice shall satisfy himself that the recalled judge is capable of efficiently and promptly discharging the duties of the office to which recalled.
(4) Jurisdiction of a recalled retired superior court judge is as set forth in G.S. 7A-48, and jurisdiction of a recalled retired district court judge is as set forth in G.S. 7A-53.1.

(5) Orders of recall and assignment shall be in writing and entered upon the minutes of the court to which assigned.
(6) Compensation of recalled retired trial judges is the same as for recalled emergency trial judges under G.S. 7A-52(b). (1981, ch. 455, s. 4.)

The current district attorney of the twenty-seventh prosecutorial district shall become the district attorney of Prosecutorial District 27-B, and the senior regular resident superior court judge shall appoint a district attorney for Prosecutorial District 27-A. The appointee shall serve until January 1, 1977, and his successor shall be chosen in the general election of November, 1976. The successor shall serve for the remainder of the term expiring December 31, 1978.

Editor's Note. — New secretarial positions are created and allocated to the district attorneys in certain districts by Session Laws 1979, c. 1072, s. 6; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1221, s. 5; 1981, c. 964, s. 9.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment added "except as provided in this section" at the end of the first sentence of subsection (a), and added the fourth and fifth paragraphs of subsection (b).

The district attorney shall prepare the trial dockets, prosecute in the name of the State all criminal actions requiring prosecution in the superior and district courts of his district, advise the officers of justice in his district, and perform such duties related to appeals to the Appellate Division from his district as the Attorney General may require. Effective January 1, 1971, the district attorney shall also represent the State in juvenile cases in which the juvenile is represented by an attorney. Each district attorney shall devote his full time to the duties of his office and shall not engage in the private practice of law. (1967, c. 1049, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 5; 1971, c. 377, s. 5.1; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

Cross References. — As to interchangeability of terms "solicitor" and "district attorney," see § 7A-66.1.

CASE NOTES

The proper role of the district attorney or privately employed counsel in the prosecution of one charged with a criminal offense is the conviction of the guilty, the acquittal of the innocent and punishment of the guilty, appropriate to the circumstances, in the interest of the future protection of society. In the discharge of his duties the prosecuting attorney is not required to be, and should not be, neutral. He is not the judge, but the advocate of the State's interest in the matter at hand. State v. Best, 280 N.C. 413, 186 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

This section makes the office of district attorney a full-time job. State v. Best, 280 N.C. 413, 186 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

But this Article did not change the role of the district attorney in a criminal case to that of an impartial officer of the court. State v. Best, 280 N.C. 413, 186 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

This Article Does Not Prohibit Practice of Employing Private Counsel to Assist District Attorney. — This Article does not prohibit the practice of employing private counsel to assist the district attorney in a criminal case. State v. Best, 280 N.C. 413, 186 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

However, the district attorney should not relinquish the duties of his office to privately employed counsel but should remain in charge of and responsible for the prosecution of criminal actions and, except for the most compelling reasons, the trial judge should not permit the district attorney to abdicate his duties. State v. Page, 22 N.C. App. 435, 206 S.E.2d 771, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 763, 209 S.E.2d 287 (1974).

Allowing Special Counsel Is within Discretion of Trial Court. — It is within the discretion of the trial court to allow special counsel to aid the prosecuting attorney in the prosecution of a case. State v. Best, 280 N.C. 413, 186 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

The discretion vested in the trial judge to permit private counsel to appear with the district attorney has existed in our courts from their incipiency. State v. Page, 22 N.C. App. 435, 206 S.E.2d 771, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 763, 209 S.E.2d 287 (1974).

Selectivity Required in Preparation of Trial Calendar. — It is the district attorney's statutory duty to prepare the trial docket and prosecute criminal actions in the name of the State. In order to properly perform this duty, he must exercise selectivity in preparing the trial calendar. State v. Cherry, 298 N.C. 86, 257 S.E.2d 551 (1979).

Holding Delinquency Hearing in Absence of District Attorney. — A contention by a juvenile who was represented by counsel that the trial court erred in proceeding with a delinquency hearing in the absence of the district attorney in that the court was cast in the role of a prosecutor was held without merit where the record showed that someone other than the judge examined witnesses of both the petitioner and the juvenile, and that the questions asked by the court were fair and demonstrated no bias. § 7A-62. Acting district attorney.

When a district attorney becomes for any reason unable to perform his duties, the Governor shall appoint an acting district attorney to serve during the period of disability. An acting district attorney has all the power, authority and duties of the regular district attorney. He shall take the oath of office prescribed for the regular district attorney, and shall receive the same compensation as the regular district attorney. (1967, c. 1049, s. 1; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

Each district attorney shall be entitled to the number of full-time assistant district attorneys set out in this Subchapter, to be appointed by the district attorney, to serve at his pleasure. A vacancy in the office of assistant district attorney shall be filled in the same manner as the initial appointment. An assistant district attorney shall take the same oath of office as the district attorney, and shall perform such duties as may be assigned by the district attorney. He shall devote his full time to the duties of his office and shall not engage in the private practice of law during his term. (1967, c. 1049, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 6; 1971, c. 377, s. 6; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Duties of Assistant District Attorneys. — The legislative intent and the statutory provisions contemplate that an assistant district attorney is fully authorized to carry out such duties of the district attorney as the district attorney may assign to him. State v. Rimmer, 25 N.C. App. 637, 214 S.E.2d 225, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 250, 217 S.E.2d 674 (1975).

When criminal cases accumulate on the dockets of the superior or district courts of a district beyond the capacity of the district attorney and his full-time assistants to keep the dockets reasonably current, the Administrative Officer of the Courts may, on request of the district attorney, supported by facts indicating the need for assistance:

(1) Temporarily assign an assistant district attorney from another district, after consultation with the district attorney thereof, to assist in the prosecution of cases in the requesting district; or

(2) Authorize the temporary appointment, by the requesting district attorney, of a qualified attorney to assist the requesting district attorney.

The length of service and compensation of such temporary appointee shall be fixed by the Administrative Officer of the Courts in each case. (1967, c. 1049, s. 1; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

Stated in State v. Best, 280 N.C. 413, 186 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Temporary District Attorney Is Full-Time Public Office as of January 1, 1971. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. John C.W. Gardner, 41 N.C.A.G. 192 (1970).

The annual salary of district attorneys and full-time assistant district attorneys shall be as provided in the Budget Appropriations Act. When traveling on official business, each district attorney and assistant district attorneys is entitled to reimbursement for his subsistence and travel expenses to the same extent as State employees generally. (1967, c. 1049, s. 1; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

The following are grounds for suspension of a district attorney or for his removal from office:

(1) Mental or physical incapacity interfering with the performance of his duties which is, or is likely to become, permanent;

(2) Willful misconduct in office;

(3) Willful and persistent failure to perform his duties;

(4) Habitual intemperance;

(5) Conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude;

(6) Conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brings the office into disrepute; or

(7) Knowingly authorizing or permitting an assistant district attorney to commit any act constituting grounds for removal, as defined in subdivisions (1) through (6) hereof.

A proceeding to suspend or remove a district attorney is commenced by filing with the clerk of superior court of the county where the district attorney resides a sworn affidavit charging the district attorney with one or more grounds for removal. The clerk shall immediately bring the matter to the attention of the senior regular resident superior court judge for the district, who shall within 30 days either review and act on the charges or refer them for review and action within 30 days to another superior court judge residing in or regularly holding the courts of the district. If the superior court judge upon review finds that the charges if true constitute grounds for suspension, and finds probable cause for believing that the charges are true, he may enter an order suspending the district attorney from performing the duties of his office until a final determination of the charges on the merits. During the suspension the salary of the district attorney continues. If the superior court judge finds that the charges if true do not constitute grounds for suspension or finds that no probable cause exists for believing that the charges are true, he shall dismiss the proceeding.

If a hearing, with or without suspension, is ordered, the district attorney should receive immediate written notice of the proceedings and a true copy of the charges, and the matter shall be set for hearing not less than 10 days nor more than 30 days thereafter. The matter shall be set for hearing before the judge who originally examined the charges or before another regular superior court judge resident in or regularly holding the courts of the district. The hearing shall be open to the public. All testimony shall be recorded. At the hearing the superior court judge shall hear evidence and make findings of fact and conclusions of law and if he finds that grounds for removal exist, he shall enter an order permanently removing the district attorney from office, and terminating his salary. If he finds that no grounds exist, he shall terminate the suspension, if any.

The district attorney may appeal from an order of removal to the Court of Appeals on the basis of error of law by the superior court judge. Pending decision of the case on appeal, the district attorney shall not perform any of the duties of his office. If, upon final determination, he is ordered reinstated either by the appellate division or by the superior court upon remand his salary shall be restored from the date of the original order of removal. (1967, c. 1049, s. 1; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; c. 148, s. 1; 1977, c. 21, ss. 1, 2.)

§ 7A-66.1. Office of solicitor may be denominated as office of district attorney; "solicitor" and "district attorney" made interchangeable; interchangeable use authorized in proceedings, documents, and quotations.

(a) The constitutional office of solicitor may be denominated as the office of "district attorney" for all purposes, and the terms "solicitor" and "district attorney" shall be identical in meaning and interchangeable in use. All terms derived from or related to the term "solicitor" may embody this denomination.

(b) Repealed by Session Laws 1975, c. 956, s. 5.

(c) The interchangeable use authorized in this section includes use in all forms of oral, written, visual, and other communication including:

(1) Oaths of office;

(2) Other oaths or orations required or permitted in court or official proceedings;

(3) Ballots;

(4) Statutes;

(5) Regulations;

(6) Ordinances;

(7) Judgments and other court orders and records;

(8) Opinions in cases;

(9) Contracts;
(10) Bylaws;
(11) Charters;
(12) Official commissions, orders of appointment, proclamations, executive orders, and other official papers or pronouncements of the Governor or any executive, legislative, or judicial official of the State or any of its subdivisions;
(13) Official and unofficial letterheads;
(14) Campaign advertisements;
(15) Official and unofficial public notices; and
(16) In all other contexts not enumerated.

The interchangeability authorized in this section extends to the privilege of substituting terminology in matter quoted in oral, written, and other modes of communication without making indication of such change, except where such change may result in a substantive misunderstanding. Reprints or certifications of the text of the Constitution of North Carolina made by the Secretary of State, however, must retain the original terminology and indicate in brackets beside the original terminology the appropriate alternative words. Special Regulations.

(a) Court reporting personnel shall be utilized if available, for the reporting of trials in the superior court. If court reporters are not available in any county, electronic or other mechanical devices shall be provided by the Administrative Office of the Courts upon the request of the senior regular resident superior court judge.

(b) The Administrative Office of the Courts shall from time to time investigate the state of the art and techniques of recording testimony, and shall provide such electronic or mechanical devices as are found to be most efficient for this purpose.

(c) If an electronic or other mechanical device is utilized, it shall be the duty of the clerk of the superior court or some person designated by the clerk to operate the device while a trial is in progress, and the clerk shall thereafter preserve the record thus produced, and transcribe the record as required. If stenotype, shorthand, or stenomask equipment is used, the original tapes, notes, discs or other records are the property of the State, and the clerk shall keep them in his custody.

If the judge of a superior court shall not be present to hold any session of court at the time fixed therefor, he may order the sheriff to adjourn the court to any day certain during the session, and on failure to hear from the judge it shall be the duty of the sheriff to adjourn the court from day to day, unless he shall be sooner informed that the judge for any reason cannot hold the session. (Code, s. 926; 1887, c. 13; 1901, c. 269; Rev., s. 1510; C. S., s. 1448; 1969, c. 1190, s. 49.)

CASE NOTES

Presumption of Adjournment. — Where the record recited that a regular term of a superior court was opened and held Wednesday, instead of on Monday, of the week fixed by the statutes, it was presumed that the sheriff had duly opened the court and adjourned it from day to day as provided in this section. State v. Weaver, 104 N.C. 758, 10 S.E. 486 (1889).

All Matters Carried Over. — This section by operation of law carries all matters over to the next term, in the same plight and condition. State v. Horton, 123 N.C. 695, 31 S.E. 218 (1898).

Newly Elected Judge. — Where a newly elected judge, as successor to one who was to have held the spring term of a court ordered the sheriff to adjourn the court from day to day, not exceeding four days, to enable him to take the oath of office and preside, and the sheriff qualified and held the court, his acts were valid either as those of an officer de jure or as those of an officer de facto, and an exception to the validity of a trial of an action on that ground was untenable. State v. Harden, 177 N.C. 580, 98 S.E. 782 (1919).

Duty of Defendant to Attend Special Term. — A defendant bound over to answer a criminal charge at a regular term of the superior court, which term is not held in consequence of the absence of the judge, is required to attend an intervening special term subsequently appointed and held. State v. Horton, 123 N.C. 695, 31 S.E. 218 (1898).

Clerk of Superior Court.

§ 7A-100. Election; term of office; oath; vacancy; office and office hours; appointment of acting clerk.

(a) A clerk of the superior court for each county shall be elected by the qualified voters thereof, to hold office for a term of four years, in the manner prescribed by Chapter 163 of the General Statutes. The clerk, before entering on the duties of his office, shall take the oath of office prescribed by law. If the office of clerk of superior court becomes vacant otherwise than by the expiration of the term, or if the people fail to elect a clerk, the senior regular resident superior court judge for the county shall fill the vacancy by appointment until an election can be regularly held. In cases of death or resignation of the clerk, the senior regular resident superior court judge, pending appointment of a successor clerk, may appoint an acting clerk of superior court for a period of not longer than 30 days.

(b) The county commissioners shall provide an office for the clerk in the courthouse or other suitable place in the county seat. The clerk shall observe such office hours and holidays as may be directed by the Administrative Officer of the Courts. (Const., art. 4, ss. 16, 17, 29; C. C. P., ss. 139-141; 1871-72, c. 136; Code, ss. 74, 76, 78, 80, 114, 115; 1903, c. 467; Rev., ss. 890-893, 895, 909, 910; C.S., ss. 926, 930, 931, 945, 946; 1935, c. 348; 1939, c. 82; 1941, c. 329; 1949, c. 122, ss. 1, 2; 1971, c. 363, s. 1; 1973, c. 240.)

Editor's Note. — This section combines former §§ 2-2, 2-5, 2-6, 2-24, and 2-25. The former sections were revised, combined and transferred to their present position by Session Laws 1971, c. 363, s. 1, effective Oct. 1, 1971.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited in the following annotation were decided under former §§ 2-2, 2-5, 2-6, 2-24 and 2-25.

Commissioners' Duty. — A failure on the part of the clerk to give bond must be ascertained by the commissioners before the judge is authorized to declare a vacancy. And in accepting or rejecting the bond tendered, the court cannot interfere in the exercise of their discretion. Buckman v. Commissioners of Beaufort, 80 N.C. 121 (1879).

Conflicting Claimants for Vacant Office. — Where there are conflicting claimants for a vacant office a court must act upon the prima facie evidence of right and admit the one possessing it, leaving the other to pursue the proper legal remedy for the recovery of possession. Clark v. Carpenter, 81 N.C. 309 (1879).

Term of Appointee. — When there is a vacancy and the judge appoints one to fill that vacancy, such appointee holds office only until the next election at which members of the General Assembly are chosen. Rodwell v. Rowland, 137 N.C. 617, 50 S.E. 319 (1905).

The clerk of superior court is a full-time employee of the State and shall receive an annual salary, payable in equal monthly installments, based on the population of the county, as determined by the 1970 federal decennial census, according to the following schedule:

Population	Salary
Less than 19,999	$19,056
20,000 to 49,999	22,536
50,000 to 99,999	25,992
200,000 and above	35,808

When a county changes from one population group to another as a result of any future decennial census, the salary of the clerk shall be changed to the salary appropriate for the new population group on July 1 of the first full biennium subsequent to the taking of the census (July 1, 1981; July 1, 1991; etc.), except that the salary of an incumbent clerk shall not be decreased by any change in population group during his continuance in office.

The clerk shall receive no fees or commission by virtue of his office. The salary set forth in this section is the clerk's sole official compensation, but if, on June 30, 1975, the salary of a particular clerk, by reason of previous but no longer authorized merit increments, is higher than that set forth in the table, that higher salary shall not be reduced during his continuance in office. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 5; 1969, c. 1186, s. 3; 1971, c. 877, ss. 1, 2; 1973, c. 571, ss. 1, 2; 1975, c. 956, s. 7; 1975, 2nd Sess., c. 983, s. 11; 1977, c. 802, s. 42; 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1136, s. 13; 1979, c. 838, s. 85; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1137, s. 12; 1981, c. 964, s. 14.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1980, increased the salaries in the table at the end of the first paragraph to their present levels from $13,656, $17,328, $20,484, $23,628, $26,784 and $32,556, respectively.

Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1137, s. 77, contains a severability clause.

The 1981 amendment deleted a listing for population less than 10,000, and substituted the listing for population less than 19,999 for a listing for population from 10,000 to 19,999.

(a) The numbers and salaries of assistant clerks, deputy clerks, and other employees in the office of each clerk of superior court shall be determined by the Administrative Officer of the Courts after consultation with the clerk concerned. All personnel in the clerk's office are employees of the State. The clerk appoints the assistants, deputies, and other employees in his office to serve at his pleasure. Assistant and deputy clerks shall take the oath of office prescribed for clerks of superior court, conformed to the office of assistant or deputy clerk, as the case may be.

(b) An assistant clerk is authorized to perform all the duties and functions of the office of clerk of superior court, and any act of an assistant clerk is entitled to the same faith and credit as that of the clerk. A deputy clerk is authorized to certify the existence and correctness of any record in the clerk's office, to take the proofs and examinations of the witnesses touching the execution of a will as required by G.S. 31-17, and to perform any other ministerial act which the clerk may be authorized and empowered to do, in his own name and without reciting the name of his principal. The clerk is responsible for the acts of his assistants and deputies. (1777, c. 115, s. 86; P. R.; R. C., c. 19, s. 15; Code, s. 75; 1899, c. 235, ss. 2, 3; Rev., ss. 898-900; 1921, c. 32, ss. 1-3; C. S., ss. 934(a)-934(c), 935-937; 1951, c. 159, ss. 1, 2; 1959, c. 1297; 1963, c. 1187; 1965, c. 264; c. 310, s. 1; 1971, c. 363, s. 2; 1973, c. 678.)

Editor's Note. — This section combines former §§ 2-10, 2-12, 2-13, 2-15 and 7A-102. Sections 2-10, 2-12, 2-13 and 2-15 were revised, transferred and combined with § 7A-102, which was also revised, by Session Laws 1971, c. 363, s. 2, effective Oct. 1, 1971.

Additional deputy and assistant clerk of court positions are created by Session Laws 1975, 2nd Sess., c. 983, s. 113, effective July 1, 1976; 1979, c. 1072, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1221, ss. 3, 4; 1981, c. 964, s. 7.

§ 7A-102.1. Transfer of sick leave earned as county or municipal employees by certain employees in offices of clerks of superior court.

(a) All assistant clerks, deputy clerks and other employees of the clerks of the superior court of this State, secretaries to superior court judges and district attorneys, and court reporters of the superior courts, who have heretofore been, or shall hereafter be, changed in status from county employees to State employees by reason of the enactment of Chapter 7A of the General Statutes, shall be entitled to transfer sick leave accumulated as a county employee pursuant to any county system and standing to the credit of such employee at the time of such change of status to State employee, without any maximum limitation thereof. Such earned sick leave credit shall be certified to the Administrative Office of the Courts by the official or employee responsible for keeping sick leave records for the county, and the Administrative Office of the Courts shall accord such transferred sick leave credit the same status as if it had been earned as a State employee.

(b) All clerks, assistant clerks, deputy clerks and other employees of any court inferior to the superior court which has been or may be abolished by reason of the enactment of Chapter 7A of the General Statutes, who shall thereafter become a State employee by employment in the Judicial Department, shall be entitled to transfer sick leave earned as a municipal or county employee pursuant to any municipal or county system in effect on the date said court was abolished, without any maximum limitation thereof. Such earned sick leave credit shall be certified to the Administrative Office of the Courts by the official or employee responsible for keeping sick leave records for the municipality or county, and the Adminstrative Office of the Courts shall accord such transferred sick leave credit the same status as if it had been earned as a State employee.

(c) Any employee covered by this section who retires on or after May 22, 1973, shall be given credit for all sick leave accumulated on May 22, 1973. (1967, c. 1187, ss. 1, 2; 1969, c. 1190, s. 8; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; c. 795, ss. 1-3.)

CASE NOTES

Legislature May Take Away or Modify Powers. — The powers and duties of clerks enumerated in this section are given and fixed by legislative enactment, and there is no constitutional barrier to the legislature's taking away, adding to, or modifying them; or authorizing them to be exercised and performed by another. In re Barker, 210 N.C. 617, 188 S.E. 205 (1936).

Issuance of Subpoena Duces Tecum. — It is the long-established practice of clerks of court to issue subpoenas duces tecum as a matter of course upon the oral request of counsel. The issuance of the subpoena is treated merely as a ministerial act which initiates proceedings to have the documents or other items described in the subpoena brought before the court. At the trial, the court will pass upon the competency of the evidence unless the subpoena has been quashed prior thereto. Vaughan v. Broadfoot, 267 N.C. 691, 149 S.E.2d 37 (1966).

Customary Use of Subpoena Duces Tecum. — Attorneys have customarily used the subpoena duces tecum only for the purpose for which it was intended, i.e., to require the production of a specific document or items patently material to the inquiry, or as a notice to produce the original of a document. Vaughan v. Broadfoot, 267 N.C. 691, 149 S.E.2d 37 (1966).

Within his jurisdiction the clerk of the superior court has the same power as courts of general jurisdiction to open, vacate, modify, set aside or enter as of a former time, decrees or orders of his court, and to fix time for hearings. Russ v. Woodard, 232 N.C. 36, 59 S.E.2d 351 (1950).

Jurisdiction — Limited. — The clerk of the superior court is a court of very limited jurisdiction. Russ v. Woodard, 232 N.C. 36, 59 S.E.2d 351 (1950). Such court has only such jurisdiction as is given by statute. It has no common-law or equitable jurisdiction.

McCauley v. McCauley, 122 N.C. 288, 30 S.E. 344 (1898).

Same — Corrections. — The clerk has the jurisdiction to correct a mistake in a partition proceeding. Wahab v. Smith, 82 N.C. 229 (1880); Little v. Duncan, 149 N.C. 84, 62 S.E. 770 (1908).

Or in a proceeding to subject real estate to sale for assets, after a report of the sale is returned and confirmed, he has the right to set aside the sale and order a resale by showing proper cause. Lovinier v. Pearce, 70 N.C. 167 (1874).

The power of a court upon a proper showing to correct its records and supply an inadvertent omission cannot be doubted. Philbrick v. Young, 255 N.C. 737, 122 S.E.2d 725 (1961).

Same — Administrators. — The clerk has the power, for good and sufficient cause, to remove an administrator; or for like cause, as necessarily equivalent, to permit him to resign his trust. Murrill v. Sandlin, 86 N.C. 54 (1882); Tulburt v. Hollar, 102 N.C. 406, 9 S.E. 430 (1889).

It is thus incumbent on the probate judge (now the clerk) to make inquiry, and ascertain for himself the facts upon which the legal discretion reposed in him to remove an incompetent or unfaithful officer is to be exercised. Murrill v. Sandlin, 86 N.C. 54 (1882).

Same — Accounts. — The jurisdiction for auditing accounts of executors, administrators, etc., conferred upon the clerk is an ex parte jurisdiction of examining the accounts and vouchers of such persons, allowing them commissions, etc., as formerly practiced, and does not conclude legatees, etc., or affect suits inter partes upon the same matters. Heilig v. Foard, 64 N.C. 710 (1870).

Same — Probate of Wills. — This section confers upon the clerk of the superior court exclusive and original jurisdiction of proceedings for the probate of wills. Brissie v. Craig, 232 N.C. 701, 62 S.E.2d 330 (1950); Morris v. Morris, 245 N.C. 30, 95 S.E.2d 110 (1956).

A reasonable fee for legal advice and assistance in the management of a trust estate is allowable as a necessary expense of the trust estate. Tripp v. Tripp, 17 N.C. App. 64, 193 S.E.2d 366 (1972).

Appeals. — In appeals from the clerk, in that class of cases of which he has jurisdiction in his capacity as clerk, as given under this section, it is not necessary that he should prepare and transmit to the judge any statement of the case on appeal. Ex parte Spencer, 95 N.C. 271 (1886).

Applied in Braddy v. Pfaff, 210 N.C. 248, 186 S.E. 340 (1936); In re Will of Wood, 240 N.C. 134, 81 S.E.2d 127 (1954); Potts v. Howser, 267 N.C. 484, 148 S.E.2d 836 (1966).

(a) The clerk shall not exercise any judicial powers in relation to any estate, proceeding, or civil action:

(1) If he has, or claims to have, an interest by distribution, by will, or as creditor or otherwise;

(2) If he is so related to any person having or claiming such an interest that he would, by reason of such relationship, be disqualified as a juror, but the disqualification on this ground ceases unless the objection is made at the first hearing of the matter before him;

(3) If clerk or the clerk's spouse is a party or a subscribing witness to any deed of conveyance, testamentary paper or nuncupative will, but this disqualification ceases when such deed, testamentary paper, or will has been finally admitted to probate by another clerk, or before the judge of the superior court;

(4) If clerk or the clerk's spouse is named as executor or trustee in any testamentary or other paper, but this disqualification ceases when the will or other paper is finally admitted to probate by another clerk, or before the judge of the superior court. The clerk may renounce the executorship and endorse the renunciation on the will or on some paper attached thereto, before it is propounded for probate, in which case the renunciation must be recorded with the will if it is admitted to probate.

The parties may waive the disqualification specified in subdivisions (1), (2), and (3) of this subsection, and upon the filing of such written waiver, the clerk shall act as in other cases.

(b) When any of the disqualifications specified in this section exist, and there is no waiver thereof, or when there is no renunciation under subdivision (a)(4), of this section, any party in interest may apply to the resident or presiding superior court judge for an order to remove the proceedings to the clerk of superior court of an adjoining county in the same district; or he may apply to the judge to make either in vacation or during a session of court all necessary orders and judgments in any proceeding in which the clerk is disqualified, and the judge in such cases is hereby authorized to make any and all necessary orders and judgments as if he had the same original jurisdiction as the clerk over such proceedings.

(c) In any case in which the clerk of the superior court is executor, administrator, collector, or guardian of an estate at the time of his election or appointment to office, in order to enable him to settle such estate, the resident or presiding judge of the superior court is empowered to make such orders as may be necessary in the settlement of the estate; and he may audit the accounts or appoint a commissioner to audit the accounts of such executor or administrator, and report to him for his approval, and when the accounts are so approved, the judge shall order the proper records to be made by the clerk. (C. C. P., ss. 419-421; 1871-72, cc. 196, 197; Code, ss. 104-107; Rev., ss. 902-905; 1913, c. 70, s. 1; C. S., ss. 939-942; 1935, c. 110, s. 1; 1971, c. 363, s. 4; 1977, c. 546.)

Editor's Note. — This section combines former §§ 2-17, 2-19, 2-20 and 2-21. The former sections were revised, combined and transferred to their present position by Session Laws 1971, c. 363, s. 4. Former § 7A-104 was renumbered § 7A-105 by section 10 of the same 1971 act.

CASE NOTES

The proper practice, in a proceeding against an administrator who at the time was elected clerk, seems to be to make the summons returnable before him, and then transfer the whole proceeding before the district judge, who will make the necessary orders in the premises. Wilson v. Abrams, 70 N.C. 324 (1874).

Disqualification of Interested Clerk. — The clerk is disqualified, both by common-law rules and by this section, to act in any cause wherein he is interested. Gregory v. Ellis, 82 N.C. 225 (1880); White v. Connelly, 105 N.C. 65, 11 S.E. 177 (1890); Land Co. v. Jennett, 128 N.C. 3, 37 S.E. 954 (1901).

And where he is personally interested in the commissions to be allowed the executors, he is excluded from jurisdiction. Barlow v. Norfleet, 72 N.C. 535 (1875).

The probate of a deed by a clerk interested therein is a nullity. Land Co. v. Jennett, 128 N.C. 3, 37 S.E. 954 (1901).

And when the probate of a deed is a nullity because the clerk was disqualified to act the defect is not cured by the approval of the final decree, under which it is made, by the judge of the superior court. Land Co. v. Jennett, 128 N.C. 3, 37 S.E. 954 (1901).

Same — Judicial and Ministerial Acts. — The act of "admitting to probate" is a judicial act, and a clerk is prohibited from acting on a deed or deed of trust in which he is grantor or grantee. White v. Connelly, 105 N.C. 65, 11 S.E. 177 (1890); Freeman v. Person, 106 N.C. 251, 10 S.E. 1037 (1890); Piland v. Taylor, 113 N.C. 1, 18 S.E. 70 (1893); Norman v. Ausbon, 193 N.C. 791, 138 S.E. 162 (1927).

But the issuing of a warrant in attachment, or an order for seizure of property in claim and delivery, are ministerial acts, and can be performed by a deputy, or even by the clerk, in a case to which he is a party. Evans v. Etheridge, 96 N.C. 42, 1 S.E. 633 (1887); White v. Connelly, 105 N.C. 65, 11 S.E. 177 (1890).

And it has been the practice in this State for clerks to issue process either for or against themselves. Evans v. Etheridge, 96 N.C. 42, 1 S.E. 633 (1887).

A clerk cannot take proof of a deed of which he is the subscribing witness, because he cannot administer oath to himself. Trenwith v. Smallwood, 111 N.C. 132, 15 S.E. 1030 (1892).

Same — Clerk Related to Party. — A clerk is prohibited from acting as such in relation to any estate or proceeding if he is so related to any person having, or claiming to have, such interest that he would by reason of such relationship be disqualified as a juror. Land Co. v. Jennett, 128 N.C. 3, 37 S.E. 954 (1901).

But probate and private examination taken before an officer are not invalid simply because he is related to the parties. McAllister v. Purcell, 124 N.C. 262, 32 S.E. 715 (1899).

Written Waiver of Clerk's Disqualification. — The waiver must be in writing and made when the opposing parties are present and capable of objecting. White v. Connelly, 105 N.C. 65, 11 S.E. 177 (1890).

A clerk of superior court may be suspended or removed from office for willful misconduct or mental or physical incapacity, and reinstated, under the same procedures as are applicable to a superior court district attorney, except that the procedure shall be initiated by the filing of a sworn affidavit with the chief district judge of the district in which the clerk resides, and the hearing shall be conducted by the senior regular resident superior court judge serving the county of the clerk's residence. If suspension is ordered, the judge shall appoint some qualified person to act as clerk during the period of the suspension. (1967, c. 691, s. 6; 1971, c. 363, s. 10; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; c. 148, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — The above section was formerly numbered § 7A-104. It was renumbered § 7A-105 by Session Laws 1971, c. 363, s. 10. Former § 7A-105 was renumbered § 7A-107 by the same 1971 act.

(a) It is the duty of the clerk of superior court, upon going out of office for any reason, to deliver to his successor, or such person as the senior regular resident superior court judge may designate, all records, books, papers, moneys, and property belonging to his office, and obtain receipts therefor.

(b) Any clerk going out of office or such other person having custody of the records, books, papers, moneys, and property of the office who fails to transfer and deliver them as directed shall forfeit and pay the State one thousand dollars ($1,000), which shall be sued for by the district attorney. (R. C., c. 19, s. 14; C. C. P., s. 142; Code, ss. 81, 124; Rev., ss. 906, 907; C. S., s. 943; 1971, c. 363, s. 5; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

Cross References. — As to failure to deliver as a misdemeanor, see § 14-231.

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 2-22. It was revised and transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1971, c. 363, s. 5.

CASE NOTES

Necessity of Order and Demand on Predecessor. — A person, duly elected clerk of the superior court by the people, needs no order from any person or authority to demand from his predecessor the property of all kinds belonging to the office, nor is it necessary for a retiring superior court clerk to be ordered to pay over to his successor, whether elected or appointed, the funds, etc., of the officer. Peebles v. Boone, 116 N.C. 57, 21 S.E. 187 (1895).

But where the judge places some person temporarily in charge of the office until the regular appointment is made, it is then necessary for the new clerk to have an order from the judge, directing the person temporarily in charge, to deliver the possession of his office to such clerk. Peebles v. Boone, 116 N.C. 57, 21 S.E. 187 (1895).

Ground for Right of Action. — The right of clerk of a superior court to bring an action against his predecessor on the latter's official bond to recover the records, money, etc., in his hands, does not rest on any injury done to the plaintiff, but on the ground that the law requires that each successive clerk shall receive from his predecessor all the records, money and property of his office. Peebles v. Boone, 116 N.C. 57, 21 S.E. 187 (1895).

Successor's Remedy. — When an outgoing clerk fails to deliver the property of his office, as herein provided, the successor's remedy is by attachment and suit for the penalty. O'Leary v. Harrison, 51 N.C. 338 (1859).

Two Distinct Remedies Provided. — Our statutes provide two separate and distinct remedies — one in behalf of the injured individual for a specific fund to which he is entitled or on account of a particular wrong committed against him by the clerk, as provided for in § 109-34, and one in behalf of the clerk against his predecessor in office to recover possession of records, books, papers, and money in the hands of the outgoing clerk by virtue or under color of his office, as provided for in this section. State ex rel. Underwood v. Watson, 223 N.C. 437, 27 S.E.2d 144 (1943); State ex rel. Underwood v. Watson, 224 N.C. 502, 31 S.E.2d 465 (1944).

Where Clerk Sought to Be Removed Made Affirmative Allegations. — In an action by the clerk of the superior court against his predecessor in office, for possession of records, books and funds, under this section, where defendant denied the allegations of the complaint that plaintiff was duly appointed clerk to fill a vacancy caused by the removal of defendant and qualified as such, and also made further affirmative allegation to like effect, there was error in allowing a motion to strike such affirmative allegations. State ex rel. Underwood v. Watson, 223 N.C. 437, 27 S.E.2d 144 (1943).

When Liability Ceases. — When a former clerk delivers to his successors all the proceeds, etc., of his office, his official duties, powers, and liabilities cease. Gregory v. Morisey, 79 N.C. 559 (1878).

The Administrative Officer of the Courts shall require, or purchase, in such amounts as he deems proper, individual or blanket bonds for any and all clerks of superior court, assistant clerks, deputy clerks, and other persons employed in the offices of the various clerks of superior court, or one blanket bond covering all such clerks and other persons, such bond or bonds to be conditioned upon faithful performance of duty, and made payable to the State. The premiums shall be paid by the State. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 7; 1971, c. 363, ss. 10, 11.1; c. 518, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — The above section was formerly numbered § 7A-105. It was renumbered § 7A-107 by Session Laws 1971, c. 363, s. 10.

The Administrative Office of the Courts, subject to the approval of the State Auditor, shall establish procedures for the receipt, deposit, protection, investment, and disbursement of all funds coming into the hands of the clerk of superior court. The fees to be remitted to counties and municipalities shall be paid to them monthly by the clerk of superior court.

The State Auditor shall conduct an annual post audit of the receipts, disbursements, and fiscal transactions of each clerk of superior court, and furnish a copy to the Administrative Office of the Courts. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 9; 1971, c. 363, s. 10.)

Editor's Note. — The above section was formerly numbered § 7A-103. It was renumbered § 7A-108 by Session Laws 1971, c. 363, s. 10.

(a) Each clerk shall maintain such records, files, dockets and indexes as are prescribed by rules of the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts. Except as prohibited by law, these records shall be open to the inspection of the public during regular office hours, and shall include civil actions, special proceedings, estates, criminal actions, juvenile actions, minutes of the court, judgments, liens, lis pendens, and all other records required by law to be maintained. The rules prescribed by the Director shall be designed to accomplish the following purposes:

(1) To provide an accurate record of every determinative legal action, proceeding, or event which may affect the person or property of any individual, firm, corporation, or association;

(2) To provide a record during the pendency of a case that allows for the efficient handling of the matter by the court from its initiation to conclusion and also affords information as to the progress of the case;

(3) To provide security against the loss or destruction of original documents during their useful life and a permanent record for historical uses;

(4) To provide a system of indexing that will afford adequate access to all records maintained by the clerk;

(5) To provide, to the extent possible, for the maintenance of records affecting the same action or proceeding in one rather than several units; and

(6) To provide a reservoir of information useful to those interested in measuring the effectiveness of the laws and the efficiency of the courts in administering them.

(b) The rules shall provide for indexing according to the minimum criteria set out below:

(1) Civil actions — the names of all parties;

(2) Special proceedings — the names of all parties;

(3) Administration of estates — the name of the estate and in the case of testacy the name of each devisee;

(4) Criminal actions — the names of all defendants;

(5) Juvenile actions — the names of all juveniles;

(6) Judgments, liens, lis pendens, etc. — the names of all parties against whom a lien has been created by the docketing of a judgment, notice of lien, transcript, certificate, or similar document and the names of all parties in those cases in which a notice of lis pendens has been filed with the clerk and abstracted on the judgment docket.

(c) The rules shall require that all documents received for docketing shall be immediately indexed either on a permanent or temporary index. The rules may prescribe any technological process deemed appropriate for the economical and efficient indexing, storage and retrieval of information. (Code, ss. 83, 95, 96, 97, 112, 1789; 1887, c. 178, s. 2; 1889, c. 181, s. 4; 1893, c. 52; 1899, c. 1, s. 17; cc. 82, 110; 1901, c. 2, s. 9; c. 89, s. 13; c. 550, s. 3; 1903, c. 51; c. 359, s. 6; 1905, c. 360, s. 2; Rev., s. 915; 1919, c. 78, s. 7; c. 152; c. 197, s. 4; c. 314; C. Records of Weapons Permits in Certain Counties. — Subdivision (35) of § 2-42 was repealed by Session Laws 1959, c. 1073, s. 3. The subdivision provided:

"(35) Record of permits to purchase weapons, which shall contain the name, date, place of residence, age, former place of residence, etc., of each person, firm or corporation to whom or which a permit is issued to purchase deadly weapons."

Session Laws 1959, c. 1073, s. 4, as amended from time to time, excepts the following counties from the repeal of subdivision (35): Ashe, Bertie, Duplin, Lincoln, Madison, Mitchell, Pender, Perquimans, Polk, Tyrrell, Warren, Watauga and Yancey.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited in the following annotation were decided under former § 2-42.

Purpose of Recordkeeping. — The clerk's proceedings are summary in their nature, and should always be put in such shape as to present all that he does in the course of a proceeding, including his orders and judgments, intelligently, and so that the same may be distinctly seen and understood. To this end, he is required to keep certain permanent records of proceedings before him. Edwards v. Cobb, 95 N.C. 4 (1886).

Judgment Docket Serves as Notice. — The law prescribes what shall be recorded on the judgment docket, and everybody has notice that he may find there whatever ought to be there recorded, if indeed it exists. He is not required to look elsewhere for such matters. But he is required and bound to take notice in proper connections of what is there. The law charges him with such notice. Holman v. Miller, 103 N.C. 118, 9 S.E. 429 (1889); Dewey v. Sugg, 109 N.C. 328, 13 S.E. 923 (1891).

Civil Issue Docket. — Not only issues of fact joined upon the pleadings, but also all other matters for hearing before the judge at a regular term of the court are to be put upon the civil issue docket. Brown v. Rhinehart, 112 N.C. 772, 16 S.E. 840 (1893). See Brittain v. Mull, 91 N.C. 498 (1884); Walton v. McKesson, 101 N.C. 428, 7 S.E. 566 (1888).

Minute Docket. — The minute docket is intended to and should contain a record of all the proceedings of the court, and such other entries as the judge may direct to be therein made. Walton v. McKesson, 101 N.C. 428, 7 S.E. 566 (1888); Guilford v. Board of Comm'rs, 120 N.C. 23, 27 S.E. 94 (1897).

When Minute Docket Prevails. — While in the absence of entries on the minute docket those made on the civil issue docket should not be disregarded, yet where there is a conflict between them, nothing else appearing, those on the former must prevail. Walton v. McKesson, 101 N.C. 428, 7 S.E. 566 (1888).

Record of Fiats. — Clerks are required to record in general order books copies of all fiats made by them. Perry v. Bragg, 111 N.C. 159, 16 S.E. 10 (1892).

Record of Appointments. — The record of appointments is admissible as evidence to show a guardian's appointment. Topping v. Windley, 99 N.C. 4, 5 S.E. 14 (1888).

Sufficient Notice of Lien. — A notice of a lien filed on the lien docket should go into details sufficiently so as to give reasonable notice to all persons of the character of the claim and the property upon which the lien is attached. Fulp & Linville v. Kernersville Light & Power Co., 157 N.C. 157, 72 S.E. 867 (1911). See Cook v. Cobb, 101 N.C. 68, 7 S.E. 700 (1888); Cameron v. Consolidated Lumber Co., 118 N.C. 266, 24 S.E. 7 (1896).

Former § 2-42 did not require cross-indexing of liens filed in the clerk's office and was not to be confused with the requirements for registering liens, deeds, etc., in the office of the register of deeds as provided by § 161-22, which does require cross-indexing. Saunders v. Woodhouse, 243 N.C. 608, 91 S.E.2d 701 (1956).

A lien for material and labor was properly filed where the clerk after delivery attached it in its original form to specified page in a book labeled "Lien Docket" where the book without question was the book intended as the lien docket contemplated by former § 2-42, though the book was also used for the filing of liens for old age assistance, since former § 108-30.1 (now repealed) provided that such liens should be filed in the regular lien docket. Saunders v. Woodhouse, 243 N.C. 608, 91 S.E.2d 701 (1956).

The failure of the clerk to comply with the statute by neglecting to record all or a part of the proceeding does not render the proceeding void. Any interested party may, by motion, require the proceeding to be recorded and when a part of the papers has been lost without being recorded, the proceeding does not, because of that fact, lose its vitality or cease to give the protection which the complete record would afford. State Trust Co. v. Toms, 244 N.C. 645, 94 S.E.2d 806 (1956).

Treasurer's Report as Evidence. — The record of county treasurer's report is competent evidence against the sureties upon the official bond of such officer, and is prima facie evidence of the correctness of statements therein made. Davenport v. McKee, 98 N.C. 500, 4 S.E. 545 (1887).

Recording of Verified Report Purports Verity. — Plaintiff, purchaser of the real property at execution sale of a judgment against the devisee, offered in evidence, as proof of payment and that title had vested in the devisee, a special report, duly verified, filed by the executrix stating that the devisee had paid the estate the amount stipulated by the will. This special, verified report of the executrix was a document authorized and required to be recorded, was relevant to the issue, and was competent in evidence, its recording purporting verity and objection to its admission on the ground of hearsay in that it contained a declaration of a person not a party to the action is untenable, the recorded, verified report being more than a mere declaration by the executrix. Braddy v. Pfaff, 210 N.C. 248, 186 S.E. 340 (1936).

Stated in McMillan v. Robeson County, 262 N.C. 413, 137 S.E.2d 105 (1964).

Cited in State ex rel. Unemployment Compensation Comm'n v. Willis Barber & Beauty Shop, 219 N.C. 709, 15 S.E.2d 4 (1941); Shaver v. Shaver, 248 N.C. 113, 102 S.E.2d 791 (1958); Wolfe v. Hewes, 41 N.C. App. 88, 254 S.E.2d 204 (1979).

(a) The clerk of superior court must furnish to each judge presiding over a criminal court a report listing the name, reason for confinement, period of confinement, and, when appropriate, charge or charges, amount of bail and conditions of release, and next scheduled court appearance of each person listed on the most recent report filed under the provisions of G.S. 153A-229.

(b) The clerk must file the report with superior court judges presiding over mixed or criminal sessions at the beginning of each session and must file the report with district court judges at each session or weekly, whichever is the less frequent. (1973, c. 1286, s. 5; 1975, c. 166, s. 22.)

On or before the first of May each year the clerk of superior court shall certify to the Secretary of Revenue the names and addresses of all attorneys-at-law located within the clerk's county who are engaged in the practice of law. (1931, c. 290; 1971, c. 363, s. 7; 1973, c. 476, s. 193.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly § 2-45. It was revised and transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1971, c. 363, s. 7.

(a) When a minor under 18 years of age, or an adult who is mentally incapable on account of sickness, old age, disease or other infirmity to manage his property and affairs, is named beneficiary in a policy or policies of insurance, and the insured dies prior to the majority of such minor or during the incapacity of such adult, and the proceeds of each individual policy do not exceed two thousand dollars ($2,000) such proceeds may be paid to and, if paid, shall be received by the public guardian or clerk of the superior court of the county wherein the beneficiary is domiciled. A certificate of mental incapacity, signed by a physician or reputable person who has had an opportunity to observe the mental condition of an adult beneficiary, filed with the clerk, is prima facie evidence of the mental incapacity of such adult, and authorizes the clerk to receive and administer funds under this section. The receipt of the public guardian or clerk shall be a full and complete discharge of the insurer issuing the policy or policies to the extent of the amount paid to such public guardian or clerk.

(b) Any person, firm, corporation or association having in its possession two thousand dollars ($2,000) or less for any minor child or incapacitated adult, as described in (a), for whom there is no guardian, may pay such moneys into the office of the public guardian, if any, or the office of the clerk of superior court of the county of the recipient's domicile. The clerk of the superior court is hereby authorized to receive and administer funds under this section. The clerk's receipt shall constitute a valid release of the payor's obligation to the extent of the sum delivered to the clerk.

(c) The moneys paid into the office of clerk of superior court pursuant to this section shall be disbursed only upon the order of the clerk or assistant clerk, and in the following manner:

(1) Minors. — The clerk is authorized to disburse the moneys held in such sum or sums and at such time or times as in his judgment is in the best interest of the child, except that the clerk must first determine that the parents or other persons responsible for the child's support and maintenance are financially unable to provide the necessities for such child, and also that the child is in need of maintenance and support or other necessities, including, when appropriate, education.

(2) Incapacitated Adults. — The clerk, upon finding of fact that it is in the best interest of the incapacitated adult, is authorized to disburse funds directly to a creditor or to some discreet and solvent neighbor or friend of a person mentally incapable of handling his property and affairs.

The clerk may require receipts or paid vouchers showing that the moneys disbursed under this section were used for the exclusive use and benefit of the child or incapacitated adult.

(d) The determination of incapacity authorized in subsection (a) of this section is separate and distinct from the procedure for the determination of incompetency provided in Chapter 35. Each judge shall receive the annual salary provided in the Budget Appropriations Act, and reimbursement on the same basis as State employees generally, for his necessary travel and subsistence expenses. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 10.)

The chief district judge, subject to the general supervision of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, has administrative supervision and authority over the operation of the district courts and magistrates in his district. These powers and duties include, but are not limited to, the following:

(1) Arranging schedules and assigning district judges for sessions of district courts;

(2) Arranging or supervising the calendaring of noncriminal matters for trial or hearing;

(3) Supervising the clerk of superior court in the discharge of the clerical functions of the district court;

(4) Assigning matters to magistrates, and consistent with the salaries set by the Administrative Officer of the Courts, prescribing times and places at which magistrates shall be available for the performance of their duties; however, the chief district judge may in writing delegate his authority to prescribe times and places at which magistrates in a particular county shall be available for the performance of their duties to an employee of the General Court of Justice within that particular county, and the person to whom such authority is delegated shall make monthly reports to the chief district judge of the times and places actually served by each magistrate; and

(5) Making arrangements with proper authorities for the drawing of civil court jury panels and determining which sessions of district court shall be jury sessions;

(6) Arranging for the reporting of civil cases by court reporters or other authorized means;

(7) Arranging sessions, to the extent practicable for the trial of specialized cases, including traffic, domestic relations, and other types of cases, and assigning district judges to preside over these sessions so as to permit maximum practicable specialization by individual judges;

(8) Promulgating a schedule of traffic offenses for which magistrates and clerks of court may accept written appearances, waivers of trial, and pleas of guilty, and establishing a schedule of fines therefor;

(9) Assigning magistrates during an emergency to temporary duty outside the county of their residence but within that district; and, upon the request of a chief district judge of an adjoining district and upon the approval of the Administrative Officer of the Courts, to temporary duty in the district of the requesting chief district judge; and

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — Legislative anticipation of the procedural quagmires and "judge shopping" that could result from multi-judge districts was a factor prompting the enactment of this section. Johnson v. Johnson, 7 N.C. App. 310, 172 S.E.2d 264 (1970).

Authority of Judge Other Than Chief District Judge to Hear Motions and Enter Interlocutory Orders. — Under the provisions of the first portion of § 7A-192, before a district court judge, other than the chief district judge, may hear motions and enter interlocutory orders at any session of district court in cases calendared for trial or hearing at such session, he must be first assigned by the chief district judge under the provisions of subdivision (1) of this section to preside at such session. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

In order to have authority to act on any motion, a district judge, other than the chief district judge, must be properly authorized under the provisions of this section and § 7A-192 to hold a session of court at which the matter is properly before him or under § 7A-192 to hear the matter in chambers. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

Judgment Entered by Unauthorized Judge Void. — The judgment entered by a district court judge in favor of plaintiff which directed among other things, that defendant immediately pay to plaintiff's attorney a certain sum for legal services rendered was interlocutory and was void since the district court judge who entered the order had not been assigned by the chief district judge to preside over a session of court in the county where the judgment was entered, nor was he authorized by order or rule entered by the chief judge to hear motions and enter interlocutory orders on that date. Stroupe v. Stroupe, 301 N.C. 656, 273 S.E.2d 434 (1981).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Time When Trial Session of the District Court Ends. — See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable John C. Clifford, Judge of the District Court, 21st Judicial District, 40 N.C.A.G. 117 (1969).

(a) Prior to January 1 of each year in which elections for district court judges are to be held, the Administrative Officer of the Courts may, with the approval of the chief district judge, designate one or more judgeships in districts having three or more judgeships, as specialized judgeships, naming in each case the specialty. Designations shall become effective when filed with the State Board of Elections. Nominees for the position or positions of specialist judge shall be made in the ensuing primary and the position or positions shall be filled at the general election thereafter. The State Board of Elections shall prepare primary and general election ballots to effectuate the purposes of this section.

(b) The designation of a specialized judgeship shall in no way impair the right of the chief district judge to arrange sessions for the trial of specialized cases and to assign any district judge to preside over these sessions. A judge elected to a specialized judgeship has the same powers as a regular district judge.

(c) The policy of the State is to encourage specialization in juvenile cases by district court judges who are qualified by training and temperament to be effective in relating to youth and in the use of appropriate community resources to meet their needs. The Administrative Office of the Courts is therefore authorized to encourage judges who hear juvenile cases to secure appropriate training whether or not they were elected to a specialized judgeship as provided herein. Such training shall be provided within the funds available to the Administrative Office of the Courts for such training, and judges attending such training shall be reimbursed for travel and subsistence expenses at the same rate as is applicable to other State employees.

The Administrative Office of the Courts shall develop a plan whereby a district court judge may be better qualified to hear juvenile cases by reason of training, experience, and demonstrated ability. Any district court judge who completes the training under this plan shall receive a certificate to this effect from the Administrative Office of the Courts. In districts where there is a district court judge who has completed this training as herein provided, the chief district judge shall give due consideration in the assignment of such cases where practical and feasible. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1975, c. 823; 1979, c. 622, s. 1.)

(a) The chief district judges of the various district court districts shall meet at least once a year upon call of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court to discuss mutual problems affecting the courts and the improvement of court operations, to prepare and adopt a uniform schedule of traffic offenses for which magistrates and clerks of court may accept written appearances, waivers of trial and pleas of guilty, and establish a schedule of fines therefor, and to take such further action as may be found practicable and desirable to promote the uniform administration of justice.

(b) The chief district judges shall prescribe a multicopy uniform traffic ticket and complaint for exclusive use in each county of the State not later than December 31, 1970. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 11.)

Magistrates.

A magistrate is an officer of the district court. Before entering upon the duties of his office, a magistrate shall take the oath of office prescribed for a magistrate of the General Court of Justice. A magistrate possesses all the powers of his office at all times during his term. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 13; 1977, c. 945, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

A magistrate is an officer of the district court, and in issuing a warrant a magistrate performs a judicial act. Foust v. Hughes, 21 N.C. App. 268, 204 S.E.2d 230, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 589, 205 S.E.2d 722 (1974).

And Is Not Subject to Civil Action for Errors in Discharge of His Duties. — A judge of a court of this State is not subject to civil action for errors committed in the discharge of his official duties. This immunity applies even when the judge is accused of acting maliciously and corruptly, and is not for the protection or benefit of a malicious or corrupt judge, but for the benefit of the public, whose interest it is that the judges should be at liberty to exercise their functions with independence and without fear of consequences. Thus a plaintiff failed to state a claim for false imprisonment against a magistrate by reason of any act of the magistrate in issuing warrants for plaintiff's arrest. Foust v. Hughes, 21 N.C. App. 268, 204 S.E.2d 230, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 589, 205 S.E.2d 722 (1974).

(a) The General Assembly shall establish a minimum and a maximum quota of magistrates for each county. In no county shall the minimum quota be less than one.

(b) Not earlier than the Tuesday after the first Monday nor later than the third Monday in December of each even-numbered year, the clerk of the superior court shall submit to the senior regular resident superior court judge of his district the names of two (or more, if requested by the judge) nominees for each magisterial office in the minimum quota established for the county. Not later than the fourth Monday in December, the senior regular resident superior court judge shall, from the nominations submitted by the clerk of the superior court, appoint magistrates to fill the minimum quota established for each county of his district. The term of a magistrate so appointed shall be two years, commencing on the first day in January of the calendar year next ensuing the calendar year of appointment.

(c) After the biennial appointment of the minimum quota of magistrates, additional magistrates in a number not to exceed, in total, the maximum quota established for each county may be appointed in the following manner. The chief district judge, with the approval of the Administrative Officer of the Courts, may certify to the clerk of superior court that the minimum quota is insufficient for the efficient administration of justice and that a specified additional number, not to exceed the maximum quota established for the county, is required. Within 15 days after the receipt of this certification the clerk of superior court shall submit to the senior regular resident superior court judge of his district the names of two (or more, if requested by the judge) nominees for each additional magisterial office. Within 15 days after receipt of the nominations the senior regular resident superior court judge shall from the nominations submitted appoint magistrates in the number specified in the certification. A magistrate so appointed shall serve a term commencing immediately and expiring on the same day as the terms of office of magistrates appointed to fill the minimum quota for the county.

(d) Within 30 days after a vacancy in the office of magistrate occurs the clerk of superior court shall submit to the senior regular resident superior court judge the names of two (or more, if so requested by the judge) nominees for the office vacated. Within 15 days after receipt of the nominations the senior regular resident superior court judge shall appoint from the nominations received a magistrate who shall take office immediately and shall serve for the remainder of the unexpired term. OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Judge Has Duty to Appoint Magistrates Which May Be Enforced by a Writ of Mandamus. — See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable Ralph A. Allison, Clerk of Superior Court, 40 N.C.A.G. 137 (1970).

The Administrative Officer of the Courts, after consultation with the chief district judge and pursuant to the following provisions, shall set an annual salary for each magistrate.

(1) A full-time magistrate, so designated by the Administrative Officer of the Courts, shall be paid the annual salary indicated in the table below according to the number of years he has served as a magistrate. The salary steps shall take effect on the anniversary of the date the magistrate was originally appointed:

Table of Salaries of Full-Time Magistrates

Number of prior years of service	Annual salary
Less than 1	$ 9,456
1 or more but less than 3	10,284
3 or more but less than 5	11,232
5 or more but less than 7	12,252
7 or more but less than 9	13,380
9 or more	14,640

A "Full-time magistrate" is a magistrate who is assigned to work an average of not less than 40 hours a week during his term of office.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this subdivision, a full-time magistrate, who was serving as a magistrate on December 31, 1978, and who was receiving an annual salary in excess of that which would ordinarily be allowed under the provisions of this subdivision, shall not have the salary, which he was receiving reduced during any subsequent term as a full-time magistrate. That magistrate's salary shall be fixed at the salary level from the table above which is nearest and higher than the latest annual salary he was receiving on December 31, 1978, and, thereafter, shall advance in accordance with the schedule in the table above.

(2) A part-time magistrate, so designated by the Administrative Officer of the Courts, shall receive an annual salary based on the following formula: The average number of hours a week that a part-time magistrate is assigned work during his term shall be multiplied by the annual salary payable to a full-time magistrate who has the same number of years of service prior to the beginning of that term as does the part-time magistrate and the product of that multiplication shall be divided by the number 40. The quotient shall be the annual salary payable to that part-time magistrate.

A "part-time magistrate" is a magistrate who is assigned to work an average of less than 40 hours of work a week during his term. No magistrate may be assigned an average of less than 10 hours of work a week during his term.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this subdivision, upon reappointment as a magistrate and being assigned to work the same or greater number of hours as he worked as a magistrate for a term of office ending on December 31, 1978, a person who received an annual salary in excess of that to which he would be entitled under the formula contained in this subdivision shall receive an annual salary equal to that received during the prior term. That magistrate's salary shall increase in accordance with the salary formula contained in this subdivision.

(3) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, a beginning full-time magistrate with a two-year Associate in Applied Science degree in criminal justice or paralegal training from a North Carolina community college or technical institute or the equivalent degree from a private educational institution in North Carolina, may be initially employed at the annual salary provided in the table above for a magistrate with "3 or more but less than 5" years of service; a beginning full-time magistrate with a four-year degree from an accredited senior institution of higher education may be initially employed at the annual salary provided in the table above for a magistrate with "5 or more but less than 7" years of service; a beginning full-time magistrate who holds a law degree from an accredited law school may be employed at the annual salary provided in the table for a magistrate with "7 or more but less than 9" years of service; and a beginning full-time magistrate who is licensed to practice law in North Carolina may be initially employed at the annual salary provided in the table for a magistrate with "9 or more" years of service. Seniority increments for a magistrate with a two or four-year degree or a law degree described herein accrue thereafter at two-year intervals, as provided in the table.

Magistrates with a two or four-year degree or a law degree described herein who became magistrates before July 1, 1979 are entitled to an increase of three, five and seven years, respectively, in their seniority, for pay purposes only. Full-time magistrates licensed to practice law in North Carolina who became magistrates before July 1, 1979 are entitled to the pay of a magistrate with 9 or more years of service, and part-time magistrates holding a law degree or a license to practice law as described above who became magistrates before July 1, 1979 are entitled to a proportionate adjustment in their pay. Pay increases authorized by this subdivision are not retroactive. (1977, c. 945, s. 5; 1979, c. 838, s. 84; c. 991; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1137, s. 11; 1981, c. 914, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1980, increased all salaries in subdivision (1).

Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1137, s. 77, contains a severability clause.

The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, deleted "prior to the beginning of that term" from the end of the first sentence of the introductory paragraph of subdivision (1), and added the second sentence of the introductory paragraph of subdivision (1).

Session Laws 1981, c. 914, s. 2, provides that the act shall apply to magistrates reaching their anniversary date of service on or after July 1, 1981.

(a) In order to be eligible for nomination or for renomination as a magistrate an individual must be a resident of the county for which he is appointed.

(b) To be eligible for nomination as a magistrate, an individual must have successfully completed a high school education, or have qualified for a certificate of high school equivalency, or have successfully completed the course of basic training prescribed by G.S. 7A-177.

(c) In order to be eligible for renomination as a magistrate an individual must have successfully completed the course of basic training for magistrates prescribed by G.S. 7A-177.

(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, an individual who holds the office of magistrate on July 1, 1977, shall not be required to have successfully completed the course of basic training for magistrates prescribed by G.S. 7A-177 in order to be eligible for renomination as a magistrate. (1977, c. 945, s. 6.)

Editor's Note. — This section was repealed by Session Laws 1977, c. 945, s. 5, ratified July 1, 1977, and amended by Session Laws 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1136, s. 12, ratified June 14, 1978.

(a) A magistrate may be suspended from performing the duties of his office by the chief district judge, or removal from office by the senior regular resident superior court judge or any regular superior court judge holding court in the district. Grounds for suspension or removal are the same as for a judge of the General Court of Justice.

(b) Suspension from performing the duties of the office may be ordered upon filing of sworn written charges in the office of clerk of superior court for the county in which the magistrate resides. If the chief district judge, upon examination of the sworn charges, finds that the charges, if true, constitute grounds for removal, he may enter an order suspending the magistrate from performing the duties of his office until a final determination of the charges on the merits. During suspension the salary of the magistrate continues.

(c) If a hearing, with or without suspension, is ordered, the magistrate against whom the charges have been made shall be given immediate written notice of the proceedings and a true copy of the charges, and the matter shall be set by the chief district judge for hearing before the senior regular resident superior court judge or a regular superior court judge holding court in the district. The hearing shall be held within the district not less than 10 days nor more than 30 days after the magistrate has received a copy of the charges. The hearing shall be open to the public. All testimony offered shall be recorded. At the hearing the superior court judge shall receive evidence, and make findings of fact and conclusions of law. If he finds that grounds for removal exist, he shall enter an order permanently removing the magistrate from office, and terminating his salary. If he finds that no such grounds exist, he shall terminate the suspension, if any.

(d) A magistrate may appeal from an order of removal to the Court of Appeals on the basis of error of law by the superior court judge. Pending decision of the case on appeal, the magistrate shall not perform any of the duties of his office. If, upon final determination, he is ordered reinstated, either by the appellate division or by the superior court on remand, his salary shall be restored from the date of the original order of removal. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 108, s. 4; 1973, c. 148, ss. 3, 4.)

Prior to taking office, magistrates shall be bonded, individually or collectively, in such amount or amounts as the Administrative Officer of the Courts shall determine. The bond or bonds shall be conditioned upon the faithful performance of the duties of the office of magistrate. The Administrative Officer shall procure such bond or bonds from any indemnity or guaranty company authorized to do business in North Carolina, and the premium or premiums shall be paid by the State. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

A magistrate shall keep such dockets, accounts, and other records, under the general supervision of the clerk of superior court, as may be prescribed by the Administrative Office of the Courts. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

The office of justice of the peace is abolished in each county upon the establishment of a district court therein. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Within six months of taking the oath of office as a magistrate for the first time, a magistrate is required to attend and satisfactorily complete a course of basic training of at least 40 hours in the civil and criminal duties of a magistrate. The Administrative Office of the Courts is authorized to contract with the Institute of Government or with any other qualified educational organization to conduct this training, and to reimburse magistrates for travel and subsistence expenses incurred in taking such training. All trials on the merits shall be conducted in open court and so far as convenient in a regular courtroom. All other proceedings, hearings, and acts may be done or conducted by a judge in chambers in the absence of the clerk or other court officials and at any place within the district; but no hearing may be held, nor order entered, in any cause outside the district in which it is pending without the consent of all parties affected thereby. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

This section and § 7A-192 make a distinction between the jurisdiction of the district courts and the power and authority of a district judge other than the chief district judge to act. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

And Recognize Distinction between Trial on Merits and Hearing of Motion. — This section and § 7A-192 recognize a fundamental procedural distinction between a trial on the merits and the hearing of a motion in the cause. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

A hearing on motions in a cause comes within the purview of "all other proceedings, hearings and acts" referred to in this section. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

Any district judge may hear motions and enter interlocutory orders in causes regularly calendared for trial or for the disposition of motions, at any session to which the district judge has been assigned to preside. The chief district judge and any district judge designated by written order or rule of the chief district judge, may in chambers hear motions and enter interlocutory orders in all causes pending in the district courts of the district, including causes transferred from the superior court to the district court under the provisions of this Chapter. The designation is effective from the time filed in the office of the clerk of superior court of each county of the district until revoked or amended by written order of the chief district judge. CASE NOTES

Sections 7A-190 and 7A-191 are both subject to the provisions of this section. Bowen v. Hodge Motor Co., 29 N.C. App. 463, 224 S.E.2d 699 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 292 N.C. 633, 234 S.E.2d 748 (1977).

And recognize a fundamental procedural distinction between a trial on the merits and the hearing of a motion in the cause. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

Limitations on Authority of Judge Other Than Chief Judge to Hear Motions and Enter Interlocutory Orders. — The authority of a district judge (other than the chief district judge) to hear motions and enter interlocutory orders in cases properly pending in the district court is a special authority which is limited by this section. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

Under the provisions of the first portion of this section, before a district court judge, other than the chief district judge, may hear motions and enter interlocutory orders at any session of district court in cases calendared for trial or hearing at such session, he must be first assigned by the chief district judge under the provisions of subdivision (1) of § 7A-146 to preside at such session. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

In order to have authority to act on any motion, a district judge, other than the chief district judge, must be properly authorized under the provisions of § 7A-146 and this section to hold a session of court at which the matter is properly before him, or under this section to hear the matter in chambers. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

Authority of Such Judge Must Affirmatively Appear on Record. — There is no presumption that a district judge (other than the chief district judge) has authority in chambers to hear motions and enter interlocutory orders in all cases pending in the district courts of the district; it must affirmatively appear in the record that the district judge was authorized pursuant to this section. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

Written Authorization for Hearing Motions in Chambers. — A district judge other than the chief district judge may hear motions and enter interlocutory orders during any session over which he has been assigned to preside, whether the assignment be oral or written, but he may not hear motions in chambers without written authorization. Jim Walter Homes, Inc. v. Peartree, 28 N.C. App. 709, 222 S.E.2d 706 (1976).

Chambers matters may be heard by the chief district judge at any time and place within the district, but other district judges have no authority to hear chambers matters out of session except upon written order or rule of the chief district judge. Bowen v. Hodge Motor Co., 29 N.C. App. 463, 224 S.E.2d 699 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 292 N.C. 633, 234 S.E.2d 748 (1977).

Restraining Order in Action Pending in Another County in District. — A chief judge of the district court has jurisdiction to enter, in chambers in one county, a temporary restraining order in an action pending in the district court of another county in the judicial district, to return the order for hearing before him, and to enter an order continuing the restraining order in effect in the district court of the other county until the trial of the case on its merits. Boston v. Freeman, 6 N.C. App. 736, 171 S.E.2d 206 (1969).

Temporary Restraining Order Is Interlocutory Order. — A temporary restraining order, made permanent pending trial of the cause on its merits, is an interlocutory order. Boston v. Freeman, 6 N.C. App. 736, 171 S.E.2d 206 (1969).

Judgment Entered By Unauthorized Judge is Void. — The judgment entered by a district court judge in favor of plaintiff which directed among other things, that defendant immediately pay to plaintiff's attorney a certain sum for legal services rendered was interlocutory and was void since the district court judge who entered the order had not been assigned by the chief district judge to preside over a session of court in the county where the judgment was entered, nor was he authorized by order or rule entered by the chief judge to hear motions and enter interlocutory orders on that date. Stroupe v. Stroupe, 301 N.C. 656, 273 S.E.2d 434 (1981).

Except as otherwise provided in this Chapter, the civil procedure provided in Chapters 1 and 1A of the General Statutes applies in the district court division of the General Court of Justice. Where there is reference in Chapters 1 and 1A of the General Statutes to the superior court, it shall be deemed to refer also to the district court in respect of causes in the district court division. CASE NOTES

Making Calendar for Trial of Civil Cases Discretionary. — In the superior court, making a calendar for the trial of civil cases appears to be discretionary rather than mandatory; this section makes the same rule apply to the district court. Laws v. Laws, 1 N.C. App. 243, 161 S.E.2d 40 (1968).

Separate Findings and Conclusions Required. — The rule that upon trial of an issue of fact by the court, its decision shall be in writing and shall contain a statement of the facts found and the conclusions of law separately, applies in the district court division of the General Court of Justice as well as in the superior court. Public Serv. Co. v. Beal, 5 N.C. App. 659, 169 S.E.2d 41 (1969).

This Chapter does not change the effect of § 1A-1, Rule 52(a)(1), and therefore it is necessary for the district judge who is authorized to hear a case involving the custody and support of minor children to find the facts specially and state separately his conclusions of law before entering an appropriate judgment. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 34, provides: "All statutes which refer to sections repealed or amended by the act shall be deemed, insofar as possible, to refer to those provisions of this act which accomplish the same or an equivalent purpose."

Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 35, provides: "None of the provisions of this act providing for the repeal of certain sections of the General Statutes shall constitute a reenactment of the common law."

Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 36, contains a severability clause.

Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 39, as amended by Session Laws 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1147, s. 32, provides: "This act shall become effective July 1, 1978, and applies to all matters addressed by its provisions without regard to when a defendant's guilt was established or when judgment was entered against him, except that the provisions of this act regarding parole shall not apply to persons sentenced before July 1, 1978."

(a) In civil cases in the district court there shall be a right to trial by a jury of 12 in conformity with Rules 38 and 39 of the Rules of Civil Procedure.

(b) In criminal cases there shall be no jury trials in the district court. Upon appeal to superior court trial shall be de novo, with jury trial as provided by law. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 954, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — The Rules of Civil Procedure are found in § 1A-1.

CASE NOTES

Right to Jury Trial Preserved — Civil Cases. — The right to trial by jury in civil cases in the district court is preserved by this section provided timely demand is made in one of the ways authorized by statute. Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Hayes, 10 N.C. App. 527, 179 S.E.2d 181 (1971).

Same — Criminal Cases. — The constitutional right of a defendant charged with a misdemeanor to have a jury trial is not infringed by the fact that he has first to submit to trial without a jury in the district court and then appeal to superior court in order to obtain a jury trial. State v. Sherron, 4 N.C. App. 386, 166 S.E.2d 836 (1969).

When Demand Timely. — The demand for trial by jury in a civil case is timely if made in writing not later than 10 days after the filing of the last pleading directed to the issues. Holcomb v. Holcomb, 7 N.C. App. 329, 172 S.E.2d 212 (1970); Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Hayes, 10 N.C. App. 527, 179 S.E.2d 181 (1971).

One authorized method of making the demand is by endorsement on the pleading of the party. Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Hayes, 10 N.C. App. 527, 179 S.E.2d 181 (1971).

Error to Deny Jury Trial Timely Demanded. — Defendants having made timely demand in a manner authorized by statute, it was error for the district judge to deny them a jury trial. Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Hayes, 10 N.C. App. 527, 179 S.E.2d 181 (1971).

Waiver. — The failure of a party to make a demand for jury trial within the 10-day limitation period is a waiver of the right to a jury trial. Holcomb v. Holcomb, 7 N.C. App. 329, 172 S.E.2d 212 (1970).

Transfer of Case without Notice Denied Defendant's Right to Jury Trial. — Defendant was denied its constitutional right to a jury trial where the action was transferred from the superior court division to the district court division without notice to defendant, so that defendant made no demand for jury trial in the district court within the 10-day time period formerly allowed by this section (see now § 1A-1, Rule 38), and the district court subsequently denied defendant's demand for a jury trial. Thermo-Industries v. Talton Constr. Co., 9 N.C. App. 55, 175 S.E.2d 370 (1970).

Applied in Kelly v. Davenport, 7 N.C. App. 670, 173 S.E.2d 600 (1970); Wendell Tractor & Implement Co. v. Lee, 9 N.C. App. 524, 176 S.E.2d 854 (1970); Williams v. Williams, 13 N.C. App. 468, 186 S.E.2d 210 (1972).

Unless otherwise provided in this Chapter, the provisions of Chapter 9 of the General Statutes with respect to petit jurors for the trial of civil actions in the superior court are applicable to the trial of civil actions in the district court. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

(a) Court-reporting personnel shall be utilized, if available, for the reporting of civil trials in the district court. If court reporters are not available in any county, electronic or other mechanical devices shall be provided by the Administrative Office of the Courts upon request of the chief district judge.

(b) The Administrative Office of the Courts shall from time to time investigate the state of the art and techniques of recording testimony, and shall provide such electronic or mechanical devices as are found to be most efficient for this purpose.

(c) If an electronic or other mechanical device is utilized, it shall be the duty of the clerk of the superior court or some other person designated by him to operate the device while a trial is in progress, and the clerk shall thereafter preserve the record thus produced, and transcribe the record as required. If stenotype, shorthand, or stenomask equipment is used, the original tapes, notes, discs, or other records are the property of the State, and the clerk shall keep them in his custody.

(d) Reporting of any trial may be waived by consent of the parties.

(e) Reporting will not be provided in trials before magistrates.

(f) Appointment of a reporter or reporters for district court proceedings in each district shall be made by the chief district judge. The compensation and allowances of reporters in each district shall be fixed by the chief district judge, within limits determined by the Administrative Officer of the Courts, and paid by the State. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 18.)

CASE NOTES

A hearing on a motion for alimony pendente lite is not a civil trial within the meaning of this section. Howell v. Howell, 19 N.C. App. 260, 198 S.E.2d 462 (1973).

When Motion for Services of Reporter May Be Refused. — If the case is one in which a court reporter's services can be dispensed with without prejudice, and no reporter can be found, it is not error to refuse a motion for the services of a reporter. McAlister v. McAlister, 14 N.C. App. 159, 187 S.E.2d 449, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 315, 188 S.E.2d 898 (1972).

It is not error for the trial judge to fail to appoint a stenographer where no stenographer is available and where the defendant made no motion that any other means be employed when his motion for a court reporter was denied. McAlister v. McAlister, 14 N.C. App. 159, 187 S.E.2d 449, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 315, 188 S.E.2d 898 (1972).

The absence of stenographic notes is not always fatal, even when oral testimony is introduced, if no prejudice is shown to result. McAlister v. McAlister, 14 N.C. App. 159, 187 S.E.2d 449, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 315, 188 S.E.2d 898 (1972).

§ 7A-199. Special venue rule when district court sits without jury in seat of court lying in more than one county; where judgments recorded.

(b) In any jury civil action regularly assigned for a hearing or trial before a district judge at a seat of the district court in a municipality the corporate limits of which extend into two or more contiguous counties, venue is properly laid for such jury trial if by statute or common law it is properly laid in any of the contiguous counties; provided, however, any such action shall be instituted in the county of proper venue, and the jurors summoned shall be from the county where such action was instituted. Notwithstanding the fact that the place of trial within such municipality is in a different county from the county where such action was commenced, the sheriff of the county where such action was commenced is authorized to summon the jurors to appear at such place of trial. Such jurors shall be subject to the same challenge as other jurors, except challenges for nonresidence in the county of trial.

(c) A district court judge sitting at a seat of court described in this section may, in criminal cases, conduct preliminary hearings and try misdemeanors arising within the corporate limits of the municipality plus the territory embraced within a distance of one mile in all directions therefrom.

(d) The judgment or order rendered in any civil action or juvenile matter heard or tried under the authority of this section shall be recorded in the county where the action was commenced. The judgment or finding of probable cause or other determination in any criminal action heard or tried under the authority of this section shall be recorded in the county where the offense was committed. (1967, c. 691, s. 19.)

Article 19.

Small Claim Actions in District Court.

For purposes of this Article a small claim action is a civil action wherein:

(1) The amount in controversy, computed in accordance with G.S. 7A-243, does not exceed one thousand dollars ($1,000); and

(2) The only principal relief prayed is monetary, or the recovery of specific personal property, or summary ejectment, or any combination of the foregoing in properly joined claims; and

(3) The plaintiff has requested assignment to a magistrate in the manner provided in this Article.

The seeking of the ancillary remedy of claim and delivery does not prevent an action otherwise qualifying as a small claim action under this Article from so qualifying. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1973, c. 1267, s. 1; 1979, c. 144, s. 1; 1981, c. 555, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, substituted "one thousand dollars ($1,000)" for "eight hundred dollars ($800.00)" in subdivision (1).

Legal Periodicals. — For article on defending the low-income tenant in North Carolina, see 2 N.C. Cent. L.J. 21 (1970).

CASE NOTES

Remedy of summary ejectment may be obtained in a small action heard by a magistrate. Chandler v. Cleveland Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 24 N.C. App. 455, 211 S.E.2d 484 (1975).

Cited in Porter v. Cahill, 1 N.C. App. 579, 162 S.E.2d 128 (1968).

In the interest of speedy and convenient determination, the chief district judge may, in his discretion, by specific order or general rule, assign to any magistrate of his district any small claim action pending in his district if the defendant is a resident of the county in which the magistrate resides. If there is more than one defendant, at least one of them must be a bona fide resident of the county in which the magistrate resides. (1965, c. 310, s. 1, 1967, c. 1165.)

CASE NOTES

Notwithstanding the provisions of G.S. 7A-210(2) and 7A-211, the chief district judge may in his discretion, by specific order or general rule, assign to any magistrate of his district actions to enforce motor vehicle mechanic and storage liens arising under G.S. 44A-2(d) or 20-77(d) when the claim arose in the county in which the magistrate resides. The defendant may be subjected to the jurisdiction of the court over his person by the methods provided in G.S. 7A-217 or 1A-1, Rule 4(j), Rules of Civil Procedure. (1977, c. 86, s. 1; 1979, c. 602, s. 1.)

No judgment of the district court rendered by a magistrate in a civil action assigned to him by the chief district judge is void, voidable, or irregular for the reason that the action is not one properly assignable to the magistrate under this article. The sole remedy for improper assignment is appeal for trial de novo before a district judge in the manner provided in this article. No judgment rendered by a magistrate in a civil action is valid when the action was not assigned to him by the chief district judge. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Judgment of magistrate in civil action assigned to him by chief district judge is judgment of the district court. Chandler v. Cleveland Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 24 N.C. App. 455, 211 S.E.2d 484 (1975).

Cited in Usher v. Waters Ins. & Realty Co., 438 F. Supp. 1215 (W.D.N.C. 1977).

The plaintiff files his complaint in a small claim action in the office of the clerk of superior court of the county wherein the defendant, or one of the defendants resides. The designation "Small Claim" on the face of the complaint is a request for assignment. If, pursuant to order or rule, the action is assigned to a magistrate, the clerk issues a magistrate summons substantially in the form prescribed in this Article as soon as practicable after the assignment is made. The issuance of a magistrate summons commences the action. After service of the magistrate summons on the defendant, the clerk gives written notice of the assignment to the plaintiff. The notice of assignment identifies the action, designates the magistrate to whom assignment is made, and specifies the time, date and place of trial. By any convenient means the clerk notifies the magistrate of the assignment and the setting. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 19; 1971, c. 377, s. 9.)

The time for trial of a small claim action is set not later than 30 days after the action is commenced. By consent of all parties the time for trial may be changed from the time set. For good cause shown, the magistrate to whom the action is assigned may grant continuances from time to time. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Failure of the chief district judge to assign a claim within five days after filing of a complaint requesting its assignment constitutes nonassignment. The chief district judge may sooner order nonassignment. Upon nonassignment, the clerk immediately issues summons in the manner and form provided for commencement of civil actions generally, whereupon process is served, return made, and pleadings are required to be filed in the manner provided for civil actions generally. Upon issuing civil summons, the clerk gives written notice of nonassignment to the plaintiff. The plaintiff within five days after notice of nonassignment, and the defendant before or with the filing of his answer, may request a jury trial. Failure within the times so limited to request a jury trial constitutes a waiver of the right thereto. Upon the joining of issue, the clerk places the action upon the civil issue docket for trial in the district court division. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

The complaint in a small claim action shall be in writing, signed by the party or his attorney, except the complaint in an action for summary ejectment may be signed by an agent for the plaintiff. It need be in no particular form, but is sufficient if in a form which enables a person of common understanding to know what is meant. In any event, the forms prescribed in this Article are sufficient under this requirement, and are intended to indicate the simplicity and brevity of statement contemplated. Demurrers and motions to challenge the legal and formal sufficiency of a complaint in an assigned small claim action shall not be used. But at any time after its filing, the clerk, the chief district judge, or the magistrate to whom such an action is assigned may, on oral or written ex parte motion of the defendant, or on his own motion, order the plaintiff to perfect the statement of his claim before proceeding to its determination, and shall grant extensions of time to plead and continuances of trial pending any perfecting of statement ordered. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1971, c. 377, s. 10.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article on defending the low-income tenant in North Carolina, see 2 N.C. Cent. L.J. 21 (1970).

When by order or rule a small claim action is assigned to a magistrate, the defendant may be subjected to the jurisdiction of the court over his person by the following methods:

(1) By delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to him or by leaving copies thereof at the defendant's dwelling house or usual place of abode with some person of suitable age and discretion then residing therein. When the defendant is under any legal disability, he may be subject to personal jurisdiction only by personal service of process in the manner provided by law.

(2) When the defendant is not under any legal disability and when request is made therefor by the plaintiff, service of process may be made upon the defendant by mail, as herein provided. The plaintiff requests service upon defendant by mail by endorsement in writing upon his complaint, which request shall include the address to be used in mailing. The clerk mails to the defendant at the address given in the endorsement a copy of the complaint and a magistrate summons substantially in the form provided in this Article. Service of process by mail is made by certified mail, return receipt requested, and is complete upon return to the office of the clerk of the receipt signed by the defendant. Service by mail is proved prima facie by the signature of defendant upon the return receipt. The plaintiff bears the cost of service of process by mail.

(3) When the defendant is under no legal disability, he may be subjected to the jurisdiction of the court over his person by his written acceptance of service, or by his voluntary appearance.

(4) In summary ejectment cases only, service as provided in G.S. 42-29 is also authorized. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 20; 1973, c. 90.)

At any time prior to the time set for trial, the defendant may file a written answer admitting or denying all or any of the allegations in the complaint, or pleading new matter in avoidance. No particular form is required, but it is sufficient if in a form to enable a person of common understanding to know the nature of the defense intended. A general denial of all the allegations of the complaint is permissible.

Failure of defendant to file a written answer after being subjected to the jurisdiction of the court over his person constitutes a general denial. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 20.)

No counterclaim, cross claim or third-party claim which would make the amount in controversy exceed one thousand dollars ($1,000) is permissible in a small claim action assigned to a magistrate. No determination of fact or law in an assigned small claim action estops a party thereto in any subsequent action which, except for this section, might have been asserted under the Code of Civil Procedure as a counterclaim in the small claim action. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1973, c. 1267, s. 2; 1979, c. 144, s. 2; 1981, c. 555, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, substituted "one thousand dollars ($1,000)" for "eight hundred dollars ($800.00)" in the first sentence.

There are no pleadings in assigned small claim actions other than the complaint and answer. Any new matter pleaded in avoidance in the answer is deemed denied or avoided. But on appeal from judgment of the magistrate for trial de novo before a district judge, the judge shall allow appropriate counterclaims, cross claims, third-party claims, replies, and answers to cross claims. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

By motion prior to filing answer, or in the answer, the defendant may object that the venue is improper, or move for change of venue, or object to the jurisdiction of the court over his person. These motions or objections are heard on notice by the chief district judge or a district judge designated by order or rule of the chief district judge. Assignment to the magistrate is suspended pending determination of the objection, and the clerk gives notice of the suspension by any convenient means to the magistrate to whom the action has been assigned. All these objections are waived if not made prior to the date set for trial. If venue is determined to be improper, or is ordered changed, the action is transferred to the district court of the new venue, and is not thereafter assigned to a magistrate, but proceeds as in the case of civil actions generally. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article on defending the low-income tenant in North Carolina, see 2 N.C. Cent. L.J. 21 (1970).

Trial of a small claim action before a magistrate is without a jury. The rules of evidence applicable in the trial of civil actions generally are observed. At the conclusion of plaintiff's evidence the magistrate may render judgment of dismissal if plaintiff has failed to establish a prima facie case. If a judgment of dismissal is not rendered the defendant may introduce evidence. At the conclusion of all the evidence the magistrate may render judgment or may in his discretion reserve judgment for a period not in excess of 10 days. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1971, c. 377, s. 11.)

In any small claim action demanding summary ejectment or past due rent, or both, the complaint may be signed by an agent acting for the plaintiff who has actual knowledge of the facts alleged in the complaint. If a small claim action demanding summary ejectment is assigned to a magistrate, the practice and procedure prescribed for commencement, form and service of process, assignment, pleadings, and trial in small claim actions generally are observed, except that if the defendant by written answer denies the title of the plaintiff, the action is placed on the civil issue docket of the district court division for trial before a district judge. In such event, the clerk withdraws assignment of the action from the magistrate and immediately gives written notice of withdrawal, by any convenient means, to the plaintiff and the magistrate to whom the action has been assigned. The plaintiff, within five days after receipt of the notice, and the defendant, in his answer, may request trial by jury. Failure to request jury trial within the time limited is a waiver of the right to trial by jury. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 21; 1971, c. 377, s. 12.)

Judgment in a small claim action is rendered in writing and signed by the magistrate. The judgment so rendered is a judgment of the district court, and is recorded and indexed as are judgments of the district and superior court generally. Entry is made as soon as practicable after rendition. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 21.)

From the time of docketing, the judgment rendered by a magistrate in a small claim action constitutes a lien and is subject to execution in the manner provided in Chapter 1, Article 28, of the General Statutes. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

When appeal is taken from a judgment in a small claim action, the lien acquired by docketing merges into any judgment rendered after trial de novo on appeal, continues as a lien from the first docketing, and has priority over any judgment docketed subsequent to the first docketing. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Appeal from judgment of a magistrate does not stay execution if the judgment is for recovery of specific property. Such execution may be stayed by order of the clerk of superior court upon petition by the appellant accompanied by undertaking in writing, executed by one or more sufficient sureties approved by the clerk, to the effect that if judgment be rendered against appellant the sureties will pay the amount thereof with costs awarded against the appellant. Appeal from judgment of a magistrate does stay execution if the judgment is for money damages. This section shall not require any undertaking of appellants in summary ejectment actions other than those imposed by Chapter 42 of the General Statutes. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 24, s. 1; 1977, c. 844; 1979, c. 820, s. 9.)

§ 7A-228. New trial before magistrate; appeal for trial de novo; how appeal perfected; oral notice; dismissal.

(a) With the consent of the chief district court judge, a magistrate may set aside an order or judgment for mistake or excusable neglect pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 60(b) (1) and order a new trial before a magistrate. After final disposition before the magistrate, the sole remedy for an aggrieved party is appeal for trial de novo before a district court judge. Notice of appeal may be given orally in open court upon announcement of or rendition of the judgment. If not announced in open court, notice of the appeal must be given in writing to the magistrate. The appeal must be perfected within 10 days after rendition of the judgment in the manner set out in subsection (b). Upon the announcement of the appeal in open court or upon receipt of the written notice of appeal, the magistrate shall note the appeal upon the judgment.

(b) The appeal shall be perfected by payment of the costs of the appeal and by serving a written notice of the appeal stating that the cost of the appeal has been paid on all other parties and the clerk of superior court. Failure to demand a jury is a waiver of the right thereto.

(c) Whenever such appeal is docketed and is regularly set for trial, and the appellant fails to appear and prosecute his appeal, the presiding judge may have the appellant called and the appeal dismissed; and in such case the judgment of the magistrate shall be affirmed. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 22; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1328, s. 3; 1981, c. 599, s. 3.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1980, added present subsection (c).

The appellant in his written notice of appeal may demand a jury on the trial de novo. Within 10 days after receipt of the notice of appeal stating that the costs of the appeal have been paid, any appellee by written notice served on all parties and on the clerk of superior court may demand a jury on the trial de novo. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1981, c. 599, s. 3.)

SUBCHAPTER V. JURISDICTION AND POWERS OF THE TRIAL DIVISIONS OF THE GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE.

ARTICLE 20.

Original Civil Jurisdiction of the Trial Divisions.

Except for the original jurisdiction in respect of claims against the State which is vested in the Supreme Court, original general jurisdiction of all justiciable matters of a civil nature cognizable in the General Court of Justice is vested in the aggregate in the superior court division and the district court division as the trial divisions of the General Court of Justice. Except in respect of proceedings in probate and the administration of decedents' estates, the original civil jurisdiction so vested in the trial divisions is vested concurrently in each division. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Judicial Immunity. — Judges of courts of general jurisdiction are fully clothed by both logic and precedent with the shield of judicial immunity. Fowler v. Alexander, 340 F. Supp. 168 (M.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

Jurisdiction Over Member of Eastern Band of Cherokee in Tort Claim. — The courts of this State have jurisdiction over a member of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians in a tort claim by a non-Indian arising from an occurrence on land within the Qualla Boundary. Sasser v. Beck, 40 N.C. App. 668, 253 S.E.2d 577, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 300, 259 S.E.2d 915 (1979).

Concurrent Jurisdiction to Hear Application for Restraining Order Pending Trial on the Merits. — An application for a restraining order pending trial on the merits is a justiciable matter of a civil nature which is cognizable in the General Court of Justice, and the original general jurisdiction to hear the application and issue such order is vested concurrently in the superior court division and the district court division. Boston v. Freeman, 6 N.C. App. 736, 171 S.E.2d 206 (1969).

Superior Court Jurisdiction In Personal Injury Actions. — The superior court is a court of general jurisdiction and has jurisdiction in all actions for personal injuries caused by negligence, except where its jurisdiction is divested by statute. Morse v. Curtis, 276 N.C. 371, 172 S.E.2d 495 (1970).

Disposition of Case in Superior Court After Transfer to District Court. — After a judge entered his order transferring a case from the superior court division of the General Court of Justice to the district court division, and the latter was the proper division in which to try the case, nothing else appearing, disposition of the case thereafter in the superior court is irregular and contrary to the course and practice in the General Court of Justice. § 7A-241. Original jurisdiction in probate and administration of decedents' estates.

Exclusive original jurisdiction for the probate of wills and the administration of decedents' estates is vested in the superior court division, and is exercised by the superior courts and by the clerks of superior court as ex officio judges of probate according to the practice and procedure provided by law. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "Recognition of Foreign Judgments," see 50 N.C.L. Rev. 21 (1971).

CASE NOTES

This section reemphasizes the fact that the district courts have no jurisdiction of probate matters, and except in those instances where the clerk is disqualified to act, it vests probate jurisdiction in the superior courts to be exercised originally by the clerks as ex officio judges of probate in the manner specified in the applicable statutes, that is, "according to the practice and procedure provided by law." In re Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Allocation of Jurisdiction Between Clerk and Judge. — This section does not say that concurrent jurisdiction in probate matters is vested in the clerk and the judge of the superior court. It says that probate jurisdiction is vested in the superior court division to be exercised by the superior court and the clerk according to the practice and procedure provided by law. The law, that is, the statutes specifying this practice and procedure, has allocated the jurisdiction between the clerk and the judge. By § 28A-2-1 the clerk is given exclusive original jurisdiction of "the administration, settlement and distribution of estates of decedents" except in cases where the clerk is disqualified to act under § 28A-2-3. When the clerk is disqualified to exercise his jurisdiction the judge has equal authority to perform the clerk's probate duties and, in that sense, he exercises concurrent jurisdiction of probate matters. In all other instances, however, the judge's probate jurisdiction is, in effect, that of an appellate court pursuant to § 7A-251. In re Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Judge Deals with Probate and Nonprobate Issues. — The judge of superior court in the exercise of his inherent powers upon appeal from clerk's finding had the right to submit to the jury the one issue that would resolve both the right to qualify as administratrix, a probate matter, and the right to share in the decedent's estate, which is not a probate matter. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

The clerk is a part of the superior court. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Under this section, the clerk of superior court, "as ex officio judge of probate," continues to exercise probate jurisdiction "according to the practice and procedure provided by law"; and in doing so, he continues to act as "a judicial officer of the superior court division, and not as a separate court" pursuant to § 7A-40. In re Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Section Supports § 28A-2-1 Assignment of Authority to Clerk. — The assignment of original authority of probate matters to the clerk in § 28A-2-1 is supported by, and not contravened by, this section. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Reference to "Practice and Procedure Provided by Law". — When this section was enacted in 1965 its reference to "the practice and procedure provided by law" was a reference to Chapter 28, which remained applicable to the estates of all decedents dying on or before October 1, 1975. After that date the reference in this section was to Chapter 28A. In re Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Strict Construction of Appeal Procedure from Clerk Conflicts with Section. — Under a strict construction of §§ 1-272 and 1-273 as they affect § 7A-251, in probate matters originally heard by the clerk, an appeal would lie directly to the judge of superior court in matters of law and legal inference; but in the hearing before the clerk if issues of fact, or both law and fact, were raised, the appeal would lie directly to the superior court for jury trial on the issues of fact. But this strict construction would ignore the "according to the practice and procedure provided by law" mandate of this section. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

For the efficient administration of justice in respect of civil matters as to which the trial divisions have concurrent original jurisdiction, the respective divisions are constituted proper or improper for the trial and determination of specific actions and proceedings in accordance with the allocations provided in this Article. But no judgment rendered by any court of the trial divisions in any civil action or proceeding as to which the trial divisions have concurrent original jurisdiction is void or voidable for the sole reason that it was rendered by the court of a trial division which by such allocation is improper for the trial and determination of the civil action or proceeding. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "Recognition of Foreign Judgments," see 50 N.C.L. Rev. 21 (1971).

CASE NOTES

Administrative allocations of case loads between the divisions are not jurisdictional since a judgment is not void or voidable for the reason that it was rendered by a court of the trial division which by the statutory allocation was the improper division for hearing and determining the matter. Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

The superior court division or the district court division, or both, are designated as "proper" divisions in which to bring a given civil action and no order of the district court may be overturned merely because it was not the proper division to enter the order. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Party May Move for Transfer of Case as Matter of Right. — Although the case allocations of this Chapter are merely administrative directives, a party may move, as a matter of right, for transfer of a case in accordance with the proper statutory allocation. Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

Superior Court Jurisdiction of Personal Injury Actions. — The superior court is a court of general jurisdiction and has jurisdiction in all actions for personal injuries caused by negligence, except where its jurisdiction is divested by statute. Morse v. Curtis, 276 N.C. 371, 172 S.E.2d 495 (1970).

Enforcement of Judgment for Alimony Entered in Superior Court before Establishment of District Court. — A district court judge may hold a party to a proceeding before him in civil contempt for failure to comply with court orders issued pursuant to a confession of judgment regarding payment of alimony which was entered in the superior court prior to the establishment of a district court for the district in which the order was entered. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Except as otherwise provided in this Article, the district court division is the proper division for the trial of all civil actions in which the amount in controversy is five thousand dollars ($5,000.00) or less; and the superior court division is the proper division for the trial of all civil actions in which the amount in controversy exceeds five thousand dollars ($5,000.00).

For purposes of determining the amount in controversy, the following rules apply whether the relief prayed is monetary or nonmonetary, or both, and with respect to claims asserted by complaint, counterclaim, cross-complaint or third-party complaint:

(1) The amount in controversy is computed without regard to interest and costs.

(2) Where monetary relief is prayed, the amount prayed for is in controversy unless the pleading in question shows to a legal certainty that the amount claimed cannot be recovered under the applicable measure of damages. The value of any property seized in attachment, claim and delivery, or other ancillary proceeding, is not in controversy and is not considered in determining the amount in controversy.

(3) Where no monetary relief is sought, but the relief sought would establish, enforce, or avoid an obligation, right or title, the value of the obligation, right, or title is in controversy. The judge may require by rule or order that parties make a good faith estimate of the value of any nonmonetary relief sought.

(4) a. Except as provided in subparagraph c of this subdivision, where a single party asserts two or more properly joined claims, the claims are aggregated in computing the amount in controversy.

b. Except as provided in subparagraph c, where there are two or more parties properly joined in an action and their interests are aligned, their claims are aggregated in computing the amount in controversy.

c. No claims are aggregated which are mutually exclusive and in the alternative, or which are successive, in the sense that satisfaction of one claim will bar recovery upon the other.

d. Where there are two or more claims not subject to aggregation the highest claim is the amount in controversy.

(5) Where the value of the relief to a claimant differs from the cost thereof to an opposing party, the higher amount is used in determining the amount in controversy. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Disposition of Case in Superior Court after Transfer to District Court. — After a judge entered his order transferring a case from the superior court division of the General Court of Justice to the district court division, and the latter was the proper division in which to try the case, nothing else appearing, disposition of the case thereafter in the superior court is irregular and contrary to the course and practice in the General Court of Justice. Brady v. Town of Chapel Hill, 277 N.C. 720, 178 S.E.2d 446 (1971).

Applied in Chemical Realty Corp. v. Home Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 40 N.C. App. 675, 253 S.E.2d 621 (1979).

The district court division is the proper division without regard to the amount in controversy, for the trial of civil actions and proceedings for annulment, divorce, equitable distribution of property, alimony, child support, and child custody. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1981, c. 815, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, inserted "equitable distribution of property" near the end of the section.

Session Laws 1981, c. 815, s. 7, provides that the act shall apply only when the action for an absolute divorce is filed on or after Oct. 1, 1981.

CASE NOTES

Jurisdiction Generally. — The district court is, under the provisions of this section, a court of general jurisdiction for the trial of civil actions and proceedings for annulment, divorce, alimony, child support, and child custody. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

This section is merely an administrative allocation of annulment, divorce, alimony, child support and child custody actions to the district court division. Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

Transfer of Action for Absolute Divorce Which Has Ended in Mistrial. — The superior court has authority under § 7A-259 to transfer to the district court an action for absolute divorce which has twice ended in mistrial in the superior court and this section gives the district court jurisdiction to try the action. Pence v. Pence, 8 N.C. App. 484, 174 S.E.2d 860 (1970).

Alimony Jurisdiction. — The district court has jurisdiction over alimony proceedings and, indeed, the legislature has decreed that it is the only "proper" division for such a proceeding. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Same — Enforcement of Judgments. — It is manifest that the court which has been given the duty to supervise domestic relations matters — including alimony judgments and orders pursuant thereto — must have the authority to enforce those judgments and orders. This is true whether the judgment was entered in the superior court or the district court. It would be anomalous to assume that when the legislature changed the statutory framework to make the district court division the proper agency in which to bring actions for alimony or actions to enforce alimony judgments, it meant to leave supervision of prior alimony judgments to the superior court. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Same — Judgment Entered in Superior Court before Establishment of District Court. — The district court has the power to enforce by a civil contempt proceeding a confession of judgment entered in the superior court before the establishment of the district court allowing alimony to an appellee. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Same — Order Not Final Judgment. — An order for the payment of alimony is not a final judgment, since it may be modified upon application of either party; thus, an action for alimony would continue to be "pending" in the court of proper jurisdiction, which is now the district court. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Applied in Bonavia v. Torreso, 7 N.C. App. 21, 171 S.E.2d 108 (1969); Russ v. Russ, 43 N.C. App. 74, 257 S.E.2d 676 (1979).

(a) The superior court division is the proper division without regard to the amount in controversy, for the trial of civil actions where the principal relief prayed is

(1) Injunctive relief against the enforcement of any statute, ordinance, or regulation;

(2) Injunctive relief to compel enforcement of any statute, ordinance, or regulation;

(3) Declaratory relief to establish or disestablish the validity of any statute, ordinance, or regulation; or

(4) The enforcement or declaration of any claim of constitutional right.

(b) When a case is otherwise properly in the district court division, a prayer for injunctive or declaratory relief by any party not a plaintiff on grounds stated in this section is not ground for transfer. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For an article entitled, "A Powerless Judiciary? The North Carolina Courts' Perceptions of Review of Administrative Action," see 12 N.C. Cent. L.J. 21 (1980).

CASE NOTES

Jurisdiction of injunctive relief generally is vested concurrently in the superior court division and the district court division, because even the four types of injunctive relief which the legislature suggested should be heard in the superior court division are not confined jurisdictionally to that division; the statute merely specifies that the superior court division is the proper division for the trial of such actions. Boston v. Freeman, 6 N.C. App. 736, 171 S.E.2d 206 (1969).

Under subsection (b) of this section a prayer for injunctive relief of any of the types enumerated in subsection (a) is not even grounds for transfer to the superior court division unless such injunctive relief is prayed for by a party plaintiff. So it is abundantly clear that the district court division has jurisdiction to grant injunctive relief in cases docketed in that division. Boston v. Freeman, 6 N.C. App. 736, 171 S.E.2d 206 (1969).

The superior court division is the proper division, without regard to the amount in controversy, for the hearing and trial of all special proceedings except proceedings under the Protection of the Abused or Neglected Elderly Act (Chapter 108, Article 4, of the General Statutes), except proceedings for involuntary commitment to treatment facilities (Chapter 122, Article 5A, of the General Statutes) and of all proceedings involving the appointment of guardians and the administration by legal guardians and trustees of express trusts of the estates of their wards and beneficiaries, according to the practice and procedure provided by law for the particular proceeding. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1973, c. 726, s. 5; c. 1378, s. 3; 1981, c. 682, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Chapter 122, Article 5, referred to in this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1973, c. 726, s. 2. For present provisions as to involuntary commitment to mental hospitals, see Chapter 122, Article 5A, § 122-58.1 et seq. chapter 108 of the General Statutes was repealed by Session Laws 1981, c. 275. See now chapter 108A.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "Article 5A" for "Article 5" near the middle of the section.

The superior court division is the proper division, without regard to the amount in controversy, for the trial of all civil actions seeking as principal relief the remedy of quo warranto, according to the practice and procedure provided for obtaining that remedy. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1971, c. 377, s. 13.)

§ 7A-248. Condemnation actions and proceedings.

The superior court division is the proper division, without regard to the amount in controversy, for the trial of all actions and proceedings wherein property is being taken by condemnation in exercise of the power of eminent domain, according to the practice and procedure provided by law for the particular action or proceeding. Nothing in this section is in derogation of the validity of such administrative or quasi-judicial procedures for value appraisal as may be provided for the particular action or proceeding prior to the raising of justiciable issues of fact or law requiring determination in the superior court. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

The superior court division is the proper division, without regard to the amount in controversy, for actions for corporate receiverships under Chapter 1, Article 38, of the General Statutes, and proceedings under Chapters 55 (Business Corporation Act) and 55A (Nonprofit Corporation Act) of the General Statutes. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1973, c. 503, s. 6.)

§ 7A-250. Review of decisions of administrative agencies.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsections (b) and (c) of this section, the superior court division is the proper division, without regard to the amount in controversy, for review by original action or proceeding, or by appeal, of the decisions of administrative agencies, according to the practice and procedure provided for the particular action, proceeding, or appeal.

(b) The Court of Appeals shall have jurisdiction to review final orders or decisions of the North Carolina Utilities Commission and the North Carolina Industrial Commission, as provided in Article 5 of this Chapter, and any order or decision of the Commissioner of Insurance described in G.S. 58-9.4.

(c) Appeals from rulings of county game commissions shall be heard in the district court division. The appeal shall be heard de novo before a district court judge sitting in the county in which the game commission whose ruling is being appealed is located. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 108, s. 6; 1973, c. 503, s. 7; 1981, c. 444.)

CASE NOTES

Stated in Boston v. Freeman, 6 N.C. App. 736, 171 S.E.2d 206 (1969).

In all matters properly cognizable in the superior court division which are heard originally before the clerk of superior court, appeals lie to the judge of superior court having jurisdiction from all orders and judgments of the clerk for review in all matters of law or legal inference, in accordance with the procedure provided in Chapter 1 of the General Statutes. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to manner of taking appeals from clerk to judge, see §§ 1-272, 1-273.

CASE NOTES

Strict Construction of Appeal Procedure from Clerk Conflicts with § 7A-241. — Under a strict construction of §§ 1-272 and 1-273 as they affect this section, in probate matters originally heard by the clerk, an appeal would lie directly to the judge of superior court in matters of law and legal inference; but in the hearing before the clerk if issues of fact, or both law and fact, were raised, the appeal would lie directly to the superior court for jury trial on the issues of fact. But this strict construction would ignore the "according to the practice and procedure provided by law" mandate of § 7A-241. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Allocation of Jurisdiction between Clerk and Judge. — Section 7A-241 does not say that concurrent jurisdiction in probate matters is vested in the clerk and the judge of the superior court. It says that probate jurisdiction is vested in the superior court division to be exercised by the superior court and the clerk according to the practice and procedure provided by law. The law, that is, the statutes specifying this practice and procedure, has allocated the jurisdiction between the clerk and the judge. By § 28A-2-1 the clerk is given exclusive original jurisdiction of "the administration, settlement and distribution of estates of decedents" except in cases where the clerk is disqualified to act under § 28A-2-3. When the clerk is disqualified to exercise his jurisdiction the judge has equal authority to perform the clerk's probate duties and, in that sense, he exercises concurrent jurisdiction of probate matters. In all other instances, however, the judge's probate jurisdiction is, in effect, that of an appellate court pursuant to this section. In re Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Judge Deals with Probate and Nonprobate Issues. — The judge of superior court in the exercise of his inherent powers upon appeal from clerk's finding had the right to submit to the jury the one issue that would resolve both the right to qualify as administratrix, a probate matter, and the right to share in the decedent's estate, which is not a probate matter. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Article 21.

Institution, Docketing, and Transferring Civil Causes in the Trial Divisions.

§ 7A-255. Clerk of superior court processes all actions and proceedings.

All civil actions and proceedings in the General Court of Justice are instituted in, and the original records thereof are maintained in, the office of the clerk of superior court, without regard to the trial divisions in which the cause is pending from time to time. When the commencement of an action or proceeding requires issuance of summons, the clerk of superior court issues the summons, and such summons runs and is valid as general process of the State without regard to the trial division in which the action or proceeding may be pending from time to time. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 22.)

Upon the institution of any action or proceeding in the General Court of Justice the party instituting it designates upon the face of the originating pleading or other originating paper when filed, which trial division of the General Court of Justice he deems proper for disposition of the cause. The clerk dockets the cause for the trial division so designated and the cause is retained for complete disposition in that division unless thereafter transferred in accordance with the provisions of this Article. If no designation is made the clerk dockets the cause for the superior court division, and the cause is retained for complete disposition in that division unless thereafter transferred in accordance with the provisions of this Article. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Any party may move for transfer between the trial divisions as provided in this Article. Failure of a party to move for transfer within the time prescribed is a waiver of any objection to the division, except that there shall be no waiver of the jurisdiction of the superior court division in probate of wills and administration of decedents' estates. Where more than one party is aligned in interest, any party may move for transfer of the entire case, notwithstanding waiver by other parties or coparties. A waiver of objection to the division does not prevent the judge from ordering a transfer on his own motion as provided in this Article. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Party May Move for Transfer of Case as Matter of Right. — Although the case allocations of this Chapter are merely administrative directives, a party may move, as a matter of right, for transfer of a case in accordance with the proper statutory allocation. Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

Failure to Make Timely Objection. — An appellant's attack on the authority of the district court to enter an order holding him in contempt for failure to comply with an alimony consent order entered in the superior court must fail where there is no showing in the record that he entered a timely objection to the jurisdiction or venue of the district court. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Cited in Boston v. Freeman, 6 N.C. App. 736, 171 S.E.2d 206 (1969).

(a) Any party, including the plaintiff, may move on notice to all parties to transfer the civil action or special proceeding to the proper division when the division in which the case is pending is improper under the rules stated in this Subchapter. A motion to transfer to another division may also be made if all parties to the action or proceeding consent thereto, and if the judge deems the transfer will facilitate the efficient administration of justice.

(b) A motion to transfer is filed in the action or proceeding sought to be transferred, but it is heard and determined by a judge of the superior court division whether the case is pending in that division or not. A regular resident superior court judge of the district in which the action or proceeding is pending, any special superior court judge residing in the district, or any superior court judge presiding over any courts of the district may hear and determine such motion. The motion is heard and determined within the district, except by consent of the parties.

(c) A motion to transfer by any party other than the plaintiff must be filed within 30 days after the moving party is served with a copy of the pleading which justifies transfer. A motion to transfer by the plaintiff, if based upon the pleading of any other party, must be filed within 20 days after the pleading has been filed. A motion to transfer by any party, based upon an amendment to his own pleading must be made not later than 10 days after such amendment is filed. In no event is a motion to transfer made or determined after the case has been called for trial. Failure to move for transfer within the required time is a waiver of any objection to the division in which the case is pending, except in matters of probate of wills or administration of decedents' estates.

(d) A motion to transfer is in writing and contains:

(1) A short and direct statement of the grounds for transfer with specific reference to the provision of this Chapter which determines the proper division; and

(2) A statement by an attorney for the moving party, or if the party is not represented by counsel, a statement by the party that the motion is made in the good faith belief that it may be properly granted and that he intends no amendment which would affect propriety of transfer.

(e) A motion to transfer is made on notice to all parties.

(f) Objection to the jurisdiction of the court over person or property is waived when a motion to transfer is filed unless such objection is raised at the time of filing or before. In no other case does the filing of a motion to transfer waive any rights under other motions or pleadings, nor does it prevent the filing of other motions or pleadings, except as provided in Rule 12 of the Rules of Civil Procedure. The filing of a motion to transfer does not stay further proceedings in the case except that:

(1) Involuntary dismissal is not ordered while a motion to transfer is pending;

(2) Assignment to a magistrate is not ordered while a motion to transfer is pending; and

(3) A change of venue is not ordered while a motion to transfer is pending, except by consent.

When a change of venue is ordered by consent while a motion to transfer is pending, the motion to transfer is determined in the new venue. The filing of a motion to transfer does not enlarge the time for filing responsive pleadings, nor does the filing of any other motion or pleading waive any rights under the motion to transfer.

(g) The motion for transfer provided herein is the sole method for seeking a transfer, and no transfer is effected by the use of mandamus, injunction, prohibition, certiorari, or other extraordinary writs; provided, however, that transfer may be sought in a responsive pleading when permitted by Rules 7(b) and 12(b) of the Rules of Civil Procedure.

(h) Transfer is effected when an order of transfer is filed. When transfer is ordered, the clerk makes appropriate entries on the dockets of each division and transfers the file of the case to the new division. No further proceedings are taken in the division from which the case is transferred. Papers filed after a transfer are properly filed notwithstanding any erroneous reference to the division from which the case is transferred. All orders made prior to transfer including restraining orders, remain effective after transfer, as if no transfer had been made, until modified or set aside in the division to which the case is transferred.

(i) A claim of new or different relief asserted after transfer has been effected does not authorize a second transfer. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 954, s. 3; 1969, c. 1190, s. 22½; 1971, c. 377, s. 14.)

Editor's Note. — The Rules of Civil Procedure are found in § 1A-1.

CASE NOTES

Party May Move for Transfer of Case as Matter of Right. — Although the case allocations of this Chapter are merely administrative directives, a party may move, as a matter of right, for transfer of a case in accordance with the proper statutory allocation. Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

Except Where Case Has Reached Trial Stage. — The General Assembly did not intend that cases called for trial or cases already tried and reduced to judgment be transferred under this section as a matter of right. Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

Because this section clearly applies only to cases in the pleading stage. Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

And Failure to Move Prior to Trial Waives Right. — Where an action was improperly brought in the district court, the parties could have moved pursuant to this section to transfer the case to the proper division while the case was pending in the improper division; however the parties waived this right after the case had been called for trial, and the defect is not jurisdictional. Parslow v. Parslow, 47 N.C. App. 84, 266 S.E.2d 746 (1980).

Action Instituted in Superior Court prior to Establishment of District Court. — Where an action was instituted in the superior court prior to the establishment of the district court in the county and where no order was ever entered transferring the action from the superior court to the district court, a district court judge is without jurisdiction to enter an order in the action. Hodge v. Hodge, 9 N.C. App. 601, 176 S.E.2d 795 (1970).

The district court had no authority to modify a child-custody order entered in the superior court where the cause was pending in the superior court when district courts were established in the county, and no order had been entered in the superior court transferring the cause to the district court pursuant to § 7A-259, nor had a motion to transfer been made pursuant to this section. In re Hopper, 9 N.C. App. 730, 177 S.E.2d 326 (1970).

(a) If no party has moved for transfer within the time allowed to parties, any superior court judge who may hear and determine motions to transfer may order a transfer upon his own motion for the purpose of efficient administration of the trial divisions at any time before the case is calendared for trial. Transfer is not made on the judge's own motion unless the pleadings clearly show that the case is pending in an improper division. No hearing is held on such trasnfers, but the parties are given prompt notice when transfer is effected. Nothing in this section affects the power of the clerk to transfer matters and proceedings pending before him when an issue of fact is raised.

(b) When a district court is established in a district, any superior court judge authorized to hear and determine motions to transfer may, on his own motion, subject to the requirements of subsection (a), transfer to the district court cases pending in the superior court. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 23.)

CASE NOTES

Causes Pending in Superior Court at Time of Establishment of District Court. — All causes pending in the superior court at the time of the establishment of the district court remained pending in the superior court unless and until transferred to the district court by proper order. In re Hopper, 11 N.C. App. 611, 182 S.E.2d 228, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 884 (1971).

See also notes to § 7A-258.

Compliance with Subsection (a) Assumed. — Absent objection and exception to an order of transfer, it is assumed that the provisions of subsection (a) of this section were complied with. Wendell Tractor & Implement Co. v. Lee, 9 N.C. App. 524, 176 S.E.2d 854 (1970).

This section includes giving prompt notice to the parties when the transfer is effected. Wendell Tractor & Implement Co. v. Lee, 9 N.C. App. 524, 176 S.E.2d 854 (1970).

When Judge Not Authorized to Order Transfer. — A judge, on his own motion, is not authorized to order a transfer once the case has reached the trial stage and has been calendared. Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

Transfer of Action for Absolute Divorce Which Has Ended in Mistrial. — The superior court has authority under this section to transfer to the district court an action for absolute divorce which has twice ended in mistrial in the superior court and § 7A-244 gives the district court jurisdiction to try the action. Pence v. Pence, 8 N.C. App. 484, 174 S.E.2d 860 (1970).

Orders transferring or refusing to transfer are not immediately appealable, even for abuse of discretion. Such orders are reviewable only by the appellate division on appeal from a final judgment. If on review, such an order is found erroneous, reversal or remand is not granted unless prejudice is shown. If, on review, a new trial or partial new trial is ordered for other reasons, the appellate division may specify the proper division for new trial and order a transfer thereto. Article 22.

Jurisdiction of the Trial Divisions in Criminal Actions.

General jurisdiction for the trial of criminal actions is vested in the superior court and the district court divisions of the General Court of Justice. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Jurisdiction of District Court. — Under this section and § 7A-271, the district court has original jurisdiction for the trial of all criminal actions below the grade of felony, that is, of all prosecutions for misdemeanors; and the district court has exclusive original jurisdiction of all misdemeanors except in the four specific instances defined in subdivisions (a)(1), (a)(2), (a)(3) and (a)(4) of § 7A-271. State v. Wall, 271 N.C. 675, 157 S.E.2d 363 (1967).

State Has Burden to Show Jurisdiction. — When jurisdiction is challenged, in a criminal case, the State must carry the burden and show beyond a reasonable doubt that North Carolina has jurisdiction to try the accused. Former cases holding that a challenge to the jurisdiction is an affirmative defense with the burden of persuasion on the accused are no longer authoritative. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

The question of jurisdiction of the courts in this State in a criminal case is not an independent, distinct, substantive matter of exemption, immunity or defense and ought not to be regarded as an affirmative defense on which the defendant must bear the burden of proof. Rather, jurisdiction is a matter which, when contested, should be proven by the prosecution as a prerequisite to the authority of the court to enter judgment. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

(a) The superior court has exclusive, original jurisdiction over all criminal actions not assigned to the district court division by this Article, except that the superior court has jurisdiction to try a misdemeanor:

(1) Which is a lesser included offense of a felony on which an indictment has been returned, or a felony information as to which an indictment has been properly waived; or

(2) When the charge is initiated by presentment; or

(3) Which may be properly consolidated for trial with a felony under G.S. 15A-926;

(4) To which a plea of guilty or nolo contendere is tendered in lieu of a felony charge; or

(5) When a misdemeanor conviction is appealed to the superior court for trial de novo, to accept a guilty plea to a lesser included or related charge.

(b) Appeals by the State or the defendant from the district court are to the superior court. The jurisdiction of the superior court over misdemeanors appealed from the district court to the superior court for trial de novo is the same as the district court had in the first instance, and when that conviction resulted from a plea arrangement between the defendant and the State pursuant to which misdemeanor charges were dismissed, reduced, or modified, to try those charges in the form and to the extent that they subsisted in the district court immediately prior to entry of the defendant and the State of the plea arrangement.

(c) When a district court is established in a district, any superior court judge presiding over a criminal session of court shall order transferred to the district court any pending misdemeanor which does not fall within the provisions of subsection (a), and which is not pending in the superior court on appeal from a lower court. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 24; 1969, c. 1190, ss. 23, 24; 1971, c. 377, s. 15; 1977, c. 711, s. 6; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1328, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1980, added to subsection (b) the language beginning "and when that conviction."

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Appeals in Civil Causes Distinguished from Appeals in Criminal Causes. — The constitutional and statutory structure of the General Court of Justice provides that, generally, appeals from the district court in civil causes go to the Court of Appeals, while appeals in criminal causes must first go to the superior court. State v. Killian, 25 N.C. App. 224, 212 S.E.2d 419 (1975).

Jurisdiction of District Court. — See note to § 7A-270.

State Has Burden to Show Jurisdiction. — When jurisdiction is challenged, in a criminal case, the State must carry the burden and show beyond a reasonable doubt that North Carolina has jurisdiction to try the accused. Former cases holding that a challenge to the jurisdiction is an affirmative defense with the burden of persuasion on the accused are no longer authoritative. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

The question of jurisdiction of the courts in this State in a criminal case is not an independent, distinct, substantive matter of exemption, immunity or defense and ought not to be regarded as an affirmative defense on which the defendant must bear the burden of proof. Rather, jurisdiction is a matter which, when contested, should be proven by the prosecution as a prerequisite to the authority of the court to enter judgment. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

When the record shows a lack of jurisdiction in the lower court, the appropriate action on the part of the appellate court is to arrest judgment or vacate any order entered without authority. State v. Felmet, 302 N.C. 173, 273 S.E.2d 708 (1981).

Presumption of Regular Procedure. — On appeal to the superior court from a conviction in the district court a presumption of regular procedure in the district court can be inferred. State v. Joyner, 33 N.C. App. 361, 235 S.E.2d 107 (1977).

The entire record may be considered on appeal to the superior court from a conviction in the district court in searching for evidence that proper procedure was followed. State v. Joyner, 33 N.C. App. 361, 235 S.E.2d 107 (1977).

The imposition of a greater sentence after a conviction by a jury in the superior court, upon appeal from a district court, does not violate a defendant's constitutional rights. State v. Martin, 16 N.C. App. 609, 192 S.E.2d 596 (1972).

Applied in State v. Harrell, 279 N.C. 464, 183 S.E.2d 638 (1971); State v. Rowland, 13 N.C. App. 253, 185 S.E.3d 296 (1971); State v. Harris, 14 N.C. App. 268, 188 S.E.2d 1 (1972); State v. II. JURISDICTION OVER MISDEMEANORS.

A. In General.

Appeal from Conviction in District Court. — The superior court may try a misdemeanor when the conviction is appealed from the district court to the superior court for trial de novo but has no jurisdiction to try a defendant upon warrants charging misdemeanors where defendant has not first been tried upon the warrants in the district court and appealed to the superior court. State v. Taylor, 8 N.C. App. 544, 174 S.E.2d 872 (1970).

Where a prosecution was instituted under statutes which created misdemeanors, for which the district court has exclusive, original jurisdiction, until defendants were tried and convicted in the district court and appealed to the superior court for a trial de novo that court had no jurisdiction of the case. State v. Bryant, 280 N.C. 407, 185 S.E.2d 854 (1972).

The superior court has no jurisdiction to try an accused for a specific misdemeanor on the warrant of an inferior court unless he is first tried and convicted for such misdemeanor in the inferior court and appeals to the superior court from the sentence pronounced against him by the inferior court on his conviction for such misdemeanor. State v. Craig, 21 N.C. App. 51, 203 S.E.2d 401 (1974); State v. Robinson, 40 N.C. App. 514, 253 S.E.2d 311 (1979); State v. Felmet, 302 N.C. 173, 273 S.E.2d 708 (1981).

Same — Jurisdiction Derivative. — Jurisdiction of the superior court on appeal from a conviction in district court is derivative. State v. Joyner, 33 N.C. App. 361, 235 S.E.2d 107 (1977).

The jurisdiction of the superior court for the trial of a misdemeanor, unless a circumstance enumerated in subsection (a) of this section arises, is derivative and arises only upon appeal from a conviction of the misdemeanor in district court. State v. Felmet, 302 N.C. 173, 273 S.E.2d 708 (1981).

Same — The Court of Appeals did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion to amend the record to show derivative jurisdiction of a misdemeanor in the superior court through appeal of a district court conviction and then dismissing defendant's appeal for failure of the record to show jurisdiction. State v. Felmet, 302 N.C. 173, 273 S.E.2d 708 (1981).

Where Court of Appeals orders that a new trial be held in a misdemeanor prosecution originally tried in a municipal court and then tried de novo in the superior court, the case on retrial maintains its status as a case pending in the superior court on appeal from a lower court, and defendant's motion to quash the indictment on the ground that the district court has jurisdiction of the case is properly denied. State v. Patton, 5 N.C. App. 164, 167 S.E.2d 821 (1969).

Effect of Issuing Second Warrant Charging Same Offense. — Where defendant was tried and convicted in district court, appealed to superior court, and subsequently moved to dismiss the charge pursuant to the Speedy Trial Act, §§ 15A-701 through 15A-704; the court allowed defendant's motion and ordered dismissal of the case without prejudice; on that same day the magistrate issued a new warrant charging the same offense; and the trial judge, later during the same session, reopened the matter, heard additional evidence and arguments, and dismissed the case without prejudice to the State, the superior court was not divested of jurisdiction by the magistrate's issuing the second warrant, nor did the State, by securing the second warrant, waive whatever rights to appellate review it might have had. State v. Morehead, 46 N.C. App. 39, 264 S.E.2d 400, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 201, 269 S.E.2d 615 (1980).

B. Charge Initiated by Presentment.

"Presentment" Defined. — In this jurisdiction, the accepted definition of the word "presentment" is as follows: "A presentment is an accusation of crime made by a grand jury on its own motion upon its own knowledge or observation, or upon information from others without any bill of indictment, but, since the enactment of former § 15-137 (see now § 15A-641), trials upon presentments have been abolished and a presentment amounts to nothing more than an instruction by the grand jury to the public prosecuting attorney to frame a bill of indictment." State v. Wall, 271 N.C. 675, 157 S.E.2d 363 (1967).

Language of Presentment and Indictment May Differ. — Where the language of the presentment and that contained in the bills of indictment, while not identical, dealt with the same subject matter and the charges contained in the bills were in fact initiated by the presentment, the superior court had original jurisdiction under this section. State v. Cole, 294 N.C. 304, 240 S.E.2d 355 (1978).

Initiation Not Shown. — A prosecution for violation of former § 20-105 governing unauthorized use of a conveyance was not "initiated by presentment" within the meaning of subdivision (a)(2). Although the prerequisites to conviction for the felony charged in the warrant and the misdemeanor charged in the indictment were different, the prosecution for the alleged criminal conduct of defendant in respect of the alleged unlawful taking of a car was initiated by warrant issued by the district court. It was not initiated in the superior court by presentment or otherwise. State v. Wall, 271 N.C. 675, 157 S.E.2d 363 (1967).

C. Consolidation with Felony.

A "driving under the influence" misdemeanor charge and a manslaughter felony charge were based on the same transaction within the meaning of subdivision (a)(3). State v. Karbas, 28 N.C. App. 372, 221 S.E.2d 98, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 618, 223 S.E.2d 394 (1976).

Jurisdiction after "Nol Pros" in District Court. — And therefore the superior court had jurisdiction of both charges and had the right to proceed to the trial on the misdemeanor charge under the joinder exception of this section, the "original jurisdiction" of the district court having been lost after nolle prosequi was entered as to the misdemeanor in that court. State v. Karbas, 28 N.C. App. 372, 221 S.E.2d 98, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 618, 223 S.E.2d 394 (1976).

D. Guilty Plea to Lesser Included or Related Charge.

Condition for Acceptance of Guilty Plea on Related Charge. — The acceptance of a plea of guilty by the superior court to a related charge in misdemeanor appeals from the district court is conditioned upon the requirement that the related charge be contained in a written information. State v. Craig, 21 N.C. App. 51, 203 S.E.2d 401 (1974).

No Jurisdiction to Accept Plea. — The superior court does not have jurisdiction to accept a plea of guilty to a charge of reckless driving when defendant is before the court on appeal from a conviction in the district court for operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. State v. Craig, 21 N.C. App. 51, 203 S.E.2d 401 (1974).

E. Particular Misdemeanors.

Violation of § 14-33 or § 14-34. — The superior court has no original jurisdiction of a trial for the misdemeanor violation of either § 14-33(b)(1) or § 14-34, for one of which defendant was charged and for one of which he was convicted. Its jurisdiction of these offenses is derivative and arises only upon appeal from a conviction in district court of the misdemeanor for which he stands charged in superior court or the misdemeanor with respect to which the jury returned a guilty verdict in superior court. State v. Caldwell, 21 N.C. App. 723, 205 S.E.2d 322 (1974).

Jurisdiction Over Misdemeanor Appeals. — See opinion of Attorney General to the Honorable Hubert E. May, Special Judge, Superior Court, 40 N.C.A.G. 145 (1969).

Violation of § 20-7. — Obviously, subdivisions (a)(1), (a)(2), and (a)(4) of this section do not apply to a criminal prosecution for operation of an automobile without an operator's license in violation of § 20-7(a). With reference to subdivision (a)(3), it is sufficient to say that defendant was not tried for or charged with any felony. State v. Wall, 271 N.C. 675, 157 S.E.2d 363 (1967).

Violation of § 20-28. — A superior court has no original jurisdiction in a case involving a violation of § 20-28(b), a misdemeanor; the jurisdiction of the superior court in such cases is derivative, and where the record does not disclose that defendant was convicted and sentenced in district court for this offense, the superior court is without jurisdiction to try him, and the trial in the superior court for that charge upon the original warrant is a nullity. State v. Guffey, 283 N.C. 94, 194 S.E.2d 827 (1973).

Violation of Former § 20-105. — The warrant on which defendant was arrested and bound over to superior court charged a felony, to wit, the larceny of an automobile valued at more than $200.00, and the indictment charged a misdemeanor, to wit, a violation of former § 20-105, the "temporary larceny" statute. Since defendant, in the superior court, was not tried for or charged with any felony, subdivisions (a)(1), (a)(3), and (a)(4) of this section did not apply to the criminal prosecution for the violation of former § 20-105. State v. Wall, 271 N.C. 675, 157 S.E.2d 363 (1967).

Error for Superior Court to Instruct on Specific Misdemeanor not Tried in District Court. — The trial judge, on trial de novo in the superior court, erred in instructing the jury on reckless driving under § 20-140(a) and should have instructed on § 20-140(c), where the defendant had been charged in the district court with drunken driving under § 20-138 but was convicted of the lesser included offense under § 20-140(c). State v. Robinson, 40 N.C. App. 514, 253 S.E.2d 311 (1979).

(a) Except as provided in this Article, the district court has exclusive, original jurisdiction for the trial of criminal actions, including municipal ordinance violations, below the grade of felony, and the same are hereby declared to be petty misdemeanors.

(b) The district court has jurisdiction to conduct preliminary examinations and to bind the accused over for trial upon waiver of preliminary examination or upon a finding of probable cause, making appropriate orders as to bail or commitment. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Jurisdiction Over Misdemeanors.
III. Preliminary Examinations.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

State Has Burden to Show Jurisdiction. — The question of jurisdiction of the courts in this State in a criminal case is not an independent, distinct, substantive matter of exemption, immunity or defense and ought not to be regarded as an affirmative defense on which the defendant must bear the burden of proof. Rather, jurisdiction is a matter which, when contested, should be proven by the prosecution as a prerequisite to the authority of the court to enter judgment. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

When jurisdiction is challenged, in a criminal case, the State must carry the burden and show beyond a reasonable doubt that North Carolina has jurisdiction to try the accused. Former cases holding that a challenge to the jurisdiction is an affirmative defense with the burden of persuasion on the accused are no longer authoritative. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

Applied in State v. Harrell, 279 N.C. 464, 183 S.E.2d 638 (1971); State v. Harris, 14 N.C. App. 268, 188 S.E.2d 1 (1972); State v. Martin, 16 N.C. App. 609, 192 S.E.2d 596 (1972); State v. Guffey, 283 N.C. 94, 194 S.E.2d 827 (1973); State v. Craig, 21 N.C. App. 51, 203 S.E.2d 401 (1974); State v. Cole, 294 N.C. 304, 240 S.E.2d 355 (1978).

II. JURISDICTION OVER MISDEMEANORS.

The district court has exclusive original jurisdiction of misdemeanors, including actions to determine liability of persons for the support of dependents in any criminal proceeding. Cline v. Cline, 6 N.C. App. 523, 170 S.E.2d 645 (1969).

Where a prosecution was instituted under statutes which created misdemeanors, for which the district court had exclusive, original jurisdiction, until defendants were tried and convicted in the district court and appealed to the superior court for a trial de novo that court had no jurisdiction of the case. State v. Bryant, 280 N.C. 407, 185 S.E.2d 854 (1972).

It is fundamental that the district courts of this state have exclusive original jurisdiction of misdemeanors, and the jurisdiction of the superior court is derivative and arises only upon an appeal from a conviction of the misdemeanor in the district court. State v. McKoy, 44 N.C. App. 516, 261 S.E.2d 226 (1980).

But Court Is without Jurisdiction to Impose Sentence for Felony. — District courts are without jurisdiction to impose sentences in felony cases. State v. Jackson, 14 N.C. App. 75, 187 S.E.2d 470 (1972).

The constitutional right of a defendant charged with a misdemeanor to have a jury trial is not infringed by the fact that he has first to submit to trial without a jury in the district court and then appeal to superior court in order to obtain a jury trial. State v. Sherron, 4 N.C. App. 386, 166 S.E.2d 836 (1969).

Demand for Jury Trial Not Ground for Removal. — Where, upon defendant's demand for a jury trial on a charge of driving without an operator's license, the district court ordered defendant to appear at the next session of superior court, the district judge apparently being of opinion that the defendant by moving for a jury trial could avoid trial in the district court and have his case transferred forthwith for trial in the superior court, the district court acted under a misapprehension of the law and erred by failing to proceed to trial of defendant for this criminal offense in accordance with the accusation contained in the warrant. State v. Wall, 271 N.C. 675, 157 S.E.2d 363 (1967).

Where Court of Appeals orders that a new trial be held in a misdemeanor prosecution originally tried in a municipal court and then tried de novo in the superior court, the case on retrial maintains its status as a case pending in the superior court on appeal from a lower court, and defendant's motion to quash the indictment on the ground that the district court has jurisdiction of the case is properly denied. State v. Patton, 5 N.C. App. 164, 167 S.E.2d 821 (1969).

Effect of Issuing Second Warrant Charging Same Offense. — Where defendant was tried and convicted in district court, appealed to superior court, and subsequently moved to dismiss the charge pursuant to the Speedy Trial Act, §§ 15A-701 through 15A-704; the court allowed defendant's motion and ordered dismissal of the case without prejudice; on that same day the magistrate issued a new warrant charging the same offense; and the trial judge, later during the same session, reopened the matter, heard additional evidence and arguments and dismissed the case without prejudice to the State, the superior court was not divested of jurisdiction by the magistrate's issuing the second warrant, nor did the State, by securing the second warrant, waive whatever rights to appellate review it might have had. State v. Morehead, 46 N.C. App. 39, 264 S.E.2d 400, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 201, 269 S.E.2d 615 (1980).

District Court Jurisdiction Lost after "Nol Pros". — A "driving under the influence" misdemeanor charge and a manslaughter felony charge were based on the same transaction within the meaning of § 7A-271(a)(3), and therefore the superior court had jurisdiction of both charges and had the right to proceed to the trial on the misdemeanor charge under the joinder exception of § 7A-271, the "original jurisdiction" of the district court having been lost after nolle prosequi was entered as to the misdemeanor in that court. State v. Karbas, 28 N.C. App. 372, 221 S.E.2d 98, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 618, 223 S.E.2d 394 (1976).

Violation of § 20-7(a). — The district court had jurisdiction to try defendant on the warrant charging operation of an automobile without an operator's license in violation of § 20-7(a). State v. Wall, 271 N.C. 675, 157 S.E.2d 363 (1967).

Proceeding Pursuant to Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act. — The district court had exclusive original jurisdiction to entertain a proceeding pursuant to the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act. Cline v. Cline, 6 N.C. App. 523, 170 S.E.2d 645 (1969).

And to Determine Paternity Issue. — Since the district court has exclusive original jurisdiction to entertain a proceeding under the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act, it is clear that the district court has jurisdiction to determine the issue of paternity in such a case. Amaker v. Amaker, 28 N.C. App. 558, 221 S.E.2d 917 (1976).

III. PRELIMINARY EXAMINATIONS.

A preliminary hearing is not a trial but is simply an inquiry into whether the accused should be discharged or whether, on the other hand, there is probable cause to submit the State's evidence to the grand jury and seek a bill of indictment to the end that the accused may be placed upon trial. State v. Cradle, 281 N.C. 198, 188 S.E.2d 296, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1047, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 499 (1972); State v. Bryant, 283 N.C. 227, 195 S.E.2d 509 (1973).

Preliminary Hearing Not Required. — A preliminary hearing is not a necessary step in the prosecution of a person accused of crime, and an accused person is not entitled to a preliminary hearing as a matter of substantive right. State v. Bryant, 283 N.C. 227, 195 S.E.2d 509 (1973).

A preliminary hearing is not an essential prerequisite to the finding of a bill of indictment and it is proper to try the accused upon a bill of indictment without a preliminary hearing. State v. Bryant, 283 N.C. 227, 195 S.E.2d 509 (1973).

When performing his duties under subsection (b) of this section the district judge sits only as an examining magistrate in all felony cases because the trial of felonies is beyond the jurisdiction of the district court. State v. Bass, 280 N.C. 435, 186 S.E.2d 384 (1972); State v. Bryant, 283 N.C. 227, 195 S.E.2d 509 (1973).

Same — Duties As Examining Magistrate. — In his capacity as examining magistrate, the district judge is concerned only with determining (1) whether a felonious offense has been committed and (2) whether there is probable cause to charge the prisoner therewith. State v. Bass, 280 N.C. 435, 186 S.E.2d 384 (1972).

The district judge, in his capacity as committing magistrate, passes only on the narrow question of whether probable cause exists and, if so, the fixing of bail if the offense is bailable. State v. Cradle, 281 N.C. 198, 188 S.E.2d 296, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1047, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 499 (1972).

District Judge Does Not Render a Verdict. — The district judge, when sitting as a committing magistrate as authorized by subsection (b) of this section, does not render a verdict; and a discharge of the accused is not an acquittal and does not bar a later indictment. State v. Cradle, 281 N.C. 198, 188 S.E.2d 296, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1047, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 499 (1972); State v. Bryant, 283 N.C. 227, 195 S.E.2d 509 (1973).

Or Have Authority to Dismiss First-Degree Murder Charge. — A district judge sitting as a committing magistrate in a preliminary hearing has no authority to dismiss a first-degree murder charge. State v. Bryant, 283 N.C. 227, 195 S.E.2d 509 (1973).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Jurisdiction Over Offense of Failure to List Property for Taxation. — See Opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Amsey A. Boyd, Tax Supervisor of Richmond County, 40 N.C.A.G. 776 (1969).

§ 7A-273. Powers of magistrates in criminal actions.

In criminal actions, any magistrate has power:

(1) In misdemeanor cases, other than traffic offenses, in which the maximum punishment which can be adjudged cannot exceed imprisonment for 30 days, or a fine of fifty dollars ($50.00), exclusive of costs, to accept guilty pleas and enter judgment;

(2) In misdemeanor cases involving traffic offenses, to accept written appearances, waivers of trial and pleas of guilty, in accordance with a schedule of offenses and fines promulgated by the chief district judge, and, in such cases, to enter judgment and collect the fine and costs;

(3) To issue arrest warrants valid throughout the State;

(4) To issue search warrants valid throughout the county; and

(5) To grant bail before trial for any noncapital offense;

(6) Notwithstanding the provisions of subdivision (1) of this section, to hear and enter judgment as the chief district judge shall direct in all worthless check cases brought under G.S. 14-107, when the amount of the check is five hundred dollars ($500.00) or less. Provided, however, that under this section magistrates may not impose a prison sentence longer than 30 days;

(7) To conduct an initial appearance as provided in G.S. 15A-511;
(8) To accept written appearances, waivers of trial and pleas of guilty to violations of G.S. 14-107 and enter such judgments as the chief district judge shall direct, when the amount of the check is five hundred dollars ($500.00) or less, restitution is made, and the warrant does not charge a fourth or subsequent violation of this statute. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 876, s. 2; c. 1190, s. 25; 1973, c. 6; c. 503, s. 8; c. 1286, s. 7; 1975, c. 626, s. 4; 1977, c. 873, s. 1; 1979, c. 144, s. 3; 1981, c. 555, s. 3.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, substituted "five hundred dollars ($500.00)" for "four hundred dollars ($400.00)" in the first sentence of subdivision (6) and near the end of subdivision (8).

CASE NOTES

State Has Burden to Show Jurisdiction. — When jurisdiction is challenged, in a criminal case, the State must carry the burden and show beyond a reasonable doubt that North Carolina has jurisdiction to try the accused. Former cases holding that a challenge to the jurisdiction is an affirmative defense with the burden of persuasion on the accused are no longer authoritative. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

The question of jurisdiction of the court in this State in a criminal case is not an independent, distinct, substantive matter of exemption, immunity or defense and ought not to be regarded as an affirmative defense on which the defendant must bear the burden of proof. Rather, jurisdiction is a matter which, when contested, should be proven by the prosecution as a prerequisite to the authority of the court to enter judgment. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

The power of mayors, law-enforcement officers, and other persons not officers of the General Court of Justice to issue arrest, search, or peace warrants, or to set bail, is terminated in any district court district upon the establishment of a district court therein. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Article 22A.

Prohibited Orders.

§ 7A-276.1. Court orders prohibiting publication or broadcast of reports of open court proceedings or reports of public records banned.

No court shall make or issue any rule or order banning, prohibiting, or restricting the publication or broadcast of any report concerning any of the following: any evidence, testimony, argument, ruling, verdict, decision, judgment, or other matter occurring in open court in any hearing, trial, or other proceeding, civil or ciminal; and no court shall issue any rule or order sealing, prohibiting, restricting the publication or broadcast of the contents of any public record as defined by any statute of this State, which is required to be open to public inspection under any valid statute, regulation, or rule of common law. If any rule or order is made or issued by any court in violation of the provisions of this statute, it shall be null and void and of no effect, and no person shall be punished for contempt for the violation of any such void rule or order. (1977, c. 711, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 39, as amended by Session Laws 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1147, s. 32 provides: "This act shall become effective July 1, 1978, and applies to all matters addressed by its provisions without regard to when a defendant's guilt was established or when judgment was entered against him, except that the provisions of this act regarding parole shall not apply to persons sentenced before July 1, 1978."

Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 34, provides: "All statutes which refer to sections repealed or amended by the act shall be deemed, insofar as possible, to refer to those provisions of this act which accomplish the same or an equivalent purpose."

Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 36, contains a severability clause.

ARTICLE 24.

Juvenile Services.

§ 7A-289.1. Purpose.

The purpose of this Article is to provide for a statewide and uniform system of juvenile probation and aftercare which provides adequate and appropriate services to certain children who are found to be within the juvenile jurisdiction of the district court and to authorize an intake process for diversion of selected juvenile offenders from the juvenile justice system. (1973, c. 1339, s. 1.)

The terms or phrases used in this Article shall be defined according to the definitions contained in G.S. 7A-517 and as follows, unless the context or subject matter otherwise requires:

(1) "Administrator" is the Administrator for Juvenile Services in the Administrative Office of the Courts who is responsible for planning, organizing and administering a statewide system of juvenile probation and aftercare services as authorized by this Article.

(2) "Aftercare" means the legal status of a child who has been committed by the court to the Department of Correction for placement by said agency in one or more of its institutions or programs and who is being granted conditional release to return to the community as authorized by G.S. 7A-655.

(3) "Chief court counselor" is the professional person responsible for administration and supervision of juvenile probation and aftercare in each judicial district under the supervision of the court and the Administrator for Juvenile Services.

(4) "Court counselor" is a professional person responsible for juvenile probation and aftercare services to children on probation or on conditional release from the Office of Youth Development, Department of Social Rehabilitation and Control under the supervision of the chief court counselor.

(5) "Director" is the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts.

(6) "Division" is the Division of Juvenile Services to administer juvenile probation and aftercare services to juveniles as authorized by this Article.

(7) "Probation" means the legal status of a child who is delinquent or undisciplined and is placed on probation as authorized by G.S. 7A-649(8) under conditions of probation related to the needs of the child as authorized in that statute. (1973, c. 1262, s. 10; c. 1339, s. 1; 1981, c. 469, s. 21.)

Editor's Note. — Pursuant to Session Laws 1973, c. 1262, "Department of Correction" has been substituted for "Office of Youth Development, Department of Social Rehabilitation and Control" in this section as enacted by Session Laws 1973, c. 1339. Chapter 1262 did not expressly refer either to the Office of Youth Development or to the Department of Social Rehabilitation and Control, but their functions have devolved upon the Department of Correction.

Chapter 134 was rewritten by Session Laws 1975, c. 742, s. 1 and recodified as Chapter 134A. However, the provisions of Chapter 134A which were analogous to § 134-17, referred to in this section, were repealed by Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 3. For present provisions governing conditional release of juveniles, see §§ 7A-655 and 7A-656.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, substituted "G.S. 7A-517" for "G.S. 7A-278" in the introductory paragraph, substituted "G.S. 7A-655" for "G.S. 134-17" at the end of subdivision (2), substituted "G.S. 7A-649(8)" for "G.S. 7A-286(4)" near the middle of subdivision (7), and substituted "in that statute" for "by G.S. 110-22" at the end of subdivision (7).

§ 7A-289.3. Division of Juvenile Services.

A Division of Juvenile Services is hereby created within the Administrative Office of the Courts to be responsible for administration of a statewide and uniform system of juvenile probation and aftercare services in all judicial districts of the State. The administrative head of the Division shall be the Administrator for Juvenile Services who shall be appointed by the Director. The Administrator shall be responsible for planning, organizing and administering juvenile probation and aftercare services on a statewide basis to the end that juvenile services will be uniform throughout the State and of sufficient quality to meet the needs of the children under supervision. (1973, c. 1339, s. 1.)

The Administrator shall have the following powers and duties under the supervision of the Director:

(1) To plan for a statewide program of juvenile probation and aftercare services;

(2) To appoint such personnel within the Administrative Office of the Courts as may be necessary to administer a statewide and uniform system of juvenile probation and aftercare;

(3) To appoint the chief court counselor in each judicial district with the approval of the chief district judge and the Director;

(4) To study the various issues related to qualifications, salary ranges, appointment of personnel on a merit basis (including chief court counselors, court counselors, secretaries and other appropriate personnel) at the State and district levels in order to recommend appropriate policies and procedures governing personnel to the Director who may adopt such personnel policies as he finds to be in the best interest of the juvenile services program;

(5) To develop a statewide plan for staff development and training so that chief court counselors, court counselors and other personnel responsible for juvenile services may be appropriately trained and qualified; such plan may include attendance at appropriate professional meetings and opportunities for educational leave for academic study;

(6) To develop, promulgate and enforce such policies, procedures, rules and regulations as he may find necessary and appropriate to implement a statewide and uniform program of juvenile probation and aftercare services. (1973, c. 1339, s. 1.)

The chief court counselor in each judicial district who is appointed as provided by this Article shall have the following powers and duties:

(1) To appoint such court counselors, secretaries and other personnel as may be authorized by the Administrative Office of the Courts with the approval of the Administrator in accordance with the personnel policies adopted by the Director.

(2) To supervise and direct the program of juvenile probation and aftercare services within the district under the supervision of the court and the Administrator according to the statewide practices and procedures promulgated by the Administrator.

(3) To provide in-service training for staff as required by the Administrator.
(4) To keep such records and make such reports as may be requested by the Administrator in order to provide statewide data and information about juvenile needs and services. (1973, c. 1339, s. 1.)

The court counselors in each district shall have the duties and powers of juvenile probation officers as provided by G.S. 110-23 and as follows:
(1) To conduct a prehearing social study of any child alleged to be delinquent or undisciplined if so instructed by the court, provided that no social study shall be made prior to an adjudication that the child is within the juvenile jurisdiction of the court unless the child and his parent or attorney or guardian or custodian files a written statement with the court counselor declaring the child's intention to admit the allegations contained in the juvenile petition and giving consent to such prehearing social study; when such a prehearing social study has been completed, the court counselor shall prepare a written report for the court summarizing the findings which may be reviewed by the court prior to the juvenile hearing and which shall contain recommendations as to the type of care and/or treatment needed by the child and which shall be in the form developed by the Administrator for such reports.
(2) To assist the court in handling cases where a child alleged or adjudicated delinquent or undisciplined needs detention care prior to the juvenile hearing, or after a hearing to determine the need for detention, or pending admission of the child to an institution or other residential program.
(3) To bring any child on probation to the attention of the court for review and termination when the child's period of probation is ended as provided by G.S. 7A-658; the counselor may also recommend termination of probation prior to the end of the child's period of probation when such a recommendation is merited by the progress and adjustment of the child.
(4) To assist the court as requested in matters related to children within the juvenile jurisdiction of the court as undisciplined, dependent or neglected or within the Interstate Compact on Juveniles. This provision shall not be construed, however, to deprive the Department of Social Services of the functions assigned to it by law in the area of dependent or neglected children. (1973, c. 1339, s. 1; 1981, c. 469, s. 22.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, deleted "as authorized by G.S. 7A-286(3)" from the end of subdivision (2), and substituted "G.S. 7A-658" for "G.S. 110-22" near the middle of subdivision (3).

ARTICLE 24A.

Delinquency Prevention and Youth Services.

The General Assembly hereby declares its intent to reduce the number of children committed by the courts for delinquency to institutions operated by the Division of Youth Development, Department of Human Resources or other State agencies. The primary intent of this Article is to provide a comprehensive plan for the development of community-based alternatives to training school commitment so that "status offenders" (defined by this Article to include "those juveniles guilty of offenses which would not be violations of the law if committed by an adult") may be eliminated from the youth development institutions of this State. Additionally it is the intent of this legislation to provide noninstitutional disposition options in any case before the juvenile court where such disposition is deemed to be in the best interest of the child and the community.

The policy and intent of the General Assembly in delinquency prevention and community-based services can be summarized as follows:

(1) Such programs should be planned and organized at the community level within the State, and such planning efforts should include appropriate representation from local government, local agencies serving families and children (both public and private), local business leaders, citizens with an interest in youth problems, youth representatives, and others as may be appropriate in a particular community. The role of the State should be to provide technical assistance, access to funding, program information, and to assist local leadership in appropriate planning.

(2) When a child is adjudicated to be within the juvenile jurisdiction of the district court such child should be carefully evaluated through the available community-level resources (including mental health, social services, public health and other available medical services, public schools, and others as appropriate) prior to the juvenile hearing dealing with disposition so that the disposition of the court may be made with an understanding of the needs of the child and after consideration of the resources available to meet these needs.

(3) It is contrary to the policy of the State for a court to separate a child from his own family or commit a child to an institution or training school without a careful evaluation of the needs of the child.

(4) The General Assembly finds that State and local government should be responsive to the need for community-based services which would provide a viable alternative to commitment to an institution or training school. The General Assembly intends that State government should be responsive to this need through the Department of Human Resources by helping public and private local groups to plan, develop and fund community-based programs, both residential and nonresidential. It is recognized that such efforts will require the cooperation of several major State departments in addition to Human Resources, such as Public Instruction, Administrative Office of the Courts, and the Governor's Crime Commission.

(5) It is the intent of the General Assembly that the Secretary of the Department of Human Resources develop a funding mechanism that will provide State support for programs that meet the standards as developed under the provisions of this Article. (1975, c. 929; 1977, c. 627, ss. 18, 19.)

Cross References. — As to the Youth Services Advisory Committee, see §§ 143B-207, 143B-208. As to the codification of this Article, see Editor's Note under § 143B-207 in the 1978 Replacement Volume.

§ 7A-289.14. Duties of Secretary of Human Resources.

It shall be the duty of the Secretary of Human Resources to arrange for the appropriate unit or units of the Department of Human Resources to implement this Article as follows:

(1) To designate the appropriate unit of the Department of Human Resources to be responsible for coordination of state-level services in relation to delinquency prevention and youth services so that any citizen may go to one place in State government to receive services or access to services.

(2) Repealed by Session Laws 1977, c. 627, s. 20.

(3) To arrange appropriate coordination and planning within the child-serving agencies of the Department of Human Resources and promote interdepartmental coordination.

(4) To assist local governments and private service agencies in the development of community-based programs, and to provide information on the availability of potential funding sources and whatever assistance may be requested in making application for needed funding.

(5) To approve yearly program evaluations and to make recommendations to the General Assembly concerning continuation funding that might be supported by that evaluation.

(6) To approve program evaluation standards by which all programs developed under the provisions of this Article may be objectively evaluated.

Such standards as may be developed for the purpose of program evaluation shall be in addition to any current standards as may be applicable under the existing authority of the Social Services Commission and the Department of Human Resources.

Minimum operating standards as well as program evaluation standards as may be needed for new program models designed to fulfill the intent of this Article, may be developed at the discretion of the Secretary either by the Social Services Commission or the Secretary.

(7) To develop a formula for funding on a matching basis community-based services as provided for in this Article. This formula shall be based upon the county's or counties' relative ability to fund community-based programs for juveniles.

Local governments receiving State matching funds for programs under the provisions of this Article must maintain the same overall level of effort that existed at the time of the filing of the county assessment of youth needs with the Department of Human Resources as provided in G.S. 7A-289.16 of this Article. (1975, c. 929; 1977, c. 627, ss. 20-23; 1981, c. 50, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment deleted "by regular interaction with the Youth Services Advisory Committee" from the end of subdivision (3).

The Department of Human Resources and any other appropriate State or local agency are hereby authorized to purchase care or services from public or private agencies providing delinquency prevention programs or community-based services, provided the program meets the State standards as authorized by G.S. 7A-289.14. As institutional populations are reduced, the Department of Human Resources may divert State funds appropriated for institutional programs to purchase such services, pursuant to the provisions of the Executive Budget Act.

The Secretary of Human Resources shall prepare an annual report on the progress of the community-based programs of this State which shall include the most current institutional populations of children being served by the various departments of State government which shall include comparative costs of all child-serving agencies. Such report shall be submitted to the Governor, the General Assembly and the various State departments providing services to children. (1975, c. 929; 1977, c. 627, s. 24.)

The board of county commissioners of each participating county shall conduct or arrange for a study of youth needs in the county, giving particular attention to the need for delinquency prevention programs and community-based services (residential or nonresidential) which would provide an alternative to commitment to training school. The board of county commissioners may delegate the responsibility to any appropriate board or department of county government, or it may contract with an appropriate private agency or group for the study. Adjoining counties may cooperate in conducting such study on a regional basis, utilizing appropriate public or private resources.

The board of county commissioners of any county may request technical assistance from the Secretary of Human Resources in conducting such study. Each participating county shall develop a study plan for submission to the Secretary of Human Resources by January 1, 1976. Each participating county shall file a report of preliminary findings from such study to the Secretary of Human Resources by January 1, 1977, and its full report by January 1, 1978. Each participating county shall plan for a continuing assessment of youth needs in the county or region with annual reports to the Secretary of Human Resources. (1975, c. 929.)

ARTICLE 24B.

Termination of Parental Rights.

The General Assembly hereby declares as a matter of legislative policy with respect to termination of parental rights:

(1) The general purpose of this Article is to provide judicial procedures for terminating the legal relationship between a child and his or her biological or legal parents when such parents have demonstrated that they will not provide the degree of care which promotes the healthy and orderly physical and emotional well-being of the child.

(2) It is the further purpose of this Article to recognize the necessity for any child to have a permanent plan of care at the earliest possible age, while at the same time recognizing the need to protect all children from the unnecessary severance of a relationship with biological or legal parents.
(3) Action which is in the best interests of the child should be taken in all cases where the interests of the child and those of his or her parents or other persons are in conflict.
(4) This Article shall not be used to circumvent the provisions of Chapter 50A, the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act. (1977, c. 879, s. 8; 1979, c. 110, s. 6.)

For survey of 1979 constitutional law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1326 (1980).

Right to Counsel. — It cannot be said that the Constitution requires the appointment of counsel in every parental termination proceeding; therefore the decision whether due process calls for the appointment of counsel for indigent parents in termination proceedings is to be answered in the first instance by the trial court, subject, of course, to appellate review. Lassiter v. Department of Social Servs., — U.S. —, 101 S. Ct. 2153, 68 L. Ed. 2d 640 (1981).

The district court shall have exclusive original jurisdiction to hear and determine any petition relating to termination of parental rights to any child who resides in, is found in, or is in the legal or actual custody of a county department of social services or licensed child-placing agency in the district at the time of filing of the petition. The court shall have jurisdiction to terminate the parental rights of any parent irrespective of the age of the parent. The parent has the right to counsel and to appointed counsel in cases of indigency unless the parent waives the right. The fees of appointed counsel shall be borne by the Administrative Office of the Courts. In addition to the right to appointed counsel set forth above, a guardian ad litem shall be appointed in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 1A-1, Rule 17, to represent a parent in the following cases:

(1) Where it is alleged that a parent's rights should be terminated pursuant to G.S. 7A-289.32(7); or
(2) Where the parent is under the age of 18 years.

The fees of the guardian ad litem shall be borne by the Administrative Office of the Courts when the court finds that the respondent is indigent. In other cases the fees of the court appointed guardian ad litem shall be a proper charge against the respondent, if the respondent does not secure private legal counsel. Provided that, before exercising jurisdiction under this Article the court shall find that it would have jurisdiction to make a child custody determination under the provisions of G.S. 50A-3. (1977, c. 879, s. 8; 1979, c. 110, s. 7; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1206, s. 1; 1981, c. 966, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, ratified June 24, 1980, and effective 60 days after ratification, substituted the present third sentence for one which read "A guardian ad litem shall be appointed to represent such minor parent, under the age of 14 years," and added the fourth and fifth sentences.

Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1206, s. 6, provides that the act shall not apply to any action brought prior to its effective date.

The 1981 amendment substituted the third, fourth and fifth sentences for the former third sentence, which related to the appointment of an attorney as guardian ad litem for parents.

Session Laws 1981, c. 966, s. 5, provides: "This act shall become effective 30 days after ratification and shall only apply to cases brought on or after the effective date. The act was ratified July 10, 1981."

§ 7A-289.24. Who may petition.

A petition to terminate the parental rights of either or both parents to his, her, or their minor child may only be filed by:

(1) Either parent seeking termination of the right of the other parent; or

(2) Any person who has been judicially appointed as the guardian of the person of the child; or

(3) Any county department of social services or licensed child-placing agency to whom custody of the child has been given by a court of competent jurisdiction; or

(4) Any county department of social services or licensed child-placing agency to which the child has been surrendered for adoption by one of the parents or by the guardian of the person of such child, pursuant to G.S. 48-9(a)(1); or

(5) Any person with whom the child has resided for a continuous period of two years or more next preceding the filing of the petition. (1977, c. 879, s. 8.)

(1) The name of the child as it appears on the child's birth certificate, the date and place of birth, and the county where the child is presently residing.

(2) The name and address of the petitioner and facts sufficient to identify the petitioner as one entitled to petition under G.S. 7A-289.24.

(3) The name and address of the parents of the child. If the name or address of one or both parents is unknown to the petitioner, the petitioner shall set forth with particularity the petitioner's efforts to ascertain the identity or whereabouts of the parent or parents. Such information may be contained in an affidavit attached to the petition and incorporated therein by reference.

(4) The name and address of any person appointed as guardian of the person of the child pursuant to the provisions of Article 1 of Chapter 33 of the General Statutes, or of G.S. 7A-585.

(5) The name and address of any person or agency to whom custody of the child has been given by a court of this or any other state; and a copy of such custody order shall be attached to the petition.

(6) Facts which are sufficient to warrant a determination that one or more of the grounds for terminating parental rights exist.

(7) That the petition has not been filed to circumvent the provisions of Chapter 50A, the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act. (1977, c. 879, s. 8; 1979, c. 110, s. 8; 1981, c. 469, s. 23.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, substituted "G.S. 7A-585" for "G.S. 71-286(7)" at the end of subdivision (4).

(a) If either the name or identity of any parent whose parental rights the petitioner seeks to terminate is not known to the petitioner, the court shall within 10 days from the date of filing of the petition, or during the next term of court in the county where the petition is filed if there is no court in said county in that 10-day period, conduct a preliminary hearing to ascertain the name or identity of such parent.

(b) The court may, in its discretion, inquire of any known parent of the child concerning the identity of the unknown parent and may appoint a guardian ad litem for the unknown parent to conduct a diligent search for the parent. Should the court ascertain the name or identity of the parent, it shall enter a finding to that effect; and such parent shall be summoned to appear in accordance with G.S. 7A-289.27.

(c) Notice of the preliminary hearing need be given only to the petitioner who shall appear at the hearing; but the court may cause summons to be issued to any person directing him to appear and testify.

(d) If the court is unable to ascertain the name or identity of the unknown parent, the court shall order publication of notice of the termination proceeding and shall specifically order the place or places of publication and the contents of the notice which the court concludes is most likely to identify the child to such unknown parent. The notice shall be published in a newspaper qualified for legal advertising in accordance with G.S. 1-597 and 1-598 and published in the counties directed by the court, once a week for three successive weeks. Provided, further, the notice shall:

(1) Designate the court in which the petition is pending;

(2) Be directed to "the father (mother) (father and mother) of a male (female) child born on or about . . . . . in . . . . . County, (date) . . . . . , ... , respondent"; (city) (State)

(3) Designate the docket number and title of the case (the court may direct the actual name of the title be eliminated and the words "In Re Doe" substituted therefor);

(4) State that a petition seeking to terminate the parental rights of the respondent has been filed;

(5) Direct the respondent to answer the petition within 30 days after a date stated in the notice, exclusive of such date, which date so stated shall be the date of first publication of notice, and be substantially in the form as set forth in G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4(j)(9)(c); and

(6) State that the respondent's parental rights to the child will be terminated upon failure to answer the petition within the time prescribed.

Upon completion of the service, an affidavit of the publisher shall be filed with the court.

(e) The court shall issue the order required by G.S. 7A-289.26(b) and (d) within 30 days from the date of the preliminary hearing unless the court shall determine that additional time for investigation is required.

(f) Upon the failure of the parent served by publication pursuant to G.S. 7A-289.26(d) to answer the petition within the time prescribed, the court shall issue an order terminating all parental rights of the unknown parent. (1977, c. 879, s. 8.)

Except as provided in G.S. 7A-289.26, upon the filing of the petition, the court shall cause a summons to be issued, directed to the following persons or agency, not otherwise a party petitioner, who shall be named as respondents:

(1) The parents of the child;

(2) Any person who has been judicially appointed as guardian of the person of the child;

(3) The custodian of the child appointed by a court of competent jurisdiction;

(4) Any county department of social services or licensed child-placing agency to whom a child has been released by one parent pursuant to G.S. 48-9(a)(1); and

(5) The child, if he or she is 12 years of age or older at the time the petition is filed.

Provided, no summons need be directed to or served upon any parent who has previously surrendered the child to a county department of social services or licensed child-placing agency, nor to any parent who has consented to the adoption of the child by the petitioner. The summons shall notify the respondents to file written answer within 30 days after service of the summons and petition and that if the respondents fail to answer, the petitioner will apply to the court for the relief prayed for in the petition. The summons shall also notify the parents of the child that the parents are entitled to appointed counsel if they are indigent, provided they request counsel at or before the time of the hearing and that a parent is entitled to attend any hearing affecting his parental rights. Service of the summons shall be completed as provided under the procedures established by G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4(j); but the parent of the child shall not be deemed to be under disability even though such parent is a minor. (1977, c. 879, s. 8; 1981, c. 966, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment added the third sentence of the second paragraph.

Session Laws 1981, c. 966, s. 5, provides: "This act shall become effective 30 days after ratification and shall only apply to cases brought on or after the effective date. The act was ratified July 10, 1981."

Upon the failure of the respondents to file written answer to the petition with the court within 30 days after service of the summons and petition, or within the time period established for a defendant's reply by G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4(j)(9)c if service is by publication, the court shall issue an order terminating all parental and custodial rights of the respondent or respondents with respect to the child; provided the court shall order a hearing on the petition and may examine the petitioner or others on the facts alleged in the petition. § 7A-289.29. Answer of respondents.

(a) Any respondent may file a written answer to the petition. The answer shall admit or deny the allegations of the petition and shall set forth the name and address of the answering respondent or his or her attorney.

(b) If an answer denies any material allegation of the petition, the court shall appoint a licensed attorney as guardian ad litem for the child to represent the best interests of the child. The court shall conduct a special hearing after notice of not less than 10 days nor more than 30 days to the petitioner, the answering respondent(s), and the guardian ad litem for the child, to determine the issues raised by the petition and answer(s). Notice of the hearing shall be deemed to have been given upon the depositing thereof in the United States mail, first-class postage prepaid, and addressed to the petitioner, respondent, and guardian ad litem or their counsel of record, at the addresses appearing in the petition and responsive pleading. § 7A-289.30. Adjudicatory hearing on termination.

(a) The hearing on the termination of parental rights shall be conducted by the district court sitting without a jury. Reporting of the hearing shall be as provided by G.S. 7A-198 for reporting civil trials.

(a1) The court shall inquire whether the child's parents are present at the hearing and, if so, whether they are represented by counsel. If the parents are not represented by counsel, the court shall inquire whether the parents desire counsel but are indigent. In the event that the parents desire counsel but are indigent as defined in G.S. 7A-450(a) and are unable to obtain counsel to represent them, the court shall appoint counsel to represent them. The court shall grant the parents such an extension of time as is reasonable to permit their appointed counsel to prepare their defense to the termination petition. In the event that the parents do not desire counsel and are present at the hearing, the court shall examine each parent and make findings of fact sufficient to show that the waivers were knowing and voluntary. This examination shall be reported as provided in G.S. 7A-198.

(b) The court may, upon finding that reasonable cause exists, order the child to be examined by a psychiatrist, a licensed clinical psychologist, a physician, a public or private agency, or any other expert in order that the child's psychological or physical condition or needs may be ascertained or, in the case of a parent whose ability to care for the child is at issue, the court may order a similar examination of any parent of the child.

(c) The court may for good cause shown continue the hearing for such time as is required for receiving additional evidence, any reports or assessments which the court has requested, or any other information needed in the best interest of the child.

(d) The court shall take evidence, find the facts, and shall adjudicate the existence or nonexistence of any of the circumstances set forth in G.S. 7A-289.32 which authorize the termination of parental rights of the respondent.

(e) All findings of fact shall be based on clear, cogent, and convincing evidence. No husband-wife or physician-patient privilege shall be grounds for excluding any evidence regarding the existence or nonexistence of any circumstance authorizing the termination of parental rights. (1977, c. 879, s. 8; 1979, c. 669, s. 1; 1981, c. 966, s. 3.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment added subsection (a1).

(a) Should the court determine that any one or more of the conditions authorizing a termination of the parental rights of a parent exist, the court shall issue an order terminating the parental rights of such parent with respect to the child unless the court shall further determine that the best interests of the child require that the parental rights of such parent not be terminated.

(b) Should the court conclude that irrespective of the existence of one or more circumstances authorizing termination of parental rights, the best interests of the child require that such rights should not be terminated, the court shall dismiss the petition, but only after setting forth the facts and conclusions upon which such dismissal is based.

(c) Should the court determine that circumstances authorizing termination of parental rights do not exist, the court shall dismiss the petition, making appropriate findings of fact and conclusions.

(d) The court may tax the cost of the proceeding to any party. (1977, c. 879, s. 8.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 constitutional law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1326 (1980).

The court may terminate the parental rights upon a finding of one or more of the following:

(1) Repealed by Session Laws 1979, c. 669, s. 2.

(2) The parent has abused or neglected the child. The child shall be deemed to be abused or neglected if the court finds the child to be an abused child within the meaning of G.S. 110-117(1)(a), (b), or (c), or a neglected child within the meaning of G.S. 7A-278(4).

(3) The parent has willfully left the child in foster care for more than two consecutive years without showing to the satisfaction of the court that substantial progress has been made within two years in correcting those conditions which led to the removal of the child for neglect, or without showing positive response within two years to the diligent efforts of a county department of social services, a child-caring institution or licensed child-placing agency to encourage the parent to strengthen the parental relationship to the child or to make and follow through with constructive planning for the future of the child.

(4) The child has been placed in the custody of a county department of social services, a licensed child-placing agency, or a child-caring institution, and the parent, for a continuous period of six months next preceding the filing of the petition, has failed to pay a reasonable portion of the cost of care for the child.

(5) One parent has been awarded custody of the child by judicial decree, or has custody by agreement of the parents, and the other parent whose parental rights are sought to be terminated has for a period of one year or more next preceding the filing of the petition willfully failed without justification to pay for the care, support, and education of the child, as required by said decree or custody agreement.

(6) The father of a child born out of wedlock has not prior to the filing of a petition to terminate his parental rights:

a. Establish(ed) paternity judicially or by affidavit which has been filed in a central registry maintained by the Department of Human Resources; provided, the court shall inquire of the Department of Human Resources as to whether such an affidavit has been so filed and shall incorporate into the case record the Department's certified reply; or

b. Legitimated the child pursuant to provisions of G.S. 49-10, or filed a petition for this specific purpose; or

c. Legitimated the child by marriage to the mother of the child; or

d. Provided substantial financial support or consistent care with respect to the child and mother.

(7) That the parent is incapable as a result of mental retardation, mental illness, organic brain syndrome, or any other degenerative mental condition of providing for the proper care and supervision of the child, such that the child is a dependent child within the meaning of G.S. 7A-517(13), and that there is a reasonable probability that such incapability will continue throughout the minority of the child. (1977, c. 879, s. 8; 1979, c. 669, s. 2; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1088, s. 2; c. 1206, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Sections 110-117 and 7A-278, referred to in this section, were repealed by Session Laws 1979, c. 815. See now § 7A-516.

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, ratified June 16, 1980 and effective 90 days after ratification, added in subdivision (6)a the language beginning "which has been filed" and ending "certified reply."

The second 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, ratified June 24, 1980, and effective 60 days after ratification, added subdivision (7).

Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1206, s. 6, provides that the act shall not apply to any action brought prior to its effective date.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases cited in the following annotation were decided under former § 7A-288.

Section Is Not Unconstitutional. — Statutes permitting the termination of parental rights if a child is neglected as defined by subdivision (2) of this section, or if the parents fail to pay a reasonable portion of a child's foster care costs for six months preceding the filing of the petition for termination of parental rights as defined by subdivision (4) of this section, are not unconstitutionally vague but are sufficiently definite to be applied in a uniform manner to protect both the State's substantial interest in the welfare of minor children and the parents' fundamental right to the integrity of their family unit. In re Biggers, 50 N.C. App. 332, 274 S.E.2d 236 (1981).

This section, which permits the termination of parental rights for failure of the parent to pay a reasonable portion of a child's foster care costs for six months preceding the filing of the petition, does not violate the equal protection clause by discriminating among persons similarly situated since it applies to all parents equally and allows due consideration of their specific individual financial circumstances. In re Biggers, 50 N.C. App. 332, 274 S.E.2d 236 (1981).

Proper Exercise of Police Power. — It certainly is not an unreasonable or arbitrary exercise of the police power for the State to intervene between parent and child where that child is helpless and defenseless and is endangered by parental neglect, inattention, or abuse. In re Biggers, 50 N.C. App. 332, 274 S.E.2d 236 (1981).

The court is not required to terminate parental rights under any circumstances. Forsyth County Dep't of Social Servs. v. Roberts, 22 N.C. App. 658, 207 S.E.2d 368 (1974); In re Godwin, 31 N.C. App. 137, 228 S.E.2d 521 (1976).

But Has Discretionary Authority to Do So. — The court has the authority to terminate parental rights in the exercise of its discretion. Forsyth County Dep't of Social Servs. v. Roberts, 22 N.C. App. 658, 207 S.E.2d 368 (1974); In re Godwin, 31 N.C. App. 137, 228 S.E.2d 521 (1976).

Rights Properly Terminated. — The trial court properly terminated respondent mother's parental rights in her two children where the evidence supported findings by the court that the children were neglected children within the meaning of former § 7A-278(4) and that respondent failed to pay any portion of their foster care costs for more than six months preceding the filing of the petition as called for under subdivision (4) of this section. In re Biggers, 50 N.C. App. 332, 274 S.E.2d 236 (1981).

An order terminating the parental rights completely and permanently terminates all rights and obligations of the parent to the child and of the child to the parent, arising from the parental relationship, except that the child's right of inheritance from his or her parent shall not terminate until such time as a final order of adoption is issued. Such parent is not thereafter entitled to notice of proceedings to adopt the child and may not object thereto or otherwise participate therein.

(1) If the child had been placed in the custody of or released for adoption by one parent to, a county department of social services or licensed child-placing agency and is in the custody of such agency at the time of such filing of the petition, that agency shall, upon entry of the order terminating parental rights, acquire all of the rights for placement of said child as such agency would have acquired had the parent whose rights are terminated released the child to that agency pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 48-9(a)(1), including the right to consent to the adoption of such child.

(2) Except as provided in subdivision (1) above, upon entering an order terminating the parental rights of one or both parents, the court may place the child in the custody of the petitioner, or some other suitable person, or in the custody of the Department of Social Services or licensed child-placing agency, as may appear to be in the best interest of the child. (1977, c. 879, s. 8.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 constitutional law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1326 (1980).

CASE NOTES

Rights of Foster Parents. — Foster parents had no standing to bring an action for permanent custody of a child temporarily placed with them by the county department of social services where the rights of the child's natural parents had been surrendered to the department of social services, and the department had legal custody of the child and the right to place the child for adoption. Oxendine v. Catawba County Dep't of Social Servs., 49 N.C. App. 570, 272 S.E.2d 417 (1980), cert. granted, — N.C. —, 274 S.E.2d 230 (1981).

Any child, parent, guardian, custodian or agency who is a party to a proceeding under this Article may appeal from an adjudication or any order of disposition to the Court of Appeals, provided that notice of appeal is given in open court at the time of the hearing or in writing within 10 days after the hearing. Pending disposition of an appeal, the court may enter such temporary order affecting the custody or placement of the child as the court finds to be in the best interest of the child or the best interest of the State. Upon the affirmation of the order of adjudication or disposition of the district court in a juvenile case by the Court of Appeals, or by the Supreme Court in the event of such an appeal, the district court shall have authority to modify or alter its original order of adjudication or disposition as the court finds to be in the best interest of the child to reflect any adjustment made by the child or change in circumstances during the period of time the case on appeal was pending, provided that if such modifying order be entered ex parte, the court shall give notice to interested parties to show cause, if any there be, within 10 days thereafter, as to why said modifying order should be vacated or altered. ARTICLE 25.

Jurisdiction and Procedure in Criminal Appeals from Districts Courts.

Any defendant convicted in district court before the magistrate may appeal to the district court for trial de novo before the district court judge. Any defendant convicted in district court before the judge may appeal to the superior court for trial de novo. Notice of appeal may be given orally in open court, or to the clerk in writing within 10 days of entry of judgment. Upon expiration of the 10-day period in which an appeal may be entered, if an appeal has been entered and not withdrawn, the clerk shall transfer the case to the district or superior court docket. The original bail shall stand pending appeal, unless the judge orders bail denied, increased, or reduced. CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Appeal to Superior Court.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

This section and § 49-7, when properly construed together, are not inconsistent. State v. Coffey, 3 N.C. App. 133, 164 S.E.2d 39 (1968).

Hence, the proviso in § 49-7 was not repealed either expressly or by implication by enactment of this section. State v. Coffey, 3 N.C. App. 133, 164 S.E.2d 39 (1968).

Purpose of State's de novo procedure is to provide all criminal defendants charged with misdemeanor violations the right to a "speedy trial" in the district court and to offer them an opportunity to learn about the State's case without revealing their own. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Validity of Trial without Jury in Inferior Court. — The fact that a right of appeal was given where the defendant was convicted in the lower court without the intervention of a jury has generally been regarded as a sufficient reason, in support of the validity of such trials without a jury in the inferior tribunal, as by appealing the defendant secures his right to a jury trial in the superior court, and therefore cannot justly complain that he has been deprived of his constitutional right. State v. Spencer, 276 N.C. 535, 173 S.E.2d 765 (1970); State v. Coats, 17 N.C. App. 407, 194 S.E.2d 366 (1973).

Stated in State v. Thompson, 2 N.C. App. 508, 163 S.E.2d 410 (1968).

Cited in State v. Speights, 280 N.C. 137, 185 S.E.2d 152 (1971); Perry v. Blackledge, 453 F.2d 856 (4th Cir. 1971).

II. APPEAL TO SUPERIOR COURT.

Trial de novo in the superior court is a new trial from beginning to end, on both law and facts, disregarding completely the plea, trial, verdict and judgment below; and the superior court judgment entered upon conviction there is wholly independent of any judgment which was entered in the inferior court. State v. Spencer, 276 N.C. 535, 173 S.E.2d 765 (1970);

State v. Coats, 17 N.C. App. 407, 194 S.E.2d 366 (1973); State v. Williams, 41 N.C. App. 287, 254 S.E.2d 649, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 699, 259 S.E.2d 297 (1979).

And Lower Court Judgment is Annulled. — When an appeal of right is taken to the superior court, in contemplation of law it is as if the case had been brought there originally and there had been no previous trial. The judgment appealed from is completely annulled and is not thereafter available for any purpose. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970); State v. Bryant, 11 N.C. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 211 (1971); State v. Coats, 17 N.C. App. 407, 194 S.E.2d 366 (1973).

And May Be Ignored Even Where Defendant Was Denied Constitutional Rights. — The superior court division, as the trial court upon appeal and trial de novo, is generally justified in disregarding completely the plea, trial, verdict and judgment below, even in those situations in which the inferior court has not granted the defendant his constitutional rights. State v. Williams, 41 N.C. App. 287, 254 S.E.2d 649, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 699, 259 S.E.2d 297 (1979).

Defendants are entitled to a trial de novo in the superior court even though their trials in the inferior court were free from error. State v. Spencer, 276 N.C. 535, 173 S.E.2d 765 (1970); State v. Coats, 17 N.C. App. 407, 194 S.E.2d 366 (1973).

Even After Guilty Plea. — An appeal from a conviction in an inferior court entitles the defendant to a trial de novo in the superior court as a matter of right; and this is true even when an accused pleads guilty in the inferior court. State v. Bryant, 11 N.C. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 211 (1971).

An accused in a criminal case is entitled to a trial de novo as a matter of right on appeal to the superior court from an inferior court, even when the accused entered a guilty plea in the inferior court. State v. Fox, 34 N.C. App. 576, 239 S.E.2d 471 (1977).

But State Not Bound by Plea Bargain after Defendant Appeals. — Where a defendant originally charged with felonies entered guilty pleas to misdemeanors in the district court pursuant to a plea bargain with the State, but then appealed to the superior court for a trial de novo, the State was not bound by the agreement and could try the defendant upon the felony charges or any lesser included offenses. State v. Fox, 34 N.C. App. 576, 239 S.E.2d 471 (1977).

Waiver of Right of Appeal. — By acquiescing in the terms of the judgment of the district court by paying a fine and costs, defendant waived his statutory right of appeal to the superior court. State v. Vestal, 34 N.C. App. 610, 239 S.E.2d 275 (1977).

Transcript of District Court Proceedings Not Required. — State's de novo procedure has no requirement that a defendant purchase and provide the superior court with a transcript of the district court proceedings in order to secure full appellate review. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

There is no merit in the argument that a transcript of the district court proceedings is needed for an effective appeal for trial de novo in superior court. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Nor Is Indigent Entitled to Free Transcript. — There are no constitutional infirmities in the denial of a free transcript of the district court proceedings to an indigent defendant. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Sentence in Superior Court May Be Lighter or Heavier than That Imposed by District Court. — Inasmuch as the trial in the superior court is without regard to the proceedings in the district court, the judge of the superior court is necessarily required to enter his own independent judgment. His sentence may be lighter or heavier than that imposed by the inferior court, provided, of course, it does not exceed the maximum punishment which the inferior court could have imposed. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970).

In the sound discretion of the superior court judge, the defendant's sentence may be lighter or heavier than that imposed in the district court provided that it does not exceed the statutory maximum. State v. Spencer, 276 N.C. 535, 173 S.E.2d 765 (1970).

And Heavier Sentence Is No Violation of Constitutional or Statutory Rights. — The fact that a defendant received a greater sentence in the superior court than he received in a recorder's court is no violation of his constitutional or statutory rights. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970); State v. Coats, 17 N.C. App. 407, 194 S.E.2d 366 (1973).

The fact that defendants received a greater sentence in the superior court than they received in the district court is no violation of their constitutional rights. State v. Spencer, 276 N.C. 535, 173 S.E.2d 765 (1970).

But Reasons for Imposing Heavier Sentence Must Affirmatively Appear. — Whenever a judge imposes a more severe sentence upon a defendant after a new trial, the reasons for his doing so must affirmatively appear. Those reasons must be based upon objective information concerning identifiable conduct on the part of the defendant occurring after the time of the original sentencing proceeding. And the factual data upon which the increased sentence is based must be made part of the record, so that the constitutional legitimacy of the increased sentence may be fully reviewed on appeal. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970).

Remand to District Court. — Where the appeal has been docketed in the superior court, the judge presiding, at term, has the authority, upon satisfactory cause shown and with the consent of the defendant, to remand the case to the inferior court for clarifying judgment or other proceedings. This would reinstate the case and revest the inferior court with jurisdiction. State v. Bryant, 11 N.C. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 211 (1971).

Same — Cause or Consent of Defendant Required. — Where a defendant has appealed for trial de novo in superior court, a judge of that court has no authority, absent satisfactory cause shown or without the consent of the defendant, to dismiss the appeal and remand the case for compliance with the judgment of the district court. State v. Fox, 34 N.C. App. 576, 239 S.E.2d 471 (1977).

Same — Failure to Appear in Court or Consent to Dismissal. — Where the defendant neither appears in court when his case is called nor consents to dismissal of his appeal, the trial judge is without authority to dismiss the appeal and remand the case to the district court for compliance with the judgment of that court. The defendant is entitled to a trial as if the case originated in the superior court. State v. Bryant, 11 N.C. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 211 (1971).

ARTICLE 28.

Uniform Costs and Fees in the Trial Divisions.

§ 7A-304. Costs in criminal actions.

(a) In every criminal case in the superior or district court, wherein the defendant is convicted, or enters a plea of guilty or nolo contendere, or when costs are assessed against the prosecuting witness, the following costs shall be assessed and collected, except that when the judgment imposes an active prison sentence, costs shall be assessed and collected only when the judgment specifically so provides:

(1) For each arrest or personal service of criminal process, including citations and subpoenas, the sum of four dollars ($4.00), to be remitted to the county wherein the arrest was made or process was served, except that in those cases in which the arrest was made or process served by a law-enforcement officer employed by a municipality, the fee shall be paid to the municipality employing the officer.

(2) For the use of the courtroom and related judicial facilities, the sum of five dollars ($5.00) in the district court, including cases before a magistrate, and the sum of twenty-three dollars ($23.00) in superior court, to be remitted to the county in which the judgment is rendered. In all cases where the judgment is rendered in facilities provided by a municipality, the facilities fee shall be paid to the municipality. Funds derived from the facilities fees shall be used exclusively by the county or municipality for providing, maintaining, and constructing adequate courtroom and related judicial facilities, including: adequate space and furniture for judges, district attorneys, public defenders, magistrates, juries, and other court related personnel; office space, furniture and vaults for the clerk; jail and juvenile detention facilities; free parking for jurors; and a law library (including books) if one has heretofore been established or if the governing body hereafter decides to establish one.

In the event the funds derived from the facilities fees exceed what is needed for these purposes, the county or municipality may, with the approval of the Administrative Officer of the Courts as to the amount, use any or all of the excess to retire outstanding indebtedness incurred in the construction of the facilities, or to reimburse the county or municipality for funds expended in constructing or renovating the facilities (without incurring any indebtedness) within a period of two years before or after the date a district court is established in such county, or to supplement the operations of the General Court of Justice in the county.

(3) For the Law-Enforcement Officers' Benefit and Retirement Fund, the sum of three dollars ($3.00), to be remitted to the State Treasurer and administered as provided in Chapter 143, Article 12, of the General Statutes.

(4) For support of the General Court of Justice, the sum of nineteen dollars ($19.00) in the district court, including cases before a magistrate, and the sum of twenty-eight dollars ($28.00) in the superior court, to be remitted to the State Treasurer.

(a1) The costs assessed pursuant to subsection (a) may also be collected by clerks of court for charges in which a party elects to pay the court's costs to satisfy the requirements of G.S. 20-7.2. Costs collected pursuant to this subsection shall be allocated in the same manner as other costs collected pursuant to this section. If a party elects to pay the costs of court to satisfy the requirements of G.S. 20-7.2 and is subsequently adjudged guilty of the same charge by the court, he shall not be required to pay the costs of court again for that charge, but he is subject to any other orders of the court, including an order to pay a fine.

(b) On appeal, costs are cumulative, and costs assessed before a magistrate shall be added to costs assessed in the district court, and costs assessed in the district court shall be added to costs assessed in the superior court, except that the fee for the Law-Enforcement Officers' Benefit and Retirement Fund shall be assessed only once in each case. No superior court costs shall be assessed against a defendant who gives notice of appeal from the district court but withdraws it prior to the expiration of the 10-day period for entering notice of appeal. When a case is reversed on appeal, the defendant shall not be liable for costs, and the State shall be liable for the cost of printing records and briefs in the Appellate Division.

(c) The costs set forth in this section are complete and exclusive, and in lieu of any and all other costs and fees, except that witness fees, expenses for blood tests and comparisons incurred by G.S. 8-50.1(a), jail fees and cost of necessary trial transcripts shall be assessed as provided by law in addition thereto. Nothing in this section shall limit the power or discretion of the judge in imposing fines or forfeitures or ordering restitution.

(d) In any criminal case in which the liability for costs, fines, restitution, or any other lawful charge has been finally determined, the clerk of superior court shall, unless otherwise ordered by the presiding judge, disburse such funds when paid in accordance with the following priorities:

(1) Costs due the county;
(2) Costs due the city;
(3) Fines to the county school fund;
(4) Sums in restitution prorated among the persons entitled thereto;
(5) Costs due the State;
(6) Attorney's fees.

Sums in restitution received by the clerk of superior court shall be disbursed when:

(1) Complete restitution has been received; or

(2) When, in the opinion of the clerk, additional payments in restriction will not be collected; or
(3) Upon the request of the person or persons entitled thereto; and
(4) In any event, at least once each calendar year. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 601, s. 2; c. 691, ss. 27-29; 1049, s. 5; 1969, c. 1013, s. 3; c. 1190, ss. 28, 29; 1971, c. 377, ss. 19-21; c. 1129; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; 1975, c. 558, ss. 1, 2; 1975, 2nd Sess., c. 980, s. 1; 1979, c. 576, s. 3; 1981, c. 369; c. 691, s. 1; c. 896, s. 2; c. 959, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to items allowed as costs generally, see § 6-1 and the note thereto.

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "four dollars ($4.00)" for "two dollars ($2.00)" in subdivision (1) of subsection (a).

The second 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "five dollars ($5.00)" for "three dollars ($3.00)" and substituted "twenty-three dollars ($23.00)" for "fifteen dollars ($15.00)" in the first sentence of subdivision (2) of subsection (a). Session Laws 1981, c. 691, s. 5, provides that the act shall apply to actions initiated on or after July 1, 1981.

The third 1981 amendment added subsection (a1).

The fourth 1981 amendment, effective August 1, 1981, rewrote subsection (d).

Session Laws 1981, c. 959, ss. 2 through 4, provides:

"Sec. 2. The provisions hereof shall also apply to all funds on deposit with the clerks of superior court on the effective date of this act.

"Sec. 3. For purposes of determining the effect of the provisions of Section 1, the clerks of the superior court shall for one year submit quarterly reports to the Administrative Office of the Courts and to the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety concerning the amount of court costs and fines ordered and the amount of restitution ordered, scheduled to be collected, collected, and disbursed, either through prepayment or partial payment (distinguishing between supervised and unsupervised probation) during the quarter. Such reports shall be submitted by the tenth working day following the quarters ending September 30 and December 31, 1981, and March 31 and June 30, 1982. Forms for the transcribing and reporting of this information shall be prepared and distributed by the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety in accordance with procedures approved by the Administrative Office of the Courts.

"Sec. 4. This act shall become effective August 1, 1981, and applies to sums disbursed on and after that date."

CASE NOTES

"Facilities Fee". — In cases which were instituted after the establishment of the district court, the costs, including a "facilities fee," shall be assessed according to §§ 7A-300 through 7A-317.1. The "facilities fee" assessed in this classification of cases shall be disbursed monthly by the clerk of superior court to the county or municipality providing the facilities. Blackwell v. Montague, 15 N.C. App. 564, 190 S.E.2d 384 (1972).

(a) In every civil action in the superior or district court the following costs shall be assessed:

(1) For the use of the courtroom and related judicial facilities, the sum of five dollars ($5.00) in cases heard before a magistrate, and the sum of nine dollars ($9.00) in district and superior court, to be remitted to the county in which the judgment is rendered, except that in all cases in which the judgment is rendered in facilities provided by a municipality, the facilities fee shall be paid to the municipality. Funds derived from the facilities fees shall be used in the same manner, for the same purposes, and subject to the same restrictions, as facilities fees assessed in criminal actions.
(2) For support of the General Court of Justice, the sum of twenty-eight dollars ($28.00) in the superior court, and the sum of eighteen dollars

($18.00) in the district court, except that in the district court if the amount sued for does not exceed one thousand dollars ($1,000), excluding interest, the sum shall be five dollars ($5.00). Sums collected under this subsection shall be remitted to the State Treasurer.

(b) On appeal, costs are cumulative, and when cases heard before a magistrate are appealed to the district court, the General Court of Justice fee and the facilities fee applicable in the district court shall be added to the fees assessed before the magistrate. When an order of the clerk of the superior court is appealed to either the district court or the superior court, no additional General Court of Justice fee or facilities fee shall be assessed.

(c) The clerk of superior court, at the time of the filing of the papers initiating the action or the appeal, shall collect as advance court costs, the facilities fee and General Court of Justice fee, except in suits in forma pauperis. He shall also collect the fee for discovery procedures under Rule 27(a) and (b) at the time of the filing of the verified petition.

(d) The uniform costs set forth in this section are complete and exclusive, and in lieu of any and all other costs and fees, except that the following expenses, when incurred, are also assessable or recoverable, as the case may be:

(1) Witness fees, as provided by law.
(2) Jail fees, as provided by law.
(3) Counsel fees, as provided by law.
(4) Expense of service of process by certified mail and by publication.
(5) Costs on appeal to the superior court, or to the appellate division, as the case may be, of the original transcript of testimony, if any, insofar as essential to the appeal.
(6) Fees for personal service and civil process and other sheriff's fees, as provided by law.
(7) Fees of guardians ad litem, referees, receivers, commissioners, surveyors, arbitrators, appraisers, and other similar court appointees, as provided by law. The fee of such appointees shall include reasonable reimbursement for stenographic assistance, when necessary.
(8) Fees of interpreters, when authorized and approved by the court.
(9) Premiums for surety bonds for prosecution, as authorized by G.S. 1-109.

Appealing Party Not Prejudiced by Failure of Clerk to Collect Costs. — Under the provisions of subsection (c) of this section, it is clear that the duty of collecting the additional costs at the time of the filing of the papers initiating an appeal is imposed upon the clerk. But a failure of the clerk to perform his duty in this respect should not operate to prejudice the appealing party. Porter v. Cahill, 1 N.C. App. 579, 162 S.E.2d 128 (1968).

Fair market value is determined by the sale price if there is a sale, the appraiser's valuation if there is no sale, or the appraised value from the property tax records if there is neither a sale nor an appraiser's valuation. Sums collected under this subsection shall be remitted to the State Treasurer.

(b) The facilities fee and thirteen dollars ($13.00) of the General Court of Justice fee are payable at the time the proceeding is initiated.

Sums collected under this subsection shall be remitted to the State Treasurer.

CASE NOTES

The court's power to tax costs is entirely dependent upon statutory authorization. State v. Johnson, 282 N.C. 1, 191 S.E.2d 641 (1972).

Subsections (a) and (d) of this section must be considered together. State v. Johnson, 282 N.C. 1, 191 S.E.2d 641 (1972).

As to expert witnesses, subsection (d) modifies subsection (a) by permitting the court, in its discretion, to increase their compensation and allowances, but the modification relates only to the amount of an expert witness's fee; it does not abrogate the requirement that all witnesses must be subpoenaed before they are entitled to compensation. State v. Johnson, 282 N.C. 1, 191 S.E.2d 641 (1972).

Where the witnesses did not testify in obedience to a subpoena, the trial court was without authority to allow them expert fees or to tax the losing party with the costs of their attendance. State v. Johnson, 282 N.C. 1, 191 S.E.2d 641 (1972); Couch v. Couch, 18 N.C. App. 108, 196 S.E.2d 64 (1973).

Stated in Siedlecki v. Powell, 36 N.C. App. 690, 245 S.E.2d 417 (1978).

In a criminal action, if no prosecuting witness is designated by the court as liable for the costs, and the defendant is acquitted, or convicted and unable to pay, or a nolle prosequi is entered, or judgment is arrested, or probable cause is not found, or the grand jury fails to return a true bill, the State shall be liable for the witness fees allowed per G.S. 7A-314 and any expenses for blood tests and comparisons incurred per G.S. 8-50.1(a). (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1979, c. 576, s. 4.)

A witness in a criminal action who is entitled to a witness fee and who proves his attendance prior to assessment of the bill of costs shall be paid by the clerk from State funds and the amount disbursed shall be assessed in the bill of costs. When the State is liable for the fee, a witness who proves his attendance not later than the last day of court in the week in which the trial was completed shall be paid by the clerk from State funds. If more than two witnesses shall be subpoenaed, bound over, or recognized, to prove a single material fact, disbursements to such additional witnesses shall be charged against the party issuing or requesting the subpoena. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1971, c. 377, s. 28.)

Counties and municipalities are not required to advance costs for the facilities fee, the General Court of Justice fee, the miscellaneous fees enumerated in G.S. 7A-308, or the civil process fees enumerated in G.S. 7A-311. (1967, c. 691, s. 35.)

Editor's Note. — Section 35, c. 691, Session Laws 1967, which inserted this section, renumbered former §§ 7A-317 and 7A-318 as §§ 7A-318 and 7A-319 (now repealed), respectively.

(a) On and after the date that the district court is established in a judicial district, costs in every action, proceeding or other matter pending in the General Court of Justice in that district, shall be assessed as provided in this Article, unless costs have been finally assessed according to prior law. (c) When the General Court of Justice fee and the facilities fee are assessed as provided in this Article and credit is given for fees, costs, and commissions paid before the district court was established in the district, the actual amount thereafter received by the clerk shall be remitted to the State for the support of the General Court of Justice.

(d) When costs have been finally assessed according to prior law, but come into the hands of the clerk after the district court is established in the district, funds so received shall be disbursed according to prior law.

(e) Cost funds in the hands of the clerk at the time the district court is established shall be disbursed according to prior law. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 35.)

He is a servant of the General Court of Justice and the Chief Justice. As such, he acts as an extension of the judicial personality of the Chief Justice. He is considered by North Carolina to be among its judicial personnel and is equivalent to service as a judge of the Superior Court Division of the General Court of Justice in certain instances. His position entitles him to the judicial immunity held by other judicial personnel. Fowler v. Alexander, 340 F. Supp. 168 (M.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

He shall receive the annual salary provided in the Budget Appropriations Act, payable monthly, and reimbursement for travel and subsistence expenses at the same rate as State employees generally. Service as Director shall be equivalent to service as a superior court judge for the purposes of entitlement to retirement pay or to retirement for disability. CASE NOTES

Stated in Fowler v. Alexander, 340 F. Supp. 168 (M.D.N.C. 1972).

(4) Accept and utilize federal or private funds, as available, to improve defense services for the indigent, including indigent juveniles alleged to be delinquent or undisciplined. To facilitate processing of juvenile cases, the administrative officer is further authorized, in any judicial

ARTICLE 30.
Judicial Standards Commission.

§ 7A-375. Judicial Standards Commission.

(a) The Judicial Standards Commission shall consist of: one Court of Appeals judge, one superior court judge, and one district court judge, each appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court; two members of the State Bar who have actively practiced in the courts of the State for at least 10 years, elected by the State Bar Council; and two citizens who are not judges, active or retired, nor members of the State Bar, appointed by the Governor. The Court of Appeals judge shall act as chairman of the Commission.

(b) Terms of Commission members shall be for six years, except that, to achieve overlapping of terms, one of the judges, one of the practicing members of the State Bar, and one of the citizens shall be appointed initially for a term of only three years. No member who has served a full six-year term is eligible for reappointment. If a member ceases to have the qualifications required for his appointment, he ceases to be a member. Vacancies are filled in the same manner as the original appointment, for the remainder of the term. Members who are not judges are entitled to per diem and all members are entitled to reimbursement for travel and subsistence expenses at the rate applicable to members of State boards and commissions generally, for each day engaged in official business.

(c) If a member of the Commission who is a judge becomes disabled, or becomes a respondent before the Commission, the Chief Justice shall appoint an alternate member to serve during the period of disability or disqualification. The alternate member shall be from the same division of the General Court of Justice as the judge whose place he takes. If a member of the Commission who is not a judge becomes disabled, the Governor, if he appointed the disabled member, shall appoint, or the State Bar Council, if it elected the disabled member, shall elect, an alternate member to serve during the period of disability. In a particular case, if a member disqualifies himself, or is successfully challenged for cause, his seat for that case shall be filled by an alternate member selected as provided in this subsection.

(d) A member may serve after expiration of his term only to participate until the conclusion of a formal proceeding begun before expiration of his term. Such participation shall not prevent his successor from taking office, but the successor may not participate in the proceeding for which his predecessor's term was extended. This subsection shall apply also to any judicial member whose membership on the Commission is automatically terminated by retirement or resignation from judicial office, or expiration of the term of judicial office. (1971, c. 590, s. 1; 1973, c. 50; 1975, c. 956, s. 13.)

Editor's Note. — Former Article 30, Transitional Matters, comprising §§ 7A-400 and 7A-401, was enacted by Session Laws 1965, c. 310, s. 1, and repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 377, s. 32, effective Oct. 1, 1971. Sections numbered 7A-400 and 7A-401 were enacted as part of new Article 31 by Session Laws 1971, c. 377, § 1.1.

Session Laws 1971, c. 590, which enacted this article, was made effective upon condition the amendment to N.C. Const., Art. IV, § 17, proposed by Session Laws 1971, c. 560 was approved by the voters. The amendment was approved at the general election held Nov. 2, 1972.

CASE NOTES

This Article is not unconstitutional because enacted in advance of the ratification of North Carolina Const., Art. IV, § 17, since the General Assembly has power to enact a statute not authorized by the present Constitution where the statute is passed in anticipation of an amendment authorizing it, or provides that it shall take effect upon the adoption of such an amendment. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

Article Is Not Unconstitutional Delegation of Authority. — In view of the constitutional mandate in North Carolina Const., Art. IV, § 17(2) that the General Assembly shall prescribe a procedure for the censure and removal of judges in addition to impeachment and address as provided in § 17(1), respondent's contention that the General Assembly in enacting this Article abrogated its legislative duties by unconstitutionally delegating them to the Judicial Standards Commission, a creature of the General Assembly, is without merit. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

The Judicial Standards Commission Act, Chapter 7A, Article 30, of the General Statutes, is constitutional and, under that Article, the Supreme Court is vested with jurisdiction to act in a case involving the removal from office of a judge. In re Martin, 295 N.C. 291, 245 S.E.2d 766 (1978).

No Violation of Doctrine of Separation of Powers. — By accepting and acting upon the original jurisdiction authorized by the people under N.C. Const., Art. IV, § 17(2) and conferred by the legislature, the Supreme Court does not usurp power constitutionally reserved to another branch of government. Thus, the exercise of such jurisdiction does not violate the constitutional doctrine of separation of powers. In re Martin, 295 N.C. 291, 245 S.E.2d 766 (1978).

Intent of Article. — By enacting this Article it was the intent of the General Assembly to provide the machinery and prescribe the procedure for the censure and removal of justices and judges for willful misconduct in office, or conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute. In re Hardy, 294 N.C. 90, 240 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

The Commission can neither censure nor remove. It functions as an arm of the court to conduct hearings for the purpose of aiding the Supreme Court in determining whether a judge is unfit or unsuitable. In re Hardy, 294 N.C. 90, 240 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

The recommendations of the Commission are not binding upon the Supreme Court, which will consider the evidence on both sides and exercise its independent judgment as to whether it should censure, remove, or decline to do either. In re Hardy, 294 N.C. 90, 240 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

§ 7A-376. Grounds for censure or removal.

Upon recommendation of the Commission, the Supreme Court may censure or remove any judge for willful misconduct in office, willful and persistent failure to perform his duties, habitual intemperance, conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude, or conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute. Upon recommendation of the Commission, the Supreme Court may remove any judge for mental or physical incapacity interfering with the performance of his duties, which is, or is likely to become, permanent. A judge removed for mental or physical incapacity is entitled to retirement compensation if he has accumulated the years of creditable service required for incapacity or disability retirement under any provision of State law, but he shall not sit as an emergency justice or judge. A judge removed for other than mental or physical incapacity receives no retirement compensation, and is disqualified from holding further judicial office. (1971, c. 590, s. 1; 1979, c. 486, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Definitions.
III. Illustrative Cases.
A. Wrongful Conduct.
B. Penalty.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Terms Not Vague or Overbroad. — The phrases, "willful misconduct in office" and "conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute," are not unconstitutionally vague or overbroad. In re Edens, 290 N.C. 299, 226 S.E.2d 5 (1976).

Nor Too Nebulous or Subjective. — The phrases, "willful misconduct in office" and "conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute," are no more nebulous or less objective than the reasonable and prudent man test which has been a part of State negligence law for centuries. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

Due Process Requirements Met under This Section. — An adjudication of guilt under the provisions of this section meets the requirements of due process since the judge's misconduct must be proved by "clear and convincing evidence." In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

Provision for Disqualification from Office within Power of Legislature. — An adjudication of "willful misconduct in office" by the Supreme Court in a proceeding instituted by the Judicial Standards Commission in which the judge or justice involved has been accorded due process of law and his guilt established by "clear and convincing evidence," is equivalent to an adjudication of guilt of "malpractice in any office" as used in North Carolina Const., Art. VI, § 8. Therefore, the legislature acted within its power when it made disqualification from judicial office a consequence of removal for willful misconduct under this section. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L.Ed.2d 297 (1979).

Section 7A-377 in Pari Materia. — The provisions of this section and § 7A-377 are parts of the same enactment, relate to the same class of persons and are aimed at suppression of the same evil. The statutes are therefore in pari materia and must be construed accordingly. In re Hardy, 294 N.C. 90, 240 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

When this section and § 7A-377 are read together properly they provide that upon recommendation of the Judicial Standards Commission the Supreme Court may censure or remove any justice or judge, may approve or reject the recommendation of the Commission, or may remand the matter for further proceedings. In re Hardy, 294 N.C. 90, 240 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

Conduct Rather Than Motives Determinative. — Whether the conduct of a judge may be characterized as prejudicial to the administration of justice which brings the judicial office into disrepute depends not so much upon the judge's motives but more on the conduct itself, the results thereof and the impact such conduct might reasonably have upon knowledgeable observers. In re Crutchfield, 289 N.C. 597, 223 S.E.2d 822 (1975); In re Edens, 290 N.C. 299, 226 S.E.2d 5 (1976); In re Stuhl, 292 N.C. 379, 233 S.E.2d 562 (1977).

Proceeding Neither Civil Nor Criminal. — A proceeding instituted by the Judicial Standards Commission, like a removal proceeding under North Carolina Const., Art. IV, § 4, is neither civil nor criminal in nature. A judge removed by impeachment or by the Supreme Court pursuant to the recommendation of the Commission may still be prosecuted in a criminal court. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

Supreme Court Sits as Court of Original Jurisdiction. — In proceedings authorized by this section, the Supreme Court sits not as an appellate court but rather as a court of original jurisdiction. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

Code of Judicial Conduct Is Guide. — The General Assembly intended the North Carolina Code of Judicial Conduct to be a guide to the meaning of this section. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

Distinction Between Removal for Misconduct and for Mental or Physical Incapacity. — The sections of the Constitution providing for the removal of judges by impeachment or joint resolution make a careful distinction between judges removed for misconduct and those removed for "mental or physical incapacity." In following the constitutional mandate to "prescribe a procedure in addition to impeachment and address," the legislature made the same distinction in this section. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

Effect of Resignation of Judge Following Filing and Service of Complaint. — The resignation of a district judge following the filing of a complaint against him by the Commission and service upon him of the verified complaint neither divested the Commission of jurisdiction over him nor rendered the question of his removal from office moot. It was immaterial that the judge, by reason of his resignation, was no longer a district court judge at the time the Commission filed its findings of fact and recommendation that he be removed from office with the Supreme Court. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

It would be a travesty if a judge could avoid the full consequences of his misconduct by resigning from office after removal proceedings had been brought against him. According to this argument, it would be possible for an involved judge, at any time before the Commission files its findings and recommendations with the Supreme Court, to bring the proceedings against him to a premature close by submitting his resignation to the Governor, who would accept it without knowledge that charges were pending against the judge. The legislature never intended any such result, and to so interpret this section would emasculate the statute and thwart the legislative intent entirely. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

II. DEFINITIONS.

Willful Misconduct Defined. — Willful misconduct in office is improper and wrong conduct of a judge acting in his official capacity done intentionally, knowingly and, generally, in bad faith. It is more than a mere error of judgment or an act of negligence. While the term would encompass conduct involving moral turpitude, dishonesty or corruption, these elements need not necessarily be present. In re Edens, 290 N.C. 299, 226 S.E.2d 5 (1976); In re Stuhl, 292 N.C. 379, 233 S.E.2d 562 (1977).

Willful misconduct in office is the improper or wrongful use of the power of his office by a judge acting intentionally, or with gross unconcern for his conduct, and generally in bad faith. It involves more than an error of judgment or a mere lack of diligence. Necessarily, the term would encompass conduct involving moral turpitude, dishonesty or corruption, and also any knowing misuse of the office, whatever the motive. However, these elements are not necessary to a finding of bad faith. A specific intent to use the powers of the judicial office to accomplish a purpose which the judge knew or should have known was beyond the legitimate exercise of his authority constitutes bad faith. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

Conduct Prejudicial to Administration of Justice That Brings Judicial Office into Disrepute Defined. — Conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute has been defined as conduct which a judge undertakes in good faith but which nevertheless would appear to an objective observer to be not only unjudicial conduct but conduct prejudicial to public esteem for the judicial office. In re Edens, 290 N.C. 299, 226 S.E.2d 5 (1976); In re Stuhl, 292 N.C. 379, 233 S.E.2d 562 (1977).

Willful misconduct in office of necessity is conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute. However, a judge may also, through negligence or ignorance not amounting to bad faith, behave in a manner prejudicial to the administration of justice so as to bring the judicial office into disrepute. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

A judge may commit indiscretions, or worse, in his private life which bring the judicial office into disrepute. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

"Willful Misconduct" and "Conduct Prejudicial to Administration of Justice" Distinguished. — A careful distinction should henceforth be made between "willful misconduct in office" and "conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice." A judge should be removed from office and disqualified from holding further judicial office only for the more serious offense of willful misconduct in office. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

Conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice, unless knowingly and persistently repeated, is not per se as serious and reprehensible as willful misconduct in office, which is a constitutional ground for impeachment and disqualification for public office. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

III. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

A. Wrongful Conduct.

Whether a judge receives any personal benefit from his conduct is wholly irrelevant to inquiry into conduct of judicial officer. In re Crutchfield, 289 N.C. 597, 223 S.E.2d 822 (1975); In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

The fact that a judge received no personal benefit, financial or otherwise, from his conduct does not preclude his conduct from being prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute. In re Crutchfield, 289 N.C. 597, 223 S.E.2d 822 (1975); In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

A judge may not escape responsibility for any judgments signed by him by delegating their preparation to counsel or anyone else. In re Crutchfield, 289 N.C. 597, 223 S.E.2d 822 (1975).

Inexperience or Lack of Training No Excuse. — A trial judge cannot rely on his inexperience or lack of training to excuse acts which tend to bring the judicial office into disrepute. In re Martin, 295 N.C. 291, 245 S.E.2d 766 (1978).

Knowing and Willful Persistence in Indiscretion and Misconduct. — If a judge knowingly and willfully persists in indiscretions and misconduct which the Supreme Court has declared to be, or which under the circumstances he should know to be, acts which constitute willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brings the judicial office into disrepute, he should be removed from office. In re Martin, 295 N.C. 291, 245 S.E.2d 766 (1978); In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

Disposition of cases for reasons other than an honest appraisal of facts and law, as disclosed by the evidence presented, will amount to conduct prejudicial to the proper administration of justice whenever and however it may be defined or whoever does the defining. In re Crutchfield, 289 N.C. 597, 223

The ex parte disposition of a case by a judge for reasons other than an honest appraisal of the law and facts as disclosed by the evidence and the advocacy of both parties to the proceeding amounts to conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which in due course will bring the judicial office into disrepute. In re Martin, 295 N.C. 291, 245 S.E.2d 766 (1978).

Ex parte disposition of a criminal case out of court will amount to conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

Judge's disposition of traffic cases out of court and without notice to the prosecuting attorney and in his absence constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute in that he: (1) improperly deprived the district attorney of the opportunity to participate in their disposition; (2) improperly removed the proceedings from the public domain; and (3) violated Canon 3(A)(4) of the North Carolina Code of Judicial Conduct. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

The arbitrary dismissal of a case, after the district attorney had refused to take a nolle prosequi and without permitting the State to offer its evidence, was willful misconduct in office clearly calculated to bring the court into disrepute. In re Martin, 295 N.C. 291, 245 S.E.2d 766 (1978).

Failure to Give Notice to Defense Counsel. — Where the only actual notice to defendant's counsel as to the time of a hearing at which judgment was entered against defendant was one hour before the trial judge began to receive evidence, this conduct did not afford the defendant or his counsel full right to be heard according to law and was, in effect, a willful ex parte consideration of the proceeding without proper legal notice to defendant or his counsel. Such conduct constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute. In re Martin, 295 N.C. 291, 245 S.E.2d 766 (1978).

Gross Abuse of Motor Vehicle Statutes Amounting to Prejudicial Conduct. — Judge's execution judgments allowing limited driving privileges under § 20-179 upon a mere ex parte request without making any effect or conducting any inquiry to ascertain whether the facts recited in the judgments were true and whether he was lawfully entitled to enter the judgments and without giving the State an opportunity to be heard when in truth the judgments were supported neither in fact nor in law and were beyond the judge's jurisdiction to enter constituted a gross abuse of important provisions of the motor vehicle statutes and amounted to conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute. In re Crutchfield, 289 N.C. 597, 223 S.E.2d 822 (1975).

Signing Order for Delivery of Property without Notice or Opportunity To Be Heard. — The conduct of a judge in signing an order for delivery of personal property without notice to defendant or his counsel and without giving opposing party or counsel an opportunity to be heard constituted willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute. In re Martin, 295 N.C. 291, 245 S.E.2d 766 (1978).

Use or Retention of Money Received for Purpose of Paying Defendant's Fine. — If a judge is indiscreet enough to take money for the purpose of paying a defendant's fine and costs he should forthwith pay it to the clerk of the court. Any use or retention of such funds, whether it be inadvertently, forgetfully, or because the judge is short of cash and intends to apply the money eventually to the purpose for which it was received, if not criminal — is willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

Conduct Held Willful Misconduct and Conduct Prejudicial to Administration of Justice. — A district court judge was guilty of willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute in that: (1) he consistently and improperly precluded the district attorney from participating in the disposition of cases on which he was entitled to be heard in behalf of the State, and removed the disposition of cases from public view in open court by transacting the court's business in secrecy; (2) he dismissed cases without a trial, in the absence of the defendant, without the knowledge of the district attorney, and on a day when the cases were not calendared for trial; (3) he maintained a special file in three counties, caused the clerk to remove certain cases from the active criminal docket and to be held in the files until he directed otherwise, and in consequence these cases were not tried speedily or calendared and disposed of in open court in the normal course of business in the district courts of the respective counties; (4) from time to time he paid to the clerk money which he had collected from the defendants in cases which he disposed of in their absence; that in two cases he received $27.00 from each of two defendants for the purpose of paying his fine and costs when he disposed of his case; that he never "took care of the case," never paid the fine and costs and never returned the money; that in a third such case, he returned the $27.00 after keeping it 11 months. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

B. Penalty.

Strict Guidelines as to Censure or Removal Not Desirable. — Strict guidelines for determining whether a judge or justice should be censured or removed should not be adopted since each case should be decided upon its own facts. In re Martin, 295 N.C. 291, 245 S.E.2d 766 (1978); In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

Censure Is Not Punishment. — Albeit serious, censure and removal are not to be regarded as punishment but as the legal consequences attached to adjudged judicial misconduct or unfitness. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

Any Conduct Prejudicial to Administration of Justice Warrants Censure. — Any act by a judge or justice which is prejudicial to the administration of justice and brings the judicial office into disrepute warrants censure. In re Martin, 295 N.C. 291, 245 S.E.2d 766 (1978); In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

Financial Gain, Moral Turpitude or Corruption. — Where a judge's misconduct involves personal financial gain, moral turpitude or corruption, he should be removed from office. In re Martin, 295 N.C. 291, 245 S.E.2d 766 (1978); In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

The Commission can neither censure nor remove. It functions as an arm of the court to conduct hearings for the purpose of aiding the Supreme Court in determining whether a judge is unfit or unsuitable. In re Hardy, 294 N.C. 90, 240 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

The Commission can neither censure nor remove a judge. It is an administrative agency created as an arm of the court to conduct hearings for the purpose of aiding the Supreme Court in determining whether a judge is unfit or unsuitable. To that end, it is authorized to investigate complaints, hear evidence, find facts, and make a recommendation thereon. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

The recommendations of the Commission are not binding upon the Supreme Court, which will consider the evidence on both sides and exercise its independent judgment as to whether it should censure, remove or decline to do either. In re Hardy, 294 N.C. 90, 240 S.E.2d 367 (1978); In re Martin, 295 N.C. 291, 245 S.E.2d 766 (1978).

When Judge May De Disqualified from Future Office. — When a judge is removed for "mental or physical incapacity" upon the recommendation of the Judicial Standards Commission, the remedy allowed by statute is limited to removal from office. On the other hand, when a judge is removed for reasons other than incapacity, this section (like the Const., Art. IV, § 17 provision it was intended to supplement), provides for both removal and disqualification from future judicial office. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

Loss of Retirement Benefits Is Additional Sanction. — In addition to the sanctions which follow removal by impeachment (loss of office and disqualification to hold further judicial office), this section imposes an additional sanction, the loss of retirement benefits. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

The constitutional source for the remedy of loss of retirement benefits does not lie in the impeachment provisions of North Carolina Const., Art. IV, § 4, but in section 8 of that same article, which gives the General Assembly the power to "provide by general law for the retirement of Justices and Judges." Under this power the General Assembly may condition retirement benefits upon good conduct in office. Thus, it acted well within its constitutional authority when it provided in this section that a judge who is removed from office for cause other than mental or physical incapacity shall receive no retirement compensation. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

Right to Recover Contributions to Retirement Fund. — Loss of retirement benefits as the result of the removal of a judge from office for cause other than mental or physical incapacity does not mean that the judge forfeits his right to recover the contributions which he paid into the fund. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

Remedies Not Mooted by Resignation. — If this section limited the sanctions for willful misconduct in office to censure or removal, the resignation of a judge would render the proceedings moot. The statue, however, envisions not one but three remedies against a judge who engages in serious misconduct justifying his removal: loss of present office, disqualification from future judicial office, and loss of retirement benefits. Only the first of these is rendered moot by resignation. In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 250 S.E.2d 890 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2859, 61 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1979).

(a) Any citizen of the State may file a written complaint with the Commission concerning the qualifications or conduct of any justice or judge of the General Court of Justice, and thereupon the Commission shall make such investigation as it deems necessary. The Commission may also make an investigation on its own motion. The Commission is authorized to issue process to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of evidence, to administer oaths, to punish for contempt, and to prescribe its own rules of procedure. No justice or judge shall be recommended for censure or removal unless he has been given a hearing affording due process of law. All papers filed with and proceedings before the Commission are confidential, unless the judge involved shall otherwise request. The recommendations of the Commission to the Supreme Court, and the record filed in support of the recommendations are not confidential. Testimony and other evidence presented to the Commission is privileged in any action for defamation. No other publication of such testimony or evidence is privileged, except that the record filed with the Supreme Court continues to be privileged. At least five members of the Commission must concur in any recommendation to censure or remove any justice or judge. A respondent who is recommended for censure or removal is entitled to a copy of the proposed record to be filed with the Supreme Court, and if he has objections to it, to have the record settled by the Commission. He is also entitled to present a brief and to argue his case, in person and through counsel, to the Supreme Court. A majority of the members of the Supreme Court voting must concur in any order of censure or removal. The Supreme Court may approve the recommendation, remand for further proceedings, or reject the recommendation. A justice of the Supreme Court or a member of the Commission who is a judge is disqualified from acting in any case in which he is a respondent.

(b) The Commission is authorized to employ an executive secretary to assist it in carrying out its duties. For specific cases, the Commission may also employ special counsel or call upon the Attorney General to furnish counsel. For specific cases the Commission may also employ an investigator or call upon the Director of the State Bureau of Investigation to furnish an investigator. While performing duties for the Commission such executive secretary, special counsel or investigator shall have authority throughout the State to serve subpoenas or other process issued by the Commission in the same manner and with the same effect as an officer authorized to serve process of the General Court of Justice. (1971, c. 590, s. 1; 1973, c. 808.)

Commission's procedures are required to meet constitutional due process standards since a judge's interest in continuing in public office is an individual interest of sufficient importance to warrant constitutional protection against deprivation. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

Because of the severe impact which adverse findings by the Judicial Standards Commission and censure or removal by the Supreme Court may reasonably be expected to have upon the individual, fundamental fairness entitles the judge to a hearing which meets the basic requirements of due process. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

Due Process Not Violated by Commission's Functions. — The combination of investigative and judicial functions in the Judicial Standards Commission does not violate a respondent's due process rights under either the federal or North Carolina Constitutions since it is an administrative agency created as an arm of the court, and any alleged partiality of the Commission is cured by the final scrutiny of the Supreme Court. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

Section 7A-376 in Pari Materia. — The provisions of this section and § 7A-376 are parts of the same enactment, relate to the same class of persons and are aimed at suppression of the same evil. The statutes are therefore in pari materia and must be construed accordingly. In re Hardy, 294 N.C. 90, 240 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

A proceeding begun before the Judicial Standards Commission is neither a civil nor a criminal action. Such a proceeding is merely an inquiry into the conduct of one exercising judicial power to determine whether he is unfit to hold a judgeship. Its aim is not to punish the individual but to maintain the honor and dignity of the judiciary and the proper administration of justice. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

The function of the Commission is to conduct hearings upon complaints filed against judges and justices, to find facts and make recommendations so as to bring before the Supreme Court the questions of whether a judge or justice should be censured or removed in order to maintain proper administration of justice, public confidence in the judicial system and the honor and integrity of judges. In re Martin, 295 N.C. 291, 245 S.E.2d 766 (1978).

Article Does Not Vest Absolute Discretion in Commission. — There is no merit in the contention that this Article illegally vests unguided and absolute discretion in the Judicial Standards Commission to choose which complaints to investigate and what evidence it will accept. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

The quantum of proof required in proceedings before the Judicial Standards Commission of this State is proof by clear and convincing evidence — a burden greater than that of proof of a preponderance of the evidence and less than that of proof beyond a reasonable doubt. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977); In re Martin, 295 N.C. 291, 245 S.E.2d 766 (1978).

The Commission can neither censure nor remove. It functions as an arm of the court to conduct hearings for the purpose of aiding the Supreme Court in determining whether a judge is unfit or unsuitable. In re Hardy, 294 N.C. 90, 240 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

The recommendations of the Commission are not binding upon the Supreme Court, which will consider the evidence on both sides and exercise its independent judgment as to whether it should censure, remove, or decline to do either. In re Hardy, 294 N.C. 90, 240 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

Nature of Proceeding upon Recommendation of Commission. — A proceeding before the Supreme Court on the recommendation of the Judicial Standards Commission is neither criminal nor civil in nature, but is an inquiry into the conduct of a judicial officer, the purpose of which is not primarily to punish any individual but to maintain due and proper administration of justice in our State's courts, public confidence in its judicial system and the honor and integrity of its judges. In re Crutchfield, 289 N.C. 597, 223 S.E.2d 822 (1975).

The scope of Supreme Court review in a judicial qualifications proceeding should be that of an independent evaluation of the evidence. In re Nowell, 293 N.C. 235, 237 S.E.2d 246 (1977).

Court's Options in Disposing of Commission Recommendation. — When this section and § 7A-376 are read together properly, they provide that upon recommendation of the Judicial Standards Commission the Supreme Court may censure or remove any justice or judge, may approve or reject the recommendation of the Commission, or may remand the matter for further proceedings. In re Hardy, 294 N.C. 90, 240 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

This section and § 7A-376 authorize and empower the Supreme Court, unfettered in its adjudication by the recommendation of the Commission, to make the final judgement whether to censure, remove, remand for further proceedings or dismiss the proceeding. In re Hardy, 294 N.C. 90, 240 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

The Supreme Court is authorized and empowered to order the removal of a judge when the Judicial Standards Commission has only recommended that the judge be censured. In re Hardy, 294 N.C. 90, 240 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

(a) The recommendation of the Judicial Standards Commission for censure or removal of any justice of the Supreme Court for any grounds provided by G.S. 7A-376 shall be made to, and the record filed with, the Court of Appeals, which shall have and shall proceed under the same authority for censure or removal of any justice as is granted to the Supreme Court under G.S. 7A-376 and 7A-377(a) for censure or removal of any judge.

(b) The proceeding shall be heard by a panel of the Court of Appeals consisting of the Chief Judge, who shall be the presiding judge of the panel, and six other judges, the senior in service, excluding the judge who is chairman of the commission. For good cause, a judge may be excused by a majority of the panel. If the Chief Judge is excused, the presiding judge shall be designated by a majority of the panel. The vacancy created by an excused judge shall be filled by the judge of the court who is next senior in service. (1979, c. 486, s. 1.)

Article 31.

Judicial Council.

A Judicial Council is hereby created which shall consist of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court or some other member of that Court designated by him, the Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals or some other member of that Court designated by him, two judges of the superior and one judge of the district court designated by the Chief Justice, the Attorney General or some member of his staff designated by him, two district attorneys of the superior court designated by the Chief Justice, and 10 additional members, two of whom shall be appointed by the Governor, two by the President of the senate from among the members of the Senate, two by the Speaker of the House of Representatives from among the members of the House and four by the Council of the North Carolina State Bar. All appointive members of the Judicial Council shall be selected on the basis of their interest in and competency for the study of law reform. The four members to be appointed by the Council of the North Carolina State Bar shall be active practitioners in the trial and appellate courts. (1949, c. 1052, s. 1; 1953, c. 74, s. 1; 1969, c. 1015, s. 1; 1971, c. 377, s. 1.1; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Sections 7A-400 to 7A-408 were formerly §§ 7-448 through 7-456. They were transferred to their present position by Session Laws 1971, c. 377, s. 1.1. Former §§ 7A-400 and 7A-401, which were added by Session Laws 1965, c. 310, s. 1, and constituted Article 30 of this Chapter, Transitional Matters, were repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 377, s. 32.

Members of the Council shall hold office for the following terms:

(1) If he designates no other member of the Supreme Court, the Chief Justice during his term of office.

(2) If he designates no other member of the Court of Appeals, the Chief Judge during his term of office.

(3) If he designates no member of his staff, the Attorney General during his term of office.

(4) All other members shall hold office from the time of their designation or appointment until June 30th of the next odd-numbered year. Those authorized to designate or appoint members to the Council shall make such designation or appointment to take effect on July 1st of each odd-numbered year or as soon thereafter as practicable. Any member is eligible for redesignation or reappointment provided he continues to have the qualifications prescribed in G.S. 7A-400. (1949, c. 1052, s. 2; 1953, c. 74, ss. 2, 3; 1969, c. 1015, ss. 2-4; 1071, c. 377, s. 1.1.)

Vacancies shall be filled for the remainder of any term in the same manner as the original appointment. (1949, c. 1052, s. 3; 1971, c. 377, s. 1.1.)

The member from the Supreme Court shall serve as chairman of the Council. (1949, c. 1052, s. 4; 1971, c. 377, s. 1.1.)

The Council shall meet at least once each quarter of the calendar year, or more often at the call of the chairman. (1949, c. 1052, s. 5; 1971, c. 377, s. 1.1.)

It is the duty of the Judicial Council:

(1) To make a continuing study of the administration of justice in this State, and the methods of administration of each and all of the courts of the State, whether of record or not of record.

(2) To receive reports of criticisms and suggestions pertaining to the administration of justice in the State.

(3) To recommend to the legislature, or the courts, such changes in the law or in the organization, operation or methods of conducting the business of the courts, or with respect to any other matter pertaining to the administration of justice, as it may deem desirable. (1949, c. 1052, s. 6; 1971, c. 377, s. 1.1.)

§ 7A-406. Annual report; submission of recommendations.

The Council shall annually file a report with the Governor. The Council shall submit any recommendations it may have for the improvement of the administration of justice to the Governor, who shall transmit the same to the General Assembly. (1949, c. 1052, s. 7; 1971, c. 377, s. 1.1.)

The members of the Council shall be paid the sum of seven dollars ($7.00) per day and such necessary travel expenses and subsistence as may be incurred. (1949, c. 1052, s. 8; 1971, c. 377, s. 1.1.)

The Council and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, by and with the advice, consent and approval of the Governor and Council of State, may employ an executive secretary who shall be a licensed attorney and fix his salary and also may employ a stenographer or clerical assistant and fix his or her salary. Said salaries shall be paid out of the Contingency and Emergency Fund. The executive secretary shall perform such duties as the Council may assign to him. When not actively engaged in the discharge of duties assigned to him by said Council, he shall perform such duties as the Chief Justice may assign to him. (1949, c. 1052, s. 9; 1953, c. 1111, ss. 1, 2; 1957, c. 1417; 1971, c. 377, s. 1.1.)

SUBCHAPTER VIII.

ARTICLES 32 TO 35.

SUBCHAPTER IX. REPRESENTATION OF INDIGENT PERSONS.

ARTICLE 36.

Entitlement of Indigent Persons Generally.

§ 7A-450. Indigency; definition; entitlement; determination; change of status.

(a) An indigent person is a person who is financially unable to secure legal representation and to provide all other necessary expenses of representation in an action or proceeding enumerated in this Subchapter. An interpreter is a necessary expense as defined in Chapter 8A of the General Statutes for a deaf person who is entitled to counsel under this subsection.

(b) Whenever a person, under the standards and procedures set out in this Subchapter, is determined to be an indigent person entitled to counsel, it is the responsibility of the State to provide him with counsel and the other necessary expenses of representation. The professional relationship of counsel so provided to the indigent person he represents is the same as if counsel had been privately retained by the indigent person.

(c) The question of indigency may be determined or redetermined by the court at any stage of the action or proceeding at which an indigent is entitled to representation.

(d) If, at any stage in the action or proceeding, a person previously determined to be indigent becomes financially able to secure legal representation and provide other necessary expenses of representation, he must inform the counsel appointed by the court to represent him of that fact. In such a case, that information is not included in the attorney client privilege, and counsel must promptly inform the court of that information. (1969, c. 1013, s. 1; 1981, c. 409, s. 2; c. 937, s. 3.)

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, added subsection (d).

The second 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, added the second sentence of subsection (a).

Session Laws 1981, c. 937, s. 4, provides that the act applies to all trial court, legislative, or administrative proceedings initiated or in process on or after October 1, 1981.

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Appointment of Counsel.
III. Appointment of Experts.
IV. Furnishing Transcripts.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Legislative Intent. — This Article clearly manifests the legislative intent that every defendant in a criminal case, to the limit of his ability to do so, shall pay the cost of his defense. It is not the public policy of this State to subsidize any portion of a defendant's defense which he himself can pay. State v. Hoffman, 281 N.C. 727, 190 S.E.2d 842 (1972); State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

The purpose of the statutory provision for appointment of counsel, at public expense, for indigent defendants is to put indigent defendants on an equality with affluent defendants in trials upon criminal charges. To deny, or to restrict the right of the indigent to waive counsel, i.e., to represent himself, while permitting the affluent defendant to exercise such right, has no reasonable relation to the objective of equal opportunity to prevail at the trial of the case. Such classification is beyond the power of the legislature. State v. Mems, 281 N.C. 658, 190 S.E.2d 164 (1972).

Responsibility of State. — It is manifest that the State has the responsibility to provide an indigent defendant with the effective assistance of counsel and the other necessary resources which are incident to presenting a defense in a criminal prosecution. State v. McDowell, 301 N.C. 279, 271 S.E.2d 286 (1980), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 101 S. Ct. 1731, 68 L. Ed. 220 (1981).

Who Is Indigent. — An indigent is not one who lacks sufficient funds over and above his homestead and personal property exemptions and his preexisting debts and obligations to pay the total costs of his defense from beginning to end. An indigent is one who does not have available, at the time they are required, adequate funds to pay a necessary cost of his defense. State v. Hoffman, 281 N.C. 727, 190 S.E.2d 842 (1972).

The court makes the final determination of indigency, and this may be determined or redetermined by the court at any stage of the proceeding at which the indigent is entitled to representation. State v. Cradle, 281 N.C. 198, 188 S.E.2d 296, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1047, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 499 (1972).

Applied in State v. Cradle, 13 N.C. App. 120, 185 S.E.2d 35 (1971); State v. Hairston, 280 N.C. 220, 185 S.E.2d 633 (1972).

Quoted in State v. Lynch, 279 N.C. 1, 181 S.E.2d 561 (1971); State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E 2d 828 (1977).

Cited in State v. Sanders, 294 N.C. 337, 240 S.E.3d 788 (1978).

II. APPOINTMENT OF COUNSEL.

Right to Counsel Attaches upon Determination of Indigency. — If a defendant is determined to be indigent, he is entitled to have counsel provided by the State to represent him during any critical stage of the action or proceeding. State v. Moses, 16 N.C. App. 174, 191 S.E.2d 368 (1972).

The requirement that the State furnish counsel to each defendant charged with a criminal offense beyond the class of petty misdemeanor is conditioned upon a showing of indigency and inability to procure counsel for that reason. State v. Turner, 283 N.C. 53, 194 S.E.2d 831 (1973).

Where a defendant is charged with a felony or a serious misdemeanor, it is the duty of the trial judge to (1) settle the question of indigency, and (2) if defendant is indigent, appoint counsel to represent him unless counsel is knowingly and understandingly waived. State v. Moses, 16 N.C. App. 174, 191 S.E.2d 368 (1972).

Determination of Right to More Than One Lawyer. — An indigent defendant's right to court-appointed counsel does not include the right to require the court to appoint more than one lawyer unless there is a clear showing that the first appointed counsel is not adequately representing the interests of the accused. In making that determination the legitimate interest that the state has in securing the best utilization of its legal resources must be considered along with the interests of the defendant. State v. Barfield, 298 N.C. 306, 259 S.E.2d 510 (1979), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 100 S. Ct. 3050, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1137, rehearing denied, — U.S. —, 101 S. Ct. 41, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1181 (1980); State v. McDowell, 301 N.C. 279, 271 S.E.2d 286 (1980), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 101 S. Ct. 1731, 68 L. Ed. 2d 220 (1981).

Appointment of Counsel for Limited Purpose Where Defendant Conducts Own Defense. — Defendant was not prejudiced in any respect by the appointment of counsel for the limited purpose of furnishing advice to him if so requested, even though defendant did waive counsel and conducted his own defense. State v. Harper, 21 N.C. App. 30, 202 S.E.2d 795, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 375, 205 S.E.2d 100 (1974).

Right Is Limited to Direct Appeals Taken as of Right. — Section 7A-450 et seq. has generally been construed to limit the right to appointed counsel in criminal cases to direct appeals taken as of right, not discretionary appeals. Ross v. Moffitt, 417 U.S. 600, 94 S. Ct. 2437, 41 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1974).

Defendant Not Indigent at Time of Arrest and Interrogation. — The record affirmatively disclosed that at the time of his interrogation on the morning of his arrest defendant had funds, immediately available and adequate, with which to employ counsel to provide the legal advice he then needed. His ability to pay the costs of subsequent proceedings was not then a question. That was a matter to be determined when that question arose. The admissibility of defendant's statements to the officers was not, therefore, affected by this article. The statements were competent evidence and defendant's assignments of error relating to their admission are overruled. State v. Hoffman, 281 N.C. 727, 190 S.E.2d 842 (1972).

At the time of defendant's arrest, according to his sworn statement, he had $160 in the bank. The Supreme Court took judicial notice that for a fee of less than $160 defendant could have obtained counsel for the purpose of advising him with reference to the course of conduct which would serve his best interest at that time. State v. Hoffman, 281 N.C. 727, 190 S.E.2d 842 (1972).

The trial court erred in failing to determine defendant's indigency and to appoint counsel for him until after he had entered his plea and the jury had been selected, sworn and empaneled. State v. Moses, 16 N.C. App. 174, 191 S.E.2d 368 (1972).

The trial court erred in finding that defendant was not an indigent and in refusing to appoint counsel to represent her at her preliminary hearing on a felony charge where defendant's affidavit of indigency stated that she had no income, no money and no property except a 1958 automobile which was paid for, and that she had three children, an unemployed husband and owed $3,000, and nothing in the record refuted or contradicted the import of defendant's affidavit of indigency. State v. Cradle, 281 N.C. 198, 188 S.E.2d 296, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1047, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 499 (1972).

In a prosecution for the capital crime of rape, the trial court erred in finding that defendant was not indigent and could employ counsel at the time he confessed and that he, therefore, could not invoke the former provision of § 7A-457 that counsel could not be waived in a capital case, where the evidence before the court disclosed that when arrested defendant was earning $149.00 per month, that he had $5.00 in cash, an automobile on which $56.00 per month was due, and two bonds costing $18.75 each which were in his mother's possession, that his stepfather earned $9,000 per year and had a wife and eleven children other than defendant, and that any contribution the stepfather might make would have to be borrowed. State v. Wright, 281 N.C. 38, 187 S.E.2d 761 (1972).

The fact that the defendant was a painter capable of earning $60.00 per week when he was able to obtain work and that he had made little, if any, effort to secure counsel either privately or by court appointment, was not sufficient to sustain a finding that he was not indigent at the time of trial, and, therefore, not entitled to a court-appointed attorney when it was requested at the trial. State v. Haire, 19 N.C. App. 89, 198 S.E.2d 31 (1973).

Denial of counsel without evidence to support a finding of nonindigency entitles defendant to a new trial. State v. Haire, 19 N.C. App. 89, 198 S.E.2d 31 (1973).

Waiver of counsel may not be presumed from a silent record. State v. Moses, 16 N.C. App. 174, 191 S.E.2d 368 (1972).

III. APPOINTMENT OF EXPERTS.

Discretion of Trial Judge. — This section and the better reasoned decisions place the question of whether an expert should be appointed at State expense to assist an indigent defendant within the sound discretion of the trial judge. State v. Tatum, 291 N.C. 73, 229 S.E.2d 562 (1976).

The appointment of experts to assist an indigent in his defense depends really upon the facts and circumstances of each case and lies, finally, within the discretion of the trial judge. State v. Gray, 292 N.C. 270, 233 S.E.2d 905 (1977); State v. Alford, 298 N.C. 465, 259 S.E.2d 242 (1979).

When Right to Investigator Arises. — This section has never been construed to extend to the employment of an investigator in the absence of a showing of a reasonable likelihood that such an investigator could discover evidence favorable to the defendant. State v. Montgomery, 291 N.C. 91, 229 S.E.2d 572 (1976); State v. Gray, 292 N.C. 270, 233 S.E.2d 905 (1977).

Denial of a state-paid private investigator to an indigent defendant under subsection (b) of this section does not, ipso facto, constitute a denial of equal protection of the laws, notwithstanding that such investigators might be available to indigent defendants represented by public defenders under § 7A-468, and to pecunious defendants. State v. Gray, 292 N.C. 270, 233 S.E.2d 905 (1977).

Subsection (b) of this section and § 7A-454 require that private investigators or expert assistance be provided only upon a showing by defendant that there is a reasonable likelihood that it will materially assist the defendant in the preparation of his defense or that without such help it is probable that defendant will not receive a fair trial. Neither the State nor the federal Constitution requires more. State v. Gray, 292 N.C. 270, 233 S.E.2d 905 (1977); State v. Shook, 38 N.C. App. 465, 248 S.E.2d 425 (1978).

An indigent defendant's constitutional and statutory right to a state appointed investigator arises only upon a showing by defendant that there is a reasonable likelihood that such an investigator would discover evidence which would materially assist defendant in the preparation of his defense. State v. Alford, 298 N.C. 465, 259 S.E.2d 242 (1979); State v. Easterling, 300 N.C. 594, 268 S.E.2d 800 (1980).

The statutory plan established in this section and § 7A-454 and the plan of § 7A-468 for State provision of investigative or expert assistance are substantially equivalent. In neither case is a defendant entitled to an investigator at State expense upon demand. In both instances he is entitled to a state-appointed investigator when he has made a showing of need sufficient to convince a public official, in the exercise of his discretion, that those services are necessary to a fundamentally fair trial. There is then no real distinction between indigent defendants represented by a public defender and those with court-appointed counsel with respect to the availability of state-provided investigative assistance. Therefore, the denial of defendant's motion for the appointment of an investigator did not violate his constitutionally guaranteed rights to equal protection of the laws. State v. Tatum, 291 N.C. 73, 229 S.E.2d 562 (1976).

Psychiatric Examination Two and One-Half Years after Incident. — It was within the exercise of his discretion for the court to find that a psychiatric examination two and one-half years after the shooting incident would not materially assist the indigent defendant in showing his mental condition at the time of the incident. State v. Shook, 38 N.C. App. 465, 248 S.E.2d 425 (1978).

Additional Psychiatric Evaluation. — Where there was no evidence presented in the motion to have a court appointed psychiatrist under this section, or at the hearing on the motion to support even a suspicion, much less a reasonable likelihood, that defendant could establish a meritorious defense of insanity, the court's refusal to require the state to pay for an additional psychiatric evaluation was not error. State v. Easterling, 300 N.C. 594, 268 S.E.2d 800 (1980).

IV. FURNISHING TRANSCRIPTS.

An indigent appellant is entitled to receive a copy of the trial transcript at State expense in order to perfect an appeal. State v. Rich, 13 N.C. App. 60, 185 S.E.2d 288 (1971), appeal dismissed, 280 N.C. 304, 186 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Burden of Proving Inadequacy of Alternatives to Transcript. — A defendant who claims the right to a free transcript does not bear the burden of proving inadequate such alternatives as may be suggested by the State or conjured up by a court in hindsight. Britt v. North Carolina, 404 U.S. 226, 92 S. Ct. 431, 30 L. Ed. 2d 400 (1971).

An indigent defendant was not entitled, as a matter of right, to a daily transcript of his trial. State v. Rich, 13 N.C. App. 60, 185 S.E.2d 288 (1971), appeal dismissed, 280 N.C. 304, 186 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

There was no deprivation of a substantial constitutional right by denial of an indigent defendant's motion that he be provided a daily transcript of the testimony during the trial where defendant could not show that he would be deprived of an opportunity to receive adequate review. State v. Rich, 13 N.C. App. 60, 185 S.E.2d 288 (1971), appeal dismissed, 280 N.C. 304, 186 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

A daily transcript is not a necessary expense of representation which the State is required to provide an indigent defendant under this section. State v. Phillips, 300 N.C. 678, 268 S.E.2d 452 (1980).

Substantially Equivalent Alternative to Transcript. — Where the trials of a case took place in a small town, and according to defendant's counsel, the court reporter was a good friend of all the local lawyers and was reporting the second trial, and it appeared that the reporter would at any time have read back to counsel his notes of the mistrial, well in advance of the second trial, if counsel had simply made an informal request, the defendant could have obtained from the court reporter far more assistance than that available to the ordinary defendant, and consequently he had available an informal alternative which appears to be substantially equivalent to a transcript. Thus the State court properly determined that the mistrial transcript requested was not needed for a proper defense. Britt v. North Carolina, 404 U.S. 226, 92 S. Ct. 431, 30 L. Ed. 2d 400 (1971).

(a) An indigent person is entitled to services of counsel in the following actions and proceedings:

(10) A proceeding for sterilization under Chapter 35, Article 7 (Sterilization of Persons Mentally Ill and Mentally Retarded) of the General Statutes; and

(11) A proceeding for the provision of protective services according to Chapter 108, Article 4, of the General Statutes;

Entitlement continues through any critical stage of the action or proceeding, including, if applicable:

(1) An in-custody interrogation;

(2) A pretrial identification procedure which occurs after formal charges have been preferred and at which the presence of the indigent is required;

(3) A hearing for the reduction of bail, or to fix bail if bail has been earlier denied;

(4) A preliminary hearing;

(5) Trial and sentencing; and

(6) Review of any judgment or decree pursuant to G.S. 7A-27, 7A-30(1), 7A-30(2), and Subchapter XIV of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes.

Chapter 108 was repealed in its entirety by Session Laws 1981, c. 275, which enacted a new Chapter 108A. Chapter 122, Article 7, referred to in subsection (a) of this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1973, c. 726 and Session Laws 1977, c. 738. See now Chapter 122, Article 5A.

Article 7 of Chapter 122, referred to in subdivision (6) of this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1973, c. 726, s. 2 and Session Laws 1977, c. 738, s. 2. As to involuntary commitment, see § 122-58.1 et seq.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS.

History of Section. — See Jolly v. Wright, 300 N.C. 83, 265 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

An indigent defendant must accept counsel appointed by the court, unless he desires to present his own defense. State v. Gibson, 14 N.C. App. 409, 188 S.E.2d 683 (1972).

And Is Not Entitled to Have Court Appoint Counsel of His Own Choosing. — An indigent is entitled to have the court appoint competent counsel to represent him at his trial, but he is not entitled to have the court appoint counsel of his own choosing or to have the court change his counsel in the middle of the trial. State v. Frazier, 280 N.C. 181, 185 S.E.2d 652, death sentence vacated, 409 U.S. 1004, 93 S. Ct. 453, 34 L. Ed. 2d 295 (1972).

Clearly, and for cogent reasons, an indigent defendant is not entitled to have the court appoint counsel of his own choosing. State v. Smith, 24 N.C. App. 498, 211 S.E.2d 539 (1975).

Dissatisfaction with Court-Appointed Counsel. — An expression of an unfounded dissatisfaction with his court-appointed counsel does not entitle defendant to the services of another court-appointed attorney. State v. Gibson, 14 N.C. App. 409, 188 S.E.2d 683 (1972).

Confessions Made Without Counsel — Admission Held Error. — The trial court erred in the admission of a confession made by defendant in a prosecution for the capital crime of rape at a time when he was indigent and without counsel. State v. Wright, 281 N.C. 38, 187 S.E.2d 761 (1972).

Same — Waiver of Counsel. — Undisputed evidence on the voir dire examination fully supported the findings by the trial court to the effect that the defendant voluntarily went to the police station, waived in writing his right to counsel and his right to remain silent, voluntarily, with full understanding of his rights and while not under arrest, made, in the presence of his parents, the oral confession, which was subsequently reduced to writing, and voluntarily signed the written statement of it. Under these circumstances, there was no error in the admission in evidence of either the written confession or the written waiver. State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 515, 184 S.E.2d 282 (1971).

Same — Minor May Waive Counsel. — A minor who has arrived at the age of accountability for crime may waive counsel in the manner provided by law and make a voluntary confession without the presence of either counsel or an adult member of his family, provided he fully understands his constitutional rights and the meaning and consequences of his statement. State v. Lynch, 279 N.C. 1, 181 S.E.2d 561 (1971).

II. RIGHT TO COUNSEL IN PARTICULAR ACTIONS.

Purpose of Subdivision (a)(1). — A joint review of legislative history and case law developments in the area of the Sixth Amendment right to appointed counsel leaves no doubt that the purpose of subdivision (a)(1) of this section is to state the scope of an indigent's entitlement to court appointed counsel in criminal cases subject to Sixth Amendment limitations. Jolly v. Wright, 300 N.C. 83, 265 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

Determining Whether Offense Is Petty or Serious. — Whether an offense is petty or serious is measured, in both State and federal courts, by the punishment authorized by law for the particular offense in question. State v. Green, 277 N.C. 188, 176 S.E.2d 756 (1970); State v. Speights, 280 N.C. 137, 185 S.E.2d 152 (1971). (The above cases were decided prior to the 1973 amendments to this section — Ed. note.)

The provisions of subdivision (a)(1) have application only to criminal cases. Jolly v. Wright, 300 N.C. 83, 265 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

Revocation of Suspended Sentence. — Subsection (a) would apply to revocation of a suspended sentence. State v. Hodges, 34 N.C. App. 183, 237 S.E.2d 576 (1977).

There was no prejudice to the defendant when he was not appointed counsel prior to a revocation of sentence hearing in district court where upon his appeal of the district court order he was awarded a trial de novo in superior court, and counsel was appointed for him in the superior court in ample time to prepare for his defense. State v. Hodges, 34 N.C. App. 183, 237 S.E.2d 576 (1977).

Misdemeanor Charge — Admissibility of Statements in Subsequent Felony Prosecution. — Statements made by an indigent defendant to the arresting officer without benefit of counsel were admissible in a first degree murder prosecution where defendant had been arrested only for a petty misdemeanor when the statements were made and the officer had no knowledge that a capital felony had been committed, since at all times pertinent to the statements, the indigent was charged with a petty misdemeanor and was not entitled to the services of counsel at the State's expense. State v. Ratliff, 281 N.C. 397, 189 S.E.2d 179 (1972), decided prior to the 1973 amendments to this section.

Consolidated Trial of Two Petty Offenses. — The State's duty to furnish counsel does not extend to include those cases consolidated for trial in which an individual is charged with more than one petty offense. State v. Speights, 280 N.C. 137, 185 S.E.2d 152 (1971), decided prior to the 1973 amendments of this section.

Possibility of Incarceration Shown. — Where eleven charges were made against defendant, six for issuing worthless checks in amounts below $50.00 and five for checks in amounts above $50.00, the indigent defendant was entitled to court-appointed counsel under subsection (a)(1) since, upon his fourth conviction for any of the charges against him, defendant could have been incarcerated for as long as two years as a general misdemeanant. Lawrence v. State, 18 N.C. App. 260, 196 S.E.2d 623 (1973), decided prior to the 1973 amendments to this section.

Representation As Matter of Right on Felony Charge. — An indigent charged with a felony is entitled to representation by counsel as a matter of right, and the right to counsel includes the right of counsel to consult with witnesses and to prepare a defense. State v. Mays, 14 N.C. App. 90, 187 S.E.2d 479, cert.

denied, 281 N.C. 157, 188 S.E.2d 366 (1972), decided prior to the 1973 amendments to this section.

The right to free counsel provided by the legislature survives the release of a debtor upon the expiration of 72 hours (see § 23-30.1), even if the creditor has not insisted on an adversary hearing at that time. In such a situation the question of indigency and the other side of the coin — concealment or diversion of assets — is unresolved. The debtor contends he is indigent, and the creditor may later choose to insist that he is concealing assets. The clerk or a judge under such circumstances must make a provisional determination of whether the debtor can provide his own counsel and upon a finding of apparent indigency, one should be appointed for him at the expense of the State. Grimes v. Miller, 429 F. Supp. 1350 (M.D.N.C.), aff'd, 434 U.S. 978, 98 S. Ct. 600, 54 L. Ed. 2d 473 (1977).

No Right to Counsel at Hearing on Initial Petition Alleging Child to Be Undisciplined. — Subsection (a)(8) does not afford a child the right to counsel at the hearing on the initial petition alleging him to be an undisciplined child, where a hearing could not result in his commitment to an institution in which his freedom would be curtailed. In re Walker, 282 N.C. 28, 191 S.E.2d 702 (1972).

No Right in Civil Contempt Proceedings. — This section does not grant to indigent persons the right to be represented by appointed counsel in civil contempt proceedings. Jolly v. Wright, 300 N.C. 83, 265 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

This section does not cover appointment of counsel in federal habeas corpus or State or federal civil rights actions, all of which are encompassed by the constitutional right of access to the courts. Bounds v. Smith, 430 U.S. 817, 97 S. Ct. 1491, 52 L. Ed. 2d 72 (1977).

There is no constitutional right to appointed counsel to seek discretionary review in either a State forum or the United States Supreme Court. Morgan v. Yancy County Dep't of Cors., 527 F.2d 1004 (4th Cir. 1975).

And Failure to Appoint Counsel for Defendant Seeking Discretionary Review Does Not Violate Constitution. — A defendant is not denied meaningful access to the North Carolina Supreme Court simply because the State does not appoint counsel to aid him in seeking discretionary review in that court. At that stage he will have a transcript or other record of trial proceedings, a brief on his behalf in the Court of Appeals setting forth his claims of error, and often an opinion by the Court of Appeals disposing of his case. These materials, supplemented by whatever submission respondent may make pro se, would appear to provide the Supreme Court of North Carolina with an adequate basis on which to base its decision to grant or deny review. Ross v. Moffitt, 417 U.S. 600, 94 S. Ct. 2437, 41 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1974).

The duty of the State is not to duplicate the legal arsenal that may be privately retained by a criminal defendant in a continuing effort to reverse his conviction, but only to assure the indigent defendant an adequate opportunity to present his claims fairly in the context of the State's appellate process. Ross v. Moffitt, 417 U.S. 600, 94 S. Ct. 2437, 41 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1974).

III. RIGHT TO COUNSEL AT CRITICAL STAGES OF PROCEEDINGS.

A. In-Custody Interrogation.

The entitlement to counsel begins as soon as possible after the defendant is taken into custody and continues through any critical stage of the proceeding, including an in-custody interrogation. State v. Jackson, 12 N.C. App. 566, 183 S.E.2d 812 (1971).

In-custody interrogation is a critical stage in the proceeding, at which time the defendant is entitled to counsel. State v. Doss, 279 N.C. 413, 183 S.E.2d 671 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2875, 33 L. Ed. 2d 762 (1972).

The standard for determining when an "in-custody interrogation" occurs under this section is a question of State law which is not inextricably linked to the evolving federal standard for an "in-custody interrogation" actionable under Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 86 S. Ct. 1602, 16 L. Ed. 2d 694, 10 A.L.R.3d 974 (1966). Chance v. Garrison, 537 F.2d 1212 (4th Cir. 1976).

Custodial interrogation means questioning initiated by law-enforcement officers after a person has been taken into custody or otherwise deprived of his freedom of action in any significant way. State v. Haddock, 281 N.C. 675, 190 S.E.2d 208 (1972).

And Where There Was No "In-Custody Interrogation" Counsel Was Not Required. — Where it was clear that defendant was in custody, but equally clear that no statements were made as a result of questions from the police officers and that statements made by defendant were volunteered, the Supreme Court held that there was no "in-custody interrogation"; thus the presence of counsel was not required, and the trial judge correctly admitted into evidence the statements made by defendant. State v. Chance, 279 N.C. 643, 185 S.E.2d 227 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 940, 92 S. Ct. 2878, 33 L. Ed. 2d 764 (1972).

Since Voluntary Statements Are Not Barred. — The fundamental import of the privilege while an individual is in custody is not whether he is allowed to talk to the police without benefit of warnings and counsel, but whether he can be interrogated. There is no requirement that police stop a person who enters a police station and states that he wishes to confess to a crime, or a person who calls the police to offer a confession or any other statement he desires to make. Volunteered statements of any kind are not barred by the Fifth Amendment. State v. Lynch, 279 N.C. 1, 181 S.E.2d 561 (1971).

Volunteered statements are competent evidence, and their admission is not barred under any theory of the law, State or federal. And a voluntary in-custody statement does not become the product of an "in-custody interrogation" simply because an officer, in the course of defendant's narration, asks defendant to explain or clarify something he has already said voluntarily. State v. Haddock, 281 N.C. 675, 190 S.E.2d 208 (1972).

Where defendant's narrative confession was not the result of an in-custody interrogation, even though his indigency be assumed, the presence of counsel was not required at that time. State v. Lynch, 279 N.C. 1, 181 S.E.2d 561 (1971).

Defendant Indigent on Day of Interrogation Has Right to Counsel. — If defendant is indigent on the day of the interrogation, he is entitled to the services of counsel at the interrogation. State v. Lynch, 279 N.C. 1, 181 S.E.2d 561 (1971).

When Article Renders Statements Made on Interrogation Inadmissible. — If, at the time of his custody interrogation, defendant was indigent and had not signed a written waiver of counsel, this Article renders the statements made on interrogation inadmissible; and this is true whether the evidence offered to prove them be the testimony of a witness who was present or a sound recording of the interrogation itself. State v. Lynch, 279 N.C. 1, 181 S.E.2d 561 (1971).

Admission of Statement Where Defendant Had Previously Testified to Same Facts While Represented by Counsel. — Admission over objection of an in-custody statement made by defendant without the presence of counsel was harmless error where defendant, while represented by counsel, had testified to the same facts at the trial of his alleged accomplice. State v. Frazier, 280 N.C. 181, 185 S.E.2d 652, death sentence vacated, 409 U.S. 1004, 93 S. Ct. 453, 34 L. Ed. 2d 295 (1972).

B. Pretrial Identification.

Accused Is Entitled to Counsel at Pretrial In-Custody Lineup. — A pretrial in-custody lineup for identification purposes is a critical stage in the proceedings, and an accused so exposed is entitled to the presence of counsel. State v. Bass, 280 N.C. 435, 186 S.E.2d 384 (1972).

But Not When Eyewitnesses Are Viewing Photographs for Purposes of Identification. — A suspect has no constitutional right to the presence of counsel when eyewitnesses are viewing photographs for purposes of identification, and this is true regardless of whether he is at liberty or in custody at the time. Such pretrial identification procedure is not a critical stage of the proceeding. State v. Stepney, 280 N.C. 306, 185 S.E.2d 844 (1972).

Counsel Required at Pretrial Identification Proceedings Only after Formal Charges Preferred. — The General Assembly amended subdivision (b)(2) to require counsel for indigents at pretrial identification proceedings only after formal charges have been preferred and at which the presence of the indigent was required. This amendment apparently stems from the holding in Kirby v. Illinois, 406 U.S. 682, 92 S. Ct. 1877, 32 L. Ed. 2d 411 (1972). State v. Henderson, 285 N.C. 1, 203 S.E.2d 10 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 902, 96 S. Ct. 3202, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1205 (1976).

Waiver of Right. — One who, under § 7A-457 as it stood before the 1971 amendment thereto, was precluded in a capital case from waiving the right to counsel during an in-custody, pretrial lineup stood in the same position as an accused who did not knowingly, understandingly and voluntarily waive the right to counsel before the enactment of this Article. But where, the State, on voir dire, showed by clear and convincing evidence that an in-court identification was of independent origin and was not tainted by the lineup procedures, the in-court identification evidence was competent. State v. Chance, 279 N.C. 643, 185 S.E.2d 227 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 940, 92 S. Ct. 2878, 33 L. Ed. 2d 764 (1972).

C. Preliminary Hearing.

Prior to the enactment of this section a defendant did not have a right to an attorney at a preliminary hearing. Dawson v. State, 8 N.C. App. 566, 174 S.E.2d 610 (1970).

A preliminary hearing is not an essential prerequisite to a bill of indictment; however, since this section declares a preliminary hearing to be "a critical stage of the action," it follows that an indigent defendant is entitled to the appointment of counsel if such a hearing is held. State v. Gainey, 280 N.C. 366, 185 S.E.2d 874 (1972).

The initial appearance before a district court judge is not a critical stage because it is not an adversarial judicial proceeding where rights and defenses are preserved or lost or a plea taken. Therefore, the reference in subsection (b)(4) of this section to a preliminary hearing does not mean that a defendant has a Sixth Amendment right to counsel at the initial appearance before the district court judge. State v. Detter, 298 N.C. 604, 260 S.E.2d 567 (1979).

Defendant Found Not Indigent for Purpose of Preliminary Hearing Has No Right to Appointed Counsel. — If found not indigent for the purpose of the preliminary hearing, a defendant does not have the right to appointed counsel, and he can waive counsel and elect to defend himself. State v. Hairston, 280 N.C. 220, 185 S.E.2d 633, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 888, 93 S. Ct. 194, 34 L. Ed. 2d 145 (1972).

Failure to Appoint Counsel for Preliminary Hearing Held Harmless Error. — The failure to appoint counsel to represent an indigent defendant at her preliminary hearing on charges of forgery and uttering a forged check was harmless error beyond a reasonable doubt where the testimony at the hearing was not transcribed and was never put before the trial court, the jury which convicted defendant never knew that a preliminary hearing had been conducted, the record did not show that defendant pled guilty or made any disclosures at the preliminary hearing which were used against her at the trial, and the record did not show the loss of any defenses or pleas or motions by failure to assert them at the preliminary hearing. State v. Cradle, 281 N.C. 198, 188 S.E.2d 296, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1047, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 499 (1972).

Subsequent Pleas of Guilty Not Invalidated. — Failure to accord an indigent defendant his statutory right to counsel at the time he waived preliminary hearing did not invalidate his subsequent pleas of guilty, where the pleas were given at a time when defendant was represented by counsel and the trial court fully inquired into the voluntariness of the pleas. State v. Elledge, 13 N.C. App. 462, 186 S.E.2d 192 (1972).

(a) Counsel for an indigent person shall be assigned by the court. In those districts which have a public defender, however, the public defender may tentatively assign himself or an assistant public defender to represent an indigent person, subject to subsequent approval by the court.

(b) Fees of assigned counsel and salaries and other operating expenses of the offices of the public defenders shall be borne by the State.

(c)(1) The clerk of superior court is authorized to make a determination of indigency and to appoint counsel, as authorized by this Article. The word "court," as it is used in this Article and in any rules pursuant to this Article, includes the clerk of superior court.

(2) A judge of superior or district court having authority to appoint counsel in a particular case may give directions to the clerk with regard to the appointment of counsel in that case; may, if he finds it appropriate, change or modify the appointment of counsel when counsel has been appointed by the clerk; and may set aside a finding of waiver of counsel made by the clerk.

(d) Unless a public defender or assistant public defender is appointed to serve, the trial judge appointing standby counsel under G.S. 15A-1243 shall award reasonable compensation to be paid by the State. (1969, c. 1013, s. 1; 1971, c. 377, s. 32; 1973, c. 1286, s. 8; 1977, c. 711, s. 9.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, ch. 711, s. 39, as amended by Session Laws 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1147, s. 32, provides: "This act shall become effective July 1, 1978, and applies to all matters addressed by its provisions without regard to when a defendant's guilt was established or when judgment was entered against him, except that the provisions of this act regarding parole shall not apply to persons sentenced before July 1, 1978."

(a) In districts which have a public defender, the authority having custody of a person who is without counsel for more than 48 hours after being taken into custody shall so inform the public defender. The public defender shall make a preliminary determination as to the person's entitlement to his services, and proceed accordingly. The court shall make the final determination.

(b) In districts which do not have a public defender, the authority having custody of a person who is without counsel for more than 48 hours after being taken into custody shall so inform the clerk of superior court.

(c) In any district, if a defendant, upon being taken into custody, states that he is indigent and desires counsel, the authority having custody shall immediately inform the defender or the clerk of superior court, as the case may be, who shall take action as provided in this Article.

(d) The duties imposed by this section upon authorities having custody of persons who may be indigent are in addition to the duties imposed upon arresting officers under G.S. 15-47. (1969, c. 1013, s. 1; 1973, c. 1286, s. 8.)

Editor's Note. — Section 15-47, referred to in this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1973, c. 1286. See now §§ 15A-401 through 15A-405.

CASE NOTES

The court makes the final determination of indigency, and this may be determined or redetermined by the court at any stage of the proceeding at which the indigent is entitled to representation. State v. Cradle, 281 N.C. 198, 188 S.E.2d 296, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1047, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 499 (1972).

Applied in State v. Cradle, 13 N.C. App. 120, 185 S.E.2d 35 (1971); State v. Avery, 286 N.C. 459, 212 S.E.2d 142 (1975).

Stated in State v. Lynch, 279 N.C. 1, 181 S.E.2d 561 (1971).

The court, in its discretion, may approve a fee for the service of an expert witness who testifies for an indigent person, and shall approve reimbursement for the necessary expenses of counsel. Fees and expenses accrued under this section shall be paid by the State. (1969, c. 1013, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For a note on providing indigent criminal defendants state-paid investigators, see 13 Wake Forest L. Rev. 655 (1977).

For note on an indigent's constitutional right to a state-paid expert, see 16 Wake Forest L. Rev. 1031 (1980).

CASE NOTES

The statutory plan established in § 7A-450 and this section and the plan of § 7A-468 for State provision of investigative or expert assistance are substantially equivalent. In neither case is a defendant entitled to an investigator at State expense upon demand. In both instances he is entitled to a state-appointed investigator when he has made a showing of need sufficient to convince a public official, in the exercise of his discretion, that those services are necessary to a fundamentally fair trial. There is then no real distinction between indigent defendants represented by a public defender and those with court-appointed counsel with respect to the availability of state-provided investigative assistance. Therefore, the denial of defendant's motion for the appointment of an investigator did not violate his constitutionally guaranteed rights to equal protection of the laws. State v. Tatum, 291 N.C. 73, 229 S.E.2d 562 (1976).

This section permits but does not compel providing an expert to criminally accused at State expense. State v. Patterson, 288 N.C. 553, 220 S.E.2d 600 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976).

When Private Investigators or Expert Assistance Provided. — Section 7A-450(b) and this section require that private investigators or expert assistance be provided only upon a showing by defendant that there is a reasonable likelihood that it will materially assist the defendant in the preparation of his defense or that without such help it is probable that defendant will not receive a fair trial. Neither the State nor the federal Constitution requires more. State v. Gray, 292 N.C. 270, 233 S.E.2d 905 (1977).

Discretion of Trial Judge. — This section and the better reasoned decisions place the question of whether an expert should be appointed at State expense to assist an indigent defendant within the sound discretion of the trial judge. State v. Tatum, 291 N.C. 73, 229 S.E.2d 562 (1976).

The language contained in this section is consistent with the rule that appointment of experts lies within the discretion of the trial judge. State v. Tatum, 291 N.C. 73, 229 S.E.2d 562 (1976).

Where the motion to the court submitted by defendant's counsel simply stated, "That the defendant is an indigent person with court-appointed counsel, and, in the opinion of counsel, psychiatric evidence will be necessary and proper in behalf of the defense of the charges of murder against the defendant," without more, there was not abuse of the trial court's discretion in denying the motion. State v. Grainger, 29 N.C. App. 694, 225 S.E.2d 595 (1976).

Applied in State v. Setzer, 42 N.C. App. 98, 256 S.E.2d 485 (1979).

(a) If, in the opinion of the court, an indigent person is financially able to pay a portion, but not all, of the value of the legal services rendered for him by assigned counsel or by the public defender, and other necessary expenses of representation, he shall order the partially indigent person to pay such portion to the clerk of superior court for transmission to the State treasury.

(b) In all cases the court shall fix the money value of services rendered by assigned counsel or the public defender, and such sum, to the extent not reimbursed to the State by the indigent person as provided in subsection (a), plus any sums allowed by the court for other necessary expenses of representing the indigent person, shall be entered as a judgment in the office of the clerk of superior court, and shall constitute a lien as prescribed by the general law of the State applicable to judgments. Funds collected by reason of any such judgment shall be deposited in the State treasury.

(c) If the indigent person is not finally convicted, the foregoing provisions with respect to partial payments and liens shall not be applicable. (1969, c. 1013, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

State Not to Pay What Defendant Can. — It is not the public policy of this State to subsidize any portion of a defendant's defense which he himself can pay. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

When Judgment for Cost of Public Defender Services Vacated. — Judgment, after criminal conviction, for amount of cost of public defender services will be vacated where court finds judgment not supported in record by sufficient findings of fact or conclusions of law. State v. Crews, 284 N.C. 427, 201 S.E.2d 840 (1974).

Applied in State v. Stafford, 45 N.C. App. 297, 262 S.E.2d 695 (1980).

Quoted in State v. Hoffman, 281 N.C. 727, 190 S.E.2d 842 (1972).

A false material statement made by a person under oath or affirmation in regard to the question of his indigency constitutes perjury, and upon conviction thereof, the defendant may be punished as provided in G.S. 14-209. (1969, c. 1013, s. 1.)

§ 7A-457. Waiver of counsel; pleas of guilty.

(a) An indigent person who has been informed of his right to be represented by counsel at any in-court proceeding, may, in writing, waive the right to in-court representation by counsel, if the court finds of record that at the time of waiver the indigent person acted with full awareness of his rights and of the consequences of the waiver. In making such a finding, the court shall consider, among other things, such matters as the person's age, education, familiarity with the English language, mental condition, and the complexity of the crime charged.

(b) If an indigent person waives counsel as provided in subsection (a), and pleads guilty to any offense, the court shall inform him of the nature of the offense and the possible consequences of his plea, and as a condition of accepting the plea of guilty the court shall examine the person and shall ascertain that the plea was freely, understandably and voluntarily made, without undue influence, compulsion or duress, and without promise of leniency.

(c) An indigent person who has been informed of his right to be represented by counsel at any out-of-court proceeding, may, either orally or in writing, waive the right to out-of-court representation by counsel. (1969, c. 1013, s. 1; 1971, c. 1243; 1973, c. 151, s. 3.)

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Prior to the passage of this Article it was unquestioned that an accused could waive his right to counsel at in-custody proceedings, either orally or in writing, if he did so freely, voluntarily and understandingly. State v. Chance, 279 N.C. 643, 185 S.E.2d 227 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 940, 92 S. Ct. 2878, 33 L. Ed. 2d 764 (1972).

Prior to the enactment of § 7A-450 et seq., there was no difference in the requirements for a waiver of counsel by indigents and nonindigents. Each could waive the right either orally or in writing. State v. Lynch, 279 N.C. 1, 181 S.E.2d 561 (1971).

The purpose of the statutory provision for appointment of counsel, at public expense, for indigent defendants is to put indigent defendants on an equality with affluent defendants in trials upon criminal charges. To deny, or to restrict the right of the indigent to waive counsel, i.e., to represent himself, while permitting the affluent defendant to exercise such right, has no reasonable relation to the objective of equal opportunity to prevail at the trial of the case. Such classification is beyond the power of the legislature. State v. Mems, 281 N.C. 658, 190 S.E.2d 164 (1972).

Applied in State v. Griffin, 10 N.C. App. 134, 177 S.E.2d 760 (1970); State v. Doss, 279 N.C. 413, 183 S.E.2d 671 (1971); State v. Wright, 281

N.C. 38, 187 S.E.2d 761 (1972); State v. Edwards, 282 N.C. 201, 192 S.E.2d 304 (1972); State v. Simmons, 286 N.C. 681, 213 S.E.2d 280 (1975); State v. Monroe, 27 N.C. App. 405, 219 S.E.2d 270 (1975); State v. Hodge, 27 N.C. App. 502, 219 S.E.2d 568 (1975); State v. Cobb, 295 N.C. 1, 243 S.E.2d 759 (1978).

Cited in State v. Blackmon, 280 N.C. 42, 185 S.E.2d 123 (1971); State v. Hoffman, 281 N.C. 727, 190 S.E.2d 842 (1972); In re Martin, 286 N.C. 66, 209 S.E.2d 766 (1974); State v. Boyd, 31 N.C. App. 328, 229 S.E.2d 229 (1976); State v. House, 295 N.C. 189, 244 S.E.2d 654 (1978).

II. WAIVER OF COUNSEL.

A. In General.

The rule is that one may waive counsel if he does so freely and voluntarily and with full understanding that he has the right to be represented by an attorney. State v. Lynch, 279 N.C. 1, 181 S.E.2d 561 (1971).

But Waiver Must Be Specifically Made after Miranda Warnings. — No effective waiver of the right to counsel during interrogation can be recognized unless specifically made after the Miranda warnings. Silence and waiver are not synonymous. Presuming waiver from a silent record is impermissible. The record must show, or there must be an allegation and evidence which show, that an accused was offered counsel but intelligently and understandingly rejected the offer. Anything less is not waiver. State v. Blackmon, 284 N.C. 1, 199 S.E.2d 431 (1973).

And waiver of counsel may not be presumed from a silent record. State v. Moses, 16 N.C. App. 174, 191 S.E.2d 368 (1972).

Necessity for Evidence or Findings of Waiver. — Admission of a defendant's inculpatory statement to the police was erroneous where there was neither evidence nor findings to show that defendant had waived his right to counsel as provided by this section. State v. Hudson, 281 N.C. 100, 187 S.E.2d 756 (1972), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1160, 94 S. Ct. 920, 39 L. Ed. 2d 112 (1974).

Waiver Is Required Only Where Defendant Is Subjected to In-Custody Interrogation. — Miranda warnings and waiver of counsel are only required where defendant is being subjected to custodial interrogation. State v. Blackmon, 284 N.C. 1, 199 S.E.2d 431 (1973).

And the standard for determining when an "in-custody interrogation" occurs under this section is a question of State law which is not inextricably linked to the evolving federal standard for an "in-custody interrogation" actionable under Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 86 S. Ct. 1602, 16 L. Ed. 2d 694, 10 A.L.R.3d 974 (1966). Chance v. Garrison, 537 F.2d 1212 (4th Cir. 1976).

Waiver in Capital Case Prior to 1971 Amendment. — See State v. Doss, 279 N.C. 413, 183 S.E.2d 671 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 939, 92 S. Ct. 2875, 33 L. Ed. 2d 762 (1972); State v. Chance, 279 N.C. 643, 185 S.E.2d 227 (1971), death sentence vacated, 408 U.S. 940, 92 S. Ct. 2878, 33 L. Ed. 2d 764 (1972); State v. Bass, 280 N.C. 435, 186 S.E.2d 384 (1972); State v. Mems, 281 N.C. 658, 190 S.E.2d 164 (1972).

B. Requirement of Writing.

Stringency of Requiring Waiver in Writing. — In imposing the requirement that an indigent's waiver of counsel must be in writing, the North Carolina General Assembly imposed a more stringent requirement than the federal courts have done. State v. Lynch, 279 N.C. 1, 181 S.E.2d 561 (1971).

Words of subsection (a), "in writing," are directory only and not mandatory. State v. Smith, 24 N.C. App. 498, 211 S.E.2d 539 (1975).

Waiver at Out-of-Court Proceeding No Longer Required to Be in Writing. — The General Assembly, by Session Laws 1971, c. 1243, amended this section so as to relax the requirement that a waiver of counsel must be in writing. State v. Turner, 281 N.C. 118, 187 S.E.2d 750 (1972).

Printing Name Rather Than Writing It. — The fact that defendant printed his name instead of signing it to a waiver of rights form was without legal significance and did not warrant suppression of in-custody statements of defendant. State v. Roberts, 293 N.C. 1, 235 S.E.2d 203 (1977).

Refusal to Sign Waiver of Counsel Will Not Defeat Determination That Counsel Was Properly Waived. — When all of the provisions of this section have been otherwise fully complied with, and the indigent defendant has refused to accept court-appointed counsel, his refusal to sign a waiver of counsel will not defeat a determination that such defendant freely, voluntarily and understandingly waived in-court representation by counsel, and in such case the State may proceed with the trial of the indigent defendant without counsel. State v. Smith, 24 N.C. App. 498, 211 S.E.2d 539 (1975).

Refusal to sign a written waiver is a fact which may tend to show that no waiver occurred, but it is not conclusive in the face of other evidence tending to show waiver. State v. Patterson, 288 N.C. 553, 220 S.E.2d 600 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976).

A refusal to sign a waiver form does not necessarily preclude a valid oral waiver. State v. Patterson, 288 N.C. 553, 220 S.E.2d 600 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1211 (1976).

The waiver in writing once given is good and sufficient until the proceeding finally terminated, unless the defendant himself makes known to the court that he desires to withdraw the waiver, and have counsel assigned to him. State v. Watson, 21 N.C. App. 374, 204 S.E.2d 537, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 595, 206 S.E.2d 866 (1974).

The burden of showing the change in the desire of the defendant for counsel rests upon the defendant. State v. Watson, 21 N.C. App. 374, 204 S.E.2d 537, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 595, 206 S.E.2d 866 (1974).

This section does not require successive waivers in writing at every court level of the proceeding and trial in district court and trial in superior court on appeal constitute one in-court proceeding. State v. Watson, 21 N.C. App. 374, 204 S.E.2d 537, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 595, 206 S.E.2d 866 (1974).

C. Voluntary Statements.

No waiver is involved with respect to volunteered statements. State v. Haddock, 281 N.C. 675, 190 S.E.2d 208 (1972).

A volunteered confession is admissible by constitutional standards even in the absence of warning or waiver of rights since an indigent's right to or waiver of counsel under this section does not arise and is not involved with respect to volunteered statements. State v. Blackmon, 284 N.C. 1, 199 S.E.2d 431 (1973).

Defendant's volunteered confession would have been admissible by constitutional standards even in the absence of warning or waiver of his rights. State v. Haddock, 281 N.C. 675, 190 S.E.2d 208 (1972).

Any statement given freely and voluntarily without any compelling influence is admissible in evidence. The fundamental import of the privilege while an individual is in custody is not whether he is allowed to talk to the police without the benefit of warnings and counsel, but whether he can be interrogated. State v. Haddock, 281 N.C. 675, 190 S.E.2d 208 (1972).

Assuming defendant's indigency, the presence of counsel was not required because defendant's statement at the police station was not the result of an in-custody interrogation initiated by the officers. Rather, it was defendant's own voluntary narration, freely and understandingly related. State v. Haddock, 281 N.C. 675, 190 S.E.2d 208 (1972).

Although defendant was in custody at the time he made the incriminating statements, where his statements were not made in response to police "interrogation," as that word is defined in Miranda, but were more in the nature of volunteered assertions and narrations, statements were admissible. State v. Blackmon, 284 N.C. 1, 199 S.E.2d 431 (1973).

Where there was no evidence of any interrogation or other police procedure tending to overbear the will of the accused and defendant spoke in the voluntary exercise of his own will and without the slightest compulsion of in-custody interrogation procedures, his statements were properly admitted into evidence as volunteered statements made under circumstances requiring neither warnings nor the presence of counsel. State v. Blackmon, 284 N.C. 1, 199 S.E.2d 431 (1973).

D. Self-Representation.

Right of Defendant to Represent Himself. — A defendant in a criminal proceeding has a right to handle his own case without interference by, or the assistance of, counsel forced upon him against his wishes. State v. Mems, 281 N.C. 658, 190 S.E.2d 164 (1972).

The United States Constitution does not deny to a defendant the right to defend himself. State v. Mems, 281 N.C. 658, 190 S.E.2d 164 (1972).

Having been fully advised by the court that an attorney would be appointed to represent him if he so desired, the defendant had the right to reject the offer of such appointment and to represent himself in the trial and disposition of his case. State v. Mems, 281 N.C. 658, 190 S.E.2d 164 (1972).

Appointment of Counsel for Limited Purpose Where Defendant Represents Himself. — Defendant was not prejudiced in any respect by the appointment of counsel for the limited purpose of furnishing advice to him if so requested, even though defendant did waive counsel and conducted his own defense. State v. Harper, 21 N.C. App. 30, 202 S.E.2d 795, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 375, 205 S.E.2d 100 (1974).

III. GUILTY PLEAS.

Failure to Interrogate Defendant Entering Plea of Guilty. — Failure on the part of the trial judge to follow the recommended procedure that he interrogate every defendant, whether represented by counsel or not, who enters a plea of guilty, in order to be sure that he has freely, voluntarily and intelligently consented to and authorized the entry of such plea, is not fatal to a conviction. This rule has not been modified by this section. However, when a defendant who is represented by counsel tenders a plea of guilty or a plea of nolo contendere it must appear affirmatively in the record that he did so voluntarily and understandingly. State v. Ford, 281 N.C. 62, 187 S.E.2d 741 (1972).

Failure to Inform Defendant Pleading Nolo Contendere of Minimum Sentence. — Where the trial court informed defendant that he could be imprisoned for as much as 30 years upon his plea of nolo contendere to a charge of armed robbery, the failure of the court to inform defendant that the minimum sentence was five years did not vitiate defendant's plea of nolo contendere. State v. Blake, 14 N.C. App. 367, 188 S.E.2d 607 (1972).

In districts which do not have a public defender, the court shall fix the fee to which an attorney who represents an indigent person is entitled. In doing so, the court shall allow a fee based on the factors normally considered in fixing attorneys' fees, such as the nature of the case, the time, effort and responsibility involved, and the fee usually charged in similar cases. Fees shall be fixed by the district court judge for actions or proceedings finally determined in the district court and by the superior court judge for actions or proceedings originating in, heard on appeal in, or appealed from the superior court. Even if the trial, appeal, hearing or other proceeding is never held, preparation therefor is nevertheless compensable. (1969, c. 1013, s. 1.)

In districts which do not have a public defender, the North Carolina State Bar Council shall make rules and regulations consistent with this article relating to the manner and method of assigning counsel, the procedure for the determination of indigency, the waiver of counsel, the adoption and approval of plans by any district bar regarding the method of assignment of counsel among the licensed attorneys of the district, and such other matters as shall provide for the protection of the constitutional rights of all indigent persons and the reasonable allocation of responsibility for the representation of indigent persons among the licensed attorneys of this State. Such rules and regulations shall not become effective until certified to and approved by the Supreme Court of North Carolina. (1969, c. 1013, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Appointment of additional counsel under this section is clearly discretionary with the trial or appellate court, and failure to appoint or continue the appointment of associate counsel will be held error only when it amounts to a clear abuse of that discretion, i.e., only when it is denied in the face of a showing by defendant of a reasonable likelihood that additional counsel would materially assist in the preparation of his defense, or that without such help it is probable that defendant will not receive a fair trial. State v. Easterling, 300 N.C. 594, 268 S.E.2d 800 (1980).

ARTICLE 37.

The Public Defender.

§ 7A-465. Public defender; defender districts; qualifications; compensation.

The office of public defender is established, effective January 1, 1970, in the following judicial districts: the twelfth and the eighteenth.

The office of public defender is established, effective July 1, 1973, in the twenty-eighth judicial district.

The office of public defender is established, effective July 1, 1975, in the twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh judicial districts. Effective July 1, 1978, the twenty-seventh judicial district is divided into judicial districts 27A and 27B. On that date the current public defender of the twenty-seventh district shall become the public defender for district 27A.

Effective January 1, 1981, the office of public defender is established in the third judicial district.

The public defender shall be an attorney licensed to practice law in North Carolina, and shall devote his full time to the duties of his office. (1969, c. 1013, s. 1; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; c. 799, s. 1; 1975, c. 956, s. 14; 1977, c. 802, s. 41.2; c. 1130, s. 6; 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1219, s. 43.3; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1284, s. 1.)

Effect of amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective Jan. 1, 1981, added the fourth paragraph.

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on assigned counsel and public defender systems, see 49 N.C.L. Rev. 705 (1971).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Entitlement of Public Defender to District Attorney's Travel Allowance and Full-Time Duties. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Wallace C. Harrelson, Public Defender, Eighteenth Judicial District, 40 N.C.A.G. 142 (1969).

§ 7A-466. Selection of defender; term; removal.

The public defender in the third, twelfth, eighteenth, twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh-A judicial districts shall be appointed by the Governor from a list of not less than two and not more than three names nominated by written ballot of the attorneys resident in the district who are licensed to practice law in North Carolina. The public defender in the twenty-eighth judicial district shall be appointed by the senior resident superior court judge of that judicial district from a list of not less than two names and not more than three names nominated by written ballot of the attorneys resident in the district who are licensed to practice law in North Carolina. The balloting shall be conducted pursuant to regulations promulgated by the Administrative Office of the Courts. The terms of office of the public defenders authorized in G.S. 7A-465 are for four years, beginning on the dates specified in that section for each district, and each fourth year thereafter.

A vacancy in the office of public defender is filled, in the same manner as the original appointment, for the unexpired term.

A public defender or assistant public defender may be suspended or removed from office, and reinstated, for the same causes and under the same procedures as are applicable to removal of a superior court district attorney. (1969, c. 1013, s. 1; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; c. 148, s. 5; c. 799, s. 2; 1975, c. 956, ss. 15, 16; 1977, c. 1130, s. 7; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1284, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective Jan. 1, 1981, inserted "third" near the beginning of the first sentence of the first paragraph.

Each public defender is entitled to at least one full-time assistant public defender, and to such additional assistants, full-time or part-time, as may be authorized by the Administrative Office of the Courts. Assistants are appointed by the public defender and serve at his pleasure. Compensation of assistants shall be as provided in the biennial budget appropriations act.

Assistants shall perform such duties as may be assigned by the public defender.

A member of the district bar who consents to such service may be assigned by the public defender to represent an indigent person, and when so assigned is entitled to the services of the defender's office to the same extent as a full-time public defender. In assigning assistant defenders and members of the bar generally the defender shall consider the nature of the case and the skill of counsel, to the end that all indigent persons are adequately represented.

If a conflict of interests prohibits the public defender from representing an indigent person, or in unusual circumstances when, in the opinion of the court the proper administration of justice requires it, the court may assign any member of the district bar to represent an indigent person, and when so assigned, counsel is entitled to the services of the defender's office to the same extent as counsel assigned by the public defender.

Members of the bar assigned by the defender or by the court are compensated in the same manner as assigned counsel are compensated in districts which do not have a public defender. (1969, c. 1013, s. 1.)

Each public defender is entitled to the services of one investigator, to be appointed by the defender to serve at his pleasure. The Administrative Officer of the Courts shall fix the compensation of each investigator, and may authorize additional investigators, full-time or part-time, upon a showing of need. (1969, c. 1013, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

No Equal Protection Violation. — Denial of a state-paid private investigator to an indigent defendant under subsection (b) of § 7A-450 does not, ipso facto, constitute a denial of equal protection of the laws notwithstanding that such investigators might be available to indigent defendants represented by public defenders under this section and to pecunious defendants. State v. Gray, 292 N.C. 270, 233 S.E.2d 905 (1977).

Employment of Investigator. — Nothing in this section requires or contemplates the employment or use of an investigator for the purpose of embarking upon a statewide, or worldwide, search for evidence in the absence of any indication whatever that such evidence exists anywhere. State v. Montgomery, 291 N.C. 91, 229 S.E.2d 572 (1976).

The services of an investigator are at the disposal of each public defender, to be used by him whenever, in his discretion, a particular case indicates the need therefor. State v. Tatum, 291 N.C. 73, 229 S.E.2d 562 (1976).

The statutory plan established in §§ 7A-450 and 7A-454 and the plan of this section for State provision of investigative or expert assistance are substantially equivalent. In neither case is a defendant entitled to an investigator at State expense upon demand. In both instances he is entitled to a state-appointed investigator when he has made a showing of need sufficient to convince a public official, in the exercise of his discretion, that those services are necessary to a fundamentally fair trial. There is then no real distinction between indigent defendants represented by a public defender and those with court-appointed counsel with respect to the availability of state-provided investigative assistance. Therefore, the denial of defendant's motion for the appointment of an investigator did not violate his constitutionally guaranteed rights to equal protection of the laws. State v. Tatum, 291 N.C. 73, 229 S.E.2d 562 (1976).

§ 7A-469. Support for office of defender.

The Administrative Officer of the Courts shall procure office equipment and supplies for the public defender, and provide secretarial and library support from State funds appropriated to his office for his purpose. (1969, c. 1013, s. 1.)

The public defender shall keep appropriate records and make periodic reports, as requested, to the Administrative Office of the Courts on matters related to the operation of his office. (1969, c. 1013, s. 1.)

§§ 7A-471 to 7A-474: Reserved for future codification purposes.

The appellate defender shall:

(2) Maintain a repository of briefs prepared by the appellate defender to be made available to private counsel representing indigents in criminal cases.

(3) Provide continuing legal education training to assistant appellate defenders and to private counsel representing indigents in criminal appeals, as resources are available. (1981, c. 964, s. 11.)

SUBCHAPTER XI. NORTH CAROLINA JUVENILE CODE.

ARTICLE 41.

Purpose; Definitions.

This Article shall be interpreted and construed so as to implement the following purposes and policies:

(1) To divert juvenile offenders from the juvenile system through the intake services authorized herein so that juveniles may remain in their own homes and may be treated through community-based services when this approach is consistent with the protection of the public safety;

(2) To provide procedures for the hearing of juvenile cases that assure fairness and equity and that protect the constitutional rights of juveniles and parents; and

(3) To develop a disposition in each juvenile case that reflects consideration of the facts, the needs and limitations of the child, the strengths and weaknesses of the family, and the protection of the public safety. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 4, contains a severability clause.

Editor's Note. — The annotations under this section are from cases decided under former § 7A-277.

The purpose of former § 7A-277 was to give to delinquent children the control and environment which might lead to their reformation and enable them to become law abiding and useful citizens — a support and not a hindrance to the State. In re Whichard, 8 N.C. App. 154, 174 S.E.2d 281 (1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 940, 91 S. Ct. 2258, 29 L. Ed. 2d 719 (1971).

The court must consider the welfare of the delinquent child as well as the best interest of the State. In re Hardy, 39 N.C. App. 610, 251 S.E.2d 643 (1979).

State's Interest in Juvenile Proceeding. — The fact that the proceeding is not an ordinary criminal prosecution, but is a juvenile proceeding, does not lessen, but should actually increase, the burden upon the State to see that the child's rights were protected. In re Meyers, 25 N.C. App. 555, 214 S.E.2d 268 (1975).

Delinquency Proceedings May Result in Commitment. — Juvenile proceedings to determine delinquency, though not the same as criminal prosecutions of an adult, may nevertheless result in commitment to an institution in which the juvenile's freedom is curtailed. In re Meyers, 25 N.C. App. 555, 214 S.E.2d 268 (1975).

Stated in In re Brownlee, 301 N.C. 532, 272 S.E.2d 861 (1981).

A juvenile who is married, emancipated, or a member of the armed forces, shall be prosecuted as an adult for the commission of a criminal offense. Wherever the term "juvenile" is used with reference to rights and privileges, that term encompasses the attorney for the juvenile as well.

(21) Neglected Juvenile. — A juvenile who does not receive proper care, supervision, or discipline from his parent, guardian, custodian, or caretaker; or who has been abandoned; or who is not provided necessary medical care or other remedial care recognized under State law, or who lives in an environment injurious to his welfare, or who has been placed for care or adoption in violation of law.

The singular includes the plural, the masculine singular includes the feminine singular and masculine and feminine plural unless otherwise specified. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 336; c. 359, s. 2; c. 469, ss. 1-3; c. 716, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, substituted the second and third sentences of subdivision (20) for the former second sentence of the subdivision, which read: "For the purposes of subdivisions (12) and (28) of this section, a juvenile is any person who has not reached his sixteenth birthday."

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The annotations under this section are from cases and opinion of the attorney general decided and issued under former § 7A-278.

Constitutionality. — Former § 7A-278 did not violate the equal protection clause of the United States Constitution by classifying and treating children differently from adults. In re Walker, 282 N.C. 28, 191 S.E.2d 702 (1972).

Allowing a child to be adjudged undisciplined and placed on probation without benefit of counsel, while at the same time requiring counsel before a child may be adjudged delinquent, did not deny equal protection of the laws to the undisciplined child. In re Walker, 282 N.C. 28, 191 S.E.2d 702 (1972).

The provisions of subdivision (5) of former § 7A-278, defining "undisciplined child" (see now subdivision (28) of this section defining "undisciplined juvenile") were not unconstitutionally vague or indefinite. In re Walker, 14 N.C. App. 356, 188 S.E.2d 731, aff'd, 282 N.C. 28, 191 S.E.2d 702 (1972).

Distinction between Undisciplined and Delinquent Children Is Relevant to State's Objective. — In seeking solutions which provide in each case for the protection, treatment, rehabilitation and correction of the child, it is impellingly relevant to the achievement of the State's objective that distinctions be made between undisciplined children on the one hand and delinquent children on the other. In re Walker, 282 N.C. 28, 191 S.E.2d 702 (1972).

"Community-based program". — Although the term "community-based program" is a term of art, its usage by the General Assembly reflects its concern that responses to the problems of the juveniles coming before the courts be fashioned in a flexible manner so as to address the best interests of the child in ways other than probation and commitment to training schools. In re Brownlee, 301 N.C. 532, 272 S.E.2d 861 (1981).

The term community ought to be interpreted in a broad manner, connoting an interrelationship among persons who live in the same general area, but who also share the same laws, rights, and interests. In re Brownlee, 301 N.C. 532, 272 S.E.2d 861 (1981).

"Neglected" Child. — It is fundamental that a child who receives proper care and supervision in modern times is provided a basic education. A child does not receive "proper care" and lives in an "environment injurious to his welfare" when he is deliberately refused this education, and he is "neglected". In re McMillan, 30 N.C. App. 235, 226 S.E.2d 693 (1976).

Same — Parental Rights Terminated. — The trial court properly terminated respondent mother's parental rights in her two children where the evidence supported findings by the court that the children were neglected children within the meaning of former § 7A-278(4) and that respondent failed to pay any portion of their foster care costs for more than six months preceding the filing of the petition as called for under § 7A-289.32(4). In re Biggers, 50 N.C. App. 332, 274 S.E.2d 236 (1981).

"Undisciplined Child". — A finding in a juvenile commitment proceeding that a 15-year-old girl was beyond the disciplinary control of her parents or custodian and was therefore a delinquent child in need of the supervision, protection, and custody of the State, was sufficient to bring the girl within the statutory definition of an "undisciplined child" (now see definition of "undisciplined juvenile.") In re Martin, 9 N.C. App. 576, 176 S.E.2d 849 (1970).

District court had no right to assume custody jurisdiction of minor children upon its finding that they were "neglected" children to the exclusion of the district court which had previously acquired custody jurisdiction in a divorce and custody proceeding of the children's parents. In re Greer, 26 N.C. App. 106, 215 S.E.2d 404, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 664, 216 S.E.2d 910 (1975).

No Finding of Delinquency Where Evidence Insufficient to Convict Juvenile of Crime. — Where the evidence in a juvenile hearing was insufficient to convict the juvenile of the crime alleged in the petition, subornation of perjury, there could be no finding that the juvenile was a delinquent. In re Roberts, 8 N.C. App. 513, 174 S.E.2d 667 (1970).

Evidence Sufficient to Convict of Crime Is Sufficient to Permit Finding of Delinquency. — Where there was sufficient evidence to convict the accused of the crime alleged in the petition, then there was sufficient evidence to permit a finding that the accused was a delinquent child. State v. Rush, 13 N.C. App. 539, 186 S.E.2d 595 (1972).

A motion to dismiss a petition seeking to declare a juvenile a delinquent was properly denied when there was substantial evidence that the juvenile respondent committed a criminal offense or violated a condition of a probationary judgment. In re Byers, 295 N.C. 256, 244 S.E.2d 665 (1978).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

The Definition of "Sexual Abuse" as Set Forth in the Recent Amendments to the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (42 U.S.C. § 5101 et seq., as Amended by P.L. 95-266) was Encompassed within the Definition of "Abused Child" as Set Forth in former § 110-117 and the Definition of "Neglected Child" as Set Forth in former § 7A-278(4). — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Carl H. Harper, Regional Attorney, Region IV, United States Department of Health, Education and Welfare, 48 N.C.A.G. 1 (1978).

ARTICLE 42.

Jurisdiction.

The court has exclusive, original jurisdiction over any case involving a juvenile who is alleged to be delinquent, undisciplined, abused, neglected, or dependent. This jurisdiction does not extend to cases involving adult defendants alleged to be guilty of abuse or neglect. For purposes of determining jurisdiction, the age of the juvenile either at the time of the alleged offense or when the conditions causing the juvenile to be abused, neglected, or dependent arose, governs. There is no minimum age for juveniles alleged to be abused, dependent or neglected. For juveniles alleged to be delinquent or undisciplined, the minimum age is six years of age.

The court also has exclusive original jurisdiction of the following proceedings:

(1) Proceedings under the Interstate Compact on Juveniles and the Interstate Parole and Probation Hearing Procedures for Juveniles;
(2) Proceedings to determine whether a juvenile who is on conditional release and under the aftercare supervision of the court counselor has violated the terms of his conditional release established by the Division of Youth Services;
(3) Proceedings involving judicial consent for emergency surgical or medical treatment for a juvenile when his parent, guardian, legal custodian, or other person standing in loco parentis refuses to consent for treatment to be rendered;
(4) Proceedings to determine whether a juvenile should be emancipated;
(5) Proceedings to terminate parental rights. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 4, contains a severability clause.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The annotations under this section are from a case and opinions of the attorney general decided and issued under former §§ 7A-278 and 7A-279.

This Article vests exclusive, original jurisdiction over any case involving a child in the district court judge and provides in detail for procedures in the district court in cases involving children. State v. Miller, 281 N.C. 70, 187 S.E.2d 729 (1972).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

District Courts Have Original, Exclusive Jurisdiction of a Person under the Age of Fourteen Charged with a Crime. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Charles B. Winberry, Chief District Prosecutor, Seventh Judicial District, 41 N.C.A.G. 23 (1970).

Jurisdiction Extends to Minor Who Becomes 16 Prior to Hearing. — The juvenile jurisdiction of the district court extends to a minor alleged to be delinquent who was under 16 years of age at the time of the commission of the criminal offense but who attains the age of 16 prior to any judicial hearing. See opinion of Attorney General to the Hon. Larry Thomas Black, District Court Judge, Nov. 8, 1977.

When the court obtains jurisdiction over a juvenile, jurisdiction shall continue until terminated by order of the court or until he reaches his eighteenth birthday. Any juvenile who is under the jurisdiction of the court and commits a criminal offense after his sixteenth birthday is subject to prosecution as an adult. Any juvenile who is transferred to and sentenced by the superior court for a felony offense shall be prosecuted as an adult for all other crimes alleged to have been committed by him while he is under the active supervision of the superior court. Nothing herein shall be construed to divest the court of jurisdiction in abuse, neglect, or dependency proceedings. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 469, s. 4.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, substituted "shall be prosecuted" for "is subject to prosecution" near the middle of the third sentence.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

§§ 7A-525 to 7A-529: Reserved for future codification purposes.

ARTICLE 43.

Screening of Delinquency and Undisciplined Petitions.

§ 7A-530. Intake services.

The Chief Court Counselor, under the direction of the Administrator of Juvenile Services, shall establish intake services in each judicial district of the State for all delinquency and undisciplined cases.

The purpose of intake services shall be to determine from available evidence whether there are reasonable grounds to believe the facts alleged are true, to determine whether the facts alleged constitute a delinquent or undisciplined offense within the jurisdiction of the court, to determine whether the facts alleged are sufficiently serious to warrant court action and to obtain assistance from community resources when court referral is not necessary. The intake counselor shall not engage in field investigations to substantiate complaints or to produce supplementary evidence but may refer complainants to law-enforcement agencies for those purposes. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 4, contains a severability clause.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

When a complaint is received, the intake counselor shall make a preliminary determination as to whether the juvenile is within the jurisdiction of the court as a delinquent or undisciplined juvenile. If the intake counselor finds that the facts contained in the complaint do not state a case within the jurisdiction of the court, that legal sufficiency has not been established, or that the matters alleged are frivolous, he shall, without further inquiry, refuse authorization to file the complaint.

When requested by the intake counselor, the prosecutor shall assist in determining the sufficiency of evidence as it affects the quantum of proof and the elements of offenses.

If the intake counselor finds reasonable grounds to believe that the juvenile has committed one of the following offenses, he shall, without further inquiry, authorize the complaint to be filed as a petition: murder; rape; arson; any violation of Article 5, Chapter 90 of the North Carolina General Statutes which would constitute a felony if committed by an adult; first degree burglary; crime against nature; or any felony which involves the willful infliction of serious bodily injury upon another or which was committed by use of a deadly weapon. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

Upon a finding of legal sufficiency, except in the nondivertible offenses set out in G.S. 7A-531, the intake counselor shall determine whether a complaint should be filed as a petition, the juvenile diverted to a community resource, or the case resolved without further action. He shall consider criteria which shall be provided by the Administrator of Juvenile Services in making his decision. The intake process shall include the following steps if practicable:

(1) Interviews with the complainant and the victim if someone other than the complainant;
(2) Interviews with the juvenile, his parent, guardian, or custodian;
(3) Interviews with persons known to have information about the juvenile or family which information is pertinent to the case.

Interviews required by this section shall be conducted in person unless it is necessary to conduct them by telephone. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 469, s. 5.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, added "if practicable" at the end of the last sentence of the introductory paragraph.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

§ 7A-533. Evaluation decision.

The evaluation of a particular complaint shall be completed within 15 days, with an extension for a maximum of 15 additional days at the discretion of the Chief Court Counselor. The intake counselor must decide within this time period whether or not a complaint will be filed as a juvenile petition. If the intake counselor determines that a complaint should be filed as a petition, he shall assist the complainant when necessary with the preparation and filing of the petition, or help with the preparation and filing of the petition, shall endorse on it the date and the words "Approved for filing," shall sign it beneath such words, and shall transmit it to the clerk of superior court. If the intake counselor determines that a petition should not be filed, he shall immediately notify the complainant in writing with reasons for his decision and shall include notice of the complainant's right to have the decision reviewed by the prosecutor. The intake counselor shall then sign his name on the complaint beneath the words "Not approved."

Any complaint not approved for filing as a juvenile petition shall be destroyed by the intake counselor after holding the complaint for a temporary period to allow follow-up and review as provided in G.S. 7A-534 and 7A-536. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-534. Referral and follow-up.

The intake counselor may refer any case to an appropriate public or private resource unless the offense is one in which a petition is required as set out in G.S. 7A-531. After making a referral, the intake counselor shall ascertain that the juvenile actually contacted or was seen by the resource to which he was referred. In the event that the juvenile does not contact or visit the community resource, the intake counselor may reconsider his decision to divert and may authorize the filing of a complaint as a petition within 60 days from the date of the referral. If the juvenile contacts or is seen by the resource, the intake counselor shall close the file. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

The prosecutor shall review the intake counselor's determination, that a juvenile petition should not be filed, no later than 20 days after the complainant is notified. Review shall include conferences with the complainant and the intake counselor. At the conclusion of the review, the prosecution shall: (i) affirm the decision of the intake counselor or direct the filing of a petition and (ii) notify the complainant of his action. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 469, s. 6.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, substituted the last sentence for the former last sentence, which read: "At the conclusion of the review, the prosecutor may either affirm the decision of the intake counselor or may direct the filing of a petition."

ARTICLE 44.

Screening of Abuse and Neglect Complaints.

§ 7A-542. Protective services.

The Director of the Department of Social Services in each county of the State shall establish protective services for juveniles alleged to be abused, neglected, or dependent.

Protective services shall include the investigation and screening of complaints, casework or other counseling services to parents or other caretakers as provided by the director to help the parents or other caretakers and the court to prevent abuse or neglect, to improve the quality of child care, to be more adequate parents or caretakers, and to preserve and stabilize family life.

The provisions of this Article shall also apply to day-care facilities and day-care plans as defined in G.S. 110-86. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 359, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 4, contains a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment added the last paragraph.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

§ 7A-543. Duty to report child abuse or neglect.

Any person or institution who has cause to suspect that any juvenile is abused or neglected shall report the case of that juvenile to the Director of the Department of Social Services in the county where the juvenile resides or is found. The report may be made orally, by telephone, or in writing. The report shall include information as is known to the person making it including the name and address of the juvenile; the name and address of the juvenile's parent, guardian, or caretaker; the age of the juvenile; the present whereabouts of the juvenile if not at the home address; the nature and extent of any injury or condition resulting from abuse or neglect and any other information which the person making the report believes might be helpful in establishing the need for protective services or court intervention. If the report is made orally or by telephone, the person making the report shall give his name, address, and telephone number. Refusal of the person making the report to give his name shall not preclude the Department's investigation of the alleged abuse or neglect.

In the case of any report of abuse, the Director of Social Services, upon receipt of the report, may immediately provide the appropriate local law-enforcement agency with information on the nature of the report. The law-enforcement agency may investigate the report, and upon request of the Director of the Department of Social Services, the law-enforcement agency shall provide assistance with the investigation. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

When a report of abuse or neglect is received, the Director of the Department of Social Services shall make a prompt and thorough investigation in order to ascertain the facts of the case, the extent of the abuse or neglect, and the risk of harm to the juvenile, in order to determine whether protective services should be provided or the complaint filed as a petition. The investigation and evaluation shall include a visit to the place where the juvenile resides. All information received by the Department of Social Services shall be held in strictest confidence by the Department.

If the investigation reveals abuse or neglect, the Director shall decide whether immediate removal of the juvenile or any other juveniles in the home is necessary for their protection. If immediate removal does not seem necessary, the Director shall immediately provide or arrange for protective services. If the parent or other caretaker refuses to accept the protective services provided or arranged by the Director, the Director shall sign a complaint seeking to invoke the jurisdiction of the court for the protection of the juvenile or juveniles.

If immediate removal seems necessary for the protection of the juvenile or other juveniles in the home, the Director shall sign a complaint which alleges the applicable facts to invoke the jurisdiction of the court. Where the investigation shows that it is warranted, a protective services worker may assume temporary custody of the juvenile for the juvenile's protection pursuant to Article 46 of this Chapter.

In performing any of these duties, the Director may utilize the staff of the county Department of Social Services or any other public or private community agencies that may be available. The Director may also consult with the available State or local law-enforcement officers who shall assist in the investigation and evaluation of the seriousness of any report of abuse or neglect when requested by the Director.

Unless a petition is filed within five working days after receipt of the report of abuse or neglect, the Director shall give written notice to the person making the report that:

(1) There is no finding of abuse or neglect; or

(2) The county Department of Social Services is taking action to protect the welfare of the juvenile and what specific action it is taking.

The notification shall include notice that, if the person making the report is not satisfied with the Director's decision, he may request review of the decision by the prosecutor within five working days of receipt. The person making the report may waive his right to this notification and no notification is required if the person making the report does not identify himself to the Director. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

§ 7A-545. Evaluation for court.

In all cases in which a petition is filed, the Director of the Department of Social Services shall prepare a report for the court containing a home placement plan and a treatment plan deemed by the Director to be appropriate to the needs of the juvenile. The report shall be available to the judge immediately following the adjudicatory hearing. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-546. Request for review by prosecutor.

The person making the report shall have five working days, from receipt of the decision of the Director of the Department of Social Services not to petition the court, to notify the prosecutor that he is requesting a review. The prosecutor shall notify the person making the report and the Director of the time and place for the review and the Director shall immediately transmit to the prosecutor a copy of the investigation report. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

§ 7A-547. Review by prosecutor.

The prosecutor shall review the Director's determination that a petition should not be filed within 20 days after the person making the report is notified. The review shall include conferences with the person making the report, the protective services worker, the juvenile, if practicable, and other persons known to have pertinent information about the juvenile or his family. At the conclusion of the conferences, the prosecutor may affirm the decision made by the Director or may authorize the filing of a petition. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 469, s. 7.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, inserted "if practicable" following "the juvenile" near the middle of the second sentence.

§ 7A-548. Duty of county Department of Social Services to report evidence of abuse.

If the Director finds evidence that a juvenile has been abused as defined by statute, he shall immediately make a written report of his findings to the prosecutor who shall determine whether criminal prosecution is appropriate and who may request the Director to sign the appropriate criminal warrant. The Director of the Department of Social Services shall submit a report of alleged abuse or neglect to the central registry under the policies adopted by the Social Services Commission. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-549. Authority of medical professionals in abuse cases.

(a) Any physician or administrator of a hospital, clinic, or other medical facility to which a suspected abused juvenile is brought for medical diagnosis or treatment shall have the right, when authorized by the chief district court judge of the district or his designee, to retain physical custody of the juvenile in the facility when the physician who examines the juvenile certifies in writing that the juvenile who is suspected of being abused should remain for medical treatment or that, according to his medical evaluation, it is unsafe for the juvenile to return to his parent, guardian, custodian, or caretaker. This written certification must be signed by the certifying physician and must include the time and date that the judicial authority to retain custody is given. Copies of the written certification must be appended to the juvenile's medical and judicial records and another copy must be given to the juvenile's parent, guardian, custodian, or caretaker. The right to retain custody in the facility shall exist for up to 12 hours from the time and date contained in the written certification.

(b) Immediately upon receipt of judicial authority to retain custody, the physician, the administrator, or his designee shall so notify the director of social services for the county in which the facility is located. The director shall treat this notification as a report of suspected abuse and shall immediately begin an investigation of the case.

(1) If the investigation reveals (i) that it is the opinion of the certifying physician that the juvenile is in need of medical treatment to cure or alleviate physical distress, or to prevent the juvenile from suffering serious physical harm which might result in death, disfigurement, or substantial impairment of bodily function, and (ii) that it is the opinion of the physician that the juvenile should for these reasons remain in the custody of the facility for 12 hours, but (iii) that the juvenile's parent, guardian, custodian or caretaker cannot be reached or, upon request, will not consent to the treatment within the facility, the director shall within the initial 12-hour period file a juvenile petition alleging abuse and setting forth supporting allegations and shall seek a nonsecure custody order. A petition filed and a nonsecure custody order obtained in accordance with this subdivision shall come on for hearing under the regular provisions of this Subchapter unless the director and the certifying physician together voluntarily dismiss the petition.

(2) In all cases except those described in subdivision (1) above, the director shall conduct his investigation and may initiate juvenile proceedings and take all other steps authorized by the regular provisions of this Subchapter. If the director decides not to file a petition, the physician, the administrator or his designee may ask the prosecutor to review this decision according to the provisions of G.S. 7A-546 and 7A-547.

(c) If, upon hearing, the court determines that the child is found in a county other than the county of legal residence, in accord with G.S. 153A-257, the child may be transferred, in accord with G.S. 7A-647(2), to the custody of the department of social services in the county of residence.

(d) If the court, upon inquiry, determines that the medical treatment rendered was necessary and appropriate, the cost of that treatment may be charged to the parents, guardian, custodian, or caretaker, or, if the parents are unable to pay, to the county of residence in accordance with G.S. 7A-647(3) and 7A-650.

(e) Except as otherwise provided, a petition begun under this section shall proceed in like manner with petitions begun under G.S. 7A-544.

(f) The procedures in this section are in addition to, and not in derogation of, the child abuse and neglect reporting provisions of G.S. 7A-543 and the temporary custody provisions of G.S. 7A-571. Nothing in this section shall preclude a physician or administrator and a director of social services from following the procedures of G.S. 7A-543 and 7A-571 whenever these procedures are more appropriate to the juvenile's circumstances. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 716, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment rewrote this section.

Session Laws 1981, c. 716, s. 3, provides that the act shall be effective 90 days after ratification. The act was ratified June 29, 1981.

§ 7A-550. Immunity of persons reporting.

Anyone who makes a report pursuant to this Article, cooperates with the county department of social services in any ensuing inquiry or investigation, testifies in any judicial proceeding resulting from the report, or otherwise participates in the program authorized by this Article, is immune from any civil or criminal liability that might otherwise be incurred or imposed for such action provided that the person was acting in good faith. In any proceeding involving liability, good faith is presumed. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, s. 469, s. 8.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, inserted "cooperates with the county department of social services in any ensuing inquiry or investigation" following "Article" near the beginning of the section.

§ 7A-551. Privileges not grounds for excluding evidence.

Neither the physician-patient privilege nor the husband-wife privilege shall be grounds for excluding evidence of abuse or neglect in any judicial proceeding (civil, criminal, or juvenile) in which a juvenile's abuse or neglect is in issue nor in any judicial proceeding resulting from a report submitted under this Article, both as said privileges relate to the competency of the witness and to the exclusion of confidential communications. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

The Department of Human Resources shall maintain a central registry of abuse and neglect cases reported under this Article in order to compile data for appropriate study of the extent of abuse and neglect within the State and to identify repeated abuses of the same juvenile or of other juveniles in the same family. This data shall be furnished by county directors of social services to the Department of Human Resources and shall be confidential, subject to policies adopted by the Social Services Commission which provide for its appropriate use for study and research. Data shall not be used at any hearing or court proceeding unless based upon a final judgment of a court of law. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

ARTICLE 45.

Venue; Petition; Summons.

§ 7A-558. Venue.

(a) A proceeding in which a juvenile is alleged to be delinquent or undisciplined shall be commenced and adjudicated in the district in which the offense is alleged to have occurred.

When a proceeding in which a juvenile is alleged to be delinquent or undisciplined is commenced in a district other than that of the juvenile's residence, the judge shall proceed to adjudication in that district. After adjudication, these procedures shall be available to the court:

(1) The judge may transfer the proceeding to the court in the district where the juvenile resides for disposition.

(2) Where the proceeding is not transferred under subsection (1), the judge shall immediately notify the Chief District Judge in the district in which the juvenile resides. If the Chief District Judge requests a transfer within five days after receipt of notification, the judge shall transfer the proceeding.

(3) Where the proceeding is not transferred under (1) or (2), the judge, upon motion of the juvenile, shall transfer the proceeding to the court in the district where the juvenile resides for disposition. The judge shall advise the juvenile of the juvenile's right to transfer under this section.

(b) A proceeding in which a juvenile is alleged to be abused, neglected, or dependent may be commenced in the district in which the juvenile resides or is present. When a proceeding is commenced in a district other than that of the juvenile's residence, the judge, in his discretion or upon motion of the juvenile, may transfer the proceeding to the court in the district where the juvenile resides. A transfer under this subsection may be made at any time. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980. Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 4, contains a severability clause.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

§ 7A-559. Pleading and process.

The pleading in a juvenile action is the petition. The process in a juvenile action is the summons. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

The petition shall contain the name, date of birth, address of the juvenile, the name and last known address of his parent, guardian, or custodian and shall allege the facts which invoke jurisdiction over the juvenile. Except in cases in which delinquency or undisciplined behavior is alleged, the petition may contain information on more than one juvenile, when the juveniles are from the same home and are before the court for the same reason. In cases of alleged delinquency or undisciplined behavior, the petitions shall be separate.

A petition in which delinquency is alleged shall contain a plain and concise statement, without allegations of an evidentiary nature, asserting facts supporting every element of a criminal offense and the juvenile's commission thereof with sufficient precision clearly to apprise the juvenile of the conduct which is the subject of the accusation.

Sufficient copies of the petition shall be prepared so that copies will be available for each juvenile, for each parent if living separate and apart, for the court counselor or social worker, and for any person determined by the court to be a necessary party. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 469, s. 9.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, inserted in the first paragraph "or undisciplined behavior" near the beginning of the second sentence and in the third sentence.

CASE NOTES

§ 7A-561. Receipt of complaints; filing of petition.

(a) All reports concerning a juvenile alleged to be delinquent or undisciplined shall be referred to the intake counselor for screening. Thereafter, if it is determined by the intake counselor that a petition should be drawn and filed, the petition shall be drawn by the intake counselor or the clerk, signed by the complainant and verified before an official authorized to administer oaths. If the circumstances indicate a need for immediate attachment of jurisdiction and if the intake counselor is out of the county or otherwise unavailable to receive a complaint and to draw a petition when it is needed, the clerk shall assist the complainant in communicating his complaint to the intake counselor by telephone and, with the approval of the intake counselor, shall draw a petition and file it when signed and verified. A copy of the complaint and petition shall be transmitted to the intake counselor. Procedures for receiving delinquency and undisciplined complaints and drawing petitions thereon, consistent with this Article and Article 43, shall be established by administrative order of the chief judge in each judicial district under G.S. 7A-146(3).

(b) All complaints concerning a juvenile alleged to be abused, neglected, or dependent shall be referred to the Director of the Department of Social Services for screening. Thereafter, if it is determined by the Director that a complaint should be filed as a petition, the petition shall be drawn by the Director, verified before an official authorized to administer oaths, and filed by the clerk, recording the date of filing.

(c) All complaints, and any decision of the intake counselor or of the director of social services not to authorize that a complaint be filed as a petition shall be reviewed by the prosecutor, if review is requested pursuant to G.S. 7A-535 or G.S. 7A-546. If the prosecutor, after making his review, shall authorize a complaint to be filed as a petition, he shall prepare the complaint to be filed by the clerk as a petition, recording the day of filing. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 469, ss. 10, 11.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, substituted "if review is requested pursuant to G.S. 7A-535 or G.S. 7A-546" for "pursuant to G.S. 7A-536 or G.S. 7A-547" at the end of the first sentence of subsection (c), and substituted "by the clerk" for "with the clerk" near the end of the second sentence of subsection (c).

§ 7A-562. Immediate need for petition when clerk's office is closed.

(a) All complaints which may arise when the office of the clerk of superior court is closed shall be referred to the intake counselor or the Director of Social Services according to the nature of the complaint.

(b) When the office of the clerk of superior court is closed, a magistrate may be authorized by the Chief District Judge to draw, verify, and issue petitions as follows:

(1) When an intake counselor requests a petition alleging a juvenile to be delinquent or undisciplined, or

(2) When the Director of the Department of Social Services requests a petition alleging a juvenile to be abused, neglected, or dependent.

(c) The authority of the magistrate under subsection (b) is limited to emergency situations when a petition is required in order to obtain a secure or nonsecure custody order. Any petition issued under this section shall be delivered to the clerk's office for processing as soon as that office is open for business. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

An action is commenced by the filing of a petition in the clerk's office when that office is open, or by the issuance of a juvenile petition by a magistrate when the clerk's office is closed, which issuance shall constitute filing. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

After a petition has been filed, the clerk of superior court shall issue a summons to the juvenile, to the parent, and to the guardian, custodian, or caretaker requiring them to appear for a hearing at the time and place stated in the summons. A copy of the petition shall be attached to each summons. The summons shall advise the parent that upon service, jurisdiction over him is obtained and that failure of the parent to comply with any order of the court pursuant to G.S. 7A-650 may cause the court to issue a show cause order for contempt.

A summons shall be directed to the person summoned to appear and shall be delivered to any law-enforcement officer having authority and territorial jurisdiction to execute the process. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

The summons shall be personally served upon the parent, the guardian, custodian, or caretaker, and the juvenile or counsel or guardian ad litem, not less than five days prior to the date of the scheduled hearing. The time for service may be waived in the discretion of the judge.

If the parent, guardian, or custodian entitled to receive a summons cannot be found by a diligent effort, the judge may authorize service of the summons and petition by mail or by publication. The cost of the service by publication shall be advanced by the petitioner and may be charged as court costs as the judge, in his discretion, may direct.

If the parent, guardian, or custodian is personally served as herein provided and fails without reasonable cause to appear and to bring the juvenile before the court, he may be proceeded against as for contempt of court.

The provisions of G.S. 15A-301(a), (c), (d), and (e) relating to criminal process apply to juvenile process; provided the period of time for return of an unserved summons is 30 days. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The annotations under this section are from cases decided under former § 7A-283.

Trial Court Is without Jurisdiction Where No Notice Was Served. — A trial court did not have jurisdiction to enter orders in a juvenile delinquency proceeding where no summons, petition or other notice was ever served on the juvenile, her parents, guardian or custodian prior to any of the hearings. In re McAllister, 14 N.C. App. 614, 188 S.E.2d 723 (1972).

Failure of Record to Show Time and Manner of Service. — Failure of a record of a juvenile delinquency proceeding to show the exact time and manner of service of the summons and petition upon the juvenile and his parents was not fatal where the record affirmatively shows that the juvenile and his mother were in fact accorded sufficient notice of the hearing at which he was adjudicated delinquent to provide adequate opportunity to prepare, that at least seven days prior to the hearing he had been represented by privately employed counsel, and that he was represented by such counsel at the hearing, which had already been once continued. In re Collins, 12 N.C. App. 142, 182 S.E.2d 662 (1971).

Service on Only One Parent Required. — In order to have a child declared dependent, it is not necessary to serve the petition on both parents, but only on one of them or the guardian or custodian. In re Yow, 40 N.C. App. 688, 253 S.E.2d 647, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 610, 257 S.E.2d 223 (1979).

The Fourteenth Amendment did not proscribe a finding of dependency binding upon the mother of a child so that his custody could be placed with a suitable person, where the mother was not served with any notice before the first hearing, but where the facts showed that his father was served with notice, and it was found as a fact that the mother's address was unknown and no evidence to dispute the finding was in the record. In re Yow, 40 N.C. App. 688, 253 S.E.2d 647, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 610, 257 S.E.2d 223 (1979).

Temporary Custody; Secure and Nonsecure Custody; Custody Hearings.

§ 7A-571. Taking a juvenile into temporary custody.

Temporary custody means the taking of physical custody and providing personal care and supervision until a court order for secure or nonsecure custody can be obtained. A juvenile may be taken into temporary custody under the following circumstances:

(1) A juvenile may be taken into temporary custody by a law-enforcement officer without a court order if grounds exist for the arrest of an adult in identical circumstances under G.S. 15A-401(b).

(2) A juvenile may be taken into temporary custody without a court order by a law-enforcement officer or a court counselor if there are reasonable grounds to believe that he is an undisciplined juvenile.

(3) A juvenile may be taken into temporary custody without a court order by a law-enforcement officer or a Department of Social Services worker if there are reasonable grounds to believe that the juvenile is abused, neglected, or dependent and that he would be injured or could not be taken into custody if it were first necessary to obtain a court order.

(4) A juvenile may be taken into custody without a court order by a law-enforcement officer, by a court counselor, or by personnel of the Division of Youth Services as designated by the Department of Human Resources if there are reasonable grounds to believe the juvenile is an absconder from any State training school or approved detention facility. § 7A-572. Duties of person taking juvenile into temporary custody.

(a) A person who takes a juvenile into custody without a court order under G.S. 7A-571(1), (2), or (3) shall proceed as follows:

(1) Notify the juvenile's parent, guardian, or custodian that the juvenile has been taken into temporary custody and advise the parent, guardian, or custodian of his right to be present with the juvenile until a determination is made as to the need for secure or nonsecure custody. Failure to notify the parent that the juvenile is in custody shall not be grounds for release of the juvenile;

(2) Release the juvenile to his parent, guardian, or custodian if the person having the juvenile in temporary custody decides that continued custody is unnecessary.

(3) If the juvenile is not released under subsection (b), the person having temporary custody shall proceed as follows:

a. In the case of a juvenile alleged to be delinquent or undisciplined, he shall request a petition be drawn pursuant to G.S. 7A-561 or if the clerk's office is closed, the magistrate pursuant to G.S. 7A-562. Once the petition has been drawn and verified, the person shall communicate with the intake counselor who shall consider prehearing diversion. If the decision is made to file a petition, the intake counselor shall contact the judge or person delegated authority pursuant to G.S. 7A-573 if other than the intake counselor for a determination of the need for continued custody.

b. In the case of a juvenile alleged to be abused, neglected, or dependent, he shall communicate with the Director of the Department of Social Services who shall consider prehearing diversion. If the decision is made to file a petition, the director shall contact the judge or person delegated authority pursuant to G.S. 7A-573 for a determination of the need for continued custody.

(4) A juvenile taken into temporary custody under this Article shall not be held for more than 12 hours unless:

a. A petition or motion for review has been filed by an intake counselor or the Director of the Department of Social Services, and

b. An order for secure or nonsecure custody has been entered by a judge.

(b) A person who takes a juvenile into custody under G.S. 7A-571(4) shall, after contacting a judge and receiving an order for secure custody, transport the juvenile to the nearest approved facility providing secure custody. He shall then contact the administrator of the training school or detention facility from which the juvenile absconded, who shall be responsible for returning the juvenile to that facility. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 335, ss. 1, 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, inserted "or person delegated authority pursuant to G.S. 7A-573 if other than the intake counselor" following "judge" in the last sentence of paragraph a of subdivision (3) of subsection (a), and inserted "or person delegated authority pursuant to G.S. 7A-573" following "judge" in the second sentence of paragraph b of subdivision (3) of subsection (a).

In the case of any juvenile alleged to be within the jurisdiction of the court, when the judge finds it necessary to place the juvenile in custody, he may order that the juvenile be placed in secure or nonsecure custody pursuant to criteria set out in G.S. 7A-574.

Any district court judge shall have the authority to issue secure and nonsecure custody orders pursuant to G.S. 7A-574. The chief district judge may delegate the court's authority to persons other than district court judges by administrative order which shall be filed in the office of the clerk of superior court. The administrative order shall specify which persons shall be contacted for approval of a secure or nonsecure custody order pursuant to G.S. 7A-574 and may include intake counselors and other members of the chief court counselor's staff. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 425.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, rewrote the second paragraph.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

§ 7A-574. Criteria for secure or nonsecure custody.

(a) When a request is made for nonsecure custody, the judge shall order nonsecure custody only when he finds that there is a reasonable factual basis to believe the matters alleged in the petition are true, and

(1) The juvenile has been abandoned; or

(2) The juvenile has suffered physical injury or sexual abuse; or

(3) The juvenile is exposed to a substantial risk of physical injury or sexual abuse because the parent, guardian, or custodian has created the conditions likely to cause injury or abuse or has failed to provide, or is unable to provide, adequate supervision or protection; or

(4) The juvenile is in need of medical treatment to cure, alleviate, or prevent suffering serious physical harm which may result in death, disfigurement, or substantial impairment of bodily functions, and his parent, guardian, or custodian is unwilling or unable to provide or consent to the medical treatment; or

(5) The parent, guardian or custodian consents to the nonsecure custody order.

In no case shall a juvenile alleged to be abused, neglected, or dependent be placed in secure custody.

(b) When a request is made for secure custody, the judge may order secure custody only where he finds there is a reasonable factual basis to believe that the juvenile actually commited the offense as alleged in the petition, and

(1) Repealed by Session Laws 1981, c. 426, s. 1, effective October 1, 1981.

(2) That the juvenile is presently charged with one or more felonies; or
(3) That the juvenile has willfully failed to appear on the pending delinquency charge or has a record of willful failures to appear at court proceedings; or
(4) That by reason of the juvenile's threat to flee from the court's jurisdiction or circumstances indicating preparation or design to flee from the court's judisdiction there is reasonable cause to believe the juvenile will not appear in court on a pending delinquency charge unless he is detained; or
(5) That exhaustive efforts to identify the juvenile have been futile or by reason of his being a nonresident of the State of North Carolina there is reasonable cause to believe the juvenile will not appear in court on a pending delinquency charge unless he is detained; or
(6) That the juvenile is an absconder from any State training school or detention facility in this or another state; or
(7) That the juvenile has a recent record of adjudications for violent conduct resulting in serious physical injury to others, the petition pending is for delinquency, and the charge involves physical injury; or
(8) That by reason of the juvenile's recent self-inflicted injury or attempted self injury there is reasonable cause to believe the juvenile should be detained for his own protection for a period of less than 24 hours while action is initiated to determine the need for inpatient hospitalization, provided that the juvenile has been refused admittance by one appropriate hospital; or
(9) That the juvenile alleged to be undisciplined by virtue of his being a runaway may be detained for a period of no more than 72 hours to facilitate evaluation of the juvenile's need for medical or psychiatric treatment or to facilitate reunion with his parents.

(c) When a juvenile has been adjudicated delinquent, the judge may order secure custody pending the dispositional hearing or pending placement of a delinquent juvenile pursuant to G.S. 7A-649. The judge may also order secure custody for a juvenile who is alleged to have violated the terms of his probation or conditional release.

(d) In determining whether secure custody should be ordered, the judge should consider the nature and circumstances of the offense; the weight of the evidence against the juvenile; the juvenile's family ties, character, mental condition, and school attendance record; and whether the juvenile is on conditional release. If the criteria for secure custody as set out in subsections (b) or (c) are met, the judge may enter an order directing an officer or other authorized person to assume custody of the juvenile and to take the juvenile to the place as is designated in the order. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 426, ss. 1-4; c. 526.)

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, deleted subdivision (1) of subsection (b), which read "The juvenile is charged with a nondivertible offense; or". The amendment also substituted "may be detained for a period of no more than 72 hours to facilitate evaluation of the juvenile's need for medical or psychiatric treatment or to facilitate reunion with his parents" for "should be detained for a period of less than 24 hours to facilitate reunion with his parents or to facilitate evaluation of the juvenile's need for medical or psychiatric treatment" at the end of subdivision (9) of subsection (b), added the second sentence of subsection (c), and substituted "(b) or (c)" for "(b) and (c)" in the second sentence of subsection (d).

The second 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, in subsection (a), inserted "he" following "only when" near the middle of the introductory paragraph, rewrote subdivision (2), added subdivision (3), consisting of subject matter similar to that formerly contained in subdivision (2), and redesignated former subdivisions (3) and (4) as subdivisions (4) and (5) respectively.

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Secure Custody Following Probation Violation. — A juvenile who has been adjudicated delinquent and placed on probation can later be placed in secure custody if that juvenile violates the terms of his probation without at the same time committing a new delinquent act. A delinquent juvenile who violates probation may be held in secure custody pending further disposition of his case according to subsections (c) and (d) of this section. See opinion of Attorney General to the Honorable Willis P. Whichard, Senator, North Carolina General Assembly, 49 N.C.A.G. 183 (1980).

A juvenile alleged to be undiscipline by virtue of being truant or disobedient cannot be held in secure custody. See Opinion of Attorney General to the Honorable Willis P. Whichard, Senator, North Carolina General Assembly, 49 N.C.A.G. 183 (1980).

Subsection (d) of this section does not prohibit issuance of a secure custody order for a delinquent juvenile prior to adjudication. See opinion of Attorney General to Sarah F. Patterson, Courts Specialist, Governor's Crime Commission, 50 N.C.A.G. 2 (1980).

The custody order shall be in writing and shall direct a law-enforcement officer or other authorized person to assume custody of the juvenile and to make due return on the order. A copy of the order shall be given to the juvenile's parent, guardian, or custodian by the official executing the order. If the order is for secure custody, copies of the petition and custody order shall accompany the juvenile to the detention facility or holdover facility of the jail.

An officer receiving an order for custody which is complete and regular on its face may execute it in accordance with its terms and need not inquire into its regularity or continued validity, nor does he incur criminal or civil liability for its due service. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

§ 7A-576. Place of secure or nonsecure custody.

(a) A juvenile meeting the criteria set out in G.S. 7A-574, subsection (a), may be placed in nonsecure custody with the Department of Social Services or a person designated in the order for temporary residential placement in:

(1) A licensed foster home or a home otherwise authorized by law to provide such care or

(2) A facility operated by the Department of Social Services or

(3) Any other home or facility approved by the court and designated in the order.

(b) A juvenile meeting the criteria set out in G.S. 7A-574(b) may be temporarily detained in an approved county detention home or a regional detention facility which shall be separate from any jail, lockup, prison, or other adult penal institution. It shall be unlawful for a county or any unit of government to operate a juvenile detention home unless the facility meets the standards promulgated by the Department of Human Resources.

(c) Until July 1, 1983, if no juvenile detention home is available, a juvenile meeting the criteria set out in G.S. 7A-574(b) may be detained in a holdover facility which shall be inspected pursuant to G.S. 108-79 through 108-81, and 153A-222, and shall meet the State standards provided for in G.S. 153A-221.

(d) Subsection (c) expires on June 30, 1983. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

(a) No juvenile shall be held under a custody order for more than five calendar days without a hearing on the merits or a hearing to determine the need for continued custody. In every case in which an order has been entered by an official exercising authority delegated pursuant to G.S. 7A-573, a hearing to determine the need for continued custody shall be conducted on the day of the next regularly scheduled session of district court in the city or county where the order was entered if such session precedes the expiration of the five calendar day period: Provided, that if such session does not precede the expiration of the five calendar day period, the hearing may be conducted at another regularly scheduled session of district court in the district where the order was entered.

(b) Any juvenile who is alleged to be delinquent shall be advised of his right to have an attorney represent him as provided in G.S. 7A-584 if he appears without counsel at the hearing.

(c) At a hearing to determine the need for continued custody, the judge shall receive testimony and shall allow the juvenile, and his parent, guardian, or custodian an opportunity to introduce evidence, to be heard in their own behalf, and to examine witnesses. The State shall bear the burden at every stage of the proceedings to provide clear and convincing evidence that restraints on the juvenile's liberty are necessary and that no less intrusive alternative will suffice. The judge shall not be bound by the usual rules of evidence at such hearings.

(d) The judge shall be bound by criteria set forth in G.S. 7A-574 in determining whether continued custody is warranted.

(e) The judge shall impose the least restrictive interference with the liberty of a juvenile who is released from secure custody including:

(1) Release on the written promise of the juvenile's parent, guardian, or custodian to produce him in court for subsequent proceedings; or

(2) Release into the care of a responsible person or organization; or

(3) Release conditioned on restrictions on activities, associations, residence or travel if reasonably related to securing the juvenile's presence in court; or

(4) Any other conditions reasonably related to securing the juvenile's presence in court.

(f) If the judge determines that the juvenile meets the criteria in G.S. 7A-574 and should continue in custody, he shall issue an order to that effect. The order shall be in writing with appropriate findings of fact. The findings of fact shall include the evidence relied upon in reaching the decision and the purposes which continued custody is to achieve.

(g) Pending a hearing on the merits, further hearings to determine the need for continued custody shall be held at intervals of no more than seven calendar days. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 469, s. 13.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, substituted "city or county" for "district" near the middle of the second sentence of subsection (a), and added the proviso at the end of the second sentence of subsection (a).

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

§ 7A-578. Telephonic communication authorized.

All communications, notices, orders, authorizations, and requests authorized or required by G.S. 7A-572, 7A-574, and 7A-575 may be made by telephone when other means of communication are impratical. All written orders pursuant to telephonic communication shall bear the name and the title of the person communicating by telephone, the signature and the title of the official entering the order, and the hour and the date of the authorization. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§§ 7A-579 to 7A-583: Reserved for future codification purposes.

ARTICLE 47.

Basic Rights.

(a) A juvenile alleged to be within the jurisdiction of the court has the right to be represented by counsel in all proceedings. In any proceeding in which delinquency is alleged, the judge shall appoint counsel unless counsel is retained for the juvenile.

(b) All juveniles shall be conclusively presumed to be indigent, and it shall not be necessary for the court to receive from any juvenile an affidavit of indigency. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 4, contains a severability clause.

§ 7A-585. Appointment of guardian.

In any case when no parent appears in a hearing with the juvenile or when the judge finds it would be in the best interest of the juvenile, the judge may appoint a guardian of the person for the juvenile. The guardian shall operate under the supervision of the court with or without bond and shall file only such reports as the court shall require. The guardian shall have the care, custody, and control of the juvenile or may arrange a suitable placement for him and may represent the juvenile in legal actions before any court. The guardian shall also have authority to consent to certain actions on the part of the juvenile in place of the parent including marriage, enlisting in the armed forces, and undergoing major surgery. The authority of the guardian shall continue until the guardianship is terminated by order, until the juvenile is emancipated pursuant to Article 56, or until the juvenile reaches the age of majority. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

When in a petition a juvenile is alleged to be abused or neglected, the judge shall appoint a guardian ad litem to represent the juvenile. The duties of the guardian ad litem shall be to make an investigation to determine the facts, the needs of the juvenile, and the available resources within the family and community to meet those needs; to facilitate, when appropriate, the settlement of disputed issues; to explore options with the judge at the dispositional hearing; and to protect and promote the best interest of the juvenile until formally relieved of the responsibility by the judge. When the appointed guardian ad litem is not an attorney licensed to practice in the State of North Carolina, he may employ an attorney when the employment is authorized by the court and pursuant to Chapter 7A or request the appointment of an attorney to appear on behalf of the juvenile in the court proceeding and to assist the guardian ad litem by performing necessary and appropriate legal services on the juvenile's behalf, to present relevant facts to the judge at the adjudicatory hearing and to appeal, when advisable, from an adjudication or order of disposition to the Court of Appeals.

The judge may order the Department of Social Services or the guardian ad litem to conduct follow-up investigations to insure that the orders of the court are being properly executed and to report to the court when the needs of the juvenile are not being met. The judge may also authorize the guardian ad litem to accompany the juvenile to court in any criminal action wherein he may be called on to testify in a matter relating to abuse.

The judge may grant the guardian ad litem the authority to demand any information or reports whether or not confidential, that may in the guardian ad litem's opinion be relevant to the case. Neither the physician-patient privilege nor the husband-wife privilege may be invoked to prevent the guardian ad litem and the court from obtaining such information. The confidentiality of the information or reports shall be respected by the guardian ad litem and no disclosure of any information or reports shall be made to anyone except by order of the judge. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 528.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, rewrote the first paragraph, substituted "accompany the juvenile to court" for "appear with the juvenile" near the middle of the second sentence of the second paragraph, and deleted the former first and second sentences of the last paragraph, which read: "The guardian ad litem shall be an attorney-at-law, licensed to practice in the State of North Carolina. In no case may the judge appoint a public defender as guardian ad litem."

In cases where the juvenile petition alleges that a juvenile is abused, neglected or dependent, the parent has the right to counsel and to appointed counsel in cases of indigency unless the parent waives the right. In no case may the judge appoint a county attorney, prosecutor or public defender. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 469, s. 14.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, added the second sentence.

CASE NOTES

Counsel Not Required in Every Termination Proceeding. — If, in a given case, the parent's interests were at their strongest, the State's interests were at their weakest, and the risks of error were at their peak, it could not be said that due process did not therefore require the appointment of counsel, but since due process is not so rigid as to require that the significant interests in informality, flexibility and economy must always be sacrificed, it cannot be said that the Constitution requires the appointment of counsel in every parental termination proceeding; therefore the decision whether due process calls for the appointment of counsel for indigent parents in termination proceedings is to be answered in the first instance by the trial court, subject, of course, to appellate review. Lassiter v. Department of Social Servs., — U.S. —, 101 S. Ct. 2153, 68 L. Ed. 2d 640 (1981).

§ 7A-588. Payment of court appointed attorney or guardian ad litem.

An attorney or guardian ad litem appointed pursuant to G.S. 7A-584, 7A-586 or 7A-587 of this Article shall be paid a reasonable fee fixed by the court in the same manner as fees for attorneys appointed in cases of indigency. The judge may require the parent or a custodian other than a Department of Social Services to pay the attorney's fee or reimburse the State unless the parent or custodian is indigent. The test of the parent's or custodian's ability to pay shall be the test applied to appointment of an attorney in cases of indigency. A person who does not comply with the court's order of payment may be punished for contempt as provided in G.S. 5A-21. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Article 48.

Law-Enforcement Procedures in Delinquency Proceedings.

§ 7A-594. Role of the law-enforcement officer.

A law-enforcement officer, when he takes a juvenile into temporary custody, should select the least restrictive course of action appropriate to the situation and needs of the juvenile from the following:

(1) To divert the juvenile from the court by
   a. Release;
   b. Counsel and release;
   c. Release to parents;
   d. Referral to community resources;
(2) To seek a petition;
(3) To seek a petition and request a custody order. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 4, contains a severability clause.

§ 7A-595. Interrogation procedures.

(a) Any juvenile in custody must be advised prior to questioning:
   (1) That he has a right to remain silent; and
   (2) That any statement he does make can be and may be used against him; and

(3) That he has a right to have a parent, guardian or custodian present during questioning; and

(4) That he has a right to consult with an attorney and that one will be appointed for him if he is not represented and wants representation.

(b) When the juvenile is less than 14 years of age, no in-custody admission or confession resulting from interrogation may be admitted into evidence unless the confession or admission was made in the presence of the juvenile's parent, guardian, custodian, or attorney. If an attorney is not present, the parent, guardian, or custodian as well as the juvenile must be advised of the juvenile's rights as set out in subsection (a); however, a parent, guardian, or custodian may not waive any right on behalf of the juvenile.

(c) If the juvenile indicates in any manner and at any stage of questioning pursuant to this section that he does not wish to be questioned further, the officer shall cease questioning.

(d) Before admitting any statement resulting from custodial interrogation into evidence, the judge must find that the juvenile knowingly, willingly, and understandingly waived his rights. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Waiver of Right to Have Attorney Present. — A juvenile, less than 14 years of age, may waive his right to have an attorney present during interrogation. See opinion of Attorney General to Sgt. James Preston Simmons, Elkin Police Department, 49 N.C.A.G. 88 (1979).

§ 7A-596. Authority to issue nontestimonial identification order where juvenile alleged to be delinquent.

Nontestimonial identification procedures shall not be conducted on any juvenile without a court order issued pursuant to this Article unless the juvenile has been transferred to superior court for trial as an adult in which case procedures applicable to adults as set out in Articles 14 and 23 of Chapter 15A shall apply. A nontestimonial identification order authorized by this Article may be issued by any judge of the district court or of the superior court upon request of a prosecutor. As used in this Article, "nontestimonial identification" means identification by fingerprints, palm prints, footprints, measurements, blood specimens, urine specimens, saliva samples, hair samples, or other reasonable physical examination, handwriting exemplars, voice samples, photographs, and lineups or similar identification procedures requiring the presence of a juvenile. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 454, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, added the language beginning "unless the juvenile has been transferred" at the end of the first sentence.

A request for a nontestimonial identification order may be made prior to taking a juvenile into custody or after custody and prior to the adjudicatory hearing. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 454, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, deleted "or prior to trial in superior court where a case is transferred pursuant to Article 49 of this Chapter" at the end of the section.

§ 7A-598. Grounds for order.

An order may issue only on affidavit or affidavits sworn to before the judge and establishing the following grounds for the order:

(1) That there is probable cause to believe that an offense has been committed which if committed by an adult would be punishable by imprisonment for more than two years; and

(2) That there are reasonable grounds to suspect that the juvenile named or described in the affidavit committed the offense; and

(3) That the results of specific nontestimonial identification procedures will be of material aid in determining whether the juvenile named in the affidavit committed the offense. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-599. Issuance of order.

Upon a showing that the grounds specified in G.S. 7A-598 exist, the judge may issue an order following the same procedure as in the case of adults under G.S. 15A-274, 15A-275, 15A-276, 15A-277, 15A-278, 15A-279, 15A-280, and 15A-282. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of References to Statutes. — Reference to the designated statutes in Article 14 of Chapter 15A for adult defendants is essential to comply with the new code provisions for juveniles. For example, trial judges should pay particular attention to § 15A-278 which specifies the necessary contents for the order. In re Vinson, 298 N.C. 640, 260 S.E.2d 591 (1979).

§ 7A-600. Nontestimonial identification order at request of juvenile.

A juvenile in custody for or charged with an offense which if committed by an adult would be punishable by imprisonment for more than two years may request that nontestimonial identification procedures be conducted upon himself. If it appears that the results of specific nontestimonial identification procedures will be of material aid to the juvenile's defense, the judge to whom the request was directed must order the State to conduct the identification procedures. § 7A-601. Destruction of records resulting from nontestimonial identification procedures.

The results of any nontestimonial identification procedures shall be retained or disposed of as follows:

(1) If a petition is not filed against a juvenile who has been the subject of nontestimonial identification procedures, all records of such evidence shall be destroyed.

(2) If in the district court or superior court pursuant to a transfer a juvenile is found not guilty, all records resulting from a nontestimonial order shall be destroyed. Further, in the case of a juvenile who is under 14 years of age and who is adjudicated to have committed a delinquent act, which would be less than a felony had the juvenile been an adult, all records shall be destroyed.

(3) If a juvenile 14 years of age or older is found to have committed a delinquent act which would be a felony if committed by an adult, all records resulting from a nontestimonial order may be retained in the court file. Special precautions shall be taken to ensure that these records will be maintained in such a manner and under such safeguards as to limit their use to inspection for comparison purposes by law-enforcement officers only in the investigation of a crime.

(4) If the juvenile is transferred to superior court, all records resulting from nontestimonial identification procedures shall be processed as in the case of an adult.

(5) Any evidence seized pursuant to a nontestimonial order shall be retained by law-enforcement officers until further order is entered by the court.

(6) Destruction of nontestimonial identification records pursuant to this section shall be performed by the law-enforcement agency having possession of such records. Following destruction, the law-enforcement agency shall make written certification to the court of such destruction. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Article 49.

Transfer to Superior Court.

§ 7A-608. Transfer of jurisdiction of juvenile to superior court.

The court after notice, hearing, and a finding of probable cause may transfer jurisdiction over a juvenile 14 years of age or older to superior court if the juvenile was 14 years of age or older at the time he allegedly committed an offense which would be a felony if committed by an adult. If the alleged felony constitutes a capital offense and the judge finds probable cause, the judge shall transfer the case to the superior court for trial as in the case of adults. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 4, contains a severability clause.

Editor's Note. — The cases cited in the following annotation were decided under former § 7A-280.

Transfer of Case Is within Discretion of Judge. — The decision on whether the case will be transferred to the superior court is left solely within the sound discretion of the district court judge who conducts the probable cause hearing. The exercise of that discretion is not subject to review in the absence of a showing of gross abuse. In re Bunn, 34 N.C. App. 614, 239 S.E.2d 483 (1977).

No Right to Particular Trial Division. — Neither the juvenile defendant nor the State has the right to have a felony case disposed of in a particular trial division of the General Court of Justice. In re Bunn, 34 N.C. App. 614, 239 S.E.2d 483 (1977).

Detailed Findings of Fact as to Probable Cause Not Required. — The North Carolina statutes relating to juveniles do not require that a determination of probable cause be supported by detailed findings of fact. In re Bullard, 22 N.C. App. 245, 206 S.E.2d 305, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 758, 209 S.E.2d 279 (1974).

Findings of Fact Not Required for Transfer. — The judge is not required to make findings of fact to support his conclusion that the needs of the juvenile or the best interest of the State would be served by transferring the case to the superior court division. It is only required that if he elects to order the transfer, he must state his reasons therefor. In re Bunn, 34 N.C. App. 614, 239 S.E.2d 483 (1977).

When jurisdiction over a juvenile is transferred to the superior court, the juvenile shall be fingerprinted and his fingerprints shall be sent to the State Bureau of Investigation. (1981, c. 862, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1981, c. 862, s. 5, provides that the act shall become effective Jan. 1, 1982.

§ 7A-609. Probable-cause hearing.

(a) The judge shall conduct a hearing to determine probable cause in all felony cases in which a juvenile was 14 years of age or older when the offense was allegedly committed unless counsel for the juvenile waives in writing his right to the hearing and stipulates to a finding of probable cause. The judge may exclude the public from the hearing unless the juvenile moves that the hearing be open, which motion shall be granted.

(b) At the probable-cause hearing,

(1) A prosecutor must represent the State;

(2) The juvenile shall be represented by counsel in accordance with G.S. 7A-584;

(3) The juvenile may testify as a witness in his own behalf and call and examine other witnesses and produce other evidence in his behalf; and

(4) Each witness must testify under oath or affirmation and be subject to cross-examination.

(c) The State must by nonhearsay evidence, or by evidence that satisfies an exception to the hearsay rule, show that there is probable cause to believe that the offense charged has been committed and that there is probable cause to believe that the juvenile committed it, except:

(1) A report or copy of a report made by a physicist, chemist, firearms identification expert, fingerprint technician, or an expert or technician in some other scientific, professional, or medical field, concerning the results of an examination, comparison, or test performed by him in connection with the case in issue, when stated by that person in a report made by him, is admissible in evidence;

(2) If there is no serious contest, reliable hearsay is admissible to prove value, ownership of property, possession of property in another than the juvenile, lack of consent of the owner, possessor, or custodian of property to the breaking or entering of premises, chain of custody, and authenticity of signatures.

(d) The juvenile's attorney has the right to examine any court or probation records considered by the court in exercising its discretion to transfer the case. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 469, ss. 15, 16.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, added the second sentence of subsection (a), and substituted "shall be represented" for "may be represented" in subdivision (2) of subsection (b).

Juvenile Not Placed in Jeopardy where Only Probable Cause Determined. — Where there was only a determination of probable cause in a hearing before the district court, even though the district court order referred to the hearing as having been adjudicatory and dispositional, the juveniles were not placed in jeopardy by the hearing in the district court before the case's transfer to the superior court. In re Bullard, 22 N.C. App. 245, 206 S.E.2d 305, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 758, 209 S.E.2d 279 (1974).

§ 7A-610. Procedure upon finding of probable cause.

(a) If probable cause is found, the prosecutor or the juvenile may move that the case be transferred to the superior court for trial as in the case of adults. If the alleged felony does not constitute a capital offense, the judge may proceed to determine whether the needs of the juvenile or the best interest of the State will be served by transfer of the case to superior court for trial as in the case of adults.

(b) If probable cause is not found, the judge shall dismiss the proceeding.

(c) Any order of transfer shall specify the reasons for transfer.

(d) A finding of no probable cause shall not preclude the judge from adjudicating the juvenile delinquent for the commission of a lesser included offense. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Once the order of transfer has been entered, the juvenile has the right to pretrial release as provided in G.S. 15A-533 and 15A-534. Pending release under this Article, the judge may order that the juvenile be detained in a juvenile detention home or a separate section of a local jail as provided by G.S. 7A-576. (1) To permit the juvenile to inspect and copy any relevant written or recorded statements within the possession, custody, or control of the petitioner made by the juvenile or any other party charged in the same action; and

(2) To divulge, in written or recorded form, the substance of any oral statement made by the juvenile or any other party charged in the same action.

(b) Names of Witnesses. — Upon motion of the juvenile, the judge shall order the petitioner to furnish the names of persons to be called as witnesses. A copy of the record of witnesses under the age of 16 shall be provided by the petitioner to the juvenile upon his motion if accessible to the petitioner.

(c) Documents and Tangible Objects. — Upon motion of the juvenile, the judge shall order the petitioner to permit the juvenile to inspect and copy books, papers, documents, photographs, motion pictures, mechanical or electronic recordings, tangible objects, or portions thereof:

(1) Which are within the possession, custody, or control of the petitioner, the prosecutor, or any law-enforcement officer conducting an investigation of the matter alleged; and

(2) Which are material to the preparation of his defense, are intended for use by the petitioner as evidence, and were obtained from or belong to the juvenile.

(d) Reports of Examinations and Tests. — Upon motion of a juvenile, the judge shall order the petitioner to permit the juvenile to inspect and copy results of physical or mental examinations or of tests, measurements or experiments made in connection with the case, within the possession, custody, or control of the petitioner. In addition upon motion of a juvenile, the judge shall order the petitioner to permit the juvenile to inspect, examine, and test, subject to appropriate safeguards, any physical evidence or a sample of it or tests or experiments made in connection with the evidence in the case if it is available to the petitioner, the prosecutor, or any law-enforcement officer conducting an investigation of the matter alleged and if the petitioner intends to offer the evidence at trial.

(e) Except as provided in subsections (a) through (d), this Article does not require the production of reports, memoranda, or other internal documents made by the petitioner, law-enforcement officers, or other persons acting on behalf of the petitioner in connection with the investigation or prosecution of the case or of statements made by witnesses or the petitioner to anyone acting on behalf of the petitioner.

(f) Nothing in this section prohibits a petitioner from making voluntary disclosures in the interest of justice. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980.

§ 7A-619. Disclosure of evidence by juvenile.

(a) Names of Witnesses. — Upon motion of the petitioner, the judge shall order the juvenile to furnish to the petitioner the names of persons to be called as witnesses.

(b) Documents and Tangible Objects. — If the court grants any relief sought by the juvenile under G.S. 7A-618, subsection (c), upon motion of the petitioner the judge shall order the juvenile to permit the petitioner to inspect and copy books, papers, documents, photographs, motion pictures, mechanical or electronic recordings, tangible objects, or portions thereof which are within the possession, custody, or control of the juvenile and which the juvenile intends to introduce in evidence.

(c) Reports of Examinations and Tests. — If the court grants any relief sought by the juvenile under G.S. 7A-618, subsection (d), upon motion of the petitioner, the judge shall order the juvenile to permit the petitioner to inspect and copy results of physical or mental examinations or of tests, measurements or experiments made in connection with the case within the possession and control of the juvenile which he intends to introduce in evidence or which were prepared by a witness whom he intends to call if the results relate to the witness's testimony. In addition, upon motion of a petitioner, the judge shall order the juvenile to permit the petitioner to inspect, examine, and test, subject to appropriate safeguards, any physical evidence or a sample of it if the juvenile intends to offer the evidence or tests or experiments made in connection with the evidence in the case. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

(a) Upon written motion of a party and a finding of good cause, the judge may at any time order that discovery or inspection be denied, restricted, or deferred.

Article 51.

Hearing Procedures.

§ 7A-627. Amendment of petition.

The judge may permit a petition to be amended when the amendment does not change the nature of the offense alleged or the conditions upon which the petition is based. If a motion to amend is allowed, the juvenile shall be given a reasonable opportunity to prepare a defense to the amended allegations. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980.

CASE NOTES

Allowing Amendment Discretionary. — Where the petition sufficiently alleged the offense of larceny, and the amendment in no way changed the nature of the offense but simply identified more specifically the owner of the property allegedly stolen, allowing the amendment under these circumstances was within the sound discretion of the court. In re Jones, 11 N.C. App. 437, 181 S.E.2d 162, appeal dismissed, 279 N.C. 616, 184 S.E.2d 267 (1971), decided under former § 7A-285.

§ 7A-628. Determination of incapacity to proceed; evidence; temporary commitment; temporary orders.

The provisions of G.S. 15A-1001, 15A-1002, and 15A-1003 apply to all cases in which a juvenile is alleged to be delinquent. No juvenile committed under this section may be placed in a situation where he will come in contact with adults committed for any purpose. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

§ 7A-629. Adjudicatory hearing.

The adjudicatory hearing shall be held in the district at such time and place as the chief district judge shall designate. The judge may exclude the public from the hearing unless the juvenile moves that the hearing be open, which motion shall be granted. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited in the following annotation were decided under former § 7A-285.

Exclusion of Public. — It has never been the practice in juvenile proceedings wholly to exclude parents, relatives or friends, or to refuse juveniles the benefit of counsel. Even so, such proceedings are usually conducted without admitting the public generally. In re Burrus, 275 N.C. 517, 169 S.E.2d 879 (1969), aff'd, sub. nom. McKeiver v. Pennsylvania, 403 U.S. 528, 91 S. Ct. 1976, 29 L. Ed. 2d 647 (1971).

It is a discretionary matter with the trial judge whether the general public (which includes newspaper reporters) is excluded from a juvenile hearing. In re Potts, 14 N.C. App. 387, 188 S.E.2d 643, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 622, 190 S.E.2d 471 (1972).

§ 7A-630. Participation of the prosecutor.

A prosecutor from the District Attorney's office shall represent the State in contested delinquency hearings including detention, probable cause, adjudicatory, dispositional, probation revocation and conditional release hearings. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 469, s. 12.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, added "including detention, probable cause, adjudicatory, dispositional, probation revocation and conditional release hearings" at the end of the section.

§ 7A-631. Conduct of hearing.

The adjudicatory hearing shall be a judicial process designed to adjudicate the existence or nonexistence of any of the conditions alleged in a petition. In the adjudicatory hearing, the judge shall protect the following rights of the juvenile and his parent to assure due process of law: the right to written notice of the facts alleged in the petition, the right to counsel, the right to confront and cross-examine witnesses, the privilege against self-incrimination, the right of discovery and all rights afforded adult offenders except the right to bail, the right of self-representation, and the right of trial by jury. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited in the following annotation were decided under former § 7A-285.

I. General Consideration.
II. Due Process Rights.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Juvenile Proceedings Designed to Foster Individualized Disposition. — Juvenile proceedings are something less than a full blown determination of criminality. They are designed to foster individualized disposition of juvenile offenders under protection of the courts in accordance with constitutional safeguards. In re Arthur, 27 N.C. App. 227, 218 S.E.2d 869 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 640, 231 S.E.2d 614 (1977).

Juvenile proceedings are not criminal prosecutions. Nor is a finding of delinquency in a juvenile proceeding synonymous with conviction of a crime. In re Burrus, 275 N.C. 517, 169 S.E.2d 879 (1969), aff'd, sub nom. McKeiver v. Pennsylvania, 403 U.S. 528, 91 S. Ct. 1976, 29 L. Ed. 2d 647 (1971); In re Jones, 11 N.C. App. 437, 181 S.E.2d 162, appeal dismissed, 279 N.C. 616, 184 S.E.2d 267 (1971); State v. Rush, 13 N.C. App. 539, 186 S.E.2d 595 (1972); In re Drakeford, 32 N.C. App. 113, 230 S.E.2d 779 (1977).

But Proceedings Are Criminal for Fifth Amendment Purposes. — Juvenile proceedings must be regarded as "criminal" for Fifth Amendment purposes of the privilege against self-incrimination. State v. Rush, 13 N.C. App. 539, 186 S.E.2d 595 (1972).

Juvenile delinquency hearings place juveniles in danger of confinement, and, therefore, the proceedings are to be treated as criminal proceedings, and conducted with due process in accord with constitutional safeguards of the Fifth Amendment. In re Chavis, 31 N.C. App. 579, 230 S.E.2d 198 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 711, 232 S.E.2d 203 (1977).

And Double Jeopardy Rule Applies. — Although distinctions between juvenile proceedings and criminal prosecutions do still exist, they are sufficiently similar in nature that the double jeopardy provisions of the United States and North Carolina Constitutions are applicable to them. Accordingly, jeopardy attaches to the initial petition once an adjudicatory hearing on the merits is held. In re Drakeford, 32 N.C. App. 113, 230 S.E.2d 779 (1977).

Duty of District Court. — It is the constant duty of the district court to give each child subject to its jurisdiction such oversight and control as will be conducive to the welfare of the child and to the best interest of the State, and to ensure that the juvenile be carefully afforded all constitutional safeguards at every stage of the hearings. In re Eldridge, 9 N.C. App. 723, 177 S.E.2d 313 (1970).

Trial Judge May Question Witnesses. — The trial judge in a juvenile delinquency proceeding may question the witnesses to elicit relevant testimony and to aid in arriving at the truth. State v. Rush, 13 N.C. App. 539, 186 S.E.2d 595 (1972).

And May Give Opinion on Evidence. — The provisions of former § 1-180 prohibiting a court from giving an opinion on the evidence do not apply in a juvenile delinquency proceeding where no jury is present. State v. Rush, 13 N.C. App. 539, 186 S.E.2d 595 (1972).

II. DUE PROCESS RIGHTS.

Juvenile Entitled to Constitutional Safeguards. — A juvenile cited under a petition to appear for an inquiry into his alleged delinquency is entitled to the constitutional safeguards of due process and fairness. In re Jones, 11 N.C. App. 437, 181 S.E.2d 162, appeal dismissed, 279 N.C. 616, 184 S.E.2d 267 (1971).

A juvenile is entitled to certain constitutional safeguards and fairness. State v. Rush, 13 N.C. App. 539, 186 S.E.2d 595 (1972).

Juveniles in delinquency proceedings are entitled to constitutional safeguards similar to those afforded adult criminal defendants. In re

Arthur, 27 N.C. App. 227, 218 S.E.2d 869 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 640, 231 S.E.2d 614 (1977).

Scope of juvenile due process is not as extensive as that incident to adversary adjudication for adult criminal defendants. In re Arthur, 27 N.C. App. 227, 218 S.E.2d 869 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 640, 231 S.E.2d 614 (1977).

Requirements of Due Process. — So long as proceedings in the juvenile court meet the requirements of due process, they are constitutionally sound and must be upheld. This means that: (1) The basic requirements of due process and fairness must be satisfied in a juvenile court adjudication of delinquency. (2) The Fourteenth Amendment applies to prohibit the use of a coerced confession of a juvenile. (3) Notice must be given in juvenile proceedings which would be deemed constitutionally adequate in a civil or criminal proceeding; that is, notice must be given the juvenile and his parents sufficiently in advance of scheduled court proceedings to afford them reasonable opportunity to prepare, and the notice must set forth the alleged misconduct with particularity. (4) In juvenile proceedings to determine delinquency which may result in commitment to an institution in which the juvenile's freedom is curtailed, the child and his parents must be notified of the child's right to counsel and, if unable to afford counsel, to the appointment of same. (5) Juvenile proceedings to determine delinquency, as a result of which the juvenile may be committed to a State institution, must be regarded as "criminal" for Fifth Amendment purposes of the privilege against self-incrimination. The privilege applies in juvenile proceedings the same as in adult criminal cases. In re Burrus, 275 N.C. 517, 169 S.E.2d 879 (1969), aff'd, sub nom. McKeiver v. Pennsylvania, 403 U.S. 528, 91 S. Ct. 1976, 29 L. Ed. 2d 647 (1971).

Due process for a juvenile includes written notice of specific charges in advance of hearing, notification to child and parent of the right to counsel and that, if necessary, counsel will be appointed; the privilege against self-incrimination, proof of the offense charged beyond a reasonable doubt and determination of delinquency based on sworn testimony subject to cross-examination in the absence of a valid confession. In re Arthur, 27 N.C. App. 227, 218 S.E.2d 869 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 640, 231 S.E.2d 614 (1977).

Due process safeguards include notice of the charge or charges upon which the petition is based. In re Jones, 11 N.C. App. 437, 181 S.E.2d 162, appeal dismissed, 279 N.C. 616, 184 S.E.2d 267 (1971).

Counsel Is Required in Delinquency Proceedings. — The due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment requires that in respect of proceedings to determine delinquency which may result in commitment to an institution in which the juvenile's freedom is curtailed, the child and his parents must be notified of the child's right to be represented by counsel retained by them, or if they are unable to afford counsel, that counsel will be appointed to represent the child. In re Garcia, 9 N.C. App. 691, 177 S.E.2d 461 (1970).

But counsel is not constitutionally required at the hearing on an undisciplined child petition. In re Walker, 282 N.C. 28, 191 S.E.2d 702 (1972).

And Distinction Does Not Deny Equal Protection. — Allowing a child to be adjudged undisciplined and placed on probation without benefit of counsel, while at the same time requiring counsel before a child may be adjudged delinquent, does not deny equal protection of the laws to the undisciplined child. In re Walker, 282 N.C. 28, 191 S.E.2d 702 (1972).

Trial by jury in the juvenile court's adjudicative stage is not a constitutional requirement. McKeiver v. Pennsylvania, 403 U.S. 528, 91 S. Ct. 1976, 29 L. Ed. 2d 647 (1971).

Absent a statute providing for a jury trial, it is almost universally held that in juvenile court delinquency proceedings the alleged delinquent has no right under the pertinent State or federal Constitution to demand that the issue of his delinquency be determined by a jury. In re Burrus, 275 N.C. 517, 169 S.E.2d 879 (1969), aff'd, sub. nom. McKeiver v. Pennsylvania, 403 U.S. 528, 91 S. Ct. 1976, 29 L. Ed. 2d 647 (1971).

Dual Role as Judge and Prosecutor Unconstitutional. — Due process rights of a juvenile were violated in that the trial judge examined the witnesses for the State because of the absence of the district attorney or other counsel to represent the State. In re Thomas, 45 N.C. App. 525, 263 S.E.2d 355 (1980).

The presiding judge in a juvenile proceeding that could lead to detention should not assume the role of prosecuting attorney where the juvenile is represented by counsel and the hearing is adversary in nature. Such procedure would clearly violate due process in adult criminal prosecutions, nor does a dual role of judge and prosecutor measure up to the essentials of due process and fair treatment in juvenile proceedings where detention could result. In re Thomas, 45 N.C. App. 525, 263 S.E.2d 355 (1980).

The judge may continue at any time any case to allow additional factual evidence, social information or other information needed in the best interest of the juvenile or in the interest of justice. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in In re Vinson, 298 N.C. 640, 260 S.E.2d 591 (1979).

§ 7A-633. When admissions by juvenile may be accepted.

(a) A judge may accept an admission from a juvenile only after first addressing him personally and

(1) Informing him that he has a right to remain silent and that any statement he makes may be used against him;
(2) Determining that he understands the nature of the charge;
(3) Informing him that he has a right to deny the allegations;
(4) Informing him that by his admissions he waives his right to be confronted by the witnesses against him;
(5) Determining that the juvenile is satisfied with his representation; and
(6) Informing him of the most restrictive disposition on the charge.

(b) By inquiring of the prosecutor, the juvenile's attorney, and the juvenile personally, the judge shall determine whether there were any prior discussions involving admissions, whether the parties have entered into any arrangement with respect to the admissions and the terms thereof, and whether any improper pressure was exerted. The judge may accept an admission from a juvenile only after determining that the admission is a product of informed choice.

(c) The judge may accept an admission only after determining that there is a factual basis for the admission. This determination may be based upon any of the following information: a statement of the facts by the prosecutor; a written statement of the juvenile; sworn testimony which may include reliable hearsay; or a statement of facts by the juvenile's attorney. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The annotations under this section are from cases decided under former § 7A-285.

Acceptance of Admission. — In a juvenile hearing to determine delinquency, which may lead to commitment to a State institution, an admission by the juvenile of the allegations of the petition must be made with awareness of the consequences of the admission and must be made understandingly and voluntarily, and these facts must affirmatively appear in the record of the proceeding. In re Chavis, 31 N.C. App. 579, 230 S.E.2d 198 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 711, 232 S.E.2d 203 (1977); In re Johnson, 32 N.C. App. 492, 232 S.E.2d 486 (1977).

An admission by the juvenile to the allegations of the petition is the equivalent to a plea of guilty by an adult in a criminal prosecution. In re Johnson, 32 N.C. App. 492, 232 S.E.2d 486 (1977).

§ 7A-634. Rules of evidence.

(a) Where delinquent or undisciplined behavior is alleged and the allegation is denied, the court shall proceed in accordance with the rules of evidence applicable to criminal cases. In addition, no statement made by a juvenile to the intake counselor during the preliminary inquiry and evaluation process shall be admissible prior to the dispositional hearing.

(b) Where the juvenile is alleged to be abused, neglected or dependent, the rules of evidence in civil cases shall apply. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, ch. 469, s. 17.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, deleted "against the juvenile" following "admissible" near the end of the second sentence of subsection (a).

§ 7A-635. Quantum of proof in adjudicatory hearing.

The allegations of a petition alleging the juvenile is delinquent shall be proved beyond a reasonable doubt. The allegations in a petition alleging abuse, neglect, dependence, or undisciplined behavior shall be proved by clear and convincing evidence. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

CASE NOTES

The proper quantum of proof in a juvenile hearing to determine delinquency is proof beyond a reasonable doubt. In re Johnson, 32 N.C. App. 492, 232 S.E.2d 486 (1977), decided under former § 7A-285.

Quoted in In re Vinson, 298 N.C. 640, 260 S.E.2d 591 (1979).

§ 7A-636. Record of proceedings.

All adjudicatory and dispositional hearings and hearings on transfer to superior court shall be recorded by stenographic notes or by electronic or mechanical means. Records shall be reduced to a written transcript only when timely notice of appeal has been given. The judge may order that other hearings be recorded. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

If the judge finds that the allegations in the petition have been proved as provided in G.S. 7A-635, he shall so state. If the judge finds that the allegations have not been proven, he shall dismiss the petition with prejudice and the juvenile shall be released from secure or nonsecure custody. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-638. Legal effect of adjudication of delinquency.

An adjudication that a juvenile is delinquent or commitment of a juvenile to the Division of Youth Services shall neither be considered conviction of any criminal offense nor cause the juvenile to forfeit any citizenship rights. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-639. Predisposition investigation and report.

The judge shall proceed to the dispositional hearing upon receipt of sufficient social, medical, psychiatric, psychological, and educational information. No predisposition report shall be submitted to or considered by the judge prior to the completion of the adjudicatory hearing. The judge shall permit the juvenile to inspect any predisposition report to be considered by him in making his disposition unless the judge determines that disclosure would seriously harm his treatment or rehabilitation or would violate a promise of confidentiality. Opportunity to offer evidence in rebuttal shall be afforded the juvenile and his parent, guardian, or custodian at the dispositional hearing. The judge may order counsel not to disclose parts of the report to the juvenile or the juvenile's parent, guardian, or custodian if the judge finds that disclosure would seriously harm the treatment or rehabilitation of the juvenile or would violate a promise of confidentiality given to a source of information. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Continuance at Request of Juvenile. — This section and § 7A-640 make clear the legislative intent that the dispositional hearing must be continued for the juvenile respondent to present evidence when he requests such a continuance. This is particularly so in light of the provision of § 7A-632 that "The judge may continue at any time any case to allow additional factual evidence, social information or other information needed in the best interest of the juvenile or in the interest of justice." In re Vinson, 298 N.C. 640, 260 S.E.2d 591 (1979).

§ 7A-640. Dispositional hearing.

The dispositional hearing may be informal, and the judge may consider written reports or other evidence concerning the needs of the juvenile. The juvenile and his parent, guardian, or custodian shall have an opportunity to present evidence, and they may advise the judge concerning the disposition they believe to be in the best interest of the juvenile. The judge may exclude the public from the hearing unless the juvenile moves that the hearing be open, which motion shall be granted. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 469, s. 18.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, added the last sentence.

CASE NOTES

Consideration of Unadjudicated Acts Unrelated to Petition. — Trial courts giving consideration at a dispositional hearing to unadjudicated acts allegedly committed by a juvenile, unrelated to that for which he stands petitioned, must first determine that such information is reliable and accurate and that it was competently obtained. This does not mean that a full "trial" must be held to make the required determination about the unrelated acts. The trial court should have wide discretion in making the required determination from the sources available to it, but it must make the determination. In re Vinson, 298 N.C. 640, 260 S.E.2d 591 (1979).

Continuance at Request of Juvenile. — Section 7A-639 and this section make clear the legislative intent that the dispositional hearing must be continued for the juvenile respondent to present evidence when he requests such a continuance. This is particularly so in light of the provision of § 7A-632 that "The judge may continue at any time any case to allow additional factual evidence, social information or other information needed in the best interest of the juvenile or in the interest of justice." In re Vinson, 298 N.C. 640, 260 S.E.2d 591 (1979).

Nothing in this Article precludes the judge from entering a consent order or judgment on a petition for abuse, neglect or dependency when all parties are present, the juvenile is represented by counsel and all other parties are either represented by counsel or have waived counsel, and sufficient findings of fact are made by the judge. (1981, c. 371, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1981, c. 371, s. 2, makes the act effective Oct. 1, 1981.

ARTICLE 52.

Dispositions.

The purpose of dispositions in juvenile actions is to design an appropriate plan to meet the needs of the juvenile and to achieve the objectives of the State in exercising jurisdiction. If possible, the initial approach should involve working with the juvenile and his family in their own home so that the appropriate community resources may be involved in care, supervision, and treatment according to the needs of the juvenile. Thus, the judge should arrange for appropriate community-level services to be provided to the juvenile and his family in order to strengthen the home situation.

In choosing among statutorily permissible dispositions for a delinquent juvenile, the judge shall select the least restrictive disposition both in terms of kind and duration, that is appropriate to the seriousness of the offense, the degree of culpability indicated by the circumstances of the particular case and the age and prior record of the juvenile. A juvenile should not be committed to training school or to any other institution if he can be helped through community-level resources. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 4, contains a severability clause.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the annotations under this section are from cases decided under former § 7A-286.

Purpose of Juvenile Code. — The stated purpose of the North Carolina Juvenile Code is to avoid commitment of the juvenile to training school if he could be helped through community-level resources. In re Hughes, 50 N.C. App. 258, 273 S.E.2d 324 (1981).

Discretion of Court. — It was the legislature's intention that the district courts exercise sound discretion in fashioning an appropriate response to each particular instance of delinquency. In re Brownlee, 301 N.C. 532, 272 S.E.2d 861 (1981).

Duty of District Court. — It is the constant duty of the district court to give each child subject to its jurisdiction such oversight and control as will conduce to the welfare of the child and to the best interest of the State, and to ensure that the juvenile be carefully afforded all constitutional safeguards at every stage of the hearings. In re Eldridge, 9 N.C. App. 723, 177 S.E.2d 313 (1970).

The court is required to consider the welfare of the delinquent child as well as the best interest of the State. In re Hardy, 39 N.C. App. 610, 251 S.E.2d 643 (1979).

Determination of Child's Interest. — What is or is not in the best interest of the child must be determined in tandem with the perception of the legislature as to what is in the best interest of the state as enunciated by the terms of the Juvenile Code and by its general theme as deduced from the impetus behind its enactment. In re Brownlee, 301 N.C. 532, 272 S.E.2d 861 (1981).

Quoted in In re Vinson, 298 N.C. 640, 260 S.E.2d 591 (1979).

§ 7A-647. Dispositional alternatives for delinquent, undisciplined, abused, neglected, or dependent juvenile.

The following alternatives for disposition shall be available to any judge exercising jurisdiction, and the judge may combine any of the applicable alternatives when he finds such disposition to be in the best interest of the juvenile:

(1) The judge may dismiss the case, or continue the case in order to allow the juvenile, parent, or others to take appropriate action.

(2) In the case of any juvenile who needs more adequate care or supervision or who needs placement, the judge may:

a. Require that he be supervised in his own home by the Department of Social Services in his county, a court counselor or other personnel as may be available to the court, subject to conditions applicable to the parent or the juvenile as the judge may specify; or

b. Place him in the custody of a parent, relative, private agency offering placement services, or some other suitable person; or

c. Place him in the custody of the Department of Social Services in the county of his residence, or in the case of a juvenile who has legal residence outside the State, in the physical custody of the Department of Social Services in the county where he is found so that agency may return the juvenile to the responsible authorities in his home state. Any department of social services in whose custody or physical custody a juvenile is placed shall have the authority to arrange for and provide medical care as needed for such juvenile.

(3) In any case, the judge may order that the juvenile be examined by a physician, psychiatrist, psychologist or other qualified expert as may be needed for the judge to determine the needs of the juvenile. If the judge finds the juvenile to be in need of medical, surgical, psychiatric, psychological or other treatment, he shall allow the parent or other responsible persons to arrange for care. If the parent declines or is unable to make necessary arrangements, the judge may order the needed treatment, surgery or care, and the judge may order the parent to pay the cost of such care pursuant to G.S. 7A-650. If the judge finds the parent is unable to pay the cost of care, the judge may charge the cost to the county. If the judge believes, or if there is evidence presented to the effect that the juvenile is mentally ill or is mentally retarded the judge shall refer him to the area mental health, mental retardation, and substance abuse director or local mental health director for appropriate action. A juvenile shall not be committed directly to a State hospital or mental retardation center; and orders purporting to commit a juvenile directly to a State hospital or mental retardation center except for an examination to determine capacity to proceed shall be void and of no effect. The area mental health, mental retardation, and substance abuse director or local mental health director shall be responsible for arranging an interdisciplinary evaluation of the juvenile and mobilizing resources to meet his needs. If institutionalization is determined to be the best service for the juvenile, admission shall be with the voluntary consent of the parent or guardian. If the parent, guardian, or custodian refuses to consent to a mental hospital or retardation center admission after such institutionalization is recommended by the area mental health, mental retardation, and substance abuse health director, the signature and consent of the judge may be substituted for that purpose. In all cases in which a regional mental hospital refuses admission to a juvenile referred for admission by a judge and an area mental health, mental retardation, and substance abuse director or discharges a juvenile previously admitted on court referral prior to completion of his treatment, the hospital shall submit to the judge a written report setting out the reasons for denial of admission or discharge and setting out the juvenile's diagnosis, indications of mental illness, indications of need for treatment, and a statement as to the location of any facility known to have a treatment program for the juvenile in question. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 469, s. 19.)

Cross References. — As to authority of medical professionals in abuse cases, see § 7A-549.

Editor's Note. — Pursuant to Session Laws 1979, c. 358, s. 26, "area mental health, mental retardation, and substance abuse director" has been substituted for "area mental health director" in this section as enacted by Session Laws 1979, c. 815.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, deleted "two" following "may combine any" near the middle of the introductory paragraph.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the annotations under this section are from cases and opinions of the Attorney General decided and issued under former § 7A-286.

The legislature intended for the court to consider all information relevant to the disposition of a delinquent child. In re Hardy, 39 N.C. App. 610, 251 S.E.2d 643 (1979).

The dispositional alternatives enumerated by § 7A-649 are to be read in tandem with this section. In re Brownlee, 301 N.C. 532, 272 S.E.2d 861 (1981).

The provision in subsection (6) of former § 7A-286 that a juvenile judge may not commit a child directly to a mental institution was clearly designed to prevent conflicts with various statutes under Chapter 122. In re Mikels, 31 N.C. App. 470, 230 S.E.2d 155 (1976).

Chapter 122 was written to provide constitutional defense, procedural, and evidentiary rules. To allow juvenile judges to commit minors to mental institutions with a lesser standard than that set forth in Chapter 122 would subject such commitments to constitutional challenge as a deprivation of liberty without due process of law. In re Mikels, 31 N.C. App. 470, 230 S.E.2d 155 (1976).

A finding of fact that the mother was a fit and proper person to have custody of her child did not compel the conclusion that custody be awarded to her, where the court also found that the best interests of the child required that custody remain in others with whom the child was placed following a finding of dependency. In re Yow, 40 N.C. App. 688, 253 S.E.2d 647; cert. denied, 297 N.C. 610, 257 S.E.2d 223 (1979).

Authority to Consider Privately Operated Facility. — Under former § 7A-286, the trial court was not confined to a consideration only of government-operated resources but had the authority to place an undisciplined child in a privately operated facility for an indefinite stay at the county's expense. In re Lambert, 46 N.C. App. 103, 264 S.E.2d 379 (1980).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Duration of Child Custody by County Social Services Department. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mrs. Margaret H. Coman, 40 N.C.A.G. 311 (1970).

Articles 4 and 5A, Chapter 122, did not revoke the authority which subdivision (6) of former § 7A-286 vested in a district court judge exercising juvenile jurisdiction to secure placement of a juvenile needing residential care and treatment for mental impairment to an appropriate facility. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. R. Patterson Webb, Division of Mental Health, Department of Human Resources, 43 N.C.A.G. 163 (1973).

Section Does Not Authorize District Court Judge to Commit Juvenile to Center for Mentally Retarded. — See opinion of Attorney General to Dr. Ann F. Wolfe, Division of Mental Health Services, 44 N.C.A.G. 126 (1974).

§ 7A-648. Dispositional alternatives for delinquent or undisciplined juvenile.

In the case of any juvenile who is delinquent or undisciplined, the judge may:

(1) Continue the case for no more than six months in order to allow the family an opportunity to meet the needs of the juvenile through more adequate home supervision, through placement in a private or specialized school or agency, through placement with a relative, or through some other plan approved by the court;

(2) Place the juvenile under the protective supervision of a court counselor for no more than one year so that the court counselor may assist the juvenile in securing social, medical, and educational services and may work with the family as a unit to insure the juvenile is provided proper supervision and care;

(3) Excuse the juvenile from compliance with the compulsory school attendance law when the judge finds that suitable alternative plans can be arranged by the family through other community resources for one of the following: an education related to the needs or abilities of the juvenile including vocational education or special education; a suitable plan of supervision or placement; or some other plan that the judge finds to be in the best interest of the juvenile. CASE NOTES

Commitment to the Division of Youth Services is not a statutorily permissible dispositional alternative for "undisciplined" behavior under this section. In re Hughes, 50 N.C. App. 258, 273 S.E.2d 324 (1981).

§ 7A-649. Dispositional alternatives for delinquent juvenile.

In the case of any juvenile who is delinquent, the judge may:

(1) Suspend imposition of a more severe, statutorily permissible disposition with the provision that the juvenile meet certain conditions agreed to by him and specified in the dispositional order. The conditions shall not exceed the maximum criminal sanction permissible for the offense;

(2) Require restitution, full or partial, payable within a 12-month period to any person who has suffered loss or damage as a result of the offense committed by the juvenile. The judge may determine the amount, terms, and conditions of the restitution. If the juvenile participated with another person or persons, all participants should be jointly and severally responsible for the payment of restitution; however, the judge shall not require the juvenile to make restitution if the juvenile satisfies the court that he does not have, and could not reasonably acquire, the means to make restitution;

(3) Impose a fine related to the seriousness of the juvenile's offense. If the juvenile has the ability to pay the fine, it shall not exceed the maximum fine for the offense if committed by an adult;

(4) Order the juvenile to perform supervised community service consistent with the juvenile's age, skill, and ability, specifying the nature of the work and the number of hours required. The work shall be related to the seriousness of the juvenile's offense and in no event may the obligation to work exceed 12 months;

(5) Order the juvenile to a supervised day program, requiring him to be present at a specified place for all or part of every day or of certain days. The judge also may require the juvenile to comply with any other reasonable conditions specified in the dispositional order that are designed to facilitate supervision;

(6) Order the juvenile to a community-based program of academic or vocational education or to a professional residential or nonresidential treatment program. Participation in the programs shall not exceed 12 months;

(7) Impose confinement on an intermittent basis in an approved detention facility. Confinement shall be limited to:

a. Night custody for no more than a total of five nights; or

b. Weekend custody for no more than a total of two weekends;

Confinement in either case shall be completed within a period of 60 days from the date of disposition;

(8) Place the juvenile on probation under the supervision of a court counselor. In any case where a juvenile is placed on probation, the court counselor shall have the authority to visit the juvenile where he resides. The judge shall specify conditions of probation that are related to the needs of the juvenile including any of the following which apply:

a. That the juvenile shall remain on good behavior and not violate any laws;

b. That the juvenile attend school regularly;

c. That the juvenile not associate with specified persons or be in specified places;

d. That the juvenile report to a court counselor as often as required by a court counselor;

e. That the juvenile make specified financial restitution or pay a fine in accordance with subdivisions (2) and (3);

f. That the juvenile be employed regularly if not attending school.

An order of probation shall remain in force for a period not to exceed one year from the date entered. Prior to expiration of an order of probation, the judge may extend it for an additional period of one year after a hearing if he finds that the extension is necessary to protect the community or to safeguard the welfare of the juvenile;

(9) Order that the juvenile shall not be licensed to operate a motor vehicle in the State of North Carolina for as long as the court retains jurisdiction over the juvenile or for any shorter period of time;

(10) Commit the juvenile to the Division of Youth Services in accordance with G.S. 7A-652. (1979, c. 815, s. 1; 1981, c. 469, s. 20.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, added the second sentence of the introductory paragraph of subdivision (8).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the annotations under this section are from a case decided under former § 7A-286.

The dispositional alternatives enumerated by this section are to be read in tandem with § 7A-647. In re Brownlee, 301 N.C. 532, 272 S.E.2d 861 (1981).

Constitutional Rights of Child. — The question as to the extent to which a child's constitutional rights are impaired by a restraint upon its freedom has arisen many times with reference to statutes authorizing the commitment of dependent, incorrigible, or delinquent children to the custody of some institution, and the decisions appear to warrant the statement, as a general rule, that, where the investigation is into the status and needs of the child, and the institution to which he or she is committed is not of a penal character, such investigation is not one to which the constitutional guaranty of a right to trial by jury extends, nor does the restraint put upon the child amount to a deprivation of liberty within the meaning of the Declaration of Rights, nor is it a punishment for crime. In re Whichard, 8 N.C. App. 154, 174 S.E.2d 281 (1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 940, 91 S. Ct. 2258, 29 L. Ed. 2d 719 (1971).

Training schools are established for the training and moral and industrial development of the delinquent children of the State. In re Whichard, 8 N.C. App. 154, 174 S.E.2d 281 (1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 940, 91 S. Ct. 2258, 29 L. Ed. 2d 719 (1971).

Community-based Programs. — The court does not have the authority under subdivision (6) of this section to require a county to pay for the treatment of a delinquent juvenile at a facility in another state. In re Brownlee, 301 N.C. 532, 272 S.E.2d 861 (1981).

Commitment to Division of Youth Services. — Clearly, the alternative provided for under subdivision (10) of this section ought to be employed only when there is no reasonable alternative open to the court in its disposition of the matter. In re Brownlee, 301 N.C. 532, 272 S.E.2d 861 (1981).

Where respondent juvenile was initially placed on probation as an "undisciplined" child for unlawful absence from school, and his probation was continued when he was adjudicated a delinquent for damage to property by shooting out the windows and screens of a home with an air rifle and again when he was adjudicated a delinquent for stealing $60.00 from a purse, his probationary status resulted from delinquent behavior rather than merely from the undisciplined behavior upon which it was initially grounded, and the juvenile court had authority to commit respondent to the custody of the Division of Youth Services for placement in one of its residential facilities upon finding respondent in violation of the conditions of his probation subsequent to the adjudications that he was delinquent. In re Hughes, 50 N.C. App. 258, 273 S.E.2d 324 (1981).

§ 7A-650. Authority over parents of juvenile adjudicated as delinquent, undisciplined, abused, neglected, or dependent.

(a) If the judge orders medical, surgical, psychiatric, psychological, or other treatment pursuant to G.S. 7A-647(3), the judge may order the parent or other responsible parties to pay the cost of the treatment or care ordered.

(b) The judge may order the parent to provide transportation for a juvenile to keep an appointment with a court counselor.

(c) Whenever legal custody of a juvenile is vested in someone other than his parent, after due notice to the parent and after a hearing, the judge may order that the parent pay a reasonable sum that will cover in whole or in part the support of the juvenile after the order is entered. If the judge places a juvenile in the custody of a county department of social services and if the judge finds that the parent is unable to pay the cost of the support required by the juvenile, the cost shall be paid by the county department of social services in whose custody the juvenile is placed, provided the juvenile is not receiving care in an institution owned or operated by the State or federal government or any subdivision thereof.

(d) Failure of a parent who is personally served to participate in or comply with subsections (a) through (c) may result in a civil proceeding for contempt. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-651. Dispositional order.

The dispositional order shall be in writing and shall contain appropriate findings of fact and conclusions of law. The judge shall state with particularity, both orally and in the written order of disposition, the precise terms of the disposition including the kind, duration and the person who is responsible for carrying out the disposition and the person or agency in whom custody is vested. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-652. Commitment of delinquent juvenile to Division of Youth Services.

(a) A delinquent juvenile 10 years of age or more may be committed to the Division of Youth Services for placement in one of the residential facilities operated by the Division if the judge finds that the alternatives to commitment as contained in G.S. 7A-649 have been attempted unsuccessfully or are inappropriate and that the juvenile's behavior constitutes a threat to persons or property in the community.

(b) Commitment shall be for:

(1) An indefinite term not to exceed the eighteenth birthday of the juvenile; or

(2) A definite term not to exceed two years if the judge finds that the juvenile is 14 years of age or older, has been previously adjudicated delinquent for two or more felony offenses, and has been previously committed to a residential facility operated by the Division of Youth Services. The Division may reduce the duration of the definite commitment by an amount not to exceed twenty-five percent (25%) if the juvenile has not committed any major infractions of the regulations of any facility to which he is assigned, and the Division of Youth Services may move for a reduction of more than twenty-five percent (25%) pursuant to G.S. 7A-664.

(c) In no event shall commitment be for a period of time in excess of that period for which an adult could be committed.

(d) The Chief Court Counselor shall have the responsibility for transporting the juvenile to the residential facility designated by the Division of Youth Services. The juvenile shall be accompanied to the residential facility by a person of the same sex.

(e) The Division of Youth Services shall accept all juveniles who have been committed for delinquency if the Director finds that the criteria specified in this section have been met. A commitment order accompanied by information requested by the Director shall be forwarded to the Division. The Director shall place the juvenile in the residential facility that would best provide for his needs and shall notify the committing court. The Secretary of the Department of Human Resources may assign a juvenile committed for delinquency to any institution or other program of the Department or licensed by the Department, which program is appropriate to the needs of the juvenile.

(f) When the judge commits a juvenile to the Division of Youth Services, the Director shall prepare a plan for care or treatment within 15 days after assuming custody of the juvenile.

(g) Commitment of a juvenile to the Division of Youth Services does not terminate the court's continuing jurisdiction rights over the juvenile and his parent or guardian. Commitment of a juvenile to the Division of Youth Services transfers only physical custody of the juvenile to the Division. Legal custody remains with the parent, guardian, agency or institution in whom it was vested. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Commitment Warranted. — Where respondent juvenile was initially placed on probation as an "undisciplined" child for unlawful absence from school, and his probation was continued when he was adjudicated a delinquent for damage to property by shooting out the windows and screens of a home with an air rifle and again when he was adjudicated a delinquent for stealing $60.00 from a purse, his probationary status resulted from delinquent behavior rather than merely from the undisciplined behavior upon which it was initially grounded, and the juvenile court had authority to commit respondent to the custody of the Division of Youth Services for placement in one of its residential facilities upon finding respondent in violation of the conditions of his probation subsequent to the adjudications that he was delinquent. In re Hughes, 50 N.C. App. 258, 273 S.E.2d 324 (1981).

Opinions of Attorney General

Application of Section. — Subsection (c) of this section does not apply to juveniles who were committed to the Division of Youth Services prior to January 1, 1980, and whose cases are not pending on appeal. See opinion of Attorney General to Sarah T. Morrow, M.D., M.P.H., Secretary, Dep't of Human Resources, 49 N.C.A.G. 162 (1980).

Determination of Period of Confinement. — When the committing judge in a juvenile proceeding predicates a finding of delinquency upon several actions by the juvenile which would be crimes if perpetrated by an adult, in considering the maximum time that the juvenile may be retained at a treatment facility under subsection (c) of this section, the Division of Youth Services is not automatically bound by the period of confinement that an adult would have received under concurrent sentencing. See opinion of Attorney General to Sarah T. Morrow, M.D., M.P.H., Secretary, Dep't of Human Resources, 49 N.C.A.G. 162 (1980).

Disposition of Minor Who Becomes 16 Prior to Hearing. — Where a minor was under the age of 16 at the time of the commission of a criminal offense but attained the age of 16 prior to the judicial hearing, the minor, if adjudicated delinquent, may be committed to the Department of Human Resources, Division of Youth Services, for institutional confinement "for a definite term or an indefinite term, not to extend beyond the eighteenth birthday of the child," as the Department [of Human Resources] or its administrative personnel may find to be in the best interest of the child. Opinion of Attorney General to the Hon. Larry Thomas Black, District Court Judge, Nov. 8, 1977, issued under former § 7A-286.

The court has the discretion to place such a minor, adjudicated delinquent, on juvenile probation. Adult probation, however, is not an alternative available to the court. If such a minor, adjudicated delinquent, violates the terms of his probation, the court may commit him to the Department of Human Resources, Division of Youth Services, for institutional confinement. Opinion of Attorney General to the Hon. Larry Thomas Black, District Court Judge, Nov. 8, 1977, issued under former § 7A-286.

The Governor may order transfer of any person less than 18 years of age from any jail or penal facility of the State to one of the residential facilities operated by the Division of Youth Services in appropriate circumstances, provided the Governor shall consult with the Department of Human Resources concerning the feasibility of the transfer in terms of available space, staff, and suitability of program.

When an inmate, committed to the Department of Correction, is transferred by the Governor to a residential program operated by the Division of Youth Services, the Division of Youth Services may release the juvenile based on the needs of the juvenile and the best interests of the State. Transfer shall not divest the probation-parole officer of his responsibility to supervise the inmate on release. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

The Director of the Division of Youth Services shall be responsible for evaluation of the progress of each juvenile at least once every six months as long as the juvenile remains in the care of the Division. If the director determines that a juvenile is ready for release, he shall initiate a prerelease planning process. The prerelease planning process shall be defined by rules and regulations of the Division of Youth Services, but shall include the following:

(1) Written notification to the judge who ordered commitment;

(2) A prerelease planning conference shall be held involving as many as possible of the following: the juvenile, his parent, court counselors who have supervised the juvenile on probation or will supervise him on aftercare, and staff of the facility that found the juvenile ready for release. The prerelease planning conference shall include personal contact and evaluation rather than telephonic notification. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-655. Conditional release and final discharge.

The Division of Youth Services shall release a juvenile either by conditional release or by final discharge. The decision as to which type of release is appropriate shall be made by the Director based on the needs of the juvenile and the best interests of the State under rules and regulations governing release which shall be promulgated by the Division of Youth Services, according to the following guidelines:

(1) Conditional release is appropriate for a juvenile needing supervision after leaving the institution. As part of the prerelease planning process, the terms of conditional release shall be set out in writing and a copy given to the juvenile, his parent, the committing court, and the court counselor who will provide aftercare supervision.

(2) Final discharge is appropriate when the juvenile does not require supervision or is 18 years of age. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-656. Revocation of conditional release.

If a juvenile does not conform to the terms of his conditional release, the court counselor providing aftercare supervision may make a motion for review in the court in the district where the juvenile has been residing during aftercare supervision. The judge shall hold a hearing to determine whether there has been a violation. With respect to any hearing pursuant to this section, the juvenile:

(1) Shall have reasonable notice in writing of the nature and content of the allegations in the petition, including notice that the purpose of the hearing is to determine whether the juvenile has violated the terms of his conditional release to the extent that his conditional release should be revoked;
(2) Shall be permitted to be represented by an attorney at the hearing;
(3) Shall have the right to confront and cross-examine any persons who have made allegations against him;
(4) May admit, deny, or explain the violation alleged and may present proof, including affidavits or other evidence, in support of his contentions. A record of the proceeding shall be made and preserved in the juvenile's record.

If the judge determines that the juvenile has violated the terms of his conditional release, the judge may revoke the conditional release or make any other disposition authorized by this Subchapter.

If the judge revokes the conditional release, the Chief Court Counselor shall have the responsibility for returning the juvenile to the facility specified by the Division of Youth Services. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-657. Review of custody order.

In any case where the judge removes custody from a parent or person standing in loco parentis because of dependency, neglect or abuse, the juvenile shall not be returned to the parent or person standing in loco parentis unless the judge finds sufficient facts to show that the juvenile will receive proper care and supervision.

In any case where custody is removed from a parent, the judge shall conduct a review within six months of the date the order was entered, and shall conduct subsequent reviews at least every year thereafter. The Director of Social Services shall make timely requests to the clerk to calendar the case at a session of court scheduled for the hearing of juvenile matters within six months of the date the order was entered. The Director shall make timely requests for calendaring of the yearly reviews thereafter. The clerk shall give 15 days' notice of the review to the parent or the person standing in loco parentis, the juvenile if 12 years of age or more, the guardian, foster-parent, custodian or agency with custody, the guardian ad litem, and any other person the court may specify, indicating the court's impending review.

The court shall consider information from the Department of Social Services; the juvenile court counselor, the custodian, guardian, the parent or the person standing in loco parentis, the foster-parent, the guardian ad litem; and any public or private agency which will aid it in its review.

In each case the court shall consider the following criteria:

(1) Services which have been offered to reunite the family;
(2) Where the juvenile's return home is unlikely, the efforts which have been made to evaluate or plan for other methods of care;
(3) Goals of the foster care placement and the appropriateness of the foster care plan;
(4) A new foster care plan, if continuation of care is sought, that addresses the role the current foster parent will play in the planning for the juvenile;

(5) Reports on the placements the juvenile has had and any services offered to the juvenile and the parent;
(6) When and if termination of parental rights should be considered;
(7) Any other criteria the court deems necessary.

The judge, after making findings of fact, shall enter an order continuing the placement under review or providing for a different placement as is deemed to be in the best interest of the juvenile. If at any time custody is restored to a parent, the court shall be relieved of the duty to conduct periodic judicial reviews of the placement. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-658. Probation review.

The judge may review the progress of any juvenile on probation at any time during the period of probation or at the end of probation. The conditions or duration of probation may be modified only as provided in this Subchapter and only after there is notice and a hearing. If a juvenile violates the conditions of his probation, he and his parent after notice, may be required to appear before the court and the judge may make any disposition of the matter authorized by this Subchapter. At the end of or at any time during probation, the judge may terminate probation by written order upon finding that there is no further need for supervision. The finding and order terminating probation may be entered in chambers in the absence of the juvenile and may be based on a report from the court counselor or at the election of the judge, it may be entered with the juvenile present after notice and a hearing. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Violation of Conditions of Probation. — Where respondent juvenile was initially placed on probation as an "undisciplined" child for unlawful absence from school, and his probation was continued when he was adjudicated a delinquent for damage to property by shooting out the windows and screens of a home with an air rifle and again when he was adjudicated a delinquent for stealing $60.00 from a purse, his probationary status resulted from delinquent behavior rather than merely from the undisciplined behavior upon which it was initially grounded, and the juvenile court had authority to commit respondent to the custody of the Division of Youth Services for placement in one of its residential facilities upon finding respondent in violation of the conditions of his probation subsequent to the adjudications that he was delinquent. ARTICLE 53.

Modification and Enforcement of Dispositional Orders; Appeals.

§ 7A-664. Authority to modify or vacate.

(a) Upon motion in the cause or petition, and after notice, the judge may conduct a review hearing to determine whether the order of the court is in the best interest of the juvenile, and the judge may modify or vacate the order in light of changes in circumstances or the needs of the juvenile.

(b) In a case of delinquency, the judge may reduce the nature or the duration of the disposition on the basis that it exceeds the statutory maximum, was imposed in an illegal manner or is unduly severe with reference to the seriousness of the offense, the culpability of the juvenile, or the dispositions given to juveniles convicted of similar offenses.

(c) In any case where the judge finds the juvenile to be delinquent, undisciplined, abused, neglected, or dependent, the jurisdiction of the court to modify any order or disposition made in the case shall continue during the minority of the juvenile or until terminated by order of the court. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 4, contains a severability clause.

§ 7A-665. Request for modification for lack of suitable services.

If the Director of the Division of Youth Services finds that any juvenile committed to the Division's care is not suitable for its program the Director may make a motion in the cause so that the judge may make an alternative disposition. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Upon motion of a proper party as defined in G.S. 7A-667, review of any final order of the court in a juvenile matter under this Article shall be before the Court of Appeals. Notice of appeal shall be given in open court at the time of the hearing or in writing within 10 days after entry of the order. However, if no disposition is made within 60 days after entry of the order, written notice of appeal may be given within 70 days after such entry. A final order shall include:

(1) Any order finding absence of jurisdiction;
(2) Any order which in effect determines the action and prevents a judgment from which appeal might be taken;
(3) Any order of disposition after an adjudication that a juvenile is delinquent, undisciplined, abused, neglected, or dependent; or
(4) Any order modifying custodial rights. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Finding of Probable Cause Not Final Order. — A finding of probable cause in a juvenile proceeding was not an appealable "final order" under this section and evidentiary rulings of the trial court in conducting the probable cause hearing were not properly before the Court of Appeals for review. In re Ford, 49 N.C. App. 674, 272 S.E.2d 157 (1980).

§ 7A-667. Proper parties for appeal.

An appeal may be taken by the juvenile; the juvenile's parent, guardian, or custodian; the State or county agency. The State's appeal is limited to the following:

(1) Any final order in cases other than delinquency or undisciplined cases;
(2) The following orders in delinquency or undisciplined cases:
    a. An order finding a State statute to be unconstitutional;
    b. Any order which terminates the prosecution of a petition by upholding the defense of double jeopardy, by holding that a cause of action is not stated under a statute, or by granting a motion to suppress. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

County May Not Appeal. — It is manifest that this statute does not empower a county to take an appeal in a juvenile proceeding. In re Brownlee, 301 N.C. 532, 272 S.E.2d 861 (1981).

§ 7A-668. Disposition pending appeal.

Pending disposition of an appeal, the release of the juvenile, with or without conditions, should issue in every case unless the judge orders otherwise. For compelling reasons which must be stated in writing, the judge may enter a temporary order affecting the custody or placement of the juvenile as he finds to be in the best interest of the juvenile or the State. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article entitled, "Juvenile Justice in Transition — A New Juvenile Code for North Carolina," see 16 Wake Forest L. Rev. 1 (1980).

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality of Former § 7A-289. — Former § 7A-289, permitting the district court to enter a temporary custody order affecting a juvenile who is appealing a commitment order of the court, was not unconstitutional on the ground that the statute deprives the juvenile of the right to bail. In re Martin, 9 N.C. App. 576, 176 S.E.2d 849 (1970), decided under former § 7A-289.

§ 7A-669. Disposition after appeal.

Upon the affirmation of the order of adjudication or disposition of the court by the Court of Appeals or by the Supreme Court in the event of such an appeal, the judge shall have authority to modify or alter his original order of adjudication or disposition as he finds to be in the best interest of the juvenile to reflect any adjustment made by the juvenile or change in circumstances during the period of time the appeal was pending. If the modifying order is entered ex parte, the court shall give notice to interested parties to show cause within 10 days thereafter as to why the modifying order should be vacated or altered. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§§ 7A-670 to 7A-674: Reserved for future codification purposes.

ARTICLE 54.

Juvenile Records and Social Reports.

§ 7A-675. Confidentiality of records.

(a) The clerk of superior court shall maintain a complete record of all juvenile cases filed in his office to be known as the juvenile record, which shall be withheld from public inspection and may be examined only by order of the judge, except that the juvenile, his parent, guardian, custodian, or other authorized representative of the juvenile shall have a right to examine the juvenile's record. The record shall include the summons, petition, custody order, court order, written motions, the electronic or mechanical recording of the hearing, and other papers filed in the proceeding. The recording of the hearing shall be reduced to a written transcript only when notice of appeal has been timely given. After the time for appeal has expired with no appeal having been filed, the recording of the hearing may be erased or destroyed upon the written order of the judge.

(b) The Chief Court Counselor shall maintain a record of the cases of juveniles under supervision by court counselors which shall include family background information; reports of social, medical, psychiatric, or psychological information concerning a juvenile or his family; a record of the probation reports of a juvenile; interviews with his family; or other information which the judge finds should be protected from public inspection in the best interest of the juvenile.

(c) The Director of the Department of Social Services shall maintain a record of the cases of juveniles under protective custody by his Department or under placement by the court. This file shall include material similar in nature to that described in subsection (b).

(d) The records maintained pursuant to subsections (b) and (c) may be examined only by order of the judge except that the juvenile shall have the right to examine them.

(e) Law-enforcement records and files concerning a juvenile shall be kept separate from the records and files of adults except in proceedings when jurisdiction of a juvenile is transferred to superior court. Law-enforcement records and files concerning juveniles shall be open only to the inspection of the prosecutor, court counselors, the juvenile, his parent, guardian, and custodian.

(f) All records and files maintained by the Division of Youth Services shall be withheld from public inspection and shall be open only to the inspection of the juvenile, professionals in that agency who are directly involved in the juvenile's case, and court counselors. The judge authorizing commitment of a juvenile shall have the right to inspect and order the release of records maintained by the Division of Youth Services on that juvenile.

(g) Disclosure of information concerning any juvenile under investigation or alleged to be within the jurisdiction of the court that would reveal the identity of that juvenile is prohibited except that publication of pictures of runaways is permitted with the permission of the parents.

(h) Nothing in this section shall preclude the necessary sharing of information among authorized agencies. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 4, contains a severability clause.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The annotations under this section are from a case decided under former § 7A-287.

Cross-Examination of Defendant as to Prior Adjudications of Delinquency. — For purposes of impeachment, it is permissible to cross-examine a juvenile defendant with reference to his prior convictions or adjudications of guilt of prior conduct which, if committed by an adult, would have constituted a conviction of crime. State v. Miller, 281 N.C. 70, 187 S.E.2d 729 (1972).

In a criminal case, the rule, that when a defendant takes the stand he may be impeached by cross-examination with respect to previous convictions of crime, applies to every defendant who takes the stand, regardless of his age at the time of his previous conviction. State v. Miller, 281 N.C. 70, 187 S.E.2d 729 (1972).

§ 7A-676. Expunction of records of juveniles adjudicated delinquent and undisciplined.

(a) Any person who has attained the age of 16 years may file a petition in the court where he was adjudicated undisciplined for expunction of all records of that adjudication.

(b) Any person who has attained the age of 16 years may file a petition in the court where he was adjudicated delinquent for expunction of all records of that adjudication provided:

(1) The offense for which he was adjudicated would have been a crime if committed by an adult.

(2) The person has not subsequently been adjudicated delinquent or convicted as an adult of any felony or misdemeanor other than a traffic violation under the laws of the United States or the laws of this State or any other state.

(c) The petition shall contain, but not be limited to, the following:

(1) An affidavit by the petitioner that he has been of good behavior since the adjudication and, in the case of a petition based on a delinquency adjudication, that he has not subsequently been adjudicated delinquent or convicted as an adult of any felony or misdemeanor other than a traffic violation under the laws of the United States, or the laws of this State or any other state;

(2) Verified affidavits of two persons, who are not related to the petitioner or to each other by blood or marriage, that they know the character and reputation of the petitioner in the community in which he lives and that his character and reputation are good;

(3) A statement that the petition is a motion in the cause in the case wherein the petitioner was adjudicated delinquent or undisciplined.

The petition shall be served upon the district attorney in the district wherein adjudication occurred. The district attorney shall have 10 days thereafter in which to file any objection thereto and shall be duly notified as to the date of the hearing on the petition.

(d) If the judge, after hearing, finds that the petitioner satisfies the conditions set out in subsections (a) or (b), he shall order and direct the clerk of superior court and all law-enforcement agencies to expunge their records of the adjudication including all references to arrests, complaints, referrals, petitions, and orders.

(e) The clerk of superior court shall forward a certified copy of the order to the sheriff, chief of police, or other law-enforcement agency.

(f) Records of a juvenile adjudicated delinquent or undisciplined being maintained by the Chief Court Counselor, an intake counselor or a court counselor shall be retained or disposed of as provided by the Juvenile Services Division.

(g) Records of a juvenile adjudicated delinquent or undisciplined being maintained by personnel at a residential facility operated by the Division of Youth Services, shall be retained or disposed of as provided by the Department of Human Resources. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

(a) Whenever a juvenile's record is expunged, with respect to the matter in which the record was expunged, the juvenile who is the subject of the record and his parent may inform any person or organization including employers, banks, credit companies, insurance companies, and schools that he was not arrested, he did not appear before the court, and he was not adjudicated delinquent or undisciplined.

(b) Notwithstanding subsection (a), in any criminal or delinquency case if the juvenile is the defendant and chooses to testify or if he is not the defendant and is called as a witness, the juvenile may be ordered to testify with respect to whether he was adjudicated delinquent. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Upon expunction of a juvenile's record, the clerk of superior court shall send a written notice to the juvenile at his last known address informing him that the record has been expunged and with respect to the matter involved, the juvenile may inform any person that he has no record. The notice shall inform the juvenile further that if the matter involved is a delinquency record, the juvenile may inform any person that he was not arrested or adjudicated delinquent except that upon testifying in a criminal or delinquency proceeding, he may be required by a judge to disclose that he was adjudicated delinquent. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Article 55.

Interstate Compact on Juveniles.

§ 7A-684. Execution of Compact.

The Governor is hereby authorized and directed to execute a Compact on behalf of this State with any other state or states legally joining therein in the form substantially as follows: The contracting states solemnly agree:. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 4, contains a severability clause.

§ 7A-685. Findings and purposes.

That juveniles who are not under proper supervision and control, or who have absconded, escaped or run away, are likely to endanger their own health, morals and welfare, and the health, morals and welfare of others. The cooperation of the states party to this Compact is therefore necessary to provide for the welfare and protection of juveniles and of the public with respect to

(1) Cooperative supervision of delinquent juveniles on probation or parole;
(2) The return, from one state to another, of delinquent juveniles who have escaped or absconded;

(3) The return, from one state to another, of nondelinquent juveniles who have run away from home; and

(4) Additional measures for the protection of juveniles and of the public, which any two or more of the party states may find desirable to undertake cooperatively.

In carrying out the provisons of this Compact the party states shall be guided by the noncriminal, reformative, and protective policies which guide their laws concerning delinquent, neglected, or dependent juveniles generally. It shall be the policy of the states party to this Compact to cooperate and observe their respective responsibilities for the prompt return and acceptance of juveniles and delinquent juveniles who become subject to the provisions of this Compact. The provisions of this Compact shall be reasonably and liberally construed to accomplish the foregoing purposes. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-686. Existing rights and remedies.

That all remedies and procedures provided by this Compact shall be in addition to and not in substitution for other rights, remedies, and procedures, and shall not be in derogation of parental rights and responsibilities. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-687. Definitions.

That, for the purposes of this Compact, "delinquent juvenile" means any juvenile who has been adjudged delinquent and who, at the time the provisions of this Compact are invoked, is still subject to the jurisdiction of the court that has made such adjudication or to the jurisdiction or supervision of an agency or institution pursuant to an order of such court; "probation or parole" means any kind of conditional release of juveniles authorized under the laws of the states party hereto; "court" means any court having jurisdiction over delinquent, neglected, or dependent children; "state" means any state, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico; and "residence" or any variant thereof means a place at which a home or regular place of abode is maintained. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

(a) That the parent, guardian, person, or agency entitled to legal custody of a juvenile who has not been adjudged delinquent but who has run away without the consent of such parent, guardian, person, or agency may petition the appropriate court in the demanding state for the issuance of a requisition for his return. The petition shall state the name and age of the juvenile, the name of the petitioner and the basis of entitlement to the juvenile's custody, the circumstances of his running away, his location if known at the time application is made, and such other facts as may tend to show that the juvenile who has run away is endangering his own welfare or the welfare of others and is not an emancipated minor. The petition shall be verified by affidavit, shall be executed in duplicate, and shall be accompanied by two certified copies of the document or documents on which the petitioner's entitlement to the juvenile's custody is based, such as birth certificates, letters of guardianship, or custody decrees. Such further affidavits and other documents as may be deemed proper may be submitted with such petition. The judge of the court to which this application is made may hold a hearing thereon to determine whether for the purposes of this Compact the petitioner is entitled to the legal custody of the juvenile, whether or not it appears that the juvenile has in fact run away without consent, whether or not he is an emancipated minor, and whether or not it is in the best interest of the juvenile to compel his return to the state. If the judge determines, either with or without a hearing, that the juvenile should be returned, he shall present to the appropriate court or to the executive authority of the state where the juvenile is alleged to be located a written requisition for the return of such juvenile. Such requisition shall set forth the name and age of the juvenile, the determination of the court that the juvenile has run away without the consent of a parent, guardian, person, or agency entitled to his legal custody, and that it is in the best interest and for the protection of such juvenile that he be returned. In the event that a proceeding for the adjudication of the juvenile as a delinquent, neglected, or dependent juvenile is pending in the court at the time when such juvenile runs away, the court may issue a requisition for the return of such juvenile upon its own motion, regardless of the consent of the parent, guardian, person, or agency entitled to legal custody, reciting therein the nature and circumstances of the pending proceeding. The requisition shall in every case be executed in duplicate and shall be signed by the judge. One copy of the requisition shall be filed with the Compact Administrator of the demanding state, there to remain on file subject to the provisions of law governing records of such court. Upon the receipt of a requisition demanding the return of a juvenile who has run away, the court or the executive authority to whom the requisition is addressed shall issue an order to any peace officer or other appropriate person directing him to take into custody and detain such juvenile. Such detention order must substantially recite the facts necessary to the validity of its issuance hereunder. No juvenile detained upon such order shall be delivered over to the officer whom the court demanding him, shall have appointed to receive him, unless he shall first be taken forthwith before a judge of a court in the state, who shall inform him of the demand made for his return, and who may appoint counsel or guardian ad litem for him. If the judge of such court shall find that the requisition is in order, he shall deliver such juvenile over to the officer to whom the court demanding him shall have appointed to receive him. The judge however, may fix a reasonable time to be allowed for the purpose of testing the legality of the proceeding.

Upon reasonable information that a person is a juvenile who has run away from another state party to this Compact without the consent of a parent, guardian, person, or agency entitled to his legal custody, such juvenile may be taken into custody without a requisition and brought forthwith before a judge of the appropriate court who may appoint counsel or guardian ad litem for such juvenile and who shall determine after a hearing whether sufficient cause exists to hold the person, subject to the order of the court, for his own protection and welfare, for such a time not exceeding 90 days as will enable his return to another state party to this Compact pursuant to a requisition for his return from a court of that state. If, at the time when a state seeks the return of a juvenile who has run away, there is pending in the state wherein he is found any criminal charge, or any proceeding to have him adjudicated a delinquent juvenile for an act committed in such state, or if he is suspected of having committed within such state a criminal offense or an act of juvenile delinquency, he shall not be returned without the consent of such state until discharged from prosecution or other form of proceeding, imprisonment, detention or supervision for such offense or juvenile delinquency. The duly accredited officers of any state party to this Compact, upon the establishment of their authority and the identity of the juvenile being returned, shall be permitted to transport such juvenile through any and all states party to this Compact, without interference. Upon his return to the state from which he ran away, the juvenile shall be subject to such further proceedings as may be appropriate under the laws of that state.

(b) That the state to which the juvenile is returned under this Article shall be responsible for payment of the transportation costs of such return.

(c) That "juvenile" as used in this Article means any person who is a minor under the law of the state of residence of the parent, guardian, person, or agency entitled to the legal custody of such minor. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; c. 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-689. Return of escapees and absconders.

(a) That the appropriate person or authority from whose probation or parole supervision a delinquent juvenile has absconded or from whose institutional custody he has escaped shall present to the appropriate court or to the executive authority of the state where the delinquent juvenile is alleged to be located a written requisition for the return of such delinquent juvenile. Such requisition shall state the name and age of the delinquent juvenile, the particulars of his adjudication as a delinquent juvenile, the circumstances of the breach of the terms of his probation or parole or of his escape from an institution or agency vested with his legal custody or supervision, and the location of such delinquent juvenile, if known, at the time the requisition is made. The requisition shall be verified by affidavit, shall be executed in duplicate, and shall be accompanied by two certified copies of the judgment, formal adjudication, or order of commitment which subjects such delinquent juvenile to probation or parole or to the legal custody of the institution or agency concerned. Such further affidavits and documents as may be deemed proper may be submitted with such requisition. One copy of the requisition shall be filed with the Compact Administrator of the demanding state, there to remain on file subject to the provisions of the law governing records of the appropriate court. Upon the receipt of a requisition demanding the return of a delinquent juvenile who has absconded or escaped, the court or the executive authority to whom the requisition is addressed shall issue an order to any peace officer or other appropriate person directing him to take into custody and detain such delinquent juvenile. Such detention order must substantially recite the facts necessary to the validity of its issuance hereunder. No delinquent juvenile detained upon such order shall be delivered over to the officer whom the appropriate person or authority demanding him shall have appointed to receive him, unless he shall first be taken forthwith before a judge of an appropriate court in the state, who shall inform him of the demand made for his return and who may appoint counsel or guardian ad litem for him. If the judge of such court shall find that the requisition is in order, he shall deliver such delinquent juvenile over to the officer whom the appropriate person or authority demanding him shall have appointed to receive him. The judge, however, may fix a reasonable time to be allowed for the purpose of testing the legality of the proceeding.

Upon reasonable information that a person is a delinquent juvenile who has absconded while on probation or parole, or escaped from an institution or agency vested with his legal custody or supervision in any state party to this Compact, such person may be taken into custody in any other state party to this Compact without a requisition. But in such event, he must be taken forthwith before a judge of the appropriate court, who may appoint counsel or guardian ad litem for such person and who shall determine after a hearing, whether sufficient cause exists to hold the person subject to the order of the court for such a time, not exceeding 90 days, as will enable his detention under a detention order issued on a requisition pursuant to this Article. If, at the time when a state seeks the return of a delinquent who has either absconded while on probation or parole or escaped from an institution or agency vested with his legal custody or supervision, there is pending in the state wherein he is detained any criminal charge or any proceeding to have him adjudicated a delinquent juvenile for an act committed in such state, or if he is suspected of having committed within such state a criminal offense or an act of juvenile delinquency, he shall not be returned without the consent of such state until discharged from prosecution or other form of proceeding, imprisonment, detention, or supervision for such offense or juvenile delinquency. The duly accredited officers of any state party to this Compact, upon the establishment of their authority and the identity of the delinquent juvenile being returned, shall be permitted to transport such delinquent juvenile through any and all states party to this Compact, without interference. Upon his return to the state from which he escaped or absconded, the delinquent juvenile shall be subject to such further proceedings as may be appropriate under the laws of that state.

(b) That the state to which a delinquent juvenile is returned under this Article shall be responsible for the payment of transportation costs of such return. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

That any delinquent juvenile who has absconded while on probation or parole, or escaped from an institution or agency vested with his legal custody or supervision in any state party to this Compact, and any juvenile who has run away from any state party to this Compact, who is taken into custody without a requisition in another state party to this Compact under the provisions of G.S. 7A-688(a) or 7A-689(a), may consent to his immediate return to the state from which he absconded, escaped or ran away. Such consent shall be given by the juvenile or delinquent juvenile and his counsel or guardian ad litem, if any, by executing or subscribing a writing in the presence of a judge of the appropriate court, which states that the juvenile or delinquent juvenile and his counsel or guardian ad litem, if any, consent to his return to the demanding state. Before such consent shall be executed or subscribed, however, the judge, in the presence of counsel or guardian ad litem, if any, shall inform the juvenile or delinquent juvenile of his rights under this Compact. When the consent has been duly executed, it shall be forwarded to and filed with the Compact Administrator of the state in which the court is located and the judge shall direct the officer having the juvenile or delinquent juvenile in custody to deliver him to the duly accredited officer or officers [of the state demanding his return, and shall cause to be delivered to such officer or officers] a copy of the consent. The court may, however, upon the request of the state to which the juvenile or delinquent juvenile is being returned, order him to return unaccompanied to such state and shall provide him with a copy of such court order, in such event a copy of the consent shall be forwarded to the Compact Administrator of the state to which said juvenile or delinquent juvenile is ordered to return. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — The words in brackets in the fourth sentence of this section as set out above were included in the Compact as set out in Session Laws 1963, c. 910, s. 1, but omitted, apparently through inadvertence, in the Compact as set out in Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 1.

(a) That the duly constituted judicial and administrative authorities of a state party to this Compact (herein called "sending state") may permit any delinquent juvenile within such state, placed on probation or parole, to reside in any other state party to this Compact (herein called "receiving state") while on probation or parole, and the receiving state shall accept such delinquent juvenile, if the parent, guardian, or person entitled to the legal custody of such delinquent juvenile is residing or undertakes to reside within the receiving state. Before granting such permission, opportunity shall be given to the receiving state to make such investigations as it deems necessary. The authorities of the sending state shall send to the authorities of the receiving state copies of pertinent court orders, social case studies and all other available information which may be of value to and assist the receiving state in supervising a probationer or parolee under this Compact. A receiving state, in its discretion, may agree to accept supervision of a probationer or parolee in cases where the parent, guardian, or person entitled to the legal custody of the delinquent juvenile is not a resident of the receiving state, and if so accepted, the sending state may transfer the supervision accordingly.

(b) That each receiving state will assume the duties of visitation and of supervision over any such delinquent juvenile and in the exercise of those duties will be governed by the same standards of visitation and supervision that prevail for its own delinquent juveniles released on probation or parole.

(c) That, after consultation between the appropriate authorities of the sending state and of the receiving state as to the desirability and necessity of returning such a delinquent juvenile, the duly accredited officers of a sending state may enter a receiving state and there apprehend and retake any such delinquent juvenile on probation or parole. For that purpose, no formalities will be required, other than establishing the authority of the officer and the identity of the delinquent juvenile to be retaken and returned. The decision of the sending state to retake a delinquent juvenile on probation or parole shall be conclusive upon and not reviewable within the receiving state, but if, at the time the sending state seeks to retake a delinquent juvenile on probation or parole, there is pending against him within the receiving state any criminal charge or any proceeding to have him adjudicated a delinquent juvenile for any act committed in such state or if he is suspected of having committed within such state a criminal offense or an act of juvenile delinquency, he shall not be returned without the consent of the receiving state until discharged from prosecution or other form of proceeding, imprisonment, detention, or supervision for such offense or juvenile delinquency. The duly accredited officers of the sending state shall be permitted to transport delinquent juveniles being so returned through any and all states party to this Compact, without interference.

(d) That the sending state shall be responsible under this Article for paying the costs of transporting any delinquent juvenile to the receiving state or of returning any delinquent juvenile to the sending state. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

(a) That the provisions of G.S. 7A-688(b), 7A-689(b), and 7A-609(4) [7A-691(d)] of this Compact shall not be construed to alter or affect any internal relationship among the departments, agencies, and officers of and in the government of a party state, or between a party state and its subdivisions, as to the payment of costs, or responsibilities therefor.

(b) That nothing in this Compact shall be construed to prevent any party state or subdivision thereof from asserting any right against any person, agency, or other entity in regard to costs for which such party state or subdivision thereof may be responsible pursuant to G.S. 7A-688(b), 7A-689(b), or 7A-609(4) [7A-691(d)] of this Compact. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-693. Detention practices.

That, to every extent possible, it shall be the policy of states party to this Compact that no juvenile or delinquent juvenile shall be placed or detained in any prison, jail, or lockup nor be detained or transported in association with criminal, vicious or dissolute persons. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-694. Supplementary agreements.

That the duly constituted administrative authorities of a state party to this Compact may enter into supplementary agreements with any other state or states party hereto for the cooperative care, treatment, and rehabilitation of delinquent juveniles whenever they shall find that such agreements will improve the facilities or programs available for such care, treatment, and rehabilitation. Such care, treatment, and rehabilitation may be provided, in an institution located within any state entering into such supplementary agreement. Such supplementary agreements shall:

(1) Provide the rates to be paid for the care, treatment, and custody of such delinquent juveniles taking into consideration the character of facilities, services, and subsistence furnished;
(2) Provide that the delinquent juvenile shall be given a court hearing prior to his being sent to another state for care, treatment, and custody;
(3) Provide that the state receiving such a delinquent juvenile in one of its institutions shall act solely as agent for the state sending such delinquent juvenile;
(4) Provide that the sending state shall at all times retain jurisdiction over delinquent juveniles sent to an institution in another state;
(5) Provide for reasonable inspection of such institutions by the sending state;
(6) Provide that the consent of the parent, guardian, person, or agency entitled to the legal custody of said delinquent juvenile shall be secured prior to his being sent to another state; and
(7) Make provisions for such other matters and details as shall be necessary to protect the rights and equities of such delinquent juveniles and of the cooperating states. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-695. Acceptance of federal and other aid.

That any state party to this Compact may accept any and all donations, gifts, and grants of money, equipment, and services from the federal or any local government, or any agency thereof and from any person, firm, or corporation, for any of the purposes and functions of this Compact, and may receive and utilize, the same subject to the terms, conditions, and regulations governing such donations, gifts, and grants. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

That the governor of each state party to this Compact shall designate an officer who, acting jointly with like officers of other party states, shall promulgate rules and regulations to carry out more efficiently the terms and provisions of this Compact. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-697. Execution of Compact.

That this Compact shall become operative immediately upon its execution by any state as between it and any other state or states so executing. When executed it shall have the full force and effect of law within such state, the form or (of) execution to be in accordance with the laws of the executing state. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

That this Compact shall continue in force and remain binding upon each executing state until renounced by it. Renunciation of this Compact shall be by the same authority which executed it, by sending six months' notice in writing of its intention to withdraw from the Compact to the other states party hereto. The duties and obligations of a renouncing state under G.S. 7A-691 hereof shall continue as to parolees and probationers residing therein at the time of withdrawal until retaken or finally discharged. Supplementary agreements entered into under G.S. 7A-694 hereof shall be subject to renunciation as provided by such supplementary agreements, and shall not be subject to the six months' renunciation notice of the present section. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

That the provisions of this Compact shall be severable and if any phrase, clause, sentence, or provision of this Compact is declared to be contrary to the constitution of any participating state or of the United States or the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person, or circumstances is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of this Compact and the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person, or circumstances shall not be affected thereby. If this Compact shall be held contrary to the constitution of any state participating therein, the Compact shall remain in full force and effect as to the remaining states and in full force and effect as to the state affected as to all severable matters. (1963, c. 910, s. 1; 1965, c. 925, s. 1; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-700. Authority of Governor to designate Compact Administrator.

Pursuant to said Compact, the Governor is hereby authorized and empowered to designate an officer who shall be the Compact Administrator and who, acting jointly with like officers of other party states, shall promulgate rules and regulations to carry out more effectively the terms of the Compact. Said Compact Administrator shall serve subject to the pleasure of the Governor. The Compact Administrator is hereby authorized, empowered, and directed to cooperate with all departments, agencies, and officers of and in the government of this State and its subdivisions in facilitating the proper administration of the Compact or of any supplementary agreement or agreements entered into by this State hereunder. (1963, c. 910, s. 2; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-701. Authority of Compact Administrator to enter into supplementary agreements.

The Compact Administrator is hereby authorized and empowered to enter into supplementary agreements with appropriate officials of other states pursuant to the Compact. In the event that such supplementary agreement shall require or contemplate the use of any institution or facility of this State or require or contemplate the provision of any serivce by this State, said supplementary agreement shall have no force or effect until approved by the head of the department or agency under whose jurisdiction said institution or facility is operated or whose department or agency will be charged with the rendering of such service. (1963, c. 910, s. 3; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-702. Discharging financial obligations imposed by Compact or agreement.

The Compact Administrator, subject to the approval of the Director of the Budget, may make or arrange for any payments necessary to discharge any financial obligations imposed upon this State by the Compact or by any supplementary agreement entered into thereunder. (1963, c. 910, s. 4; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-703. Enforcement of Compact.

The courts, departments, agencies, and officers of this State and subdivisions shall enforce this Compact and shall do all things appropriate to the effectuation of its purposes and intent which may be within their respective jurisdictions. (1963, c. 910, s. 5; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-704. Additional procedure for returning runaways not precluded.

In addition to any procedure provided in G.S. 7A-688 and 7A-690 of the Compact for the return of any runaway juvenile, the particular states, the juvenile or his parents, the courts, or other legal custodian involved may agree upon and adopt any other plan or procedure legally authorized under the laws of this State and the other respective party states for the return of any such runaway juvenile. (1963, c. 910, s. 6; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

The judge of any court in North Carolina to which an application is made for the return of a runaway under the provisions of G.S. 7A-688 of the Interstate Compact on Juveniles shall hold a hearing thereon to determine whether for the purposes of the Compact the petitioner is entitled to the legal custody of the juvenile, whether or not it appears that the juvenile has in fact run away without consent, whether or not he is an emancipated minor and whether or not it is in the best interest of the juvenile to compel his return to the state. The judge of any court in North Carolina finding that a requisition for the return of a juvenile under the provisions of G.S. 7A-688 of the Compact is in order shall upon request fix a reasonable time to be allowed for the purpose of testing the legality of the proceeding. The period of time for holding a juvenile in custody under the provisions of G.S. 7A-688 of the Compact for his own protection and welfare, subject to the order of a court of this State, to enable his return to another state party to the Compact pursuant to a requisition for his return from a court of that state, shall not exceed 30 days. In applying the provisions of G.S. 7A-688 of the Compact to secure the return of a runaway from North Carolina, the courts of this State shall construe the word "juvenile" as used in this Article to mean any person who has not reached his or her eighteenth birthday. (1965, c. 925, s. 2; 1971, c. 1231, s. 2; 1977, c. 552; 1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-706. Interstate parole and probation hearing procedures for juveniles.

Where supervision of a parolee or probationer is being administered pursuant to the Interstate Compact on Juveniles, the appropriate judicial or administrative authorities in this State shall notify the Compact Administrator of the sending state whenever, in their view, consideration should be given to retaking or reincarceration for a parole or a probation violation. Prior to the giving of any such notification, a hearing shall be held in accordance with this Article within a reasonable time, unless such hearing is waived by the parolee or probationer. The appropriate officer or officers of this State shall as soon as practicable, following termination of any such hearing, report to the sending state, furnish a copy of the hearing record, and make recommendations regarding the disposition to be made of the parolee or probationer by the sending state. Pending any proceeding pursuant to this section, the appropriate officers of this State may take custody of and detain the parolee or probationer involved for a period not to exceed 10 days prior to the hearing and, if it appears to the hearing officer or officers that retaking or reincarceration is likely to follow, for such reasonable period after the hearing or waiver as may be necessary to arrange for retaking or the reincarceration. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Any hearing pursuant to this Article may be before the Administrator of the Interstate Compact on Juveniles, a deputy of such Administrator, or any other person authorized pursuant to the juvenile laws of this State to hear cases of alleged juvenile parole or probation violations, except that no hearing officer shall be the person making the allegation of violation. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-708. Due process at parole or probation violation hearing.

With respect to any hearing pursuant to this Article, the parolee or probationer:

(1) Shall have reasonable notice in writing of the nature and content of the allegations to be made, including notice that the purpose of the hearing is to determine whether there is probable cause to believe that he has committed a violation that may lead to a revocation of parole or probation;

(2) Shall be permitted to advise with any persons whose assistance he reasonably desires, prior to the hearing;

(3) Shall have the right to confront and examine any persons who have made allegations against him, unless the hearing officer determines that such confrontation would present a substantial present or subsequent danger of harm to such person or persons;

(4) May admit, deny, or explain the violation alleged and may present proof, including affidavits and other evidence, in support of his contentions.

A record of the proceedings shall be made and preserved. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-709. Effect of parole or probation violation hearing outside State.

In any case of alleged parole or probation violation by a person being supervised in another state pursuant to the Interstate Compact on Juveniles, any appropriate judicial or administrative officer or agency in another state is authorized to hold a hearing on the alleged violation. Upon receipt of the record of a parole or probation violation hearing held in another state pursuant to a statute substantially similar to this Article, such record shall have the same standing and effect as though the proceeding of which it is a record was had before the appropriate officer or officers in this State, and any recommendations contained in or accompanying the record shall be fully considered by the appropriate officer or officers of this State in making disposition of the matter. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-710. Amendment to Interstate Compact on Juveniles concerning interstate rendition of juveniles alleged to be delinquent.

(a) This amendment shall provide additional remedies, and shall be binding only as among and between those party states which specifically execute the same.

(b) All provisions and procedures of G.S. 7A-689 and 7A-690 of the Interstate Compact on Juveniles shall be construed to apply to any juvenile charged with being a delinquent by reason of a violation of any criminal law. Any juvenile, charged with being a delinquent by reason of violating any criminal law, shall be returned to the requesting state upon a requisition to the state where the juvenile may be found. A petition in such case shall be filed in a court of competent jurisdiction in the requesting state where the violation of criminal law is alleged to have been committed. The petition may be filed regardless of whether the juvenile has left the state before or after the filing of the petition. The requisition described in G.S. 7A-689 of the Compact shall be forwarded by the judge of the court in which the petition has been filed. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-711. Out-of-State Confinement Amendment.

(a) The Out-of-State Confinement Amendment to the Interstate Compact on Juveniles is hereby enacted into law and entered into by this State with all other states legally joining therein in the form substantially as follows:

(1) Whenever the fully constituted judicial or administrative authorities in a sending state shall determine that confinement of a probationer or reconfinement of a parolee is necessary or desirable, said officials may direct that the confinement or reconfinement be in an appropriate institution for delinquent juveniles within the territory of the receiving state, such receiving state to act in that regard solely as agent for the sending state.

(2) Escapees and absconders who would otherwise be returned pursuant to G.S. 7A-689 of the Compact may be confined or reconfined in the receiving state pursuant to this amendment. In any such case the information and allegations required to be made and furnished in a requisition pursuant to G.S. 7A-689, the sending state shall request confinement or reconfinement in the receiving state. Whenever applicable, detention orders as provided in G.S. 7A-689 may be employed pursuant to this paragraph preliminary to disposition of the escapee or absconder.

(3) The confinement or reconfinement of a parolee, probationer, escapee, or absconder pursuant to this amendment shall require the concurrence of the appropriate judicial or administrative authorities of the receiving state.

(4) As used in this amendment: (i) "sending state" means sending state as that term is used in G.S. 7A-691 of the Compact or the state from which a delinquent juvenile has escaped or absconded within the meaning of G.S. 7A-689 of the Compact; (ii) "receiving state" means any state, other than the sending state, in which a parolee, probationer, escapee, or absconder may be found, provided that said state is a party to this amendment.

(5) Every state which adopts this amendment shall designate at least one of its institutions for delinquent juveniles as a "Compact Institution" and shall confine persons therein as provided in Paragraph (1) hereof unless the sending and receiving state in question shall make specific contractual arrangements to the contrary. All states party to this amendment shall have access to "Compact Institutions" at all reasonable hours for the purpose of inspecting the facilities thereof and for the purpose of visiting such of said State's delinquents as may be confined in the institution.

(6) Persons confined in "Compact Institutions" pursuant to the terms of this Compact shall at all times be subject to the jurisdiction of the sending state and may at any time be removed from said "Compact Institution" for transfer to an appropriate institution within the sending state, for return to probation or parole, for discharge, or for any purpose permitted by the laws of the sending state.

(7) All persons who may be confined in a "Compact Institution" pursuant to the provisions of this amendment shall be treated in a reasonable and humane manner. The fact of confinement or reconfinement in a receiving state shall not deprive any person so confined or reconfined of any rights which said person would have had if confined or reconfined in an appropriate institution of the sending state; nor shall any agreement to submit to confinement or reconfinement pursuant to the terms of this amendment be construed as a waiver of any rights which the delinquent would have had if he had been confined or reconfined in any appropriate institution of the sending state except that the hearing or hearings, if any, to which a parolee, probationer, escapee, or absconder may be entitled (prior to confinement or reconfinement) by the laws of the sending state may be had before the appropriate judicial or administrative officers of the receiving state. In this event, said judicial and administrative officers shall act as agents of the sending state after consultation with appropriate officers of the sending state.

(8) Any receiving state incurring costs or other expenses under this amendment shall be reimbursed in the amount of such costs or other expenses by the sending state unless the states concerned shall specifically otherwise agree. Any two or more states party to this amendment may enter into supplementary agreements determining a different allocation of costs as among themselves.

(9) This amendment shall take initial effect when entered into by any two or more states party to the Compact and shall be effective as to those states which have specifically enacted this amendment. Rules and regulations necessary to effectuate the terms of this amendment may be promulgated by the appropriate officers of those states which have enacted this amendment.

(b) In addition to any institution in which the authorities of this State may otherwise confine or order the confinement of a delinquent juvenile, such authorities may, pursuant to the Out-of-State Confinement Amendment to the Interstate Compact on Juveniles, confine or order the confinement of a delinquent juvenile in a Compact Institution within another party state. Article 56.

Emancipation.

§ 7A-717. Who may petition.

Any juvenile who is 16 years of age or older and who has resided in the same county in North Carolina or on federal territory within the boundaries of North Carolina for six months next preceding the filing of the petition may petition the court in that county for a judicial decree of emancipation. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 4, contains a severability clause.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

§ 7A-718. Petition.

The petition shall be signed and verified by the petitioner and shall contain the following information:

(1) The full name of the petitioner, his birth date, and state and county of birth;
(2) A certified copy of the petitioner's birth certificate;
(3) The name and last known address of the parent, guardian, or custodian;
(4) The petitioner's address and length of residence at that address;
(5) The petitioner's reasons for requesting emancipation; and
(6) The petitioner's plan for meeting his own needs and living expenses which plan may include a statement of employment and wages earned that is verified by his employer. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-719. Summons.

A copy of the filed petition along with a summons shall be served upon the petitioner's parent, guardian, or custodian who shall be named as respondents. The summons shall include the time and place of the hearing and shall notify the respondents to file written answer within 30 days after service of the summons and petition. In the event that personal service cannot be obtained, service shall be in accordance with G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4(j). (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-720. Hearing.

The judge, sitting without a jury, shall permit all parties to present evidence and to cross-examine witnesses. The petitioner shall have the burden of showing by a preponderance of the evidence that emancipation is in his best interest. Upon finding that reasonable cause exists, the judge may order the juvenile to be examined by a psychiatrist, a licensed clinical psychologist, a physician, or any other expert to evaluate the juvenile's mental or physical condition. The judge may continue the hearing and order investigation by a court counselor or by the county Department of Social Services to substantiate allegations of the petitioner or respondents.

No husband-wife or physician-patient privilege shall be grounds for excluding any evidence in the hearing. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

§ 7A-721. Considerations for emancipation.

In determining the best interest of the petitioner and the need for emancipation, the judge shall review the following considerations:

(1) The parental need for the earnings of the petitioner;
(2) The petitioner's ability to function as an adult;
(3) The petitioner's need to contract as an adult or to marry;
(4) The employment status of the petitioner and the stability of his living arrangements;
(5) The extent of family discord which may threaten reconciliation of the petitioner with his family;
(6) The petitioner's rejection of parental supervision or support; and
(7) The quality of parental supervision or support. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

§ 7A-722. Final decree of emancipation.

After reviewing the considerations for emancipation, the judge may enter a decree of emancipation if he determines:

(1) That all parties are properly before the court or were duly served and failed to appear and that time for filing an answer has expired; and

(2) That the petitioner has shown a proper and lawful plan for adequately providing for his own needs and living expenses; and

(3) That the petitioner is knowingly seeking emancipation and fully understands the ramifications of his act; and

(4) That emancipation is in the best interest of the petitioner.

The decree shall set out the court's findings.

If the judge determines that the criteria in subdivisions (1) through (4) are not met, he shall order the proceeding dismissed. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-723. Costs of court.

The judge may tax the costs of the proceeding to any party or may, for good cause, order the costs remitted.

The clerk of superior court may collect costs for furnishing to the petitioner a certificate of emancipation which shall recite the name of the petitioner and the fact of the petitioner's emancipation by court decree and shall have the seal of the clerk of superior court affixed thereon. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-724. Legal effect of final decree.

As of entry of the final decree of emancipation:

(1) The petitioner has the same right to make contracts and conveyances, to sue and to be sued, and to transact business as if he were an adult.

(2) The parent or guardian is relieved of all legal duties and obligations owed to the petitioner and is divested of all rights with respect to the petitioner.

(3) The decree is irrevocable.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, a decree of emancipation shall not alter the application of G.S. 14-322.2, 14-326.1, or the petitioner's right to inherit property by intestate succession. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Section 14-322.2, referred to in this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1979, c. 838, s. 28.

Legal Periodicals. — For survey of 1979 family law, see 58 N.C.L. Rev. 1471 (1980).

§ 7A-725. Appeals.

Any petitioner, parent, or guardian who is a party to a proceeding under this Article may appeal from any order of disposition to the Court of Appeals provided that notice of appeal is given in open court at the time of the hearing or in writing within 10 days after the hearing. Pending disposition of an appeal, the judge may enter a temporary order affecting the custody or placement of the petitioner as he finds to be in the best interest of the petitioner or the State. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

§ 7A-726. Application of common law.

A married juvenile is emancipated by this Article. All other common law provisions for emancipation are superseded by this Article. (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Article 57.

Judicial Consent for Emergency Surgical or Medical Treatment.

§ 7A-732. Judicial authorization of emergency treatment; procedure.

A juvenile in need of emergency treatment under Article 1A of Chapter 90 of the North Carolina General Statutes, whose physician is barred from rendering necessary treatment by reason of parental refusal to consent to treatment, may receive such treatment with court authorization under the following procedure:

(1) The physician shall sign a written statement setting out:
   a. The treatment to be rendered and the emergency need for treatment; and
   b. The refusal of the parent, guardian, or person standing in loco parentis to consent to the treatment; and
   c. The impossibility of contacting a second physician for a concurring opinion on the need for treatment in time to prevent immediate harm to the juvenile.

(2) Upon examining the physician's written statement prescribed in subsection (1) and finding:
   a. That the statement is in accordance with this Article, and
   b. That the proposed treatment is necessary to prevent immediate harm to the juvenile.

A judge may issue a written authorization for the proposed treatment to be rendered.

(3) In acute emergencies in which time may not permit implementation of the written procedure set out in subsections (1) and (2), a judge may, in his discretion, authorize treatment in person or by telephone upon receiving the oral statement of a physician satisfying the requirements of subsection (1) and upon finding that the proposed treatment is necessary to prevent immediate harm to the juvenile.

(4) A judge's authorization for treatment overriding parental refusal to consent should not be given without attempting to offer the parent an opportunity to state his reasons for refusal; however, failure of the judge to hear the parent's objections shall not invalidate judicial authorization under this Article.

(5) A judge's authorization for treatment under subsections (1) and (2) shall be issued in duplicate. One copy shall be given to the treating physician and the other copy shall be attached to the physician's written statement and filed as a juvenile proceeding in the office of the clerk of superior court.

(6) A judge's authorization for treatment under subsection (3) shall be reduced to writing as soon as possible, supported by the physician's written statement as prescribed in subsection (1) and shall be filed as prescribed in subsection (5).

A judge's authorization for treatment under this Article, shall have the same effect as parental consent for treatment.

Following a judge's authorization for treatment and after giving notice to the juvenile's parent, the judge shall conduct a hearing in order to provide for payment for the treatment rendered. The judge may order the parent or other responsible parties to pay the cost of such treatment. If the judge finds the parent is unable to pay the cost of treatment, such cost shall be a charge upon the county when so ordered.

This Article shall operate as a remedy in addition to the provisions in G.S. 7A-647(3). (1979, c. 815, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 5, makes the act effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 4, contains a severability clause.

Statutes.

§ 8-1. Printed statutes and certified copies evidence.

All statutes, or joint resolutions, passed by the General Assembly may be read in evidence from the printed statute book; or a copy of any act of the General Assembly certified by the Secretary of State shall be received in evidence in every court. (1826, c. 7; R. C., c. 44, ss. 4, 5; Code, ss. 1339, 1340; Rev., ss. 1592, 1593; C. S., s. 1747.)

Legal Periodicals. — For case law survey on evidence, see 41 N.C.L. Rev. 476 (1963); 44 N.C.L. Rev. 1005 (1966); 45 N.C.L. Rev. 934 (1967).

For article entitled, "Toward a Codification of the Law of Evidence in North Carolina," see 16 Wake Forest L. Rev. 669 (1980).

CASE NOTES

Public Statute Admissible. — Where the public printer has published a certain act with other public acts of the General Assembly, it is made, presumptively at least, a part of the public laws of the State and every person having occasion to do so has the right to read it in evidence in any court of the State as the law. Wrought Iron Range Co. v. Carver, 118 N.C. 328, 24 S.E. 352 (1896).

Private Statute Not Admissible. — The statute incorporating the North Carolina Railroad Company is a private act; and it is error to permit it to be read and commented on to the court or jury until it has been properly introduced as evidence. Town of Durham v. Richmond & D.R.R., 108 N.C. 399, 12 S.E. 1040, 13 S.E. 1 (1891).

Same — Question of Law. — Whether the statute, or some enactment in it, is public or private, is a question of law, which the court must determine, in the absence of statutory enactment declaring and settling its nature. Town of Durham v. Richmond & D.R.R., 108 N.C. 399, 12 S.E. 1040, 13 S.E. 1 (1891).

Journal of Legislature. — A copy of the journal of the legislature deposited with the Secretary of State is not evidence for any purpose. Wilson v. Markley, 133 N.C. 616, 45 S.E. 1023 (1903), wherein the court said: "It is the journal, which we understand to be the original, which is to be filed in the office of the Secretary of State, and it is this original or an exemplification made therefrom by him which, when competent, is to be used in evidence."

Applied in C.C.T. Equip. Co. v. Hertz Corp., 256 N.C. 277, 123 S.E.2d 802 (1962).

§ 8-2. Martin's collection of private acts.

Any private act published by Francis X. Martin, in his collection of private acts, shall be received in evidence in every court. (1826, c. 7, s. 2; R. C., c. 44, s. 5; Code, s. 1340; Rev., s. 1593; C. S., s. 1748.)

§ 8-3. Laws of other states or foreign countries.

(a) A printed copy of a statute, or other written law, of another state, or of a territory, or of a foreign country, or a printed copy of a proclamation, edict, decree or ordinance, by the executive thereof, contained in a book or publication purporting or proved to have been published by the authority thereof, or proved to be commonly admitted as evidence of the existing law, in the judicial tribunals thereof, shall be evidence of the statute law, proclamation, edict, decree, or ordinance. The unwritten or common law of another state, or of a territory, or of a foreign country, may be proved as a fact by oral evidence. The books of the reports of cases, adjudged in the courts thereof, shall also be admitted as evidence of the unwritten or common law thereof.

(b) Any party may exhibit a copy of the law of another state, territory, or foreign country copied from a printed volume of the laws of such state, territory, or country on file in

(1) The offices of the Governor or the Secretary of State, and duly certified by the Secretary of State, or

(2) The State Library and certified as provided in G.S. 125-6, or

(3) The Supreme Court Library and certified as provided in G.S. 7A-13 (f).

(1823, c. 1193, ss. 1, 3, P. R.; R. C., c. 44, s. 3; C. C. P., s. 360; Code, s. 1338; Rev., s. 1594; C. S., s. 1749; 1967, c. 565.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited in this annotation were decided prior to the enactment of § 8-4.

Prior to the enactment of § 8-4, when any question arose as to the law of any other state or territory, or of the United States, or of any foreign country, the parties were required to prove such law. Gooch v. Faucett, 122 N.C. 270, 29 S.E. 362 (1898); Miller v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 154 N.C. 441, 70 S.E. 838 (1911); Kelly Springfield Tire Co. v. Lester, 192 N.C. 642, 135 S.E. 728 (1926).

Presumption as Regards Common Law. — In the absence of proof to the contrary, the common law will generally be presumed to be in force in a sister state, except in those states whose jurisprudence is not founded on the common law. Miller v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 154 N.C. 441, 70 S.E. 838 (1911).

Same — Question for Jury. — Where the common law of another state is proved, the court must leave the evidence of what that law is to the jury and cannot inform them what the law is. Moore v. Gwynn, 27 N.C. 187 (1844).

Certificate of Secretary of State as Evidence. — The certificate of the Secretary of State, in relation to the statutes of another state, given in pursuance of this section is evidence in criminal and civil cases. State v. Patterson, 24 N.C. 346 (1842).

A transcript of a statute duly certified by the Secretary of State is evidence at all times of its being in force according to its terms unless a repeal is shown. State v. Cheek, 35 N.C. 114 (1851).

Publication of Foreign Laws Admissible. — A book purporting to be the publication of the statute laws of another state, and to be published by the authority of such state, is admissible as evidence of such laws. Copeland v. Collins, 122 N.C. 619, 30 S.E. 315 (1898).

Same — Printed Copy Admissible. — By the terms of this section, a printed copy of the acts of the legislature of another state, is admissible in the courts of this State to prove the statute law of such other state. Under the law as it stood prior to the enactment of this section, a printed copy of the acts of the legislature of a foreign state was not admissible in evidence. State v. Behrman, 114 N.C. 797, 19 S.E. 220 (1894).

United States Agricultural Regulations Judicially Noticed. — The regulations of the United States Department of Agriculture concerning the transportation of cattle are not foreign laws within the meaning of this section, and the courts are required to take judicial notice of them. State v. Railroad, 141 N.C. 846, 54 S.E. 294 (1906).

Witnesses. — Any person who claims to know the provisions of the common or unwritten laws of a foreign country may, under this section, testify to and explain them before courts and juries. State v. Behrman, 114 N.C. 797, 19 S.E. 220 (1894).

The law of another state may be proven in transitory actions brought in the courts of this State by witnesses learned in the law of such other state, and by its authorized statutes and reports of decisions of its courts of last resort, and when properly offered in evidence they must be interpreted by our courts as matters of law. Howard v. Howard, 200 N.C. 574, 158 S.E. 101 (1931).

Necessity of Instructions to Jury. — Where the foreign law has been proved it is the duty of the court to instruct the jury as to the meaning of the law, its applicability to the case at hand, and its effect on the case, and it is error to refer the whole case to the jury without instructions. Hooper v. Moore, 50 N.C. 130 (1857).

§ 8-4. Judicial notice of laws of United States, other states and foreign countries.

When any question shall arise as to the law of the United States, or of any other state or territory of the United States, or of the District of Columbia, or of any foreign country, the court shall take notice of such law in the same manner as if the question arose under the law of this State. (1931, c. 30.)

CASE NOTES

Survival of Action under Law of Another State. — In an action to recover for the alleged tortious conversion of personalty by a nonresident, instituted in this State after the death of the nonresident, against his personal representative, the failure of the complaint to allege that the cause of action survived under the laws of the state in which it arose does not render the complaint demurrable. Suskin v. Hodges, 216 N.C. 333, 4 S.E.2d 891 (1939).

Negligent Injury Occurring in Another State. — In an action instituted in this State to recover for negligent injury occurring in another state, liability must be determined according to the substantive law of such other state, of which the North Carolina courts must take notice. Thames v. Nello L. Teer Co., 267 N.C. 565, 148 S.E.2d 527 (1966).

Collision in Virginia. — In an action brought in this State under the Tort Claims Act for a collision which occurred in Virginia, the substantive law of Virginia and the procedural law of North Carolina apply. Parsons v. Alleghany County Bd. of Educ., 4 N.C. App. 36, 165 S.E.2d 776 (1969).

Applied in Suskin v. Hodges, 216 N.C. 333, 4 S.E.2d 891 (1939); Charnock v. Taylor, 223 N.C. 360, 26 S.E.2d 911, 148 A.L.R. 1126 (1943); Lewis v. Furr, 228 N.C. 89, 44 S.E.2d 604 (1947); Caldwell v. § 8-5. Town ordinances certified.

In a trial in which the offense charged is the violation of a town ordinance, a copy of the ordinance alleged to have been violated, proven as provided in G.S. 160A-79, shall be prima facie evidence of the existence of such ordinance. (1899, c. 277, s. 2; Rev., s. 1595; C.S., s. 1750; 1971, c. 381, s. 3; 1973, c. 1446, s. 17.)

CASE NOTES

When Certification Unnecessary. — The certification of a town ordinance as required by this section, was only prima facie evidence of its existence, and this was unnecessary when the ordinance had been proven by the production of the official records of the town by the proper officer, which showed its passage. State v. Razook, 179 N.C. 708, 103 S.E. 67 (1929).

Evidence Insufficient to Rebut Prima Facie Case. — When the defendant, convicted of the violation of a city ordinance, on appeal introduced in evidence the minutes of the meeting of the governing authorities of the town held on the date when the purported ordinance was alleged to have been adopted, which did not show its passage on that date, it was not conclusive that the ordinance had not been passed at some other time, against the statutory certificate of the mayor that it was in existence at the time of the defendant's conviction. State v. Gill, 195 N.C. 425, 142 S.E. 328 (1928).

No Evidence of Certification or Publication. — The refusal to permit police officer to testify on cross-examination as to existence and contents of a paper-writing which purported to be an ordinance of the city, was not error where there was no evidence that purported ordinance had been certified, as required by this section, or that it had been printed and published by the city as provided in § 160-272 (now repealed). Toler v. Savage, 226 N.C. 208, 37 S.E.2d 485 (1946).

ARTICLE 2.

Grants, Deeds and Wills.

§ 8-6. Copies certified by Secretary of State or State Archivist.

Copies of the plats and certificates of survey, or their accompanying warrants, and all abstracts of grants, which may be filed in the office of the Secretary of State, or in the Department of Cultural Resources, which copies, upon certification by the Secretary of State as to those records in his office, or the State Archivist as to those records in the Department of Cultural Resources, as true copies, shall be as good evidence, in any court, as the original. (1822, c. 1154, P. R.; R. C., c. 44, s. 6; Code, s. 1341; Rev., s. 1596; C. S., s. 1751; 1961, c. 740, s. 1; 1973, c. 476, s. 48.)

Cross References. — As to certification by clerk of Secretary of State, see § 8-9.

CASE NOTES

Material Discrepancy from Original. — This section does not make the copies better evidence than the original; and where there is a material discrepancy, it is for the jury to find as a fact which one is correct. Richards v. W.M. Ritter Lumber Co., 158 N.C. 54, 73 S.E. 485 (1911), modified on other grounds, 159 N.C. 455, 74 S.E. 1016 (1912).

Certified Abstract Competent to Show Title. — Abstracts of grants in the usual form, duly certified as correct copies by the Secretary of State and recorded in the office of the register of deeds, are competent to show title out of the state. Marshall v. Corbett, 137 N.C. 555, 50 S.E. 210 (1905).

Applied in Meekins v. Miller, 245 N.C. 567, 96 S.E.2d 715 (1957).

§ 8-7. Certified copies of grants and abstracts.

For the purpose of showing title from the State of North Carolina to the grantee or grantees therein named and for the lands therein described, duly certified copies of all grants and of all memoranda and abstracts of grants on record in the office of the Secretary of State, or in the Department of Cultural Resources, given in abstract or in full, and with or without the signature of the Governor and the great seal of the State appearing upon such record, shall be competent evidence in the courts of this State or of the United States or of any territory of the United States, and in the absence of the production of the original grant shall be conclusive evidence of a grant from the State to the grantee or grantees named and for the lands described therein. (1915, c. 249, s. 1; C. S., s. 1752; 1961, c. 740, s. 2; 1973, c. 476, s. 48.)

CASE NOTES

Section Constitutional. — This section is constitutional and valid. Howell v. Hurley, 170 N.C. 401, 87 S.E. 107 (1915).

Copy Conclusive as to Regularity of Original. — An abstract of a grant of the State's land by the Secretary of State imports the regularity of its issuance, and that the constitutional mandate of affixing the seal of the original had been legally complied with, though the abstract gives no indication thereof, the regularity of the official conduct in granting the original being presumed; and the abstract may be introduced as competent evidence on the trial of an action involving the title to the lands described in the grant, by one claiming under it. Howell v. Hurley, 170 N.C. 401, 87 S.E. 107 (1915).

§ 8-8. Certified copies of grants and abstracts recorded.

Duly certified copies of such grants and of such memoranda and abstracts of grants may be recorded in the county where the lands therein described are situated, and the records thereof in such counties, or certified copies thereof, shall likewise be competent evidence for the purpose of showing title from the State of North Carolina to the grantee or grantees named and for the lands described therein. (1915, c. 249, s. 2; C. S., s. 1753.)

Cross References. — As to registration of certified copies of any deeds or writings, and their use in evidence, see § 47-31.

§ 8-9. Copies of grants certified by clerk of Secretary of State validated.

All copies of grants heretofore issued from the office of the Secretary of State, duly certified under the great seal of the State, and to which the name of the Secretary has been written or affixed by the clerk of the said Secretary of State, are hereby ratified and approved and declared to be good and valid copies of the original grants and admissible in evidence in all courts of this State when duly registered in the counties in which the land lies; all such copies heretofore registered in said counties are hereby declared to be lawful and regular in all respects as if the same had been signed by the Secretary of State in person and duly registered. (1901, c. 613; Rev., s. 1597; C. S., s. 1754.)

Editor's Note. — Prior to the enactment of this section it was consistently held that the clerk of the Secretary of State had no power to certify and affix the great seal of the State to copies of grants and other papers from the Secretary of State's office. Beam v. Jennings, 96 N.C. 82, 2 S.E. 245 (1887), but such acts on the part of the clerk are now validated by the provisions of this section.

Cross References. — As to copies of destroyed record as evidence generally, see § 98-1 et seq.

§ 8-10. Copies of grants in Burke.

Copies of grants issued by the State within the County of Burke prior to the destruction of the records of said county by General Stoneman in the year 1865, shall be admitted in evidence in all actions when the same are duly registered; and when the original grants are lost, destroyed or cannot be found after due search, it shall be presumed that the same were duly registered within the time prescribed by law, as provided upon the face of original grant. (1901, c. 513; Rev., s. 1610; C. S., s. 1755.)

§ 8-11. Copies of grants in Moore.

Copies of grants for land situated in Moore County and the counties of which Moore was a part, entered in a book, and the book being certified under the seal of the Secretary of State, shall have the force and effect of the originals and be evidence in all courts. (1903, c. 214; Rev., s. 1613; C. S., s. 1756.)

§ 8-12. Copies of grants in Onslow.

The copies of grants made by the register of deeds of Onslow County under laws of 1907, chapter 434, of grants, abstracts of grants, and other documents pertaining to titles of land in Onslow County issued prior to the year 1800, and contained in a book called Book of Transcribed Grants Issued Prior to One Thousand Eight Hundred, duly authenticated as prescribed in said Chapter 434 of the laws of 1907, shall be received as evidence in all courts of the State, and certified copies therefrom shall be received as evidence. (1907, c. 434; C.S., s. 1757.)

§ 8-13. Certain deeds dated before 1835 evidence of due execution.

In all actions hereafter instituted in which the title or ownership of any lands situated in North Carolina is at issue or in dispute, any deed or release, or a duly certified copy thereof, in which the people of the State of North Carolina are grantees and bearing date prior to the year 1835 and purporting to have been filed and recorded in the office of the Secretary of State of North Carolina prior to said year and now on file and of record in said office, and executed or purporting to have been executed by any person or persons as the representatives or agents or for or on behalf of any society, tribe, nation or aggregation of persons, whether signed or executed individually or in their representative capacity, and any such deed or release having been authorized to be executed by an act of the General Assembly of North Carolina by the properly authorized agents of such society, tribe, nation or aggregation of persons, shall be prima facie evidence that the person or persons signing or executing any such deed or release were the properly authorized agent or agents of such society, tribe, nation or aggregation of persons. Any recitals or statements of fact in any such deed or release shall be prima facie evidence of the truth thereof in any such actions. (1915, c. 75; C. S., s. 1758.)

§ 8-14. Certified copies of maps of Cherokee lands.

Certified copies by the Secretary of State of the copies, or parts thereof, of the maps of the Cherokee lands and of the Cherokee Country, as provided for and described in Chapter 175 of the laws of 1911, shall have the same force and effect and be entitled to the same force and effect as evidence as certified copies of the whole or parts of the original maps. (1911, c. 175; C. S., s. 1759.)

§ 8-15. Certified copies of certain surveys and maps obtained from the State of Tennessee.

A certified copy of the report of the survey made by the North Carolina commissioners, McDowell, Vance and Matthews, of that portion of the State of Tennessee extending from a point on the Virginia line to a point on the Smoky Mountain west of the Pigeon River, as obtained and filed by the Secretary of State under the provisions of Chapter 162 of the laws of 1913, shall, when certified under the hand and seal of the Secretary of State, be competent evidence in the trial of any action in the courts of the State. (1913, c. 162; C. S., s. 1760.)

§ 8-16. Evidence of title under H.E. McCulloch grants.

In all actions or suits, wherein it may be necessary for either party to prove title, by virtue of a grant or grants made by the king of Great Britain or Earl Granville to Henry McCulloch, or Henry Eustace McCulloch, it shall be sufficient for such party, in the usual manner, to give evidence of the grant or conveyance from the king of Great Britain or Earl Granville to the said Henry McCulloch, or Henry Eustace McCulloch, and the mesne conveyances thereafter, without giving any evidence of the deed or deeds of release, relinquishment or confirmation of Earl Granville to the said Henry McCulloch, or Henry Eustace McCulloch, or the power or powers of attorney by which the conveyances from the said Henry McCulloch, or Henry Eustace McCulloch, purport to have been made. (1819, c. 1021, P. R.; R. C., c. 44, s. 1; Code, s. 1336; Rev., s. 1600; C. S., s. 1761.)

§ 8-17. Conveyances or certified copies evidence of title under McCulloch.

In all trials where the title of either plaintiff or defendant shall be derived from Henry Eustace McCulloch, or Henry McCulloch, out of their tracts numbers one and three, it shall not be required of such party to produce, in support of his title, either the original grant from the crown to the proprietors, or a registered copy thereof; but in all such cases the grant or deed executed by such reputed proprietors, or by his or their lawful attorney, or a certified copy thereof, shall be deemed and held sufficient proof of the title of such proprietors, in the same manner as though the original grants were produced in evidence. (1807, c. 724, P. R.; R. C., c. 44, s. 2; Code, s. 1337; Rev., s. 1601; C. S., s. 1762.)

§ 8-18. Certified copies of registered instruments evidence.

A copy of the record of any deed, mortgage, power of attorney, or other instrument required or allowed to be registered, duly authenticated by the certificate and official seal of the register of deeds of the county where the original or duly certified copy has been registered, may be given in evidence in any of the courts of the State where the original of such copy would be admitted as evidence, although the party offering the same shall be entitled to the possession of the original, and shall not account for the nonproduction thereof, unless by a rule or order of the court, made upon affidavit suggesting some material variance from the original in such registry or other sufficient grounds, such party shall have been previously required to produce the original, in which case the same shall be produced or its absence duly accounted for according to the course and practice of the court. (1846, c. 68, s. 1; R. C., c. 37, s. 16; Code, s. 1251; 1893, c. 119, s. 2; Rev., s. 1598; C. S., s. 1763.)

CASE NOTES

This section is not applicable when the original instrument is offered in evidence with the certificate of the register of deeds appearing thereon with respect to the time filed for registration and the book and page where it has been registered and the date of such registration. State v. Dunn, 264 N.C. 391, 141 S.E.2d 630 (1965).

Signature of Clerk Essential. — The failure of the clerk to sign his name to the certificate for registration, a requirement found in the provisions of § 47-14, renders the instrument inadmissible as evidence under this section. Woodlieff v. Woodlieff, 192 N.C. 634, 135 S.E. 612 (1926).

Certified Copy as Evidence. — The record of a registered deed is competent evidence without producing the original where no rule of court for the production of the original has been issued. Ratliff v. Ratliff, 131 N.C. 425, 42 S.E. 887 (1902).

Copy of Registered Bond. — The "registry" or copy of the record of a bond to make title to land made by a deceased person, under which a deed has been made by the administrator of said obligor, is within the spirit and meaning of this section, and is admissible without accounting for the absence of the original. Doe v. Shelton, 46 N.C. 370 (1854).

Same — Official Bond. — Inasmuch as the duly certified copy of the record of any instrument required to be registered is admissible as full and sufficient evidence of such instrument, and as the register of deeds is required to register and keep the bond of the superior court clerk, a duly certified copy of the record of such bond is competent evidence of its provisions. State ex rel. Battle v. Baird, 118 N.C. 854, 24 S.E. 668 (1896).

Lack of Seal No Effect. — A copy of a grant from the register's office, which affirmatively shows that it was issued under the great seal of the State, is admissible in evidence, though the registry does not show the impress of the seal, or scroll to indicate it. And while the seal may be necessary to authenticate the grant, it will be presumed to have been affixed as required by law. Aycock v. Raleigh & A. Air-Line R.R., 89 N.C. 321 (1883).

Production of Original to Correct Mistakes. — The original deed may be shown in evidence to correct an omission by the register of deeds of the signature of the justice of the peace before whom the deed was acknowledged. Brown v. Hutchinson, 155 N.C. 205, 71 S.E. 302 (1911).

Parol Evidence to Explain Variance. — Where the original deed was lost, and it was contended that there was a material variance between the certified copy and the original deed, parol evidence to prove the correct description contained in the original instrument was rejected, this section being construed as to have no application to such a case. Hooper v. Justice, 111 N.C. 418, 16 S.E. 626 (1892).

Time and Manner of Objecting. — A party against whom the registry of a deed (or other instrument), or a copy thereof has been introduced in evidence, cannot then raise the objection that there is a variance between such registry, or copy, and the original instrument; if he desired to avail himself of such objection he should have required the production of the original in the way provided by this section. Devereux v. McMahon, 108 N.C. 134, 12 S.E. 902 (1891).

Cited in Merchants & Farmers Bank v. Sherrill, 231 N.C. 731, 58 S.E.2d 741 (1950); Hi-Fort, Inc. v. Burnette, 42 N.C. App. 428, 257 S.E.2d 85 (1979).

§ 8-19. Common survey of contiguous tracts evidence.

Whenever any person owns several tracts of land which are contiguous or adjoining, but held under different deeds and different surveys, it may be lawful for any such person to have all such bodies of land included in one common survey by running around the lines of the outer tracts, and thereupon the possession of any part of said land covered by such common survey shall be deemed and held in law as a possession of the whole and every part thereof: Provided, that nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the rights or claims of persons which have already accrued to any part of said land. In all cases where such common surveys are made as directed by this section, the same may be recorded and registered as in cases of deeds, and shall be evidence in like manner. (1869-70, c. 34, ss. 1, 2; Code, s. 1277; Rev., s. 1505; C. S., s. 1764.)

CASE NOTES

When Possession of Part Equivalent to Whole. — Under the provisions of this section, by recording and registering a survey of the outer lines of several contiguous tracts, so as to exhibit their outer boundaries, as if the whole territory had been covered by one tract, a possession at any one point on either of the separate tracts will become equivalent to a possession of "the whole and every part." McNamee v. Alexander, 109 N.C. 242, 13 S.E. 777 (1891).

Sufficiency of Proof. — The surveyor's testimony that the map is correct is sufficient to make it competent. Greenleaf v. Bartlett, 146 N.C. 495, 60 S.E. 419 (1908).

§ 8-20. Certified copies registered in another county and used in evidence.

A copy from the office of the register of deeds of any county of the record of any deed, mortgage, power of attorney or other instrument required or allowed to be registered, duly authenticated by the certificate and official seal of the register of deeds of such county, may, upon presentation to the register of deeds of any other county, be registered without further proof, and the record thereof, or a duly certified copy of the same, may be given in evidence in any court in the State where the original of such copy would be admitted as evidence, although the party offering the same shall be entitled to the possession of the original, and shall not account for the nonproduction thereof, unless by a rule or order of the court, made upon affidavit suggesting some material variance from the original in such registry or other sufficient grounds, such party shall have been previously required to produce the original, in which case the same shall be produced or its absence duly accounted for according to the course and practice of the court. (1846, c. 68; R. C., c. 37, s. 16; Code, s. 1253; 1893, c. 119, s. 3; Rev., s. 1599; C. S., s. 1765.)

§ 8-21. Deeds and records thereof lost, presumed to be in due form.

Whenever it is shown in any judicial proceeding that a deed or conveyance of real estate has been lost or destroyed, and that the same had been registered, and that the register's book containing the copy has been destroyed by fire or other accident, so that a copy thereof cannot be had, it shall be presumed and held, unless the contents be shown to have been otherwise, that such deed or conveyance transferred an estate in fee simple, if the grantor was entitled to such an estate at the time of conveyance, and that it was made upon sufficient consideration. (1854, c. 17; R. C., c. 44, s. 14; Code, s. 1348; Rev., s. 1602; C. S., s. 1766.)

§ 8-22. Local: recitals in tax deeds in Haywood and Henderson.

In all legal controversies touching lands in the Counties of Haywood and Henderson, in which either party shall claim title under any sale for taxes alleged to have been due and laid, in and for the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety-six, or any preceding year, the recital contained in the deed or assurance, made by the sheriff or other officer conveying or assuring the same, of the taxes having been laid and assessed, and of the same having remained due and unpaid, shall be held and taken to be prima facie evidence of the truth of each and every of the matters so recited. (R. C., c. 44, s. 11; Code, s. 1346; Rev., s. 1606, C. S., s. 1767.)

§ 8-22.1. Local: tax deeds in Richmond.

Proof of execution and delivery of a deed recorded before 1971 to a grantee by the sheriff of Richmond County pursuant to sale under execution in a tax foreclosure proceeding brought by Richmond County under G.S. 105-375 establishes a presumption that all notices required by G.S. 105-375 and Article 29B of Chapter 1 of the General Statutes were duly given and served, as required by law, to all persons entitled to receive the notices. (1981, c. 517.)

(1903, c. 199; Rev., s. 1612, C. S., s. 1768.)

§ 8-24. Local: records of partition in Duplin.

§ 8-27. Local: records of wills in Brunswick.

Under the provisions of Chapter one hundred and six of the laws of one thousand nine hundred and eight, authorizing and directing that all unrecorded wills, dated prior to January first, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, on file in the office of the clerk of the Superior Court of Brunswick County, and which have been duly proved in the form required by law, and bearing the adjudication certificate of the proper officer, shall be recorded in the books of wills in the said office and properly indexed; that all wills recorded in the minutes of the court of pleas and quarter sessions or other books of record in said office shall be transcribed and indexed in the book of wills in said office; and that all wills recorded in the office of the register of deeds of said county shall be properly indexed in the book kept for the purpose in the office of the clerk of the superior court of the county; the record of any instrument or certified copy thereof, recorded under the provisions of this Article, shall be admitted in evidence in the trial of any cause, subject to the same rules upon which other wills are admitted. (1908, s. 106; C. S., s. 1772.)

§ 8-28. Copies of wills.

Copies of wills, duly certified by the proper officer, may be given in evidence in any proceeding wherein the contents of the will may be competent evidence. (1784, c. 225, s. 6, P. R.; R. C., c. 119, s. 21; Code, s. 2175; Rev., s. 1603; C. S., s. 1773.)

Cross References. — As to probate of copy of lost will, see §§ 98-4, 98-5.

CASE NOTES

Certified Copy as Evidence. — Under this section a certified copy of a will is competent evidence in any case wherein the contents of the will would be competent evidence. Hampton v. Hardin, 88 N.C. 592 (1883); overruled on other grounds, McEwan v. Brown, 176 N.C. 249, 97 S.E. 20 (1918).

§ 8-29. Copies of wills in Secretary of State's office.

Copies of wills filed or recorded in the office of the Secretary of State, attested by the Secretary, may be given in evidence in any court, and shall be taken as sufficient proof of the devise of real estate, and are declared good and effectual to pass the estate therein devised: Provided, that no such will may be given in evidence in any court nor taken as sufficient proof of the devise unless a certificate of probate appear thereon. (1852, c. 172; R. C., c. 44, s. 12; 1856-7, c. 22; Code, s. 2181; Rev., s. 1607; C. S., s. 1774.)

§ 8-30. Copies of wills recorded in wrong county.

Whereas, by reason of the uncertainty of the boundary lines of many of the counties of the State, wills have been proved, recorded and registered in the wrong county, whereby titles are insecure; for remedy whereof: The registry or duly certified copy of the record of any will, duly recorded, may be given in evidence in any of the courts of this State. (1858-9, c. 18; Code, s. 2182; Rev., s. 1608; C. S., s. 1775.)

§ 8-31. Copy of will proved and lost before recorded.

When any will which has been proved and ordered to be recorded was destroyed during the war between the states, before it was recorded, a copy of such will, so entitled to be admitted to record, though not certified by any officer, shall, when the court shall be satisfied of the genuineness thereof, be ordered to be recorded, and shall be received in evidence whenever the original or duly certified exemplification would be; and such copies may be proved and admitted to record under the same rules, regulations and restrictions as are prescribed in Chapter 98 entitled Burnt and Lost Records. (1866-7, c. 127; Code, s. 2183; Rev., s. 1609; C. S., s. 1776.)

§ 8-32. Certified copies of deeds and wills from other states.

In cases where inhabitants of other states or territories, by will or deed, devise or convey property situated in this State, and the original will or deed cannot be obtained for registration in the county where the land lies, or where the property shall be in dispute, a copy of said will or deed (after the same has been proved and registered or deposited, agreeable to the laws of the state where the person died or made the same) being properly certified, either according to the act of Congress or by the proper officer of the said state or territory, shall be read as evidence. (1802, c. 623, P. R.; R. C., c. 44, s. 9; Code, s. 1344; Rev., s. 1619; C. S., s. 1777.)

CASE NOTES

Records of other states, to be used in evidence in this State, must have the attestation of the clerk of the court whose record is offered, and the seal of the court, if it has one. If there be no seal, this must appear in the certificate of the clerk, and the judge, chief justice, or presiding magistrate of such court must certify that the record is properly attested. Hunter v. Kelly, 92 N.C. 285 (1885); Kinseley v. Rumbough, 96 N.C. 193, 2 S.E. 174 (1887); Riley v. Carter, 158 N.C. 484, 74 S.E. 463 (1912).

Properly Authenticated Copy Admissible. — A copy of a will made in another state, with its probate certified by the judge of the court in which it was proved, and accompanied by the testimonial of the governor of that state, that the person who gave that certificate was the proper officer to take such probate, and to certify the same, is a sufficient authentication of the will to authorize its reception as evidence in the courts of this State. Knight v. Wall, 19 N.C. 125 (1836).

Test for Admission under Section. — The copy, to be admissible in evidence, must be of such a will as would be admitted to record in North Carolina; hence where a will was executed in Tennessee and from the certificate of probate on the exemplified copy produced here, it appeared that but one witness swore that he subscribed the will as witness in the presence of the testator and other witness to the will did not appear to have been sworn at all, it was held that such a will should not be read in evidence. Blount v. Patton, 9 N.C. 237 (1822).

Incomplete Authentication. — Where a will, proved in another state, bore the certificate of the clerk of the court wherein the probate was had, to the oath of the attesting witnesses, but had no other authentication, it was held inadmissible in evidence. Hunter v. Kelly, 92 N.C. 285 (1885).

§ 8-33. Copies of lost records in Bladen.

The clerk of the Superior Court of Bladen County shall transcribe the judgment docket and index books and the will books in his office, and all other books in said office containing records made since the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, and the records so transcribed shall have the same force and effect as the original records would have, and shall be received in evidence as the original records and be prima facie evidence of their correctness and of the sufficiency of their probate, though the probates are lost and are not transcribed. (1895, c. 415; 1903, c. 65; Rev., s. 1611; C. S., s. 1778.)

Article 3.

Public Records.

§ 8-34. Copies of official writings.

Copies of all official bonds, writings, papers, or documents, recorded or filed as records in any court, or public office, or lodged in the office of the Governor, Treasurer, Auditor, Secretary of State, Attorney General, Adjutant General, or the State Department of Cultural Resources, shall be as competent evidence as the originals, when certified by the keeper of such records or writings under the seal of his office when there is such seal, or under his hand when there is no such seal, unless the court shall order the production of the original. Copies of the records of the board of county commissioners shall be evidence when certified by the clerk of the board under his hand and seal of the county. (1792, c. 368, s. 11, P. R.; R. C., c. 44, s. 8; 1868-9, c. 20, s. 21; 1871-2, c. 91; Code, ss. 715, 1342; Rev., s. 1616; C. S., s. 1779; 1961, c. 739; 1973, c. 476, s. 48.)

CASE NOTES

"Copy" Defined. — A copy, within the meaning of this section, is a transcript of the original — a writing exactly like another writing. State v. Champion, 116 N. C. 987, 21 S.E. 700 (1895); Wiggins v. Rogers, 175 N.C. 67, 94 S.E. 685 (1917).

Certification of Copy. — The power of an officer, who is the keeper of certain public records, to certify copies is confined to a certification of their contents as they appear by the records themselves, and the records must, therefore, be so certified, for he has no authority to certify to the substance of them, nor that any particular fact, as a date, appears on them. Wiggins v. Rogers, 175 N.C. 67, 94 S.E. 685 (1917).

Original Record Is Admissible. — This section does not prevent the admission in evidence of the original record itself. State v. Voight, 90 N.C. 741 (1884); State ex rel. Carolina Iron Co. v. Abernathy, 94 N.C. 545 (1886). See State v. Hunter, 94 N.C. 829 (1886); Charles S. Riley & Co. v. Carter, 165 N.C. 334, 81 S.E. 414 (1914); Blalock v. Whisnant, 216 N.C. 417, 5 S.E.2d 130 (1939).

While certified copies of records are admitted in evidence, the originals are not thereby made incompetent. State v. Joyner, 295 N.C. 55, 243 S.E.2d 367 (1978).

And Copy Is Admissible Where Original Lost. — Where a superior court record is lost, a certified copy of the transcript of the same in the appellate court is sufficient evidence of the record. Aiken v. Lyon, 127 N.C. 171, 37 S.E. 199 (1900).

A certified copy of a petition in a suit is admissible in evidence upon proof of the loss of the original records. Weeks v. McPhail, 128 N.C. 130, 38 S.E. 472, rehearing denied, 129 N.C. 73, 39 S.E. 732 (1901).

But Certified Statement Not Admissible. — This section makes competent only the "copies" of official records, etc., and a mere certified statement from the register's office is only evidence of the correctness of the record, and cannot be admitted in evidence in place of the original record. State v. Champion, 116 N.C. 987, 21 S.E. 700 (1895); Wiggins v. Rogers, 175 N.C. 67, 94 S.E. 685 (1917).

Incriminating Evidence Contained in Document. — Where the document admitted under the provisions of this section contains incriminating evidence, the defense often interposed by the accused is that to admit such paper would be in violation of the constitutional right of the defendant on trial for crime to have opportunity to confront his accusers and the witnesses offered to sustain the charge. It is settled, however, that this section is not violative of this constitutional right, since these provisions constitute a well-recognized exception to the privilege given by the Constitution. State v. Behrman, 114 N.C. 797, 19 S.E. 220 (1894); State v. Dowdy, 145 N.C. 432, 58 S.E. 1002 (1907).

"Written Hearsay" Admissible. — North Carolina countenances the introduction of test results, certified copies of official documents and records, as well as other writings, which, but for statute or decisional authority, would be written hearsay. In re Arthur, 27 N.C. App. 227, 218 S.E.2d 869 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 640, 231 S.E.2d 614 (1977).

Applied in Moye v. Thrifty Gas Co., 40 N.C. App. 310, 252 S.E.2d 837 (1979).

Cited in State v. Beamon, 2 N.C. App. 583, 163 S.E.2d 544 (1968); In re Arthur, 291 N.C. 640, 231 S.E.2d 614 (1977); State v. Gray, 292 N.C. 270, 233 S.E.2d 905 (1977).

§ 8-35. Authenticated copies of public records.

All copies of bonds, contracts, notes, mortgages, or other papers relating to or connected with any loan, account, settlement of any account or any part thereof, or other transaction, between the United States or any state thereof or any corporation all of whose stock is beneficially owned by the United States or any state thereof, either directly or indirectly, and any person, natural or artificial; or extracts therefrom when complete on any one subject, or copies from the books or papers on file, or records of any public office of the State or the United States or of any corporation all of whose stock is beneficially owned by the United States or by any state thereof, directly or indirectly, shall be received in evidence and entitled to full faith and credit in any of the courts of this State when certified to by the chief officer or agent in charge of such public office or of such office of such corporation, or by the secretary or an assistant secretary of such corporation, to be true copies, and authenticated under the seal of the office, department, or corporation concerned. Any such certificate shall be prima facie evidence of the genuineness of such certificate and seal, the truth of the statements made in such certificate, and the official character of the person by which it purports to have been executed. (1891, c. 501; Rev., s. 1617; C. S., s. 1780; 1939, c. 149.)

CASE NOTES

"Written Hearsay" Admissible. — North Carolina countenances the introduction of test results, certified copies of official documents and records, as well as other writings, which, but for statute or decisional authority, would be written hearsay. In re Arthur, 27 N.C. App. 227, 218 S.E.2d 869 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 640, 231 S.E.2d 614 (1977).

The purpose of authentication and certification of records is to avoid the inconvenience and sometimes the impossibility of producing original public documents in court, and admission of certified records tends to expedite trial of cases. State v. Watts, 289 N.C. 445, 222 S.E.2d 389 (1976).

Authentication Essential. — Proper authentication is essential to the admission in evidence of the copies of the original records, and papers purporting to be exemplification from the Treasury Department of the United States, not authenticated, will not be admitted. Mott v. Ramsay, 92 N.C. 152 (1885).

In order for this section to apply it must affirmatively appear that the evidence was offered as a properly authenticated copy of a public record in accordance with this section. State v. Bovender, 233 N.C. 683, 65 S.E.2d 323 (1951).

Parol Evidence Inadmissible. — The contents of the original record may not be proved by parol evidence under this section, but must be shown by a certified copy. National Sur. Co. v. Brock, 176 N.C. 507, 97 S.E. 417 (1918).

Reading of Record by District Attorney. — There is no error in allowing a properly certified copy of a record to be read into evidence by the district attorney, as opposed to having the document passed among the jurors. State v. Miller, 288 N.C. 582, 220 S.E.2d 326 (1975).

Public documents may be authenticated by mechanical reproduction of signature of authorized officer when he intends to adopt the mechanical reproduction as his signature. State v. Watts, 289 N.C. 445, 222 S.E.2d 389 (1976).

This section does not impose the restriction upon the general rule that for a stamped, printed or typewritten signature to be a good signature, the signature must be made under the hand of the person making it. State v. Watts, 289 N.C. 445, 222 S.E.2d 389 (1976).

Same — Presumption. — When the authorized officer of the Division of Motor Vehicles provides records of the Division pursuant to statute, it may be presumed that he intends to authenticate the documents and to adopt the mechanical reproduction of his name as his own signature. State v. Watts, 289 N.C. 445, 222 S.E.2d 389 (1976).

This section has no application to an uncertified copy of a coroner's report but only to a duly certified copy. Robinson v. Life & Cas. Ins. Co., 255 N.C. 669, 122 S.E.2d 801 (1961).

Initialed certificate lacking notary's authentication meets all the requirements of § 20-48 and provides prima facie evidence of the genuineness of such certificate, the truth of the statements made in such certificate, and the official character of the person who purportedly initialed and executed it. State v. Johnson, 25 N.C. App. 630, 214 S.E.2d 278, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 247, 217 S.E.2d 671 (1975).

The matters appearing in transcript of any paper on file or records of any public office of the State or United States, being relevant to an account which a referee was directed to take, are admissible in evidence by virtue of the provisions of this section. Wallace Bros. v. Douglas, 114 N.C. 450, 19 S.E. 668 (1894). See Hinton v. Lake Drummond Canal Co., 166 N.C. 484, 82 S.E. 844 (1914).

A record of the Division of Motor Vehicles, disclosing that defendant's license was in a state of revocation under official Division action during the period defendant was charged with driving on a highway of this State, is competent under this section when the record is certified under seal of the Division. State v. Mercer, 249 N.C. 371, 106 S.E.2d 866 (1959).

The records of the Department, properly authenticated, are competent for the purpose of establishing the status of a person's operator's license and driving privilege. State v. Teasley, 9 N.C. App. 477, 176 S.E.2d 838, appeal dismissed, 277 N.C. 459, 177 S.E.2d 900 (1970); State v. Rhodes, 10 N.C. App. 154, 177 S.E.2d 754 (1970).

Same — Employee's Certification of Original Renders Copy Admissible. — Certification by an employee of the Department of Motor Vehicles that the original of an order of security requirement or suspension of driving privilege was mailed to defendant on a specified date at his address shown on the records of the Department of Motor Vehicles was sufficient to render admissible a copy of the document in a prosecution of a defendant for driving while his license was suspended. State v. Herald, 10 N.C. App. 263, 178 S.E.2d 120 (1970).

Same — Certified Copy of Driver's License Record Admissible to Show Revocation. — In a prosecution of a defendant for driving while his license was suspended, a properly certified copy of the driver's license record of defendant on file with the Department of Motor Vehicles is admissible as evidence that the defendant's license was in a state of revocation for a period covering the date of the offense for which he was charged. State v. Herald, 10 N.C. App. 263, 178 S.E.2d 120 (1970).

Applied in Dunes Club, Inc. v. Cherokee Ins. Co., 259 N.C. 293, 130 S.E.2d 625 (1963); State v. Williams, 17 N.C. App. 39, 193 S.E.2d 452 (1972).

§ 8-35.1. Division of Motor Vehicles' record admissible as prima facie evidence of convictions under §§ 20-138 and 20-139.

Notwithstanding the provisions of G.S. 15A-924(d), a properly certified copy under G.S. 8-35 of the license records of a defendant kept by the Division of Motor Vehicles under G.S. 20-26(a) is admissible as prima facie evidence of any prior convictions of a defendant under G.S. 20-138 and 20-139. (1975, c. 642, s. 1; c. 716, s. 5.)

§ 8-36. Authenticated copy of record of administration.

When letters testamentary or of administration on the goods and chattels of any person deceased, being an inhabitant in another state or territory, have been granted, or a return or inventory of the estate has been made, a copy of the record of administration or of the letters testamentary, and a copy of an inventory or return of the effects of the deceased, after the same has been granted or made, agreeable to the laws of the state where the same has been done, being properly certified, either according to the act of Congress or by the proper officer of such state or territory, shall be allowed as evidence. (1834, c. 4; R. C., c. 44, s. 7; Code, s. 1343; Rev., s. 1618; C. S., s. 1781.)

§ 8-37. Certificate of Commissioner of Motor Vehicles as to ownership of automobile.

In any civil or criminal action in which the ownership of a motor vehicle is relevant, evidence as to the letters and numbers appearing upon the registration plate attached to such vehicle or of the motor vehicle identification number, together with certified copies of records furnished pursuant to G.S. 20-42 by the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles showing the name of the owner of the vehicle to which such registration plate or vehicle identification number is assigned, or a certified copy of the certificate of title for such motor vehicle on file with the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, is prima facie evidence of the ownership of such motor vehicle. (1931, c. 88, s. 1; 1943, c. 650; 1979, c. 980.)

Cross References. — As to registration and certificate of title for motor vehicles generally, see § 20-50 et seq.

ARTICLE 3A.

Findings, Records and Reports of Federal Officers and Employees.

§ 8-37.1. Finding of presumed death.

A written finding of presumed death, made by the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, or other officer or employee of the United States authorized to made such finding, pursuant to the Federal Missing Persons Act (56 Stat. 143, 1092, and P.L. 408, ch. 371, 2d Sess. 78th Cong.; 50 U.S.C. App. Supp. 1001-17), as now or hereafter amended, or a duly certified copy of such finding, shall be received in any court, office or other place in this State as prima facie evidence of the death of the person therein found to be dead, and the date, circumstances and place of his disappearance. (1945, c. 731, s. 1.)

§ 8-37.2. Report or record that person missing, interned, captured, etc.

An official written report or record, or duly certified copy thereof, that a person is missing, missing in action, interned in a neutral country, or beleaguered, besieged or captured by an enemy, or is dead, or is alive, made by any officer or employee of the United States authorized by the act referred to in § 8-37.1, or by any other law of the United States to make same, shall be received in any court, office or other place in this State as prima facie evidence that such person is missing, missing in action, interned in a neutral country, or beleaguered, besieged or captured by an enemy, or is dead, or is alive, as the case may be. (1945, c. 731, s. 2.)

§ 8-37.3. Deemed signed and issued pursuant to law; evidence of authority to certify.

For the purposes of §§ 8-37.1 and 8-37.2 any finding, report or record, or duly certified copy thereof, purporting to have been signed by such an officer or employee of the United States as is described in said sections, shall prima facie be deemed to have been signed and issued by such an officer or employee pursuant to law, and the person signing same shall prima facie be deemed to have acted within the scope of his authority. If a copy purports to have been certified by a person authorized by law to certify the same, such certified copy shall be prima facie evidence of his authority so to certify. (1945, c. 731, s. 3.)

ARTICLE 4.

Other Writings in Evidence.

§ 8-38. Proof by attesting witness not required.

It is not necessary to prove by the attesting witness instruments to the validity of which the attestation is not requisite, and such instruments may be proved by admission or otherwise as if there had been no attesting witness thereto: Provided, that this section shall not affect the method and manner of proving instruments for registration. (1905, c. 204; Rev., s. 1604; C. S., s. 1782.)

§ 8-39. Parol evidence to identify land described.

In all actions for the possession of or title to any real estate parol testimony may be introduced to identify the land sued for, and fit it to the description contained in the paper-writing offered as evidence of title or of the right of possession, and if from this evidence the jury is satisfied that the land in question is the identical land intended to be conveyed by the parties to such paper-writing, then such paper-writing shall be deemed and taken to be sufficient in law to pass such title to or interest in such land as it purports to pass: Provided, that such paper-writing is in all other respects sufficient to pass such title or interest. (1891, c. 465, s. 1; Rev., s. 1605; C. S., s. 1783.)

Cross References. — As to vagueness of description in deeds, see § 39-2 and note thereto.

CASE NOTES

Section Not Retroactive in Operation. — There is a general presumption against the retroactive operation of a statute where it would impair vested rights, therefore this section cannot be held to operate retrospectively so as to allow parol testimony to locate land referred to and ambiguously described in a contract made before the passage of this section. Lowe v. Harris, 112 N.C. 472, 17 S.E. 539 (1893).

Deed Must Contain Some Description. — This section applies only where there is a description which can be aided by parol, but not when there is no description. Lowe v. Harris, 112 N.C. 472, 17 S.E. 539 (1893); Hemphill v. Annis, 119 N.C. 514, 26 S.E. 152 (1896); Harris v. Woodward, 130 N.C. 580, 41 S.E. 790 (1902).

A deed which fails to describe any land is as void now as it was before the passage of this section, but a description by name, where lands have a known name, is sufficient. Moore v. Fowle, 139 N.C. 51, 51 S.E. 796 (1905).

And Description Must Identify Land or Refer to Source of Identification. — The statute applies only when there is a description which can be aided by parol, and cannot be held to validate a deed where the description is too vague and indefinite to identify the land claimed and to fit it to the description. At all events, the description as it may be explained by oral testimony must identify and make certain the land intended to be conveyed. Failing in this, the deed is void. Holloman v. Davis, 238 N.C. 386, 78 S.E.2d 143 (1953).

The statutory rule permitting the use of parol testimony to fit the description in the deed to the land intended to be conveyed does not relieve the invalidity due to vagueness, indefiniteness and uncertainty unless there are elements of description which are either certain in themselves or are capable of being reduced to certainty by reference to something extrinsic, to which the deed refers. The liberal rule of construction does not permit the passing of title to land by parol. Such evidence cannot be used to enlarge the scope of the descriptive words. The deed itself must point to the source from which evidence aliunde to make the description complete is to be sought. Holloman v. Davis, 238 N.C. 386, 78 S.E.2d 143 (1953).

The description must identify the land, or it must refer to something that will identify it with certainty. Cummings v. Dosam, Inc., 273 N.C. 28, 159 S.E.2d 513 (1968).

A deed purporting to convey an interest in land is void unless it contains a description of the land sufficient to identify it or refers to something extrinsic by which the land may be identified with certainty. Overton v. Boyce, 289 N.C. 291, 221 S.E.2d 347 (1976).

And Parol Evidence Alone Cannot Establish Boundary. — While parol evidence is competent to "fit the description to the thing," it is not competent to establish a line or corner when the instrument by its terms wholly fails to identify such line or corner; in other words, it is competent to find but not to make a corner. Holmes v. Sapphire Valley Co., 121 N.C. 410, 28 S.E. 545 (1897).

Description in Deeds Must Be Fitted to Earth's Surface. — In an action to recover for the wrongful cutting and removal of timber from land claimed by plaintiffs, plaintiffs must locate the land by fitting the description in their deeds to the earth's surface, regardless of whether they rely upon their deeds as proof of title or color of title, or, in the absence of title or color of title, they are required to establsih the known and visible lines and boundaries of the land actually occupied by them for the statutory period. Andrews v. Bruton, 242 N.C. 93, 86 S.E.2d 786 (1955).

Those having the burden of proof must locate the land they claim title to by fitting the description contained in the paper-writing offered as evidence of title to the land's surface. State v. Brooks, 275 N.C. 175, 166 S.E.2d 70 (1969).

Allegations as to title having been denied, it was incumbent upon plaintiffs in ejectment action to establish both ownership and trespass. Whether relying upon their deeds as proof of title or of color of title, they were required to locate the land by fitting the description in the deeds to the earth's surface and showing that such deeds embraced the land in controversy. In the absence of title or color of title, they were required to establish the known and visible lines and boundaries of the land actually occupied for the statutory period. Midgett v. Midgett, 5 N.C. App. 74, 168 S.E.2d 53 (1969).

But Scope of Descriptive Words in Deed May Not Be Enlarged by Parol Evidence. — Parol evidence is admissible to fit the description in a deed showing color of title to the land. Such evidence cannot, however, be used to enlarge the scope of the descriptive words. McDaris v. Breit Bar "T" Corp., 265 N.C. 298, 144 S.E.2d 59 (1965).

The purpose of parol evidence is to fit the description to the property, not to create a description. McDaris v. Breit Bar "T" Corp., 265 N.C. 298, 144 S.E.2d 59 (1965); Cummings v. Dosam, Inc., 273 N.C. 28, 159 S.E.2d 513 (1968); Builders Supplies Co. v. Gainey, 282 N.C. 261, 192 S.E.2d 449 (1972).

Evidence dehors the deed is admissible to "fit the description to the thing" only when it tends to explain, locate, or make certain some call or descriptive term used in the deed. It is the deed that must speak. The oral evidence must only interpret what has been said therein. McDaris v. Breit Bar "T" Corp., 265 N.C. 298, 144 S.E.2d 59 (1965).

Parol evidence is admissible to fit the description to the land. Such evidence cannot, however, be used to enlarge the scope of the descriptive words. The deed itself must point to the source from which evidence aliunde to make the description complete is to be sought. State v. Brooks, 279 N.C. 45, 181 S.E.2d 553 (1971); Builders Supplies Co. v. Gainey, 282 N.C. 261, 192 S.E.2d 449 (1972).

Parol evidence is not admissible to enlarge the scope of the description in the deed, but when the deed itself, including the references to extrinsic things, describes with certainty the property intended to be conveyed, parol evidence is admissible to fit the description in the deed to the land. Overton v. Boyce, 289 N.C. 291, 221 S.E.2d 347 (1976).

Ambiguous or Indefinite Terms Generally. — Where the written terms contained in the contract are sufficient to pass the property, but are ambiguous or indefinite, then parol evidence of the expressions of the parties and attendant facts and circumstances may be heard to aid in ascertaining the correct meaning of the terms used, but not to alter or add to what has been written. Ward v. Gay, 137 N.C. 397, 49 S.E. 884 (1905).

Patently Ambiguous Description. — When it is apparent upon the face of the deed, itself, that there is uncertainty as to the land intended to be conveyed and the deed, itself, refers to nothing extrinsic by which such uncertainty can be resolved, the description is said to be patently ambiguous. Overton v. Boyce, 289 N.C. 291, 221 S.E.2d 347 (1976).

A patent ambiguity in the description of the land is such an uncertainty appearing on the face of the instrument that the court, reading the language in the light of all the facts and circumstances referred to in the instrument, is unable to derive therefrom the intention of the parties as to what land was to be conveyed. Overton v. Boyce, 289 N.C. 291, 221 S.E.2d 347 (1976).

A patent ambiguity in the description of the land cannot be removed by parol evidence. Cummings v. Dosam, Inc., 273 N.C. 28, 159 S.E.2d 513 (1968).

Parol evidence may not be introduced to remove a patent ambiguity in the description of the land since to do so would not be a use of such evidence to fit the description to the land but a use of such evidence to create a description by adding to the words of the instrument. Overton v. Boyce, 289 N.C. 291, 221 S.E.2d 347 (1976).

And Deed Containing Such Description Is Void. — Where the description of land in a deed under which plaintiffs claimed was patently ambiguous, the deed was void and could not be the basis for a valid claim of title in the plaintiffs to the land claimed by them. Overton v. Boyce, 289 N.C. 291, 221 S.E.2d 347 (1976).

The identity or location of the land may be shown by documentary evidence, such as plats, surveys, and field notes. A map made by a surveyor of the premises sued for and of other tracts adjacent thereto, when proved to be correct, is admissible to illustrate other testimony in the case and throw light on the location of the land in controversy; and a draft of a survey, proved to be correct, is admissible in evidence as explanatory of what the surveyor testified he had done in making the survey. Midgett v. Midgett, 5 N.C. App. 74, 168 S.E.2d 53 (1969).

When Description Sufficient. — A description of land in a deed as all that tract of land in two certain counties, lying on "both sides of old road between" designated points, and bounded by lands of named owners, "and others," being parts of certain State grants, conveyed by the patentee or enterer to certain grantees, etc., is sufficient to admit of parol evidence in aid of the identification of the lands as those intended to be conveyed. Buckhorn Land & Timber Co. v. Yarbrough, 179 N.C. 335, 102 S.E. 630 (1920).

Applied in McKay v. Bullard, 219 N.C. 589, 14 S.E.2d 657 (1941); Taylor v. Tri-County Elec. Membership Corp., 10 N.C. App. 277, 178 S.E.2d 130 (1970).

§ 8-40. Proof of handwriting by comparison.

In all trials in this State, when it may otherwise be competent and relevant to compare handwritings, a comparison of a disputed writing with any writing proved to the satisfaction of the judge to be genuine, shall be permitted to be made by witnesses, and such writings and the evidence of witnesses respecting the same may be submitted to the court and jury as evidence of the genuineness or otherwise of the writing in dispute: Provided, this shall not apply to actions pending on March 5, 1913. (1913, c. 52; C. S., s. 1784.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article on the taking of handwriting exemplars, see 4 Wake Forest Intra. L. Rev. 1 (1968).

For article entitled, "Toward a Codification of the Law of Evidence in North Carolina," see 16 Wake Forest L. Rev. 669 (1980).

CASE NOTES

In General. — The principle, formerly recognized in this State, that confined the proof of handwriting to the testimony of a competent witness in comparing that sought to be established with handwriting either admitted or proven to be that of the party, has been changed by this section, and where the disputed writing has been rendered competent under this principle, it may, in actions instituted after March 5, 1913, be submitted to the jury, together with that admitted or proven. Newton v. Newton, 182 N.C. 54, 108 S.E. 336 (1921).

Rule under Prior Law. — Before the passage of this section it was incompetent for a handwriting expert to testify to the genuineness of the signature of a party to a writing, his testimony being based upon a comparison with another signature, not admitted to be genuine or requiring proof that it is so. Boyd v. Leatherwood, 165 N.C. 614, 81 S.E. 1025 (1914); In re McGowan, 235 N.C. 404, 70 S.E.2d 189 (1952).

Prior to the enactment of this section it seems to have been settled law in North Carolina that an expert witness in the presence of the jury, might be allowed to compare a disputed paper with other papers in the case, whose genuineness was not denied, and that the jury must pass upon its genuineness upon the testimony of witnesses, and that no comparison by the jury was permitted. In re Will of Gatling, 234 N.C. 561, 68 S.E.2d 301 (1951).

As to prior law, see also Pope v. Askew, 23 N.C. 16 (1840); Outlaw v. Hurdle, 46 N.C. 150 (1853); Tuttle v. Rainey, 98 N.C. 513, 4 S.E. 475 (1887); Fuller v. Fox, 101 N.C. 119, 7 S.E. 589 (1888); Martin v. Knight, 147 N.C. 564, 61 S.E. 447 (1908); Nicholson v. Eureka Lumber Co., 156 N.C. 59, 72 S.E. 86, 36 L.R.A. (n.s.) 162 (1911); Boyd v. Leatherwood, 165 N.C. 614, 81 S.E. 1025 (1914).

This section provides for the proof of handwriting by comparison. Clayton v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 4 N.C. App. 43, 165 S.E.2d 763 (1969).

Genuine Writing Not Required to Be Introduced in Evidence to Permit Comparison. — Prior to the enactment of this section, in those cases where the comparison of handwriting was permissible under the law, a paper containing the admitted genuine signature was not required to be introduced in evidence to authorize its comparison by a qualified witness with a signature the genuineness of which was in issue. This section did not change the rule in this respect. However, it did change the rule of evidence so as to permit the comparison of a disputed writing with any writing proved to the satisfaction of the judge to be genuine, and to permit such writing and the evidence of witnesses respecting the same to be submitted to the court and jury as evidence of the genuineness or otherwise of the writing in dispute. But the section does not prevent a comparison of a disputed writing with any writing proved to the satisfaction of the judge to be genuine, unless such genuine writing is introduced in evidence. In re McGowan, 235 N.C. 404, 70 S.E.2d 189 (1952).

Not Essential to See Person Write. — When the contents of letters written by a party to an action are relevant to the inquiry, it is not required that the witness should have seen the person write before he is permitted to identify the letter by the handwriting, for it is sufficient if he can do so from correspondence formerly had between them. Universal Oil & Fertilizer Co. v. Burney, 174 N.C. 382, 93 S.E. 912 (1917).

Expert Testimony. — Where a witness, found by the court to be a handwriting expert, testifies that the signature on the release offered in evidence is identical with the signature on the last will and testament of plaintiffs' predecessor in title, the admission in evidence of a duly authenticated copy of the release is proper. Kaperonis v. North Carolina State Hwy. Comm'n, 260 N.C. 587, 133 S.E.2d 464 (1963).

Comparison by Jury. — Where payment of a note sued on was pleaded and the genuineness of the signature of the payee to a receipt for the amount was in dispute, and an expert in handwriting gave his opinion upon comparing with a magnifying glass the disputed signature with the genuine one, it was not error for the trial judge to permit the jury, while deliberating upon their verdict, to make the comparison with the magnifying glass for themselves, when it did not appear that it could have been to the prejudice of the appellant. Gooding v. Pope, 194 N.C. 403, 140 S.E. 21 (1927).

The enactment of this section in 1913 changed the rule existing theretofore, and comparison of writings by the jury has been approved. If the genuineness of a signature or wirting is established to the satisfaction of the judge, a witness may compare the established writing with the disputed writing; and then the testimony of the witness and the writings themselves may be submitted to the jury. State v. Simmons, 8 N.C. App. 561, 174 S.E.2d 627 (1970).

Neither this section nor North Carolina rules of evidence permit the jury, unaided by competent opinion testimony, to compare writings to determine genuineness. State v. Simmons, 8 N.C. App. 561, 174 S.E.2d 627 (1970); State v. LeDuc, 48 N.C. App. 227, 269 S.E.2d 220 (1980).

Same — Analogy to Proof of Agency. — In Newton v. Newton, 182 N.C. 54, 108 S.E. 336 (1921), the court said: "As we understand the statute, the admission of testimony as to the genuineness of a writing by comparison of handwriting is now on the same basis as the declarations of agents. The court determines whether there is prima facie evidence of agency or of the genuineness of the writing admitted as a basis of comparison, and then the testimony of the witnesses and 'the writings' (in the plural) themselves are submitted to the jury." See In re Will of Gatling, 234 N.C. 561, 68 S.E.2d 301 (1951).

Exclusion of Writing as Harmless Error. — Where the handwriting sought to be introduced as evidence before the jury and to be considered by them was irrelevant, the action of the court in refusing to let the writing be submitted to the jury, to determine its genuineness, under the statute, was a harmless error. Newton v. Newton, 182 N.C. 54, 108 S.E. 336 (1921).

§ 8-40.1. Statements in published treatises, periodicals, or pamphlets.

In all actions in the district and superior courts to the extent called to the attention of an expert witness upon cross-examination or relied upon by him in direct examination, the hearsay rule shall not exclude statements contained in published treatises, periodicals, or pamphlets on a subject of history, medicine, or other science or art, established as a reliable authority by the testimony or admission of the witness or by other expert testimony or by judicial notice, even though the declarant is available as a witness. If admitted, the statements may be read into evidence but may not be received as exhibits unless agreed to by counsel for the parties. (1977, c. 1116; 1979, c. 8.)

Legal Periodicals. — For a comment on the statutory standard of care for North Carolina Health Care Providers, see 1 Campbell L. Rev. 111 (1979).

§ 8-41. Bills of lading in evidence.

In all actions by or against common carriers or in the trial of any criminal action in which it shall be thought necessary to introduce in evidence any bills of lading issued by said common carrier or by a connecting carrier, it shall be competent to introduce in evidence any paper-writing purporting to be the original bill of lading, or a duplicate thereof, upon proof that such paper purporting to be such bill of lading or duplicate was received in due course of mail from consignor or agent of said carrier or connecting carrier, or delivered by said common carrier to the consignee or other person entitled to the possession of the property for which said paper purports to be the bill of lading: Provided, that such purported bill of lading shall not be declared to be the bill of lading unless the said purported bill of lading is first exhibited by the plaintiff or his agent or attorney to the defendant or its attorney, or its agent upon whom process may be served, ten days before the trial where the point of shipment is in the State, and twenty days when the point of shipment is without the State. Upon such proof and introduction of the bill of lading, the due execution thereof shall be prima facie established. (1915, c. 287; C. S., s. 1785; 1945, c. 97.)

§ 8-42. Book accounts under sixty dollars.

When any person shall bring an action upon a contract, or shall plead, or give notice of, a setoff or counterclaim for goods, wares and merchandise by him sold and delivered, or for work done and performed, he shall file his account with his complaint, or with his plea or notice of setoff or counterclaim, and if upon the trial of the issue, or executing a writ of inquiry of damages in such action, he shall declare upon his oath that the matter in dispute is a book account, and that he hath no means to prove the delivery of any of the articles which he then shall propose to prove by himself but by this book, in that case such book may be given in evidence, if he shall make out by his own oath that it doth contain a true account of all the dealings, or the last settlement of accounts between himself and the opposing party, and that all the articles therein contained, and by him so proved, were bona fide delivered, and that he hath given the opposing party all just credits; and such book and oath shall be received as evidence for the several articles so proved to be delivered within two years next before the commencement of the action, but not for any article of a longer standing, nor for any greater amount than sixty dollars ($60.00). (1756, c. 57, ss. 2, 6, 7, P. R.; R. C., c. 15, s. 1; Code, s. 591; Rev., s. 1622; C. S., s. 1786.)

CASE NOTES

Terms Construed. — In an early case, the words "to make out on his oath" and "to prove," used in the former statute, were construed to be synonymous terms. Kitchen v. Tyson, 7 N.C. 314 (1819).

Construction with § 8-51. — Notwithstanding the restrictions contained in § 8-51, in relation to a person's testifying as to any matter between himself and a deceased person, when his executor or administrator is a party, he may, as heretofore, be permitted to testify under this section. Leggett v. Glover, 71 N.C. 211 (1874). See Nall v. Kelly, 169 N.C. 717, 86 S.E. 627 (1915).

Applicability of Section. — This section is applicable only to actions brought under the "book-debt law," hence in an action on a contract for sawing timber, it is not necessary to set out the items in the pleadings. McPhail Bros. v. Johnson, 115 N.C. 298, 20 S.E. 373 (1894).

Where Original Account Exceeds Sixty Dollars. — Under this section, a plaintiff may prove by his own oath a balance of sixty dollars, due to him, although his account produced appears to have been originally for more than sixty dollars ($60.00), but is reduced by credits below that amount. McWilliams v. Cosby, 26 N.C. 110 (1843).

Same — Dismissal of Part for Jurisdictional Purposes. — Where divers dealings are included in an account, the aggregate of which exceeds sixty dollars ($60.00), the plaintiff can omit or give credit for any item he may choose, so as to bring the case within the jurisdiction of a single magistrate. But after thus obtaining jurisdiction the plaintiff cannot prove the account under this section for he is required to swear that the account rendered contains a true account of all the dealings. Joseph Waldo & Co. v. Jolly, 49 N.C. 173 (1856).

Proof of Setoff Allowed. — The defendant may, under this section, prove a setoff. Webber v. Webber, 79 N.C. 572 (1878).

Same — Book and Oath Not Exclusive Evidence. — The book and the oath under this section are not evidence that the book contains all the credits and a full and true account of all the dealings between the parties, so as to show that nothing is due to the other party. Alexander v. Smoot, 35 N.C. 461 (1852).

Swearing as to Price of Goods. — It is competent for a party under this section to swear to the price, as well as to the delivery of the articles stated in his account. Colbert v. Piercy, 25 N.C. 77 (1842).

Same — Cross-Examination. — It is competent for the opposite party to cross-examine the party, taking his oath as required by this section, both as to the article and the prices charged, with a view to contradict or discredit him, as he might do in regard to any other witness swearing to the account, the party so swearing being considered as a witness in his own cause. Colbert v. Piercy, 25 N.C. 77 (1842).

Books of Decedent Admissible. — Under this section it is admissible to the amount of sixty dollars ($60.00) to offer the book accounts of a decedent, containing charges against third persons, and made by him. Bland v. Warren, 65 N.C. 372 (1871).

Unverified Entries on Own Book. — A party to an action may not show unverified entries of credit in his behalf on his own books involved in a disputed account, the same not falling within the intent and meaning of this section and §§ 8-43 and 8-44, especially when it has not been made to appear that the person having made them is dead or cannot be had to give his sworn statement of the transaction. Branch v. Ayscue, 186 N.C. 219, 119 S.E. 201 (1923).

Cited in Perry v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 223 N.C. 642, 27 S.E.2d 636 (1943).

§ 8-43. Book accounts proved by personal representative.

In all actions where executors and administrators are parties, such book account for all articles delivered within two years previous to the death of the deceased may be proved under the like circumstances, rules and conditions; and in such case, the executor or administrator may prove by himself that he found the account so stated on the books of the deceased; that there are no witnesses, to his knowledge, capable of proving the delivery of the articles which he shall propose to prove by said book, and that he believes the same to be just, and doth not know of any other or further credit to be given than what is therein mentioned: Provided, that if two years shall not have elapsed previous to the death of the deceased, the executor or administrator may prove the said book account, if the suit shall be commenced within three years from the delivery of the articles: Provided further, that whenever by the aforesaid proviso the time of proving a book account in manner aforesaid is enlarged as to the one party, to the same extent shall be enlarged the time as to the other party. (1756, c. 57, s. 2, P. R.; 1796, c. 465, P. R.; R. C., c. 15, s. 2; Code, s. 592; Rev., s. 1623; C. S., s. 1787.)

Cited in Perry v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 223 N.C. 642, 27 S.E.2d 636 (1943).

§ 8-44. Copies of book accounts in evidence.

A copy from the book of accounts proved in manner above directed may be given in evidence in any such action or setoff as aforesaid, and shall be as available as if such book had been produced, unless the party opposing such proof shall give notice to the adverse party or his attorney, at the joining of the issue, or 10 days before the trial, that he will require the book to be produced at the trials; and in that case no such copy shall be admitted as evidence. (1756, c. 57, s. 33, P. R.; R. C., c. 15, s. 3; C. C. P., s. 343c; Code, s. 593; Rev., s. 1624; C. S., s. 1788.)

CASE NOTES

Production of Original after Notice. — In all cases under this section and §§ 8-42 and 8-43, it is the duty of the party, who wishes to prove his debt by his own oath, to produce the original account when notice to that effect has been given to him by the other party. Coxe v. Skeen, 25 N.C. 443 (1843).

A voluntary destruction of the original will not authorize the introduction of a copy. Coxe v. Skeen, 25 N.C. 443 (1843).

§ 8-44.1. Copies of medical records.

Copies of hospital records in connection with the treatment of any patient or the charges therefor shall be received as evidence, if otherwise admissible, in any court or quasi-judicial proceeding if testified to be authentic by a person in the hospital whose duty it is to have charge or custody of such records. (1973, c. 1332, s. 1.)

§ 8-45. Itemized and verified accounts.

In any actions instituted in any court of this State upon an account for goods sold and delivered, for rents, for services rendered, or labor performed, or upon any oral contract for money loaned, a verified itemized statement of such account shall be received in evidence, and shall be deemed prima facie evidence of its correctness. CASE NOTES

Purpose. — This section was designed to facilitate the collection of such accounts where there was no bona fide dispute, and to relieve the plaintiff in such instances of the expense and delay of formally taking depositions. Nall v. Kelly, 169 N.C. 717, 86 S.E. 627 (1915).

This section was designed to facilitate the collection of accounts about which there is no bona fide dispute. Bramco Elec. Corp. v. Shell, 31 N.C. App. 717, 230 S.E.2d 576 (1976).

Construction of Section. — This section must be strictly construed. Bramco Elec. Corp. v. Shell, 31 N.C. App. 717, 230 S.E.2d 576 (1976).

Since many states have statutes similar to this section it is appropriate to review decisions from those states for guidance in construing this section. Bramco Elec. Corp. v. Shell, 31 N.C. App. 717, 230 S.E.2d 576 (1976).

Same — Subordinate to § 8-51. — In William M. Lloyd & Co. v. Poythress, 185 N.C. 180, 116 S.E. 584 (1923), the court said: "We have held that this section, appearing as a section on the law of evidence, should be construed in subordination to C. S., 1795, [§ 8-51] under the principle announced in Cecil v. City of High Point, 165 N.C. 431, 81 S.E. 616 (1914)." See Nall v. Kelly, 169 N.C. 717, 86 S.E. 627 (1915).

Use Not Limited to Absence of Witness. — Nothing in this section or case law limits the use of a verified statement of the account to only those situations where the witness is unavailable to testify. Johnson Serv. Co. v. Richard J. Curry & Co., 29 N.C. App. 166, 223 S.E.2d 565 (1976).

Verification Essential. — An itemized account to be prima facie evidence of its correctness must be properly verified and stated so as to show an indebtedness. Knight v. Taylor, 131 N.C. 84, 42 S.E. 537 (1902).

Sufficiency of Verification. — Verification of the itemized account is sufficient if the affiant has personal knowledge of the account or is familiar with the books and records of the business and is in a position to testify as to the correctness of the records. Johnson Serv. Co. v. Richard J. Curry & Co., 29 N.C. App. 166, 223 S.E.2d 565 (1976).

Competency of Witness Required. — Under the terms of this section, as now drawn, an affiant, verifying an account so as to make the same prima facie evidence, must be a competent witness to the facts, and, when it appears on the face of the account that he has no personal knowledge of these facts, or it is established that he is otherwise an incompetent witness, the ex parte account so verified should not be received in evidence. Nall v. Kelly, 169 N.C. 717, 86 S.E. 627 (1915). And it must appear that he is not excluded under the provision of § 8-51. See William M. Lloyd & Co. v. Poythress, 185 N.C. 180, 116 S.E. 584 (1923).

An itemized, verified statement of an account is an ex parte statement and this section, governing its admission, must be strictly complied with, and the person who verifies the account, being treated as a witness pro tanto, must be competent to testify as a witness in respect to the account if called upon at the trial, but where an itemized statement of account offered at the trial is verified by the treasurer of the plaintiff corporation who declares in his affidavit that "he is familiar with the books and business" of the plaintiff, it cannot be held as a matter of law that the affiant had no personal knowledge of the transaction, and the exclusion of the statement by the trial court will be held for reversible error. Nall v. Kelly, 169 N.C. 717, 86 S.E. 627 (1915), cited and distinguished, Endicott-Johnson Corp. v. Schochet, 198 N.C. 769, 153 S.E. 403 (1930).

The account must be sworn to by some person who would be a competent witness to testify to the correctness of the account. Johnson Serv. Co. v. Richard J. Curry & Co., 29 N.C. App. 166, 223 S.E.2d 565 (1976).

An affiant who verifies an account of goods sold and delivered, which is to be received into evidence and taken as prima facie evidence of its correctness pursuant to this section, shall be regarded and dealt with as a witness pro tanto, and to such extent must meet the requirements and is subject to the qualifications and restrictions as other witnesses. Bramco Elec. Corp. v. Shell, 31 N.C. App. 717, 230 S.E.2d 576 (1976).

Where plaintiff's purported itemized statement was verified by a woman who is identified in the verification as the president of plaintiff corporation, the verification contained no statement to the effect, and there was no other showing, that affiant had any personal knowledge of the matters set forth in the affidavit or that she was familiar with the books and records of plaintiff corporation, and the burden was on plaintiff to establish a prima facie case, it failed to show that the affiant would have been competent to testify if called as a witness at trial. Bramco Elec. Corp. v. Shell, 31 N.C. App. 717, 230 S.E.2d 576 (1976).

Prima Facie Case. — In an action to recover for goods sold and delivered, where a verified statement of the account shows that it is for goods sold by the plaintiff to the defendant and sets out the number and kind of articles, the catalogue numbers, price per dozen and discounts allowed, and there are trade terms and abbreviations well understood in the trade, which show more fully the kind of articles, it is properly itemized to make out a prima facie case under this section. Claus v. Lee, 140 N.C. 552, 53 S.E. 433 (1906); Lipinsky v. Revell, 167 N.C. 508, 83 S.E. 820 (1914).

To make out a prima facie case under this section, the account not only must be properly verified and itemized, it must also be stated so as to show an indebtedness. Kight v. Harris, 33 N.C. App. 200, 234 S.E.2d 637 (1977).

Same — Nonsuit. — Where a verified account or affidavit to a statement for goods sold and delivered is insufficient to establish a prima facie case, under the provision of this section, and this is the only evidence offered, a judgment of nonsuit upon the evidence is properly allowed. Nall v. Kelly, 169 N.C. 717, 86 S.E. 627 (1915).

Same — Burden of Proof. — Where a prima facie case has been made out by the plaintiff, in his action to recover the purchase price of goods sold and delivered to the defendant, and the latter contends that he, as the agent for the former, was to sell upon commission, and that he had accounted for such sales, except a small balance which he tendered, or offered to submit to judgment for that amount, the burden is upon the defendant to show the fact of agency, and of accounting thereon, which is for the determination of the jury upon the question of indebtedness. Carr v. Alexander & Garsed, 169 N.C. 665, 86 S.E. 613 (1915).

Husband as Agent of Wife. — Itemized statement of goods held insufficient to establish agency of husband in purchasing goods for use on wife's farm. Pitt v. Speight, 222 N.C. 585, 24 S.E.2d 350 (1943).

Applied in Wright Co. v. Green, 196 N.C. 197, 145 S.E. 16 (1928); United States Leasing Corp. v. Hall, 264 N.C. 110, 141 S.E.2d 30 (1965); Planters Indus., Inc. v. Wiggins, 17 N.C. App. 132, 193 S.E.2d 303 (1972); Harrell v. W.B. Lloyd Constr. Co., 300 N.C. 353, 266 S.E.2d 626 (1980).

Photographic Copies of Business and Public Records.

§ 8-45.1. Photographic reproductions admissible; destruction of originals.

If any business, institution, member of a profession or calling, or any department or agency of government, in the regular course of business or activity has kept or recorded any memorandum, writing, entry, print, representation, X ray or combination thereof, of any act, transaction, occurrence or event, and in the regular course of business has caused any or all of the same to be recorded, copied or reproduced by any photographic, photostatic, microfilm, microcard, miniature photographic, or other process which accurately reproduces or forms a durable medium for so reproducing the original, the original may be destroyed in the regular course of business unless held in a custodial or fiduciary capacity or unless its preservation is required by law. Such reproduction, when satisfactorily identified, is as admissible in evidence as the original itself in any judicial or administrative proceeding whether the original is in existence or not and an enlargement or facsimile of such reproduction is likewise admissible in evidence if the original reproduction is in existence and available for inspection under direction of court. The introduction of a reproduced record, enlargement or facsimile, does not preclude admission of the original. (1951, ch. 262, s. 1; 1977, ch. 569.)

CASE NOTES

"Written Hearsay" Admissible. — North Carolina countenances the introduction of test results, certified copies of official documents and records, as well as other writings, which, but for statute or decisional authority, would be written hearsay. In re Arthur, 27 N.C. App. 227, 218 S.E.2d 869 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 640, 231 S.E.2d 614 (1977).

Reproductions Are Primary Evidence. — Reproductions are made and kept among the records of many banks in due course of business. Their accuracy is not questioned. As proof of payment they constitute not secondary but primary evidence. State v. Shumaker, 251 N.C. 678, 111 S.E.2d 878 (1960).

Photostatic copies of deposit slips and checks made by an employee of a bank in the usual course of business and identified by such employee are competent as primary evidence without proof of the loss or destruction of the originals. Jones v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 5 N.C. App. 570, 169 S.E.2d 6 (1969).

Failure to Show That Copy Was Made in Regular Course of Business or by Whom It Was Made. — A photostatic copy of a purported written designation of plaintiff by deceased as the beneficiary of deceased's governmental life insurance benefits should not be admitted as evidence where plaintiff failed to show that the copy was made in the regular course of business or activity of any federal agency or by whom it was made. Jones v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 5 N.C. App. 570, 169 S.E.2d 6 (1969).

A photostatic copy of a computerized report from the operations center of a bank was admissible in a prosecution for the issuance of checks with knowledge of insufficient funds to pay the checks upon presentation. State v. Passmore, 37 N.C. App. 5, 245 S.E.2d 107, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 556, 248 S.E.2d 734 (1978).

§ 8-45.3. Photographic reproduction of records of Department of Revenue.

The State Department of Revenue is hereby specifically authorized to have photographed, photocopied, or microphotocopied all records of the Department, including tax returns required by law to be made to the Department, and said photographs, photocopies, or microphotocopies, when certified by the Department as true and correct photographs, photocopies, or microphotocopies, shall be as admissible in evidence in all actions, proceedings and matters as the originals thereof would have been. Evidence of Fraud, Duress, Undue Influence.

§ 8-45.5. Statements, releases, etc., obtained from persons in shock or under the influence of drugs; fraud presumed.

Any oral or written statement, waiver, release, receipt, or other representation of any kind by any person made or executed while a patient in any hospital and taken by any person in connection with any type of insurance coverage on or for the benefit of said patient which shall have been taken while such patient was in shock or appreciably under the influence of any drug, including drugs given primarily for sedation, shall be deemed to have been obtained by means of fraud, duress or undue influence on the part of the person or persons taking same, and the same shall be incompetent and inadmissible in evidence to prove or disprove any fact or circumstance relating to any claim for which any insurance company may be liable under any policy of insurance issued to, or which may indemnify or provide coverage or protection for the person making or executing any such statement or other instrument while a patient in a hospital, nor may any such person making or executing the same be examined or cross-examined in regard thereto. CASE NOTES

Tables Need Not Be Specially Put in Evidence. — This section being a public act, the tables herein contained are competent as evidence without being specially put in evidence. Coley v. City of Statesville, 121 N.C. 301, 28 S.E. 482 (1897).

The mortuary table in this section is one of the prevailing mortality tables put into statutory form so as to permit its use without formal proof. Rea v. Simowitz, 225 N.C. 575, 35 S.E.2d 871, 162 A.L.R. 999 (1945).

The mortuary table is statutory and need not be introduced in evidence, but may receive judicial notice when facts are in evidence requiring or permitting its application. Chandler v. Moreland Chem. Co., 270 N.C. 395, 154 S.E.2d 502 (1967).

The table, being statutory, need not be introduced in evidence in order to make use of it upon the question of damages when other facts are in evidence permitting its application. Johnson v. Lamb, 273 N.C. 701, 161 S.E.2d 131 (1968).

Mortuary table is competent evidence bearing upon life expectancy and future earning capacity of the injured person in actions for personal injuries resulting in permanent disability. Gillikin v. Burbage, 263 N.C. 317, 139 S.E.2d 753 (1965).

But it is not admissible unless there is evidence of permanent injury. Gillikin v. Burbage, 263 N.C. 317, 139 S.E.2d 753 (1965); McCoy v. Dowdy, 16 N.C. App. 242, 192 S.E.2d 81 (1972).

Where testimony tended to show that plaintiff's injuries were permanent in character, it was proper for the presiding judge to permit plaintiff to introduce and the jury to consider the mortuary tables formerly embodied in this section. Hunt v. Wooten, 238 N.C. 42, 76 S.E.2d 326 (1953).

The mortuary tables were properly introduced into evidence on the issue of damages over defendant's objection where plaintiff introduced evidence that he received permanently disfiguring scars from sulphuric acid burns as a result of defendant's negligence. Chandler v. Moreland Chem. Co., 270 N.C. 395, 154 S.E.2d 502 (1967).

Tables Not Conclusive. — In an action to recover damages for a personal injury, the expectation of life tables contained in this section are not conclusive but merely evidential on the issue as to damages. Sledge v. Lumber Co., 140 N.C. 459, 53 S.E. 295 (1906); Odom v. Canfield Lumber Co., 173 N.C. 134, 91 S.E. 716 (1917); Young v. E.A. Wood & Co., 196 N.C. 435, 146 S.E. 70 (1929). The tables must be considered in connection with the "other evidence as to the health, constitution and habits" of the deceased. Russell v. Windsor Steamboat Co., 126 N.C. 961, 36 S.E. 191 (1900). See Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Atlantic Greyhound Lines, 210 N.C. 293, 186 S.E. 320 (1936); Hancock v. Wilson, 211 N.C. 129, 189 S.E. 631 (1937).

The mortuary table is merely evidence of life expectancy to be considered with other evidence as to the health, constitution and habits of the deceased, and an instruction making the expectancy set out in this section definitive and conclusive not only violates the evidence rule, but also § 1-180 (now repealed) prohibiting the expression of an opinion "whether a fact is fully or sufficiently proven." Starnes v. Tyson, 226 N.C. 395, 38 S.E.2d 211 (1946).

This section does not, like § 8-47, give a mathematical result which the court can apply. The table given is merely evidentiary. Waggoner v. Waggoner, 246 N.C. 210, 97 S.E.2d 887 (1957).

Value of Life Tenancy. — When a life tenant and the remainderman sell the lands, the life tenant is entitled to the present cash value of her life estate in the purchase price, computed according to her life expectancy at the date of the execution of the deed, and the remainderman is entitled to the balance of the purchase price. Thompson v. Avery County, 216 N.C. 405, 5 S.E.2d 146 (1939).

Value of Dower. — Because the mortuary table is only evidentiary, it has been decided that the cash value of dower inchoate depends on the ages of husband and wife, and on their health, habits and all other circumstances tending to show the probabilities as to the length of life. And there is no reason for differing rules for determining life expectancy as between married women entitled to dower inchoate and widows entitled to dower consummate. Waggoner v. Waggoner, 246 N.C. 210, 97 S.E.2d 887 (1957).

Failure to Instruct Jury as to Life Expectancy of Plaintiff. — In the absence of a request, the judge did not commit reversible error in failing to instruct the jury in an action for personal injury that the plaintiff had a life expectancy of 15.27 years according to the mortuary table, which he had introduced in evidence, where, although the charge did not contain a direct reference to the plaintiff's life expectancy, the court did instruct the jury to take into consideration all the evidence bearing on the issue, including the plaintiff's age. Derby v. Owens, 245 N.C. 591, 96 S.E.2d 851 (1957).

Erroneous Instruction. — Where the element of future damages figured largely in consideration of the issue, an instruction to the effect that the jury could take into consideration the mortuary tables as to the life expectancy of plaintiff, without reference to the evidence as to plaintiff's health prior and subsequent to the accident and without charging that the mortuary tables could be considered only as evidence together with other evidence as to the health, constitution and habits of plaintiff, was incomplete and erroneous. Harris v. Atlantic Greyhound Corp., 243 N.C. 346, 90 S.E.2d 710 (1956).

Applied in Brenkworth v. Lanier, 260 N.C. 279, 132 S.E.2d 623 (1963); Kinsey v. Town of Kenly, 263 N.C. 376, 139 S.E.2d 686 (1965); Knight v. Seymour, 263 N.C. 790, 140 S.E.2d 410 (1965); Dolan v. Simpson, 269 N.C. 438, 152 S.E.2d 523 (1967); Teachey v. Woolard, 16 N.C. App. 249, 191 S.E.2d 903 (1972).

§ 8-47. Present worth of annuities.

Whenever it is necessary to establish the present worth or cash value of an annuity to a person, payable annually during his life, such present worth or cash value may be ascertained by the use of the following table in connection with the mortuary tables established by law, the first column representing the number of years the annuity is to run and the second column representing the present cash value of an annuity of one dollar for such number of years, respectively:

The present cash value of the annuity for a fraction of a year may be ascertained as follows: Multiply the difference between the cash value of the annuities for the preceding and succeeding full years by the fraction of the year in decimals and add the sum to the present cash value for the preceding full year. When a person is entitled to the use of a sum of money for life, or for a given time, the interest thereon for one year, computed at four and one half percent ($4^1/_2$%), may be considered as an annuity and the present cash value be ascertained as herein provided: Provided, the interest rate in computing the present cash value of a life interest in land shall be six percent (6%).

Whenever the mortuary tables set out in G.S. 8-46 are admissible in evidence in any action or proceeding to establish the expectancy of continued life of any person from any period of such person's life, whether he be living at the time or not, the annuity tables herein set forth shall be evidence, but not conclusive, of the loss of income during the period of life expectancy of such person. CASE NOTES

Applicable Only to Annuities. — This section is intended to apply strictly to annuities, and therefore, in an action to recover damages for injuries causing death, it was error to permit the jury to consider the provisions thereof for the purpose of ascertaining the present value of the intestate's life. Poe v. Railroad, 141 N.C. 525, 54 S.E. 466 (1906). See Brown v. Lipe, 210 N.C. 199, 185 S.E. 681 (1936).

Interest Rate. — Annuities, under this section, must be computed at 4.5% and not at 6%. Smith v. Smith, 223 N.C. 433, 27 S.E.2d 137 (1943).

Value of Widow's Annuity. — By the specific language of the proviso in this section a widow is entitled to have her annuity computed at 6% when her dower (now life interest in lieu of an intestate share) is sold. Brenkworth v. Lanier, 260 N.C. 279, 132 S.E.2d 623 (1963).

ARTICLE 6.

Calendars.

§ 8-48. Clark's Calendar; proof of dates.

In any controversy or inquiry in any court or before any fact finding board, commission, administrative agency or other body, where it becomes necessary or pertinent to determine any information which may be established by reference to a calendar for any year between the years one thousand seven hundred and fifty-three and two thousand and two, anno domini, inclusive, it is permissible to introduce in evidence "Clark's Calendar, a Calendar Covering

250 Years, 1753 A.D. to 2002 A.D.," as supplemented, copyrighted, 1940, by E. D. Clark, Entry: Class AA, Number three hundred and twenty-eight thousand five hundred and seventy-three, Copyright Office of the United States of America, Washington, or any reprint of said one thousand nine hundred and forty edition certified by the Secretary of State to be an accurate copy thereof; and such calendar or reprint, when so introduced, shall be prima facie evidence that the information disclosed by said calendar or reprint thereof is true and correct. (1941, c. 312.)

Article 7.

Competency of Witnesses.

§ 8-49. Witness not excluded by interest or crime.

No person offered as a witness shall be excluded, by reason of incapacity from interest or crime, from giving evidence either in person or by deposition, according to the practice of the court, on the trial of any issue joined, or of any matter or question, or on any inquiry arising in any suit or proceeding, civil or criminal, in any court, or before any judge, justice, jury or other person having, by law, authority to hear, receive and examine evidence; and every person so offered shall be admitted to give evidence, notwithstanding such person may or shall have an interest in the matter in question, or in the event of the trial of the issue, or of the suit or other proceeding in which he is offered as a witness. This section shall not be construed to apply to attesting witnesses to wills. (1866, c. 43, ss. 1, 4; C. C. P., c. 342; 1869-70, c. 177; 1871-2, c. 4; Code, ss. 589, 1350; Rev., ss. 1628, 1629; C. S., s. 1792.)

CASE NOTES

This section abolishes the common-law rule which prevented a party who was interested in the result of the verdict and judgment from appearing as a witness. A similar enactment will be found in the statutes of practically all the states. The trend of the development of the rules of evidence has been to remove personal disqualification to testify. State v. Davis, 229 N.C. 386, 50 S.E.2d 37 (1948).

Section construed with § 8-51. — The provisions of this section must be considered in the light of those contained in § 8-51 which place certain restrictions on the general rule embodied in this section. In other words, the provisions of § 8-51 form exceptions to this section, and take them from the operation of its principle, leaving the parties falling within these exceptions to stand upon the same footing as they did prior to the enactment of this section. See Charlotte Oil & Fertilizer Co. v. Rippy, 124 N.C. 643, 32 S.E. 980 (1899).

And with §§ 8-50 and 8-56. — The construction of this section should also be in connection with the provisions of §§ 8-50 and 8-56, since they all relate to the same subject — the competency of the witnesses. Powell v. Strickland, 163 N.C. 393, 79 S.E. 872 (1913).

Burden on Challenger to Show Disqualification. — The general rule established by this section and § 8-50 is that no person offered as a witness shall be excluded on account of interest or because a party to the action, except as otherwise provided. Hence, it is incumbent upon one who challenges the competency of the witness to show disqualification. Sanderson v. Paul, 235 N.C. 56, 69 S.E.2d 156 (1952).

Party Testifying in Own Behalf. — The provisions of this section make it permissible for a party to testify in his own behalf. State v. McIntosh, 64 N.C. 607 (1870); Autry v. Floyd, 127 N.C. 186, 37 S.E. 208 (1900).

Legatee under Will as Witness. — Under this section removing the disqualification on account of interest, the widow of the testator, who was named as a legatee and devisee in a will, was a competent witness to prove the fact that the script propounded was found among the papers of the deceased. Nor would the last provision of the section prevent the widow from testifying, since this provision applies only to attesting witnesses to the execution of a will. Cornelius v. Brawley, 109 N.C. 542, 14 S.E. 78 (1891).

Beneficiary under Holograph Will. — Under this section and § 8-50, one who is a beneficiary under a holograph will may testify to such competent relevant and material facts as tend to establish it as a valid will without rendering void the benefits he is to receive thereunder. It is otherwise as to an attesting witness of a will that the statute requires to be attested by witness thereto. In re Will of Westfeldt, 188 N.C. 702, 125 S.E. 531 (1924).

Executor as Witness. — An executor, named in a will, is a competent witness to testify as to the existence, probate and registration of a will, he being rendered competent by this section, and he is not disqualified by § 8-51, as to transactions occurring after the death of the testator, as they can in no sense be considered as transactions between the witness and the testator. Cox v. Beaufort County Lumber Co., 124 N.C. 78, 32 S.E. 381 (1899).

The widow of a deceased vendor, who was present at the sale of a mule by her husband to the plaintiff, was a competent witness under this section, and was not excluded under § 8-51, as she was not a party to the action and had no interest in the same. Little v. Ratliff, 126 N.C. 262, 35 S.E. 469 (1900).

Mortgagee. — Where he is not excluded under the provisions of § 8-51, the mortgagee in a chattel mortgage is competent, as a subscribing witness thereto, to prove its execution for admission to probate, inasmuch as this section removes the disqualification formerly attaching to witnesses having an interest. Clark v. Hodge, 116 N.C. 761, 21 S.E. 562 (1895).

Fornication and Adultery. — In a trial for fornication and adultery a former defendant as to whom a nolle prosequi had been entered was a competent witness against the other defendant. State v. Phipps, 76 N.C. 203 (1877).

§ 8-50. Parties competent as witnesses.

(a) On the trial of any issue, or of any matter or question, or on any inquiry arising in any action, suit or other proceeding in court, or before any judge, justice, jury or other person having, by law, authority to hear and examine evidence, the parties themselves and the person in whose behalf any suit or other proceeding may be brought or defended, shall, except as otherwise provided, be competent and compellable to give evidence, either viva voce or by deposition, according to the practice of the court, in behalf of either or any of the parties to said action, suit or other proceeding. Nothing in this section shall be construed to apply to any action or other proceeding in any court instituted in consequence of adultery, or to any action for criminal conversation.

(b), (c): Repealed by Session Laws 1967, c. 954, s. 4. (1866, c. 43, ss. 2, 3; Code, s. 1351; Rev., s. 1630; C. S., s. 1793; 1953, c. 885, s. 1; 1967, c. 954, s. 4.)

CASE NOTES

Evidence of Spouse's Conduct. This section and §§ 8-49 and 8-51 should be construed together, and thus construed, they do not prohibit the evidence of the husband as to the conduct of his wife, where she is not a party, in his action against another for damages for criminal conversation with his wife and the alienation of her affections. Powell v. Strickland, 163 N.C. 393, 79 S.E. 872 (1913).

Same — Introduction Prohibited by Common Law. — At common law, neither the husband nor the wife is allowed to prove the fact of access or nonaccess; and as such rule is founded "upon decency, morality and public policy," it is not changed by this section, allowing parties to testify in their own behalf. Boykin v. Boykin, 70 N.C. 262 (1874).

Testifying against Codefendant. — A defendant in a criminal case is, under this section, competent and compellable to testify for or against a codefendant, provided his testimony does not incriminate himself. State v. Smith, 86 N.C. 705 (1882); State v. Medley, 178 N.C. 710, 100 S.E. 591 (1919).

Same — Practice Not Commendable. — The practice of sending codefendants to the grand jury to testify against each other, while allowable, is not commended. State v. Frizell, 111 N.C. 722, 16 S.E. 409 (1892).

Consolidation and Testimony of Codefendant. — Where the testimony of codefendant would have carried equal force if it had been received without an order of consolidation, there was no abuse of discretion in the trial judge's order consolidating cases for trial. State v. Taylor, 289 N.C. 223, 221 S.E.2d 359 (1976).

Defendant's contention that consolidation of cases resulted in prejudicial error to him because he was deprived of his right to open and close the jury arguments when his codefendant elected to testify was without merit. State v. Taylor, 289 N.C. 223, 221 S.E.2d 359 (1976).

Testimony of an Accomplice. — An accomplice may not testify on direct examination to facts tending to incriminate defendant and at the same time refuse to answer questions on cross-examination relating to matters embraced in his examination-in-chief, and where he refuses to answer relevant questions on cross-examination on the ground that his answers might tend to incriminate him, it is error for the court to refuse defendant's motion that his testimony-in-chief be stricken from the record, the refusal to answer the questions on cross-examination rendering the testimony-in-chief incompetent. State v. Perry, 210 N.C. 796, 188 S.E. 639 (1936).

It is well established that an accomplice is always a competent witness. State v. Taylor, 289 N.C. 223, 221 S.E.2d 359 (1976).

Fact that accomplice's testimony is usually induced by promise of or hope for leniency goes only to his credibility as a witness, and not to his competency as a witness. State v. Taylor, 289 N.C. 223, 221 S.E.2d 359 (1976).

Instructing Witness Not to Incriminate Himself. — In an indictment for an affray, it was not error for the presiding judge to caution the witness (a defendant) before the counsel for the other defendant cross-examined him, that he need not tell anything to incriminate himself. State v. Weaver, 93 N.C. 595 (1885).

Applied in Powell v. Cross, 263 N.C. 764, 140 S.E.2d 393 (1965).

§ 8-50.1. Competency of blood tests; jury charge; taxing of expenses as costs.

(a) In the trial of any criminal action or proceeding in any court in which the question of parentage arises, regardless of any presumptions with respect to parentage, the court before whom the matter may be brought, upon motion of the State or the defendant, shall order that the alleged-parent defendant, the known natural parent, and the child submit to any blood tests and comparisons which have been developed and adapted for purposes of establishing or disproving parentage and which are reasonably accessible to the alleged-parent defendant, the known natural parent, and the child. The results of those blood tests and comparisons, including the statistical likelihood of the alleged parent's parentage, if available, shall be admitted in evidence when offered by a duly qualified, licensed practicing physician, duly qualified immunologist, duly qualified geneticist, or other duly qualified person. Upon receipt of a motion and the entry of an order under the provisions of this subsection, the court shall proceed as follows:

(1) Where the issue of parentage is to be decided by a jury, where the results of those blood tests and comparisons are not shown to be inconsistent with the results of any other blood tests and comparisons, and where the results of those blood tests and comparisons indicate that the alleged-parent defendant cannot be the natural parent of the child, the jury shall be instructed that if they believe that the witness presenting the results testified truthfully as to those results, and if they believe that the tests and comparisons were conducted properly, then it will be their duty to decide that the alleged-parent is not the natural parent; whereupon, the court shall enter the special verdict of not guilty; and

(2) By requiring the State or defendant, as the case may be, requesting the blood tests and comparisons pursuant to this subsection to initially be responsible for any of the expenses thereof and upon the entry of a special verdict incorporating a finding of parentage or non-parentage, by taxing the expenses for blood tests and comparisons, in addition to any fees for expert witnesses allowed per G.S. 7A-314 whose testimonies supported the admissibility thereof, as costs in accordance with G.S. 7A-304; G.S. Chapter 6, Article 7; or G.S. 7A-315, as applicable.

(b) In the trial of any civil action in which the question of parentage arises, the court before whom the matter may be brought, upon motion of the plaintiff, alleged-parent defendant, or other interested party, shall order that the alleged-parent defendant, the known natural parent, and the child submit to any blood tests and comparisons which have been developed and adapted for purposes of establishing or disproving parentage and which are reasonably accessible to the alleged-parent defendant, the known natural parent, and the child. The results of those blood tests and comparisons, including the statistical likelihood of the alleged-parent's parentage, if available, shall be admitted in evidence when offered by a duly qualified, licensed practicing physician, duly qualified immunologist, duly qualified geneticist, or other qualified person. Upon receipt of a motion and the entry of an order under the provisions of this subsection, the court shall proceed as follows:

(1) Where the issue of parentage is to be decided by a jury, where the results of those blood tests and comparisons are not shown to be inconsistent with the results of any other blood tests and comparisons, and where the results of those blood tests and comparisons indicate that the alleged-parent defendant cannot be the natural parent of the child, the jury shall be instructed that if they believe that the witness presenting the results testified truthfully as to those results, and if they believe that the tests and comparisons were conducted properly, then it will be their duty to decide that the alleged-parent defendant is not the natural parent; and

(2) By requiring the plaintiff, alleged-parent defendant or other interested party requesting blood tests and comparisons pursuant to this subsection to initially be responsible for any of the expenses thereof and upon the entry of a verdict of parentage or non-parentage, by taxing the expenses for blood tests and comparisons, in addition to any fees for expert witnesses allowed per G.S. 7A-314 whose testimonies supported the admissibility thereof, as costs in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 6-21. (1949, c. 51; 1965, c. 618; 1975, c. 449, ss. 1, 2; 1979, c. 576, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited in the following annotations were decided under this section as it stood before the 1975 amendment, which made the results of a blood test, not in conflict with other blood tests, conclusive rather than merely competent evidence that defendant could not be the father of the child.

The provisions of this section were intended to apply alike in civil and criminal actions except in those particulars involving procedural differences. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

But Only in Actions in Which Question of Paternity Arises. — This section requires blood-grouping tests only in actions in which the question of paternity arises. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Before a court is required to order a blood-grouping test in a civil action, the question of paternity must arise. Williams v. Holland, 39 N.C. App. 141, 249 S.E.2d 821 (1978).

Weight Given Tests Is Legislative Question. — It is for the General Assembly to decide the question of the weight to be given blood-grouping tests. State v. Camp, 286 N.C. 148, 209 S.E.2d 754 (1974).

Results of Tests Are Competent to Rebut Any Presumption of Paternity. — In both criminal and civil actions in which the question of paternity arises, the results of blood-grouping tests must be admitted in evidence when offered by a duly licensed practicing physician or other qualified person, regardless of any presumptions with respect to paternity, and such evidence shall be competent to rebut any presumptions of paternity. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Including Common-Law Presumption of Legitimacy. — Assuming blood-grouping tests are made and offered in evidence by qualified persons, the results thereof, if they tend to exclude defendant as the father of the child, may be offered in evidence to rebut the common-law presumption of legitimacy. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Tests Cannot Prove Paternity. — The value of serological blood tests, when made and interpreted by specifically qualified technicians, using approved testing procedures and reagents of standard strength, is now generally recognized. Such tests, however, can never prove the paternity of any individual, and they cannot always exclude the possibility. Nevertheless, in a significant number of cases, they can disprove it. State v. Fowler, 277 N.C. 305, 177 S.E.2d 385 (1970).

Tests Conclusive Only in Excluding Putative Father. — The blood-grouping test results are conclusive only in excluding the putative father. The results might show him to have a blood type which the father of the child must have had; but this only indicates that of all the people of that blood type or group, he, as well as anyone else with that blood type or group, could have been the father of the child. State v. Fowler, 277 N.C. 305, 177 S.E.2d 385 (1970).

Effect Where Principle of Res Judicata Bars Issue of Paternity. — Where the defendant in an action to recover arrearages for child support was barred by principles of res judicata from putting paternity in issue as the result of a prior adjudication of paternity in a Nevada divorce action in which the Nevada court had in personam jurisdiction over the defendant, the trial court erred in allowing the defendant's motion for blood-grouping tests. Williams v. Holland, 39 N.C. App. 141, 249 S.E.2d 821 (1978).

Defendant Has Right to Blood Test. — There can be no doubt that a defendant's right to a blood test to determine parentage is a substantial right and that, upon defendant's motion, the court must order the test when it is possible to do so. State v. Fowler, 277 N.C. 305, 177 S.E.2d 385 (1970).

A defendant is entitled in a proceeding under the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act to a blood-grouping test pursuant to this section where the issue of paternity is raised and, upon timely motion, is entitled to have the jury pass on the issue of paternity. Brondum v. Cox, 230 N.C. App. 35, 226 S.E.2d 193, aff'd, 30 N.C. App. 35, 232 S.E.2d 687 (1976).

The 1975 amendment to this section amplifies the importance of the right to a blood-grouping test under § 49-7. State v. Morgan, 31 N.C. App. 128, 228 S.E.2d 523 (1976).

The only areas in which the results of blood grouping tests should be open to attack are in the method of testing or in the qualifications of the persons performing the tests. State v. Fowler, 277 N.C. 305, 177 S.E.2d 385 (1970).

Tests May Not Be Accurate until Infant Six Months Old. — In a few cases it has been found that an infant's blood group cannot be established immediately after birth. However, by the age of six months, an accurate determination can always be had. State v. Fowler, 277 N.C. 305, 177 S.E.2d 385 (1970).

When the death of the child makes a blood test impossible the situation is analogous to that which occurs when an eyewitness to events constituting the basis for an indictment dies before the accused has interviewed him or taken his deposition. It would hardly be suggested that to try the defendant after the death of that witness would deprive him of due process and that therefore the prosecution must be dismissed. State v. Fowler, 277 N.C. 305, 177 S.E.2d 385 (1970).

Tests May Be Ordered in Action for Alimony and Child Support Where Husband Denies Paternity. — In plaintiff-wife's action for alimony, alimony pendente lite and child support, defendant-husband was entitled under the section to an order for a blood grouping test where plaintiff alleged and defendant denied that he was the father of a child born to plaintiff during the subsistence of the marriage. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

And Results of Test May Also Be Evidence of Adultery. — While there is no authority for blood-grouping tests unless an issue of paternity is raised, in a case in which the issue of paternity is raised, the results of the blood-grouping tests, if they exclude defendant as the father of a child admittedly born during the subsistence of the marriage, also would be evidence of adultery. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Applied in Johnson v. Johnson, 7 N.C. App. 310, 172 S.E.2d 264 (1970); State v. White, 42 N.C. App. 320, 256 S.E.2d 505 (1979); Bunting v. Beacham, 45 N.C. App. 304, 262 S.E.2d 672 (1980).

§ 8-50.2. Results of speed-measuring instruments; admissibility.

(a) The results of the use of radio microwave or other speed-measuring instruments shall be admissible as evidence of the speed of an object in any criminal or civil proceeding for the purpose of corroborating the opinion of a person as to the speed of an object based upon the visual observation of the object by such person.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) of this section, the results of a radio microwave or other electronic speed-measuring instrument are not admissible in any proceeding unless it is found that:

(1) The operator of the instrument held, at the time the results of the speed-measuring instrument were obtained, a certificate from the North Carolina Criminal Justice Education and Training Standards Commission (hereinafter referred to as the Commission) authorizing him to operate the speed-measuring instrument from which the results were obtained.

(2) The operator of the instrument operated the speed-measuring instrument in accordance with the procedures established by the Commission for the operation of such instrument.

(3) The instrument employed was approved for use by the Commission and the Secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety pursuant to G.S. 17C-6.

(4) The speed-measuring instrument had been calibrated and tested for accuracy in accordance with the standards established by the Commission for that particular instrument.

(c) All radio microwave and other electronic speed-measuring instruments shall be tested for accuracy by a technician possessing at least a second-class radiotelephone license from the Federal Communications Commission within a period of six months prior to the alleged violation. A written certificate by such technician showing that the test was made within the required period and that the instrument was accurate shall be competent and prima facie evidence of those facts in any proceeding referred to in subsection (a) of this section.

(d) In every proceeding where the results of a radio microwave or other speed-measuring instrument is sought to be admitted, judicial notice shall be taken of the rules approving the use of the models and types of radio microwave and other speed-measuring instruments and the procedures for operation and calibration or measuring accuracy of such instruments, when such rules are filed with the Attorney General in accordance with General Statutes Chapter 150A. (1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1184, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1184, s. 4, makes the act effective July 1, 1982.

§ 8-51. A party to a transaction excluded, when the other party is dead.

Upon the trial of an action, or the hearing upon the merits of a special proceeding, a party or a person interested in the event, or a person from, through or under whom such a party or interested person derives his interest or title by assignment or otherwise, shall not be examined as a witness in his own behalf or interest, or in behalf of the party succeeding to his title or interest, against the executor, administrator or survivor of a deceased person, or the committee of a lunatic, or a person deriving his title or interest from, through or under a deceased person or lunatic, by assignment or otherwise, concerning a personal transaction or communication between the witness and the deceased person or lunatic; except where the executor, administrator, survivor, committee or person so deriving title or interest is examined in his own behalf, or the testimony of the lunatic or deceased person is given in evidence concerning the same transaction or communication. Nothing in this section shall preclude testimony as to the identity of the operator of a motor vehicle in any case. (C. C. P., s. 343; Code, s. 590; Rev., s. 1631; C. S., s. 1795; 1967, c. 896, s. 1; 1977, c. 74, s. 2.)

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Summary and Analysis of Section. — Mr. Justice Clark in Bunn v. Todd, 107 N.C. 266, 11 S.E. 1043 (1890), gives the following analytical treatment to this section, which has been cited and approved in many of the cases coming within the principales of this section. See Seals v. Seals, 165 N.C. 409, 81 S.E. 613 (1914); Fidelity Bank v. Wysong & Miles Co., 177 N.C. 284, 98 S.E. 769 (1919).

"It [this section] disqualifies —

"WHOM — 1. Parties to the action.

2. Persons interested in the event of the action.

3. Persons through or under whom the persons in the first two classes derive their title or interest.

"A witness, although belonging to one of these three classes, is incompetent only in the following cases:

"WHEN — To testify in behalf of himself, or the person succeeding to his title or interest, against the representative or a deceased person, or committee of a lunatic, or any one deriving his title or interest through them.

"And the disqualification of such person, and in even such cases, is restricted to the following:

"SUBJECT MATTER. — As to a personal transaction or communication between the witness and the person since deceased or a lunatic.

"And even as to those persons and in those cases there are the following:

"EXCEPTIONS. — When the representative of, or person claiming through or under, the deceased person or lunatic is examined in his own behalf, or the testimony of the deceased person or lunatic is given in evidence concerning the same transaction. Burnett v. Savage, 92 N.C. 10 (1885); Sumner v. Candler, 92 N.C. 634 (1885)."

This summary is the basis of the analysis of the section in the following annotation. — Ed. note.

Purpose of Section. — The mischief the statute was passed to prevent was the giving of testimony by a witness interested in the event, as to a personal transaction or communication between the witness and the deceased person whose lips are sealed in death. Abernathy v. Skidmore, 190 N.C. 66, 128 S.E. 475 (1925).

The purpose of this section is to exclude evidence of a personal transaction or communication between the witness and a person who by reason of death or lunacy cannot be heard. White v. Mitchell, 196 N.C. 89, 144 S.E. 526 (1928).

The reasoning behind this section is succinctly stated: Death having closed the mouth of one of the parties (with respect to a personal transaction or communication), it is but meet that the law should not permit the other to speak of those matters which are forbidden by the statute. Men quite often understand and interpret personal transactions and communications differently, at best; and the legislature, in its wisdom, has declared that an ex parte statement of such matters shall not be received in evidence. Carswell v. Greene, 253 N.C. 266, 166 S.E.2d 801 (1960); Whitley v. Redden, 5 N.C. App. 705, 169 S.E.2d 260 (1969), rev'd on other grounds, 276 N.C. 263, 171 S.E.2d 894 (1970).

The law that an interested survivor to a personal transaction or communication cannot testify with respect thereto against the dead man's estate is intended as a shield to protect against fraudulent and unfounded claims. It is not intended as a sword with which the estate may attack the survivor. Pearce v. Barham, 267 N.C. 707, 149 S.E.2d 22 (1966); Smith v. Dean, 2 N.C. App. 553, 163 S.E.2d 551 (1968).

The rule that evidence offered is admissible if it is competent for any purpose ought not to be used as a sword with which to attack a decedent's estate by destroying the express provisions of this section. Whitley v. Redden, 5 N.C. App. 705, 169 S.E.2d 260 (1969), rev'd on other grounds, 276 N.C. 263, 171 S.E.2d 894 (1970).

When Testimony Is Incompetent under This Section. — This section does not render the testimony of a witness incompetent in any case unless these four questions require an affirmative answer: 1. Is the witness (a) a party to the action, or (b) a person interested in the event of the action, or (c) a person from, through or under whom such a party or interested person derives his interest or title? 2. Is the witness testifying (a) in his own behalf or interest, or (b) in behalf of the party succeeding to his title or interest? 3. Is the witness testifying against (a) the personal representative of a deceased person, or (b) the committee of a lunatic, or (c) a person deriving his title or interest from, through or under a deceased person or lunatic? 4. Does the testimony of the witness concern a personal transaction or communication between the witness and the deceased person or lunatic? Peek v. Shook, 233 N.C. 259, 63 S.E.2d 542 (1951); Brown v. Green, 3 N.C. App. 506, 165 S.E.2d 534 (1969); Ballard v. Lance, 6 N.C. App. 24, 169 S.E.2d 199 (1969); Etheridge v. Etheridge, 41 N.C. App. 39, 255 S.E.2d 735 (1979).

Even in instances where these four things concur, the testimony of the witness is nevertheless admissible under an exception specified in the statute itself if the personal representative of the deceased person, or the committee of the lunatic, or the person deriving his title or interest from, through, or under the deceased person or lunatic, is examined in his own behalf, or the testimony of the deceased person or lunatic is given in evidence concerning the same transaction or communication. Peek v. Shook, 233 N.C. 259, 63 S.E.2d 542 (1951); Brown v. Green, 3 N.C. App. 506, 165 S.E.2d 534 (1969).

The testimony of a witness is incompetent under the provisions of this statute when it appears (1) that such witness is a party, or interested in the event, (2) that his testimony relates to a personal transaction or communication with the deceased person, (3) that the action is against the personal representative of the deceased or a person deriving title or interest from, through or under the deceased, and (4) that the witness is testifying in his own behalf or interest. Collins v. Covert, 246 N.C. 303, 98 S.E.2d 26 (1957); Godwin v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 259 N.C. 520, 131 S.E.2d 456 (1963).

Reasons for Exclusion. — The exclusion of such testimony rests not merely upon the ground that the dead man cannot have a fair showing, but upon the broader and more practical ground that the other party to the action has no chance by the oath of the relevant witness to reply to the oath of the party to the action. In re Will of Mann, 192 N.C. 248, 134 S.E. 649 (1926).

Courts are not disposed to extend the disqualification of a witness under this section to those not included in its express terms. Sanderson v. Paul, 235 N.C. 56, 69 S.E.2d 156 (1952); Brown v. Whitley, 12 N.C. App. 306, 183 S.E.2d 258 (1971).

The provisions of this section may be waived by the adverse party. Andrews v. Smith, 198 N.C. 34, 150 S.E. 670 (1929).

Where an administrator brought proceedings under former § 1-569 et seq., to examine a defendant to discover assets of the estate of the deceased, the administrator waived the provisions of this section and the testimony thus taken could be introduced by the defendant in his own behalf. Andrews v. Smith, 198 N.C. 34, 150 S.E. 670 (1929).

If the plaintiffs at a former trial called the defendant as an adverse witness, examined her in detail about her relations with deceased, such examination would seem to be a waiver of this section and would open the door for the defendant to testify in another trial in respect to the matters about which the plaintiffs examined her. Hayes v. Ricard, 244 N.C. 313, 93 S.E.2d 540 (1956).

Where a party claiming under a deceased person examines the attorney for the deceased in respect to the execution and delivery of deeds to the land in controversy and the consideration therefor, such examination constitutes a waiver of this section in respect to communications or transactions with decedent, and the other party is entitled to cross-examine the attorney as to such transactions. However, the waiver does not apply to other and independent transactions. Hayes v. Ricard, 244 N.C. 313, 93 S.E.2d 540 (1956).

Where the plaintiffs adversely examined the defendant for the purpose of obtaining evidence for use in the trial as provided in former §§ 1-568.1 to 1-568.16, that examination is a waiver of the protection afforded by this section to the extent that either party may use it upon the trial. Hayes v. Ricard, 244 N.C. 313, 93 S.E.2d 540 (1956).

But adverse examinations of defendant in regard to transactions with decedent, which examinations were taken in prior actions nonsuited, do not operate as a waiver of this section so as to render competent defendant's testimony in subsequent trials in regard to such transactions. McCurdy v. Ashley, 259 N.C. 619, 131 S.E.2d 321 (1963).

Where an action to recover for injuries to one passenger is consolidated with two actions for wrongful deaths of two other passengers against the same defendant, the admission of testimony of plaintiff passenger in regard to a transaction between defendant and one of the deceased passengers does not constitute a waiver of this section in regard to the two actions for wrongful death. McCurdy v. Ashley, 259 N.C. 619, 131 S.E.2d 321 (1963).

Under certain circumstances the personal representative can waive the protection afforded by this section, and when this is done, it is frequently referred to as "opening the door" for the testimony of the opposing party or interested survivor. Smith v. Dean, 2 N.C. App. 553, 163 S.E.2d 551 (1968).

Province of Court to Decide What Testimony May "Come In". — When a personal representative "opens the door" by testifying to a transaction, it is not in his province, but that of the court, to decide what testimony favorable to the adverse party may "come in." Mansfield v. Wade, 208 N.C. 790, 182 S.E. 475 (1935).

This section applies to actions in tort as well as actions on contract. Boyd v. Williams, 207 N.C. 30, 175 S.E. 832 (1934). See Hardison v. Gregory, 242 N.C. 324, 88 S.E.2d 96 (1955).

This section prohibits the surviving party from testifying in his own behalf with respect to personal transactions and communications between him and a deceased person in an action in which the survivor seeks to establish a claim, either in contract or in tort, against the estate of the deceased. Carswell v. Greene, 253 N.C. 266, 116 S.E.2d 801 (1960).

Itemized and Verified Accounts. — Section 8-45 relating to itemized and verified accounts is subordinate to this section. See note of William M. Lloyd & Co. v. Poythress, 185 N.C. 180, 116 S.E. 584 (1923), placed under § 8-45.

Testimony Not Barred by Section. — Where a widow was entitled during her widowhood to the profits on the land devised by her deceased husband, but not to his moneys commingled therewith in a deposit in a bank, and she died devising the total amount of the deposit: Held, testimony as to her receipt of the money from the crops was competent, not falling within the provisions of this section, and did not affect the title to other money owned by her husband at his death and given to her for life by his will. White v. Mitchell, 196 N.C. 89, 144 S.E. 526 (1928).

Same — Conversations with Living Persons. — Where the widow under the terms of the will of her husband could only dispose of the moneys in the bank to her credit, and not such as could at her death pass to the remainderman under his will, it could be shown by disinterested witnesses as to what part passed under the widow's will, as not objectionable evidence under this section based upon conversations with other living parties interested under the husband's will. White v. Mitchell, 196 N.C. 89, 144 S.E. 526 (1928).

Testimony of conversations with party to action wherein witness related statements of decedent is not in contravention of this section. Allen v. Allen, 213 N.C. 264, 195 S.E. 801 (1938).

Same — Rehearsal of Conversation. — Direct evidence of a conversation and understanding with the plaintiff's testator is, under this section, incompetent, but a rehearsal of that conversation is a part of the res gestae, and admissible. Gilmer v. McNairy, 69 N.C. 335 (1873).

Same — Personal letters written by decedent to his granddaughter, one of the propounders of his will, were held admissible over the objection that they constituted personal transactions with the deceased which are prohibited by the "dead man's statute." In re Will of McDowell, 230 N.C. 259, 52 S.E.2d 807 (1949).

Same — Testimony to Prove Time When Act Was Done. — Where the act of the widow's execution of dissent to the will and the delivery of such dissent by her to the court is established by evidence, an interested party may testify, after the death of the widow, as to the time she saw the widow file the dissent in the clerk's office, the testimony being offered not for the purpose of proving the widow's execution of the dissent but only to establish that the act was done within the time allowed. Philbrick v. Young, 255 N.C. 737, 122 S.E.2d 725 (1961).

Same — Record Evidence. — While testimony as to personal transactions with the deceased payee of a note would be incompetent to establish defenses to the note over the objection of the personal representative of the payee, record evidence tending to establish such defenses is not precluded by this section. Flippin v. Lindsey, 221 N.C. 30, 18 S.E.2d 824 (1942).

The death certificate of the daughter intestate recorded no transaction between the child's mother and the doctor, and even had that been the case, record evidence does not fall within the ban of this section. Spillman v. Forsyth Mem. Hosp., 30 N.C. App. 406, 227 S.E.2d 292 (1976).

Same — Testimony Competent as to Only One of Two Defendants Is Admissible. — When there is more than one defendant, testimony which is competent as to one party should not be excluded by virtue of this section because it is not competent against another party in the suit. Lamm v. Gardner, 250 N.C. 540, 108 S.E.2d 847 (1959); Brown v. Whitley, 12 N.C. App. 306, 183 S.E.2d 258 (1971).

Instruction as to Use of Section Cannot Be Obtained by Declaratory Judgment. — In an action instituted under the Declaratory Judgment Act the court has no authority to instruct a litigant whether to take advantage of the provision of this section, upon the hearing of the cause upon its merits, since such instructions upon a question of procedure do not fall within the purview of the act. Redmond v. Farthing, 217 N.C. 678, 9 S.E.2d 405 (1940).

Applied in Elledge v. Welch, 238 N.C. 61, 76 S.E.2d 340 (1953); Heiland v. Lee, 207 F.2d 939 (4th Cir. 1953); Fesmire v. II. PERSONS DISQUALIFIED BY SECTION.

A. Parties to the Action.

A member of the board of county commissioners is not a competent witness as to transactions with the defendant's intestate in a suit by the board. Commissioners of Forsyth v. Lash, 89 N.C. 159 (1883).

A principal debtor, who was a party to an action to foreclose a mortgage given by his sureties as security for the loan, was an incompetent witness to a contract with the deceased creditor. Benedict v. Jones, 129 N.C. 475, 40 S.E. 223 (1901).

A defendant executor cannot testify concerning a land transaction between himself and the intestate, in a suit brought by creditors of the estate to subject the land alleged to have been fraudulently conveyed to the defendant by the intestate. State ex rel. Bryant, & Bro. v. Morris, 69 N.C. 444 (1873); Grier v. Cagle, 87 N.C. 377 (1882).

Guardian. — Testimony of a guardian, suing an executor to establish a gift made by a testatrix to the guardian's ward, as to what occurred between the testatrix and executor, was admissible as against the objection that the guardian could not testify as to any communication or transaction between himself and testatrix. Zollicoffer v. Zollicoffer, 168 N.C. 326, 84 S.E. 349 (1915).

A "next friend" is not a party to the suit. But his liability for costs renders him incompetent to testify to the transactions or conversations here under consideration. Mason v. McCormick, 75 N.C. 263 (1876). See McLeary v. Norment, 84 N.C. 235 (1881).

Original Beneficiary of Life Insurance Policy. — In an action by the person substituted as beneficiary in a policy of life insurance to recover the policy and proceeds as against the original beneficiary after the death of the insured, the original beneficiary is precluded by this section from testifying to the effect that she had the policy in her possession and was holding same as security for a loan to insured and for premiums paid by her on the policy, since such testimony tends to establish an oral assignment of the policy to her as security, she being a party to the action and having a direct pecuniary interest in the outcome. Harrison v. Winstead, 251 N.C. 113, 110 S.E.2d 903 (1959).

Parties in Probate of Will. — In a proceeding for the probate of a will, both propounders and caveators are parties interested in the event within the meaning and spirit of this section. In re Will of Brown, 194 N.C. 583, 140 S.E. 192 (1927).

Under this section the beneficiary under a will may not testify to transactions and communications with the deceased, but he may in proceedings of devisavit vel non give his opinion, based on his own observations, as to the mental incapacity of the deceased at the time of the execution of the writing propounded, and then testify to personal transactions he has had with him as being a part of the basis of his opinion, when evidence of this character is properly so confined upon the trial by instructions or otherwise, the weight and credibility being for the jury to determine. In re Will of Brown, 194 N.C. 583, 140 S.E. 192 (1927).

A caveator or a propounder in a will contest is a "party" to whom the prohibitions and exceptions of this section apply. In re Will of Ricks, 292 N.C. 28, 231 S.E.2d 856 (1977).

Partner. — Where one partner is (a) a party to the action, (b) is interested in the event of the action, and (c) the other partner is dead, because his lips are sealed in death the living partner is incompetent to testify in his own behalf to any transaction or communication between himself and the intestate concerning his relationship to the copartnership and to relate certain conversations he had with deceased about the assets of the partnership. Wingler v. Miller, 223 N.C. 15, 25 S.E.2d 160 (1943).

In a suit by distributees to recover from administrators and surviving partner money found on the person of decedent and claimed by his partner, testimony of the partner, concerning his relations to the partnership and the relation of certain conversations he had with deceased about the assets of the partnership, is clearly inadmissible under this section. Wingler v. Miller, 223 N.C. 15, 25 S.E.2d 160 (1943).

Party Acting in Corporate Capacity. — One who is a party to a suit, though in his corporate capacity, is not competent to testify as to a transaction with a person deceased. Commissioners of Forsyth v. Lash, 89 N.C. 159 (1883).

Payee of Promissory Note. — The Dead Man's Statute is clearly applicable to the testimony of a payee of a promissory note. In re Cooke, 37 N.C. App. 575, 246 S.E.2d 801 (1978).

Surviving Occupant of Car. — Testimony of a surviving occupant in a car to the effect that he was not driving but that one of the other occupants killed in the accident was driving at the time of the accident, comes within the provisions of this section in actions against the surviving occupant for wrongful death. McCurdy v. Ashley, 259 N.C. 619, 131 S.E.2d 321 (1963).

Surviving Stockholders. — In an action by a corporation and the surviving principal stockholders against the widow of a deceased principal stockholder, involving the liability of the corporation under its contract for the purchase of the stock of the deceased stockholder, the surviving stockholders are incompetent to testify as to conversations between the stockholders modifying the stock purchase agreement in favor of the corporation or the surviving stockholders. Collins v. Covert, 246 N.C. 303, 98 S.E.2d 26 (1957).

Decedent's Tenant. — In an action for goods sold and delivered to the intestate, a tenant of the intestate who was furnished with goods from the plaintiff's store, and who settled with the intestate, was competent to testify in the plaintiff's behalf as to the intestate's delivery to him of the merchandise because the witness was not a party to the action. Sorrell v. McGhee, 178 N.C. 279, 100 S.E. 434 (1919).

Surviving tenant by the entirety is the "survivor of a deceased person" within the meaning of this section in an action which attacks the validity of a deed by which the tenancy by the entirety was created. Gribble v. Gribble, 25 N.C. App. 366, 213 S.E.2d 376, cert. denied, 287 N.C. 465, 215 S.E.2d 623 (1975).

Party May Testify as to Transaction with Deceased Agent of Opponent. — This section does not render an interested witness incompetent to testify to a transaction between himself and a deceased agent of his opponent. Bailey v. Westmoreland, 251 N.C. 843, 112 S.E.2d 517 (1960); Tharpe v. Newman, 257 N.C. 71, 125 S.E.2d 315 (1962).

Hence, where a note is executed to two payees jointly and one of them thereafter acquires the interest of the other and sues the makers of the note, after the death of the other payee, testimony of the maker as to a contemporaneous agreement with the deceased payee, acting for himself and as agent of the other payee, that the note should not become a binding obligation until the happening of a stated contingency, is competent as to plaintiff payee's original share of the note, even though it is incompetent as to the share acquired by him as assignee of the deceased payee. Bailey v. Westmoreland, 251 N.C. 843, 112 S.E.2d 517 (1960).

But This Rule Applies Only Where Agent Was Not Personally Liable. — The rule that this section does not render an interested witness incompetent to testify to a transaction between himself and a deceased agent of his opponent has been applied only in factual situations where the deceased agent was not personally liable in respect to the alleged cause of action. It has no application where the liability, if any, of the principal, rests solely on the alleged tortious acts of the agent under the doctrine of respondeat superior. Tharpe v. Newman, 257 N.C. 71, 125 S.E.2d 315 (1962).

Testimony of the surviving occupant of the car tending to show that the other occupant, killed in the accident, was driving at that time is incompetent in an action by the survivor against the owner of the vehicle sought to be held liable under the doctrine of agency, since the owner, after having paid such liability, would have a right of action against the estate of the deceased, and therefore the transaction comes within the spirit if not the letter of this section. Tharpe v. Newman, 257 N.C. 71, 125 S.E.2d 315 (1962).

Testimony by Agent of Adverse Party Admissible. — In an action on an insurance policy by the son of the deceased owner, testimony of insurer's agent that prior to his death the owner directed him to transfer the policy to the owner's son because the owner was giving the land to his son, was not precluded by this section. King v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 258 N.C. 432, 128 S.E.2d 849 (1963).

Action to Enforce Agreement to Bequeath Property in Consideration of Services. — Where the plaintiff, in her own right and as administratrix of her mother, seeks to recover upon an alleged contract made by her mother and another person now deceased, under which her mother performed services to such other person under his agreement that he would devise and bequeath to her all of his property, it is incompetent for the plaintiff to testify to communications or transactions between her mother and such other person tending to establish her demand, for she is a party interested, within the contemplation of the statute. Brown v. Adams, 174 N.C. 490, 93 S.E. 989 (1917).

B. Persons Interested in the Event of the Action.

1. In General.

Section Not Confined to Parties to Action. — The provisions of this section are not confined to the parties to the action, but extend to testimony of a witness interested in the result of the action. Honeycutt v. Burleson, 198 N.C. 37, 150 S.E. 634 (1929).

Test for Disqualifying Interest. — To determine when such interests exists as to render a person incompetent, the following rule should be applied: The true test of the competency of a witness is whether he bears such a relation to the controversy that the verdict and judgment in the case may be used against him as a party in another action; if not, he is not disqualified. Jones v. Emory, 115 N.C. 158, 20 S.E. 206 (1894); Henderson v. McLain, 146 N.C. 329, 59 S.E. 873 (1907).

Nature of Interest Involved. — This section does not disqualify every witness who, in the broadest sense of the term, is interested in the event of the action, but only such as have a direct and substantial or a direct legal or pecuniary interest in the result. Jones v. Emory, 115 N.C. 158, 20 S.E. 206 (1894); Helsabeck v. Doub, 167 N.C. 205, 83 S.E. 241 (1914); In re Gorham, 177 N.C. 271, 98 S.E. 717 (1919); Allen v. Allen, 213 N.C. 264, 195 S.E. 801 (1938); Sanderson v. Paul, 235 N.C. 56, 69 S.E.2d 156 (1952).

It follows that a mere sentimental interest will not suffice. Sutton v. Walters, 118 N.C. 495, 24 S.E. 357 (1896); Sanderson v. Paul, 235 N.C. 56, 69 S.E.2d 156 (1952).

And it has been held that relationship of the parties alone does not constitute the direct, legal, pecuniary interest required. See Sutton v. Walters, 118 N.C. 495, 24 S.E. 357 (1896); Porter v. White, 128 N.C. 42, 38 S.E. 24 (1901); Bennett v. Best, 142 N.C. 168, 55 S.E. 84 (1906); Walston v. Lowry, 212 N.C. 23, 192 S.E. 877 (1937).

To be disqualified as a "person interested in the event" the witness must have a direct legal or pecuniary interest in the outcome of the litigation. Brown v. Whitley, 12 N.C. App. 306, 183 S.E.2d 258 (1971).

Present Interest. — In Isler v. Dewey, 67 N.C. 93 (1872), the court intimates that the interest necessary to disqualify is a present interest; that is, one retained by the party at the time of examination. In reaching this conclusion it was said: "Any other construction would make a statute, professedly for the removal of the incompetency of witnesses, the means of introducing new incompetencies unknown to the common law and opposed to its principles." See Sanderson v. Paul, 235 N.C. 56, 69 S.E.2d 156 (1952).

In Bunn v. Todd, 107 N.C. 266, 11 S.E. 1043 (1890), it is said: "Originally this section disqualified a fourth class of persons, i. e. those who have had an interest in the subject matter of the suit, but whose interest has since ceased. This disqualification did not exist at common law, and was struck out of this section of the Code of 1883, except in the cases in which such persons still came under the third class of disqualified persons above [see the Editor's Note and analysis line I of this note] stated."

Witness Having Dual or Alternative Interest. — To determine the competency of a witness who has a dual or alternative interest in the event of the action, the court must decide which of the two interests was the more immediately valuable. Sanderson v. Paul, 235 N.C. 56, 69 S.E.2d 156 (1952).

The competency of the interested witness is limited to the same transaction as the one testified about by the administrator or the deceased, or elicited from the witness himself by the administrator. Smith v. Dean, 2 N.C. App. 553, 163 S.E.2d 551 (1968).

2. Applications.

Agent of Payee of Note. — Testimony of an endorser of a note, as to conversations with the payee's agent, now dead, showing the consideration which induced the endorsement, is not excluded under this section, the agent not being a party interested in the event within the meaning of the statute for, although the agent guaranteed all notes to the payee, if there was a failure of consideration the payee could hold neither of the guarantors and had the endorser been liable he could not have recovered from the agent. American Agrl. Chem. Co. v. Griffin, 204 N.C. 559, 169 S.E. 152 (1933).

Agent of Third Person in Transaction with Deceased. — Assuming that a collision between two motor vehicles is a "transaction" within the meaning of this section, then one who has acted as an agent for a third person in a transaction with a person since deceased, is ordinarily competent to testify to conversations or transactions of the decedent. Brown v. Whitley, 12 N.C. App. 306, 183 S.E.2d 258 (1971).

Attorney Formerly Holding Note for Collection. — An attorney formerly holding a note for collection is not an interested party in an action on the note within the meaning of this section, prohibiting testimony by interested parties as to transactions with or declarations of a decedent. Vannoy v. Stafford, 209 N.C. 748, 184 S.E. 482 (1936).

Brother-in-Law of Decedent in Action to Recover Embezzled Funds. — The testimony of a witness, in an action against the administrator of his deceased brother-in-law to recover certain sums obtained by the deceased on two vouchers made to a fictitious firm and embezzled by him, that he collected the vouchers for the deceased through his bank and sent the proceeds to the deceased, was not incompetent as falling within the provisions of this section, the witness not being a party in interest and having no direct, legal or pecuniary interest in the event of the action. Fort Worth & D.C. Ry. v. Hegwood, 198 N.C. 309, 151 S.E. 641 (1930).

Depositor's Son in Action to Recover Moneys Deposited. — In an action by the administrator of a deceased person against a bank to recover moneys deposited by the intestate, resisted on the ground that the deceased had authorized the bank to pay the money upon his son's checks, the latter being present at the time, the son was interested in the event since he would be liable to the plaintiff if he was not authorized to draw the checks and possibly to the defendant, and his testimony was incompetent under this section, and the fact that a third person was present at the time of the transaction and testified at the trial does not affect this result. Donoho v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 198 N.C. 765, 153 S.E. 451 (1930).

Draftsman of Deed Sought to Be Reformed. — In an action for reformation of a deed to a county board of education for mistake of the draftsman in failing to insert a reversionary clause therein in accordance with the agreement between the grantors and grantee, testimony of the draftsman relating to declarations of a deceased member of the board and of the superintendent of schools, tending to show that it was agreed that the reversionary clause should be inserted, was held not precluded by this section, the draftsman not being a party interested in the event as contemplated by the statute. Ollis v. Board of Educ., 210 N.C. 489, 187 S.E. 772 (1936).

Holder of Insurance Policy. — A policy holder in a mutual life insurance company is not disqualified as "interested in the event of the action" to testify for the company suing to cancel another policy. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Leaksville Woolen Mills, 172 N.C. 534, 90 S.E. 574 (1916). See also Gwaltney v. Provident Sav. Life Assurance Soc'y, 132 N.C. 925, 44 S.E. 659 (1903); Gwaltney v. Provident Sav. Life Assurance Soc'y, 134 N.C. 552, 47 S.E. 122 (1904).

Husband and Wife. — Witness may have a very large pecuniary interest in fact — as the interest of a wife in an important lawsuit to which her husband is a party — and still be competent, while a comparatively slight legal interest will disqualify the witness. Rape v. Lyerly, 287 N.C. 601, 215 S.E.2d 737 (1975).

It has been consistently held by this court that the prohibition against the testimony of a "person interested in the event" extends only to those having a "direct legal or pecuniary interest," and not to the sentimental interest the husband or wife would naturally have in the lawsuit of the other. Burton v. Styers, 210 N.C. 230, 186 S.E. 248 (1936). See § 8-56 and note.

Same — Separate Suits. — Where husband and wife instituted separate suits to recover, each respectively, for personal services rendered by them to defendant's testate, it was held that each was competent to testify for the other, since neither had a direct pecuniary interest in the action of the other, and was not therefore an interested party in the other's action within the meaning of this section, the testimony not being as to a transaction between the witnesses, and the deceased, but between a third party and deceased. Burton v. Styers, 210 N.C. 230, 186 S.E. 248 (1936).

Same — Interest of Wife in Compensation Due Husband. — In an action against an administrator to recover the value of services the plaintiff alleges he has rendered the deceased, the wife of the plaintiff has no interest in the event which would bar her testimony as to a transaction with the deceased, and it is competent for her to testify to the contract relied upon by her husband the plaintiff. Helsabeck v. Doub, 167 N.C. 205, 83 S.E. 241 (1914). See Price v. Askins, 212 N.C. 583, 194 S.E. 284 (1937).

Same — Where plaintiffs acquire ownership as issue of devisee, devisee's husband has no pecuniary legal interest in plaintiffs' real property; therefore, his testimony as to the decedent's devise is not incompetent under this section. Rape v. Lyerly, 287 N.C. 601, 215 S.E.2d 737 (1975).

Same — Husband as Interested Party in Check Given Wife. — When a check made payable to one of the intestate's daughters and signed by the intestate was introduced in evidence to show an advancement, the daughter's husband was held competent under this section to testify over objection that the check was given his wife as a wedding present, he having no interest in the event of the action. Likewise another daughter was permitted to testify for her sister, the transaction testified to not being between the witness and deceased, but between the witness's sister and deceased father. Vannoy v. Green, 206 N.C. 80, 173 S.E. 275 (1934).

Same — Husband as Interested Party in Deed Drawn by Wife. — The husband is an interested witness in the event of the action, though not a party, when a trust deed made by his deceased wife is being attacked for the want of his joining therein; and upon the question of abandonment, his evidence, to the effect that his wife said to him, she would give him a horse if he would leave, was incompetent. The testimony of the daughter that she heard the conversation to that effect would be the "indirect testimony of an interested witness as to a transaction or communication with deceased," and also incompetent. Whitty v. Barham, 147 N.C. 479, 61 S.E. 372 (1908).

Same — Husband's Interest in Wife's Action to Recover for Services. — So it has been held that a husband is not disqualified by interest from testifying in his wife's behalf in her action to recover for services rendered a deceased person, the possibilities of his being benefited by her will or in case of her intestacy being too remote. McCurry v. Purgason, 170 N.C. 463, 87 S.E. 244 (1915).

Same — Husband of Decedent Grantee. — Where the blind husband of a grantee, in a deed reserving a life estate in the grantor, was present and heard the grantor acknowledge its execution and delivery, he was a competent witness to prove such execution and delivery, his wife having died prior to the grantor and the title therefore being vested in her son, in that his evidence disclosed no personal transaction or communication and he was not a party in interest within this section. Turlington v. Neighbors, 222 N.C. 694, 24 S.E.2d 648 (1943).

Same — Husband of Donee of Gift May Testify as to Declarations Made by Donor to Donee. — The husband of the donee of a gift may testify as to directions given and declarations made by the donor to the donee, since the testimony is not in behalf of the husband or in behalf of a party succeeding to his interest nor as to a transaction or communication between him and the deceased the testimony being as to a transaction between donor and donee. Scottish Bank v. Atkinson, 245 N.C. 563, 96 S.E.2d 837 (1957).

Same — Widower Has No Interest in Division of Wife's Lands among Children. — When a husband and wife, each owning certain lands, enter into an agreement to pool their lands for division among their children, and the wife dies intestate before her lands are deeded in accordance with the agreement the husband has a life estate in her lands as tenant by the curtesy regardless of the disposition of the lands among the children, and therefore has no direct pecuniary interest in an action by the children to whom deeds were not executed to declare the heirs of another child estopped to assert an interest in the lands of their mother, and his testimony of the agreement with his wife is not precluded by this section. Coward v. Coward, 216 N.C. 506, 5 S.E.2d 537 (1939).

The interest of one who temporarily held the title to the lands in dispute prior to the defendant is a sufficient interest in the event to disqualify his testimony as to a conversation or transaction with the plaintiff's deceased predecessor in title. Dill-Cramer-Truitt Corp. v. Downs, 201 N.C. 478, 160 S.E. 492 (1931).

A partner in intestate's firm may not testify as to transactions or communications with intestate in an action by brokers against the estate on a claim for commissions and advancements. Fenner v. Tucker, 213 N.C. 419, 196 S.E. 357 (1938).

Nonmember of Partnership. — Where the defendant's liability depends upon whether he was a member of the defendant partnership at the time the firm contracted a debt, which is the subject of the action, with the plaintiff who has since died and whose administrator has been made a party to the action, a witness who was not a member of the firm is not such person interested in the result as would exclude his direct testimony, under the provisions of this section as to the payment to his own knowledge by the deceased of the partnership debts. Herring v. Ipock, 187 N.C. 459, 121 S.E. 758 (1924).

Sheriff in Action by Deputy. — A deputy collected a sum of money on account of taxes and deposited the same with G. with instructions to pay it over to the sheriff, which was not done, and the deputy was afterwards required to pay the sheriff the sum so collected; it was held, in an action to recover the amount, brought by the deputy against the administrator of G., that the sheriff had no interest in the event of the action, and was a competent witness under this section. Allen v. Gilkey, 86 N.C. 64 (1882).

Stockholder's Interest in Recovery on Contract of Sale. — Where defendant's intestate made two separate contracts with the holders of stock in a corporation to purchase their respective holdings, in an action by one of the stockholders to recover on the contract of sale the other testified that he had no claim against the estate on his contract. It was held the witness was not interested in the event, and his testimony as to transaction between decedent and plaintiff as to the contract of sale of plaintiff's stock was competent under this section. Winborne v. McMahan, 206 N.C. 30, 173 S.E. 278 (1934).

Trustor's Son Where Estate Insolvent. — In an action involving the validity of a deed of trust, where the trustor is dead and his estate insolvent, the son of the trustor is a competent witness as to his declarations concerning the trust; the disqualification of the son under this section is removed by the insolvency of his father's estate, for there is nothing for the children in any event of the action. Gidney v. Logan, 79 N.C. 214 (1878).

C. Persons Deriving Title or Interest Through Parties or Interested Persons.

In General. — The words of this section "derives its interest or title by assignment or otherwise" mean — gets from a source — some person, through or under one or more persons, successively, directly or indirectly, immediately or mediately, "his interest or title," any valuable interest in part or share of something real or personal, of whatever nature, whether legal or equitable, acquired by assignment, or by any other means, or in any other manner. Carey v. Carey, 104 N.C. 171, 10 S.E. 156 (1889).

The exclusion under this section applies to privies as well as parties. Carswell v. Greene, 253 N.C. 266, 116 S.E.2d 801 (1960).

Deceased Assignee. — When deceased has had no interest in lands, but was simply an assignee, evidence of his declarations is admissible as no claim of title is made under him. Condor v. Secrest, 149 N.C. 201, 62 S.E. 921 (1908).

Attorney. — The fact that an attorney has had an interest in the event of a suit on account of the fee taxed does not disqualify him under this section. Syme v. Broughton, 85 N.C. 367 (1881). Nor is an attorney of one of the parties precluded from testifying for his client concerning the agreement. Propst v. Fisher, 104 N.C. 214, 10 S.E. 295 (1889).

Testimony of Grantee of Deceased Debtor. — In an action in the nature of a creditor's bill, evidence of the brother of the immediate grantee of the deceased debtor was held incompetent as in favor of their sister, claiming title under the witness, the validity of which title was affected by the testimony. Sutton v. Wells, 175 N.C. 1, 94 S.E. 688 (1917).

Trustee. — In an action by trustors against a trustee to compel an accounting for the proceeds of a foreclosure sale the incompetency of the trustor to testify as to transactions between himself and the deceased cestui que trust must be predicated upon the assumption that trustee under the deed of trust derived his "title or interest from, through or under" the cestui, and furthermore that it is this interest which is attacked. Garrett v. Stadiem, 220 N.C. 654, 18 S.E.2d 178 (1942).

Trustor. — Where a deed of trust was attacked for fraud, the trustee having died, and the property having been conveyed by a substituted trustee to the defendants, the trustor is not excluded by this section from being a witness for the plaintiff, who also claimed title through him. Isler v. Dewey, 67 N.C. 93 (1872).

III. WHEN THE DISQUALIFICATION EXISTS.

A. Testimony Disqualified.

Party May Not Contradict Former Witness. — A defendant having an interest in the event of an action is not permitted under this section to testify in his own behalf, for the purpose of contradicting a former witness whose testimony tended to show that the defendant fraudulently procured an assignment from a person deceased. Bushee v. Surles, 77 N.C. 62 (1877).

Where Adverse Party Non Compos Mentis. — A party interested in the event of the action may not testify as a witness as to a transaction with the adverse party who at the time of trial has been adjudged non compos mentis. Price v. Whisnant, 232 N.C. 653, 62 S.E.2d 56 (1950).

Action Concerning Disputed Boundary. — Testimony of a party interested in the result of the action that the deceased predecessor of the common source of title of the parties had agreed as to the boundary of the lands in dispute preliminary to making the deeds, that the deceased had the lands surveyed and that the witness saw the deceased mark the boundary claimed by him as controlling the description given in the deeds later made, is that of a transaction or communication prohibited by this section. Poole v. Russell, 197 N.C. 246, 148 S.E. 242 (1929).

The defendant in an action for money demanded is disqualified by this section, to testify as to the time and place of signing a receipt by the plaintiff's intestate, in support of his plea of satisfaction. Sumner v. Candler, 86 N.C. 71 (1882).

Receipt of Money from Person Now Deceased. — Where, in an action to establish a claim against an estate, plaintiff introduces evidence that prior to his death decedent had received the funds in dispute, testimony by her that she had never received any part of the funds is tantamount to testifying that decedent had not paid her any part thereof, and is incompetent under this section. Wilson v. Ervin, 227 N.C. 396, 42 S.E.2d 468 (1947).

Testimony by the maker of notes as to transactions with deceased payee tending to establish nonliability was properly excluded as coming within prohibition of this section. Perry v. First Citizens Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 226 N.C. 667, 40 S.E.2d 116 (1946).

In an action to recover for services rendered deceased, testimony by the plaintiff that plaintiff boarded deceased is incompetent under the provisions of this section. Price v. Pyatt, 203 N.C. 799, 167 S.E. 69 (1933).

Contest over Will. — As between the propounder or an interested executor and a person who is interested in the result of the trial, this section, rendering an interested survivor incompetent as a witness to a personal transaction with a deceased person, applies in a contest over a will, notwithstanding the proceeding is in rem. There is an exception when the evidence is directed solely towards the question or issue of mental condition or testamentary capacity. In that case, it is competent for the interested witness to give testimony of such transaction or conversation, solely, however, as a basis for the opinion formed as to the mental condition or capacity of the deceased. Whitley v. Redden, 276 N.C. 263, 171 S.E.2d 894 (1970).

B. Testimony Not Disqualified.

Party Testifying against Interest. — Under this section a witness may testify against his own interest, even if thereby other parties to the suit are injuriously affected and the disqualification applies only when a witness tesifies in his own behalf. In re Worth's Will, 129 N.C. 223, 39 S.E. 956 (1901); Sanderson v. Paul, 235 N.C. 56, 69 S.E.2d 156 (1952).

In proceedings to caveat a will, an heir at law who would receive more as a beneficiary under the will if it is not set aside may testify to declarations made by the testator after its execution which are competent to show that it was obtained by fraud and undue influence; and such testimony, being against the interests of the witness, is not prohibited by this section. In re Worth's Will, 129 N.C. 223, 39 S.E. 956 (1901); In re Will of Fowler, 159 N.C. 203, 74 S.E. 117 (1912).

When the witness is testifying not in his own behalf or interest, but against his interest, he is not disqualified by this section. Sanderson v. Paul, 235 N.C. 56, 69 S.E.2d 156 (1952).

Testimony Not against Representatives. — The administrator of a deceased guardian is a competent witness to prove the execution to said guardian by a debtor of a bond for the payment of money, such testimony not being against the representatives of a deceased person. Thompson v. Humphrey, 83 N.C. 416 (1880).

Testimony in Favor of Representative. — Where a witness was not asked to testify against the representative or assignee of a dead person as to any transaction or communication between himself and the person deceased, but in favor of such a representative, the testimony being offered by the party to the suit who represented the dead person, it was held that such testimony does not fall within the inhibition of this section, which is intended to protect the deceased person's representative or assignee, who is suing or being sued. Bonner v. Stotesbury, 139 N.C. 3, 51 S.E. 781 (1905).

Where the witness was testifying for, rather than against, the person deriving title or interest from, through or under a deceased person, such testimony does not come within the inhibitions of this section. Sprinkle v. Ponder, 233 N.C. 312, 64 S.E.2d 171 (1951).

Representative Not a Party. — It is competent for a plaintiff, as a witness for himself, to testify where the representative of the deceased was not a party to the suit. Thomas v. Kelly, 74 N.C. 174 (1876).

Sureties Entitled to Same Protection as Representative. — The rule to be deduced from the authorities is that the surety, who comes not within the letter but within the intendment of the law, stands in the same position and is entitled to the same protection as the representative of his deceased principal when sued. McGowan v. Davenport, 134 N.C. 526, 47 S.E. 27 (1904).

Conversations with Third Parties Present. — A witness is not incompetent, under this section, to testify to a conversation had with two persons, one of whom is dead at the time of the trial, in reference to a contract made between them and the witness. Peacock v. Stott, 90 N.C. 518 (1884).

This section makes no exception where other parties are present but leaves these witnesses to be called by either, and their testimony to come before the jury and be considered by itself, its credit unaffected by the testimony of the interested party. MacRae v. Molley, 90 N.C. 521 (1884).

Where the conversation is not strictly with the intestate, but is one held with him and two others who were associated with him in the transaction, then the provisions of this section do not incapacitate the party from testifying. Johnson v. Townsend, 117 N.C. 338, 23 S.E. 271 (1895).

Action for Breach of Contract. — In an action against the administrator of a deceased person to recover for breach of the deceased's contract to devise, testimony of witnesses not interested in the event as to declarations made by the deceased against his interest was properly admitted. Hager v. Whitener, 204 N.C. 747, 169 S.E. 645 (1933).

Action for Breach of Warranty. — In an action against an insane person for damages for breach of warranty in a deed, a witness who is not interested in the recovery is not disqualified by this section, though he may have an interest in the land. Lemly v. Ellis, 143 N.C. 200, 55 S.E. 629 (1906).

Action in Ejectment. — Where some of the witnesses in an action in ejectment were not interested in the event, their testimony did not fall within the intent and meaning of this section and the exclusion of their testimony tending to show the tenancy of a decedent under whom one defendant claimed as adverse possessor, was reversible error entitling the plaintiff to a new trial. Pitman v. Hunt, 197 N.C. 574, 150 S.E. 13 (1929).

In an action to declare a deed void on the ground that it was never delivered to the grantee, since deceased, testimony offered by the grantor tending to show that the deed had not been delivered is not incompetent under this section. Gulley v. Smith, 203 N.C. 274, 165 S.E. 710 (1932).

Transactions with Partnership. — The death of one of the partners in a firm will not incapacitate the witness from proving a transaction with the firm while the other partner, who was present at the interview, is living. Peacock v. Stott, 90 N.C. 518 (1884).

IV. SUBJECT MATTER OF THE TRANSACTION.

A. In General.

This section relates not only to "personal transactions" but also to "communications" with a deceased person. Smith v. Dean, 2 N.C. App. 553, 163 S.E.2d 551 (1968).

Not Applicable unless Transaction Is Personal. — Under this section the parties in interest are disqualified from testifying only as to personal transactions with the deceased. McCall v. Wilson, 101 N.C. 598, 8 S.E. 225 (1888); Cox v. Beaufort County Lumber Co., 124 N.C. 78, 32 S.E. 381 (1899); Davidson v. Bardin, 139 N.C. 1, 51 S.E. 779 (1905).

Test as to When Transaction Is "Personal". — A fair test in undertaking to ascertain what is a "personal transaction or communication" with the deceased is to inquire whether, in case the witness testifies falsely, the deceased, if living, could contradict it of his own knowledge. Sherrill v. Wilhelm, 182 N.C. 673, 110 S.E. 95 (1921); Whitley v. Redden, 5 N.C. App. 705, 169 S.E.2d 260 (1969), rev'd on other grounds, 276 N.C. 263, 171 S.E.2d 894 (1970).

A personal transaction or communication within the purview of this section is anything done or said between the witness and the deceased person or lunatic tending to establish the claim being asserted against the personal representative of the deceased person, or the committee of the lunatic, or the person deriving his title or interest from, through, or under the deceased person or lunatic. Peek v. Shook, 233 N.C. 259, 63 S.E.2d 542 (1951); Brown v. Green, 3 N.C. App. 506, 165 S.E.2d 534 (1969); Ballard v. Lance, 6 N.C. App. 24, 169 S.E.2d 199 (1969).

A personal transaction or communication within the purview of this section is anything done or said between the witness and the deceased person tending to establish the claim being asserted against the personal representative of the deceased person. Smith v. Dean, 2 N.C. App. 553, 163 S.E.2d 551 (1968); Etheridge v. Etheridge, 41 N.C. App. 39, 255 S.E.2d 735 (1979).

A personal transaction as used in this section includes that which is done by one person which affects the rights of another, and out of which a cause of action has arisen. Smith v. Dean, 2 N.C. App. 553, 163 S.E.2d 551 (1968).

Same — Caveat to Will. — On an issue of devastavit vel non it was not competent to prove by a witness whose husband was one of the caveators and heirs at law of the testator, declarations of said testator offered for the purpose of showing undue influence, as such witness had an interest in the real estate, dependent upon the result of the action. Linebarger v. Linebarger, 143 N.C. 229, 55 S.E. 709 (1906).

Same — The interest which a married woman has in the real property of her husband before and during coverture comes within the intent and meaning of this section, and will exclude testimony by her of a communication or transaction between her husband and a deceased person as to a contract made between them whereby a mortgage on the lands of her husband executed prior to his marriage was to be canceled by the deceased. Honeycutt v. Burleson, 198 N.C. 37, 150 S.E. 634 (1929).

Same — The mother, in her illegitimate child's action against the estate of the deceased father on a contract made by him for the child's support, is not a party interested in the event of the action whose evidence on the trial is excluded under the provisions of this section. Conley v. Cabe, 198 N.C. 298, 151 S.E. 645 (1930).

Same — A husband has no vested interest in the real estate of his wife, and it would seem that he is not a "person interested in the event" within the contemplation of this section in an action involving his wife's title to realty. Allen v. Allen, 213 N.C. 264, 195 S.E. 801 (1938).

Transaction Must Be Exclusive Source of Knowledge. — In order to exclude testimony under this provision, it must be made to appear that the knowledge of the witness was derived from a personal transaction with the deceased person. Thompson v. Onley, 96 N.C. 9, 1 S.E. 620 (1887). And it is proper to show whether the witness had knowledge of the fact testified to, from sources extraneous to his personal communications or relations with the deceased. Charlotte Oil & Fertilizer Co. v. Rippy, 123 N.C. 656, 31 S.E. 879 (1898), rehearing denied, 124 N.C. 643, 32 S.E. 980 (1899).

Testimony of a witness as to what he himself did in regard to the transaction does not come within the prohibition of this section when it does not relate to acts or communications with the deceased person in regard to such transaction. Waddell v. Carson, 245 N.C. 669, 97 S.E.2d 222 (1957).

Testimony as to Independent Facts. — A party in interest may testify to any substantive fact which is independent of any transaction or communication with the deceased or is based upon independent knowledge not dervied from such source. Sutton v. Wells, 175 N.C. 1, 94 S.E. 688 (1917). See also In re Will of Saunders, 177 N.C. 156, 98 S.E. 378 (1919); Price Real Estate & Ins. Co. v. Jones, 191 N.C. 176, 131 S.E. 587 (1926).

Testimony of an interested witness as to independent facts and circumstances, within his own knowledge, or as to what he saw or heard take place between deceased and a third party, is not rendered incompetent by this section, since in such instances the testimony does not relate to a personal transaction or communication between the witness and deceased and, accordingly, appellant's exceptions to the admission of such testimony were not sustained. Wilder v. Medlin, 215 N.C. 542, 2 S.E.2d 549 (1939).

This section does not preclude a witness from testifying to independent facts and circumstances within her observation and knowledge or from giving evidence of what she saw or heard take place between the deceased and another or others, not involving personal transactions between herself and the deceased. Collins v. Lamb, 215 N.C. 719, 2 S.E.2d 863 (1939).

The disqualification of a party to the action to testify against the personal representative of a deceased person as to a transaction or communication with the deceased does not prohibit such interested party from testifying as to the acts and conduct of the deceased where the interested party is merely an observer and is testifying as to facts based upon independent knowledge not derived from any personal transaction or communication with the deceased. Hardison v. Gregory, 242 N.C. 324, 88 S.E.2d 96 (1955); Carswell v. Greene, 253 N.C. 266, 116 S.E.2d 801 (1960); Brown v. Whitley, 12 N.C. App. 306, 183 S.E.2d 258 (1971).

An interested party is not prohibited by this section from testifying concerning his independent acts. Hardison v. Gregory, 242 N.C. 324, 88 S.E.2d 96 (1955).

This section does not preclude an interested party from testifying as to his own acts or the acts and conduct of the decedent when the witness is testifying as to facts based upon independent knowledge not derived from any personal transaction or communication with the deceased. Brown v. Green, 3 N.C. App. 506, 165 S.E.2d 534 (1969).

Same — Any acts done in observation of a deceased person are considered independent acts and not within the statutory exclusion. Brown v. Whitley, 12 N.C. App. 306, 183 S.E.2d 258 (1971).

This section does not prohibit an interested party from testifying as to acts and conduct of the deceased where the interested party was merely an observer. Archer v. Norwood, 37 N.C. App. 432, 246 S.E.2d 37, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 645, 248 S.E.2d 249 (1978).

The prohibitions of this section do not prevent a witness from testifying as to the acts and conduct of the deceased where the witness is merely an observer and is testifying to facts based upon independent knowledge. In re Will of Simmons, 43 N.C. App. 123, 258 S.E.2d 466 (1979).

Same — Facts Occurring Out of Presence of Deceased. — A witness who offered to prove a fact which occurred out of the presence of, and which was in no sense a transaction with, a deceased person is not incompetent under this section. It is only when the transaction is between the deceased and the living party that the statute prohibits the latter from testifying. Lockhart v. Bell, 86 N.C. 443 (1882).

Same — The acts of two independent drivers, total strangers to each other up to the point of impact, cannot be said to be acts done with a deceased person but are acts done in observation of a deceased person, thus, testimony as to these acts are not excluded by this section. Brown v. Whitley, 12 N.C. App. 306, 183 S.E.2d 258 (1971).

A defendant is not prevented from describing the conduct and movements of a deceased's car by the phrase "concerning a personal transaction" when the movements were quite independent and apart from, and in no way connected with, or prompted or influenced by reason of, the conduct of the party testifying. Brown v. Whitley, 12 N.C. App. 306, 183 S.E.2d 258 (1971).

Same — In action for alienation of affections and criminal conversation against the administrators of the alleged tort-feasor, plaintiff's testimony that when he returned to his home at night he found the deceased standing in the living room of the unlighted house, and that on two other occasions he saw his wife and the deceased alone at farm cabins, was held competent as testimony of independent facts. Hardison v. Gregory, 242 N.C. 324, 88 S.E.2d 96 (1955).

Same — Action for Debt. — In an action in the nature of a creditor's bill, testimony of the deceased debtor's grantee that the deceased grantor occupied the building part of the time after she got her deed to the land in litigation was held admissible as being to a substantive fact of which she had knowledge independently of any statement by the deceased. Sutton v. Wells, 175 N.C. 1, 94 S.E. 688 (1917).

Testimony Concerning Mental Capacity. — Where a witness testifies to the want of mental capacity in a grantor to take a deed, and that his opinion was formed from conversation and communication between the witness and grantor, it was held competent to prove the facts upon which such opinion was founded, the provisions not applying as the subject was not a "transaction" within its meaning. McLeary v. Norment, 84 N.C. 235 (1881); Rakestraw v. Pratt, 160 N.C. 436, 76 S.E. 259 (1912).

Beneficiaries under the will are competent to testify as to transactions with the testator solely on the issue of testamentary capacity. In re Will of Lomax, 226 N.C. 498, 39 S.E.2d 388 (1946).

A party interested in the event may testify as to transactions with a decedent when such testimony relates solely to the issue of mental capacity. Goins v. McLoud, 231 N.C. 655, 58 S.E.2d 634 (1950).

The rule prohibiting an interested party from testifying as to a transaction with a decedent does not preclude a caveator from testifying as to his opinion of the mental condition of testator. In re Will of Thompson, 248 N.C. 588, 104 S.E.2d 280 (1958).

A person (who would otherwise be precluded from testifying by this section), after testifying as to the mental capacity of a deceased person may testify to transactions and communications with deceased in order to show the jury that the opinion was well founded. Whitley v. Redden, 276 N.C. 263, 171 S.E.2d 894 (1970).

However, such evidence will be rejected when it is offered for the purpose of proving and does tend to prove vital and material facts which will fix liability against the representative of a deceased person, or committee of a lunatic, or anyone deriving his title or interest through them. Whitley v. Redden, 276 N.C. 263, 171 S.E.2d 894 (1970); In re Will of Ricks, 292 N.C. 28, 231 N.C. 28, 231 S.E.2d 856 (1977).

A party or an interested witness may, notwithstanding this section, in an action to set aside a will, a deed or other writing, testify to communications or conversations with a deceased to show the basis upon which the party or witness has formed an opinion regarding the mental capacity of the deceased, when he testifies to such an opinion, and when the lack of such capacity is a ground for setting aside the instrument. In re Will of Ricks, 292 N.C. 28, 231 S.E.2d 856 (1977).

B. Particular Transactions.

In a proceeding for dower, the decision of the question whether the plaintiff left her husband's home of her own volition or by reason of what the law will recognize as compulsion, is an inquiry that does not necessarily involve a transaction or communication with her husband which disqualifies her under this section. Hicks v. Hicks, 142 N.C. 231, 55 S.E. 106 (1906).

Driving of Car Is "Transaction" Between Occupants of Same Car. — Where the only evidence of negligence in an action by the wife of the driver to recover for injuries sustained in an automobile accident was her testimony that he was traveling at an excessive speed upon a curve, and that the accident occurred when the car failed to make the curve, and that she had spoken to him in regard to the speed he was driving the car, the driving of the car was a transaction within the meaning of the term as used in this section and her testimony of his manner of driving and her statement to him regarding the speed was incompetent under this section, her testimony of the transaction and communication being an essential or material link in the chain establishing liability of the estate to her. Boyd v. Williams, 207 N.C. 30, 175 S.E. 832 (1934).

Prior to the 1967 amendment to this section it was held that the surviving occupant of an automobile, in an action against the estate of the deceased occupant, was an incompetent witness as to the identity of the driver immediately preceding and at the time of the wreck. Tharpe v. Newman, 257 N.C. 71, 125 S.E.2d 315 (1962). See Davis v. Pearson, 220 N.C. 163, 16 S.E.2d 655 (1941).

Two occupants of the same automobile are engaged in a "personal transaction," thereby rendering incompetent the testimony of one against the personal representative of the other's estate. Brown v. Whitley, 12 N.C. App. 306, 183 S.E.2d 258 (1971).

But a collision between two motor vehicles is not a "personal transaction" within the meaning of this section. Brown v. Whitley, 12 N.C. App. 306, 183 S.E.2d 258 (1971).

And Section Does Not Exclude Testimony of Surviving Driver. — Considering the fact that the only relationship between a defendant and a decedent was the impact of their vehicles, such a collision is not a personal transaction within the meaning of the term, and this section is not applicable to the testimony of the surviving driver in a two-vehicle collision. Brown v. Whitley, 12 N.C. App. 306, 183 S.E.2d 258 (1971).

Conversation between Decedent and Third Person. — This section does not apply to the testimony of an interested witness as to a conversation between her deceased father and a living defendant. This is not testimony "concerning a personal transaction." Abernathy v. Skidmore, 190 N.C. 66, 128 S.E. 475 (1925).

Testimony by a party as to a conversation between decedent and a third person did not concern a personal transaction or communication between the witness and the decedent, therefore it is not excluded by this section. Hodges v. Hodges, 257 N.C. 774, 127 S.E.2d 567 (1962).

The transaction observed and testified to by the plaintiff mother of intestate was not one between her and the deceased doctor but was one between the deceased doctor and a third party, her daughter. Therefore, notwithstanding her interest, she was properly allowed to testify concerning it. Spillman v. Forsyth Mem. Hosp., 30 N.C. App. 406, 227 S.E.2d 292 (1976).

Proof of Handwriting. — A party interested in the event of a suit is not an incompetent witness, under this section, to prove the handwriting of the deceased person. Rush v. Steed, 91 N.C. 226 (1884); Hussey v. Kirkman, 95 N.C. 63 (1886); Armfield v. Colvert, 103 N.C. 147, 9 S.E. 461 (1889); Sawyer v. Grady, 113 N.C. 42, 18 S.E. 79 (1893); Lister v. Lister, 222 N.C. 555, 24 S.E.2d 342 (1943).

The plaintiff on his examination-in-chief, in an action against an executor or administrator, is competent to testify to the handwriting of deceased from his general knowledge, but not to testify that he saw deceased actually sign the particular instrument. Batten v. Aycock, 224 N.C. 225, 29 S.E.2d 739 (1944).

A husband, who has testified that he knows his wife's handwriting, is competent to testify after his wife's death, that her signature was on the note in question, and while his further testimony that she signed the instruments in question is technically incompetent under this section, such further testimony will not be held prejudicial when this fact is established by other competent testimony. Waddell v. Carson, 245 N.C. 669, 97 S.E.2d 222 (1957).

Claim That Intestate Was Holder in Due Course. — Where the administrator of the deceased claims that his intestate was a holder of a negotiable instrument in due course for value, and relies upon his intestate's possession to make out a prima facie case, it is not a personal transaction or communication with the deceased, prohibited by statute, for it may be shown in rebuttal that after maturity it was seen in the possession of another claimant of the title. Price Real Estate & Ins. Co. v. Jones, 191 N.C. 176, 131 S.E. 587 (1926).

Loan and Instrument Evidencing Same. — In an action by the widow against the executor of her husband upon an acknowledgment of indebtedness executed by the husband to her, the widow is incompetent to testify that she had loaned her husband the sum or that she saw him sign the instrument and that he delivered it to her. McGowan v. Beach, 242 N.C. 73, 86 S.E.2d 763 (1955).

Evidence of the declarations of a deceased partner tending to show that the deceased partner made an agreement with plaintiff that check given for a disputed account and marked thereon "balance on account" was not to be taken as full settlement is incompetent as a transaction or communication with a deceased person prohibited by this section. Walston v. Coppersmith, 197 N.C. 407, 149 S.E. 381 (1929).

Sale of Interest in Partnership. — This section does not apply to a transaction between living persons by which one of them sold to the other his interest in a firm of which the decedent was the other partner. Brantley v. Marshbourn, 166 N.C. 527, 82 S.E. 959 (1914).

Personal Services. — Since personal services rendered by plaintiff to decedent are of necessity personal transactions between them, plaintiff may not testify directly that he rendered such services nor establish this fact indirectly by testifying that he expected pay for such services or as to their value, or that he had not been paid for them. Peek v. Shook, 233 N.C. 259, 63 S.E.2d 542 (1951).

The performance of services by a witness for the deceased has been held to be a personal transaction. Godwin v. Tew, 38 N.C. App. 686, 248 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

Services of Physician. — Testimony by a physician, the plaintiff, that he attended the deceased as such, for which he had an account against him, of the number of visits, sum due therefor, etc., is incompetent as being "personal" transactions with the deceased, prohibited by this section. Dunn v. Currie, 141 N.C. 123, 53 S.E. 533 (1906); Knight v. Everett, 152 N.C. 118, 67 S.E. 328 (1910).

In a civil action for rents allegedly received by defendant's intestate from plaintiffs' property, evidence of plaintiffs, that deceased went into possession of the premises, shortly after default in payments to a mortgagee, for the purpose of collecting the rents and applying same to plaintiffs' mortgage indebtedness, that afterwards defendant's intestate purchased the property and plaintiffs executed notes to defendant's intestate and saw a deed for the premises in the possession of deceased, is excluded by this section as personal transactions and communications with defendant's intestate. McMichael v. Pegram, 225 N.C. 400, 35 S.E.2d 174 (1945).

Sale of Property by Guardian. — It is competent for the plaintiff to prove the sale of his property by his guardian as this is not a personal transaction within the meaning of this section. State ex rel. Dobbins v. Osborne, 67 N.C. 259 (1872).

Possession of Stock. — See Jones v. Waldroup, 217 N.C. 178, 7 S.E.2d 366 (1940).

Testimony Given in Former Trial. — It is competent for the plaintiff's witness to testify what the deceased maker of the note sued upon testified on a former trial as to its payment, such not being a personal transaction within the meaning of the provisions of this section. Costen v. McDowell, 107 N.C. 546, 12 S.E. 432 (1890); Worth v. Wrenn, 144 N.C. 656, 57 S.E. 388 (1907).

Testimony as to Placement of Deed. — This section does not exclude testimony that the witness saw the decedent place the deed, under which the witness claims, in a trunk as it does not involve a communication or transaction with him. Cornelius v. Brawley, 109 N.C. 542, 14 S.E. 78 (1891); Carroll v. Smith, 163 N.C. 204, 79 S.E. 497 (1913).

Probate of Wills. — In Cox v. Beaufort County Lumber Co., 124 N.C. 78, 32 S.E. 381 (1899), it was held that this section does not apply to wills, but that they are governed by §§ 31-9 and 31-10; this was placed on the ground that this section applies where there is necessarily a contract or agreement between the parties, and in the case of a will there is ordinarily no transaction between the parties.

By the same reasoning it was held that attesting a will is not a "personal transaction," the witness being of the law and not of the party. Collins v. Collins, 101 N.C. 114, 7 S.E. 687 (1888). But a beneficiary may not testify as to the leaving of a holograph will with her for safekeeping. McEwan v. Brown, 176 N.C. 249, 97 S.E. 20 (1918). A beneficiary may, however, testify that when a will was opened it contained certain erasures and that they were not made by him. In re Will of Saunders, 177 N.C. 156, 98 S.E. 378 (1919).

Circumstances may arise, however, in which the person interested as a beneficiary may attempt to testify as to personal transactions or conversations with the deceased and this testimony would, of course, be excluded. But the rule of exclusion does not apply, as may be inferred from the preceding cases, as to facts of which the witness had knowledge by means other than by personal transactions with the deceased. So the rule does exclude the witness from testifying as to the identity of certain papers as being those which he had previously seen in the testator's presence; nor to the fact that it was the same "will," when only for the purpose and effect of the identification of the sheets in question. In re Will of Mann, 192 N.C. 248, 134 S.E. 649 (1926).

Under this section a party interested in the results of the action is incompetent to testify to declaration of the deceased, whose will is under attack, when the issue is as to undue influence. In re Will of Plott, 211 N.C. 451, 190 S.E. 717 (1937).

This section applies to caveat proceedings notwithstanding that they are in rem, with the exception that beneficiaries under the will are competent to testify as to transactions with deceased testator solely upon the issue of testamentary capacity. In re Will of Lomax, 226 N.C. 498, 39 S.E.2d 388 (1946).

A challenge to the testimony of a witness on the ground that any knowledge regarding a purported will and where it was located was obtained as the result of a personal transaction or communication with the testatrix was rejected. In re Will of Wilson, 258 N.C. 310, 128 S.E.2d 601 (1962).

This section operates to exclude evidence by caveator in a caveat proceeding concerning any personal transactions or communications between him and decedent. In re Will of Edgerton, 29 N.C. App. 60, 223 S.E.2d 524, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 308, 225 S.E.2d 832 (1976).

Settlement of Estate. — Testimony relating to an agreement between administrator and distributee in regard to the settlement of an estate was incompetent in an action by distributee's administrator to recover assets. Wilder v. Medlin, 215 N.C. 542, 2 S.E.2d 549 (1939).

V. EXCEPTIONS.

This section contains only two exceptions, one of which relates to the identity of the driver of a motor vehicle, and the other relates to cases in which the representative of the lunatic or deceased person has "opened the door" by testifying or offering the testimony of the deceased or insane person. Whitley v. Redden, 5 N.C. App. 705, 169 S.E.2d 260 (1969), rev'd on other grounds, 276 N.C. 263, 171 S.E.2d 894 (1970).

However, the Supreme Court has stated what seems to be another exception to this section which provides that after a witness has stated his opinion as to the mental capacity of such deceased person, and where this opinion has been formed from conversations and communications with such person, it is competent to offer such in evidence as constituting the basis of such opinion. While it is conceded that a sane declaration by a person may be some evidence of sanity, the statute as written by the legislature does not contain this exception. Whitley v. Redden, 5 N.C. App. 705, 169 S.E.2d 260 (1969), rev'd on other grounds, 276 N.C. 263, 171 S.E.2d 894 (1970). See ante, this note, analysis line IV.

Exception for Similar Evidence Previously Introduced. — This section does not apply where evidence, similar to that which is being introduced, has previously been introduced and the door has been opened to the objecting party. Davison v. West Oxford Land Co., 126 N.C. 704, 36 S.E. 162 (1900).

When defendant, representative of deceased, is examined in behalf of himself and his corepresentative concerning a personal transaction between plaintiff and deceased, under this section, he thus opens the door and makes competent the testimony of his adversary concerning the same transaction. Batten v. Aycock, 224 N.C. 225, 29 S.E.2d 739 (1944).

Testimony otherwise incompetent under this section is rendered admissible when the personal representative of a deceased person, or the committee of a lunatic, or the person deriving his title or interest from, through, or under the deceased person or lunatic, is examined in his own behalf, or the testimony as to declarations of the deceased person or lunatic is given in evidence concerning the same transaction or communication. Peek v. Shook, 233 N.C. 259, 63 S.E.2d 542 (1951).

But this section gives a personal representative no right to "open the door," over the other party's objection, by incompetent evidence. Gurganus v. Guaranty Bank & Trust Co., 246 N.C. 655, 100 S.E.2d 81 (1957).

Introduction by opposing party of evidence of transaction between plaintiff and decedent opens door to plaintiff's testimony in regard thereto. Pearce v. Barham, 267 N.C. 707, 149 S.E.2d 22 (1966).

Grounds for Exceptions. — The rule of exclusion, if left absolute in form, might in certain cases, it was thought, work unequally, and therefore the exception was inserted to make it fair and just in its operation. There is nothing inequitable in requiring that the opposing testimony to that given in evidence by the other side should be limited to the same transaction or communication. It could not be otherwise without opening the door much wider than the necessity of the particular case justified. Pope v. Pope, 176 N.C. 283, 96 S.E. 1034 (1918). Where the testimony, of a deceased adverse party has been given and is available, the reason for the exclusion rule ceases. Phillips v. Interstate Land Co., 174 N.C. 542, 94 S.E. 12 (1917).

Limitation of Exception. — Where the door is opened to the opposing party to testify for himself, he can testify only as to those particular transactions and communications to which the testimony of the deceased person or his representative was pertinent. Sumner v. Candler, 92 N.C. 634 (1885).

In order to "open the door" for the admission of evidence of transactions or communications with a deceased person, prohibited by this section, such evidence must relate to the particular subject matter of the evidence testified to by the adverse party, or the same transaction, and the door is not necessarily opened to all transactions or fact situations growing out of the controversy. Walston v. Coppersmith, 197 N.C. 407, 149 S.E. 381 (1929).

The door is opened, under this section, by the representative of deceased taking the stand, only in respect to the transaction or set of facts about which such representative testifies. If one party opens the door as to one transaction, the other party cannot swing it wide in order to admit another independent transaction. Batten v. Aycock, 224 N.C. 225, 29 S.E.2d 739 (1944).

Similar Evidence Subsequently Introduced. — The rule is that when incompetent evidence is admitted over objection, the admission of such evidence is cured where the same evidence, or evidence of substantially the same import, is thereafter admitted without objection. Brown v. Green, 3 N.C. App. 506, 165 S.E.2d 534 (1969).

The incompetence of the adverse party to testify may be removed by her being cross-examined as to the transaction in question. When the door is thus opened for the adverse party, it is only opened to the extent that he may testify as to the transaction about which he was cross-examined. Godwin v. Tew, 38 N.C. App. 686, 248 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

Illustrations. — Where the defendant executor has testified as to certain matters relating to the identification of certain letters the deceased had written upon the question of whether he should be held liable as a partner for the debts of a firm, it is competent for the plaintiff's witness to testify in the plaintiff's behalf, as to other matters relating thereto and tending to fix the deceased with liability as a partner, under the principle that when the defendant has himself "opened the door by his own evidence" the plaintiff may testify as to the completed transaction, and this section prohibiting testimony as to transaction, etc., with a deceased person, does not apply. Herring v. Ipock, 187 N.C. 459, 121 S.E. 758 (1924).

It is incompetent as a transaction with a deceased person for the plaintiff to testify as to personal services rendered to the deceased as coming within her demand for damages, where the defendant had not "opened the door" by asking the plaintiff for an explanation as to why she had changed the amount at her demand. Pulliam v. Hege, 192 N.C. 459, 135 S.E. 288 (1926).

The prohibition against a beneficiary testifying as to transactions with deceased testator on the question of undue influence relates solely to transactions with the deceased, and a beneficiary is competent to testify as to circumstances tending to show undue influence on the part of the propounder unrelated to any transaction which the witness had with testator. In re Will of Lomax, 226 N.C. 498, 39 S.E.2d 388 (1946).

Where, in an action to recover upon a quantum meruit for personal services rendered deceased, defendant executor first testified as to his version of the services rendered, it did not violate this section for plaintiff to testify in rebuttal as to the services she rendered, since the "door had been swung wide" by defendant's prior testimony. Highfill v. Parrish, 247 N.C. 389, 100 S.E.2d 840 (1957).

If the challenged testimony did violate this section, it was rendered admissible when the sister of intestate, as plaintiff's witness, testified that defendant was driving and that he was not intoxicated. This opened the door for defendant's version of the matter. Bryant v. Ballance, 13 N.C. App. 181, 185 S.E.2d 315 (1971), cert. denied, 280 N.C. 495, 186 S.E.2d 513 (1972).

In an action to recover the amount of a note from the estate of the borrower's attorney-in-fact, there was no merit to defendant's contention that much of the affidavit testimony upon which the trial court based its decision should have been excluded under this section as testimony of transactions with a deceased person, since defendant, by offering evidence as to a completely independent transaction, opened the door for plaintiff to give an explanation by his own affidavit. Nye v. Lipton, 50 N.C. App. 224, 273 S.E.2d 313 (1981).

VI. PLEADING AND PRACTICE.

Admission. — Anything that a party to the action has said, if relevant to the issues and not subject to some specific exclusionary rule, is admissible against him as an admission. Brown v. Green, 3 N.C. App. 506, 165 S.E.2d 534 (1969).

Proper Objection Required. — In order to have the benefit of this section, a party must lodge a proper objection at the time the incompetent testimony is offered. Etheridge v. Etheridge, 41 N.C. App. 39, 255 S.E.2d 735 (1979).

Effect of Failure to Object. — Objections to the competency of testimony must be taken in due time; if not, they are waived. Therefore, where a party was allowed to testify, upon examination in chief, to a conversation between himself and the defendant's testator, and during the cross-examination the defendant objected to the competency of such testimony and asked that it might be excluded, it was held that, although incompetent, the objection to its reception came too late. Meroney v. Avery, 64 N.C. 312 (1870). Where a general objection as to witness' competency was overruled, and afterwards no specific objection was made to his testimony as to transactions with the decedent, the objection was deemed waived. Norris v. Stewart, 105 N.C. 455, 10 S.E. 912, 18 Am. St. R. 917 (1890).

The objection will not be considered unless so specific as to show that the evidence is objectionable. Perkins v. Berry, 103 N.C. 131, 9 S.E. 621 (1889). The incompetency must appear at the time of the objection to the evidence, so that the court may pass intelligently upon the objection. Harris v. Harris, 178 N.C. 7, 100 S.E. 125 (1919).

The objecting party has the burden of establishing the incompetency of the evidence. Etheridge v. Etheridge, 41 N.C. App. 39, 255 S.E.2d 735 (1979).

Motion to Strike Out Incompetent Part of Answer. — The rule is that where a question asked a witness is competent, exception to his answer, when incompetent in part, should be taken by motion to strike out the part that is objectionable. Brown v. Green, 3 N.C. App. 506, 165 S.E.2d 534 (1969).

When Admission of Evidence Harmless. — The erroneous admission of evidence of transactions with deceased persons prohibited by this section becomes immaterial when from the answers by the jury to the issues it appears that this evidence was disregarded by them. Ray v. Ray, 175 N.C. 290, 95 S.E. 550 (1918).

Determination on Appeal of Relevancy of Testimony. — Where testimony of transactions or communications with a decedent is properly excluded as irrelevant to the issue, its competency or incompetency under this section will not be determined on appeal. Pendleton v. Spencer, 205 N.C. 179, 170 S.E. 637 (1933).

§ 8-51.1. Dying declarations.

The dying declarations of a deceased person regarding the cause or circumstances of his death shall be admissible in evidence in all civil and criminal trials and other proceedings before courts, administrative agencies and other tribunals to the same extent and for the same purposes that they might have been admissible had the deceased survived and been sworn as a witness in the proceedings, subject to proof that:

(1) At the time of the making of such declaration the deceased was conscious of approaching death and believed there was no hope of recovery;
(2) Such declaration was voluntarily made. (1973, c. 464, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Sixth Amendment Not Violated by Admission of Declaration. — Albeit a dying declaration is indubitably hearsay and the declarant is, of course, not available for cross-examination, the admission of such evidence is not a violation of the Sixth Amendment. State v. Stevens, 295 N.C. 21, 243 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

General Assembly Codified Essentials of Former Law. — "Dying declarations" by the person whose death is an issue in the case have long been admissible in North Carolina provided (1) at the time they were made the declarant was in actual danger of death; (2) he had full apprehension of the danger; (3) death did in fact ensue; and (4) declarant, if living, would be a competent witness to testify to the matter. In 1973, the General Assembly codified the essentials of those requirements in this section. State v. Stevens, 295 N.C. 21, 243 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

And Case Law Requirements Are Unchanged. — In State v. Bowden, 290 N.C. 702, 228 S.E.2d 414 (1976), and in State v. Cousin, 291 N.C. 413, 230 S.E.2d 518 (1976), it was noted, without deciding, that the words "no hope of recovery" in the statute might make the statutory exception to the hearsay rule more restrictive than existing case law. The Supreme Court has now concluded that the statutory prerequisites that the deceased must have been "conscious of approaching death and believed that there was no hope of recovery" do not change the case-law requirements that in order to be admissible the declarations of a decedent must have been "in present anticipation of death." State v. Stevens, 295 N.C. 21, 243 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

The statutory prerequisites that the deceased must have been "conscious of approaching death and believed that there was no hope of recovery" do not change case-law requirements that in order to be admissible the declaration of a decedent must have been "in present anticipation of death." It is enough if he "believed he was going to die." State v. Penn, 36 N.C. App. 482, 244 S.E.2d 702 (1978).

Rationale Based on Trustworthiness of Declaration. — The rationale of this section clearly rests upon a belief in the general trustworthiness of dying declarations, rather than upon the necessity for bringing to justice the perpetrators of secret homicides. State v. Lester, 294 N.C. 220, 240 S.E.2d 391 (1978).

The common law and statutory requirement of "no hope of recovery" rests upon the tenet that when an individual believes death to be imminent, the ordinary motives for falsehood are absent and most powerful considerations impel him to speak the truth. The solemnity of approaching death is considered by the law as creating an obligation equal to that which is imposed by a positive oath administered in a court of justice. State v. Stevens, 295 N.C. 21, 243 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

The public necessity of preventing secret homicides from going unpunished requires the preservation of dying declarations as evidence, notwithstanding the inability of the defendant to cross-examine his accuser. State v. Stevens, 295 N.C. 21, 243 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

Section Expands the Admissibility of Statements. — The overall effect of this section was to liberalize the dying declaration exception to the hearsay rule by expanding the admissibility of such statements to all civil and criminal trials. State v. Lester, 294 N.C. 220, 240 S.E.2d 391 (1978).

Declarant's Death Need Not Be in Issue. — Admissibility seems no longer to be confined to situations in which the declarant's death is in issue, but rather extends to any situation in which the cause or circumstances of the declarant's death may be relevant to any issue in litigation. State v. Lester, 294 N.C. 220, 240 S.E.2d 391 (1978).

It is not necessary that the declarant should be in the very act of dying; it is enough if he is under the apprehension of impending dissolution. Stated in simpler terms, it is enough if he believed he was going to die. State v. Stevens, 295 N.C. 21, 243 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

And Test Is Not Actual Swiftness with Which Death Ensues. — The fact that the declarant survived one week longer than the doctor had told him he might live did not affect the admissibility of his dying declarations. The test is the declarant's belief in the nearness of death when he made the statement, not the actual swiftness with which death ensued. State v. Stevens, 295 N.C. 21, 243 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

It is not necessary for the declarant to state that he perceives he is going to die. If all the circumstances, including the nature of the wound, indicate that the declarant realized death was near, this requirement of the law is satisfied. State v. Bowden, 290 N.C. 702, 228 S.E.2d 414 (1976); State v. Cousin, 291 N.C. 413, 230 S.E.2d 518 (1976); State v. Lester, 294 N.C. 220, 240 S.E.2d 391 (1978).

The consciousness of approaching death may be made to appear from what the injured person said; or from the nature and extent of the wounds inflicted, being obviously such that he must have felt or known that he could not survive; as well as from his conduct at the time and the communications, if any, made to him by his medical advisers, if assented to or understandingly acquiesced in by him. State v. Stevens, 295 N.C. 21, 243 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

The declaration must have been voluntary and made when the declarant was conscious of approaching death and without hope for recovery. State v. Bowden, 290 N.C. 702, 228 S.E.2d 414 (1976); State v. Cousin, 291 N.C. 413, 230 S.E.2d 518 (1976).

The admissibility of a declaration as a dying declaration is a question to be determined by the trial judge, and when the judge admits the declaration, his ruling is reviewable only to determine whether there is evidence tending to show facts essential to support it. State v. Bowden, 290 N.C. 702, 228 S.E.2d 414 (1976); State v. Cousin, 291 N.C. 413, 230 S.E.2d 518 (1976).

The admissibility of dying declarations is a decision for the trial judge, and review by the Supreme Court is limited to the narrow question of whether there is any evidence tending to show the factual prerequisites to admissibility. State v. Stevens, 295 N.C. 21, 243 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

Whether a dying declaration is admissible is a question for the trial court, and his ruling is reviewable on appeal only with respect to whether there was sufficient competent evidence tending to show facts essential to support his ruling. State v. Penn, 36 N.C. App. 482, 244 S.E.2d 702 (1978).

A dying declaration is not conclusive, its weight and credibility being for the jury to determine. It may be impeached in the same manner as any other sworn statement. State v. Harding, 291 N.C. 223, 230 S.E.2d 397 (1976).

Once admitted into evidence, a dying declaration is no different from other testimony. The extent of its credibility is a matter for the jury and it is subject to impeachment or corroboration upon the same grounds and in the same manner as the testimony of a sworn witness. State v. Stevens, 295 N.C. 21, 243 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

Declarations Made in Response to Leading Questions. — The fact that the dying declarations were made in response to leading questions did not require their exclusion from evidence. The qualifying questions were not perfunctory to be used in the event the dying man took a turn for the worse, but were clearly appropriate in light of the declarant's severe injuries and inability to speak, and the declarations were as nearly spontaneous as declarations by one under the circumstances could be. State v. Stevens, 295 N.C. 21, 243 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

Impeachment of Dying Declaration. — The impeachment of a dying declaration must proceed under the ordinary rules of evidence. Under these rules, for the purpose of impeachment, a party is entitled to introduce evidence only of the general reputation or character of the witness. Therefore, the courts do not permit the witness to be impeached by independent evidence of particular misconduct. Specifically, this means that a witness may not be impeached by record evidence of his conviction of crime. State v. Stevens, 295 N.C. 21, 243 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

Evidence of the general character or reputation of a decedent is relevant on the issue of his dying declaration and is admissible to impeach or to sustain the declaration. This is an exception to the usual rule that evidence as to the general moral character of the deceased is not admissible in a prosecution for homicide. State v. Stevens, 295 N.C. 21, 243 S.E.2d 771 (1978).

§ 8-52: Repealed by Session Laws 1973, c. 41.

§ 8-53. Communications between physician and patient.

No person, duly authorized to practice physic or surgery, shall be required to disclose any information which he may have acquired in attending a patient in a professional character, and which information was necessary to enable him to prescribe for such patient as a physician, or to do any act for him as a surgeon. Confidential information obtained in medical records shall be furnished only on the authorization of the patient, or if deceased, the executor, administrator, or, in the case of unadministered estates, the next of kin; provided, that the court, either at the trial or prior thereto, or the Industrial Commission pursuant to law may compel such disclosure, if in his opinion the same is necessary to a proper administration of justice. CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Nature and Scope of Privilege.
III. Waiver.
IV. Compelled Disclosure.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Privilege Is Statutory. — At common law, communications from patients to physicians are not privileged. Such privilege is purely statutory. Sims v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 257 N.C. 32, 125 S.E.2d 326 (1962).

Section Amends Common-Law Rule. — Under the common law, communications which passed between a patient and a physician in the confidence of the professional relation and information acquired by the physician while attending or treating the patient were not privileged or protected from disclosure by the physician. This section as interpreted by the Supreme Court has the effect of amending this common-law rule. State v. Bryant, 5 N.C. App. 21, 167 S.E.2d 841 (1969).

Legislative Intent. — The legislature intended this section to be a shield and not a sword. It was careful to make provision to avoid injustice and suppression of truth by putting it in the power of the trial judge to compel disclosure. State v. Bryant, 5 N.C. App. 21, 167 S.E.2d 841 (1969).

Purpose of Section. — One of the objects of this statute is to encourage full and frank disclosure to the doctor. Yow v. Pittman, 241 N.C. 69, 84 S.E.2d 297 (1954).

It is the purpose of statutes such as this section to induce the patient to make full disclosure that proper treatment may be given, to prevent public disclosure of socially stigmatized diseases, and in some instances to protect patients from self-incrimination. Sims v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 257 N.C. 32, 125 S.E.2d 326 (1962); In re Farrow, 41 N.C. App. 680, 255 S.E.2d 777 (1979).

The purpose of this section is to create a privileged relationship between physician and patient. Lockwood v. McCaskill, 261 N.C. 754, 136 S.E.2d 67 (1964); Johnson v. United Ins. Co. of America, 262 N.C. 253, 136 S.E.2d 587 (1964).

Purpose of Section Must Be Carried Out at Superior Court Level. — If the spirit and purpose of this section is to be carried out, it must be at the superior court level. State v. Bryant, 5 N.C. App. 21, 167 S.E.2d 841 (1969).

The principle by which a physician may not be compelled to divulge communications and other matters which have come to his knowledge by observation of his patient is regulated by statute, and under the provisions of this section, the privilege is qualified, and it rests within the discretion of the trial judge, in the administration of justice, to compel the physician, called as a witness, to testify to such matters when relevant to the inquiry. State v. Martin, 182 N.C. 846, 109 S.E. 74 (1921).

Proviso Refers to Exceptional Situations. — In view of the primary purpose of this section to create a privileged relationship between physician and patient, it is clear the proviso is intended to refer to exceptional, rather than ordinary, factual situations. Lockwood v. McCaskill, 261 N.C. 754, 136 S.E.2d 67 (1964).

This section and § 8-53.3 are to be read in pari materia. When so read, they extend the physician-patient privilege to the psychologist-client situation and withdraw the privilege in all situations where "necessary to a proper administration of justice." The reasons for the exceptions to the privileges granted by the two statutes are the same and it would be discordant to fail to extend to § 8-53.3 the amendment of this section which made it clear that the legislature intended that disclosure could be compelled prior to trial. In re Albemarle Mental Health Center, 42 N.C. App. 292, 256 S.E.2d 818, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 297, 259 S.E.2d 298 (1979).

This section is not applicable in an involuntary commitment proceeding. In re Farrow, 41 N.C. App. 680, 255 S.E.2d 777 (1979).

Applied in Wilder v. Edwards, 7 N.C. App. 513, 173 S.E.2d 72 (1970); Gibson v. Montford, 9 N.C. App. 251, 175 S.E.2d 776 (1970); State v. Cooper, 286 N.C. 549, 213 S.E.2d 305 (1975); State v. Hodgen, 47 N.C. App. 329, 267 S.E.2d 32 (1980).

II. NATURE AND SCOPE OF PRIVILEGE.

Relationship of Physician and Patient Must Exist. — The admissions of one accused of crime are not rendered confidential within the meaning of the law when made to a psychiatrist examining him by order of the court in order to form an opinion as to whether the defendant had sufficient capacity to be in law guilty of crime, since, under the circumstances of this case, the relationship of physician and patient did not exist, and this section is not applicable. State v. Newsome, 195 N.C. 552, 143 S.E. 187 (1928).

The relationship of patient and physician within the purview of this section, does not exist between a defendant and an alienist examining him in regard to his sanity. State v. Litteral, 227 N.C. 527, 43 S.E.2d 84 (1947).

Where doctor went to the jail to examine defendant to determine if he was drunk or under the influence of intoxicating liquor at the request of defendant's brother, not at the request of defendant, and not to perform any professional services for defendant, the relationship of patient and physician, under such circumstances, did not exist between defendant and the doctor within the purview of this section. State v. Hollingsworth, 263 N.C. 158, 139 S.E.2d 235 (1964).

This privilege extends only to those cases in which the physician and patient relationship existed at the time of the communication and where the information given was necessary for diagnosis or treatment. State v. Mayhand, 298 N.C. 418, 259 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

Effect of Marriage Between Physician and Patient. — If the relation of doctor and patient existed between plaintiff and her former husband, any information which he acquired while attending her in his professional character is protected by this section in the same manner as if they had not been married to each other. Furr v. Simpson, 271 N.C. 221, 155 S.E.2d 746 (1967).

Application to Nurses, Technicians and Others. — The effect of this section is not extended to include nurses, technicians, and others, unless they were assisting, or acting under the direction of, a physician or surgeon. Sims v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 257 N.C. 32, 125 S.E.2d 326 (1962).

The provisions of this section also apply to nurses, technicians, and others when they are assisting or acting under the direction of a physician or surgeon, if the physician or surgeon is at the time acting so as to be within the rule set out therein. State v. Bryant, 5 N.C. App. 21, 167 S.E.2d 841 (1969); State v. Wooten, 18 N.C. App. 269, 196 S.E.2d 603, appeal dismissed, 283 N.C. 670, 197 S.E.2d 879 (1973).

What Information Included. — It is the accepted construction of this section that it extends, not only to information orally communicated by the patient, but to knowledge obtained by the physician or surgeon through his own observation or examination while attending the patient in a professional capacity, and which was necessary to enable him to prescribe. Smith v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 147 N.C. 62, 60 S.E. 717 (1908). See Creech v. Sovereign Camp, W.O.W., 211 N.C. 658, 191 S.E. 840 (1937); Capps v. Lynch, 253 N.C. 18, 116 S.E.2d 137 (1960); Sims v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 257 N.C. 32, 125 S.E.2d 326 (1962); Lockwood v. McCaskill, 261 N.C. 754, 136 S.E.2d 67 (1964); In re Farrow, 41 N.C. App. 680, 255 S.E.2d 777 (1979).

This section applies to hospital records offered in evidence in an action to recover death benefits under a policy of insurance, where insurer denies liability on the ground that the application contained false statements with respect to insured's health, insofar as the records contain entries made by physicians and surgeons, or under their direction, pertaining to communications and information obtained by them in attending the insured professionally, which information was necessary to enable them to prescribe for her. However, any other information contained in the records, if relevant and otherwise competent, is not privileged. Sims v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 257 N.C. 32, 125 S.E.2d 326 (1962).

Information Is No Less Privileged Because It Was Obtained in Hospital. — There is no difference in the application of the statute between examination and treatment of the patient by a physician or surgeon in a hospital and in the home. The information is no less privileged that it was obtained in a hospital. Sims v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 257 N.C. 32, 125 S.E.2d 326 (1962).

Tape Relating to Facts in Death Certificates. — In an action by plaintiff to recover damages for wrongful discharge from his position as superintendent of a State hospital for the mentally disordered, a tape of a meeting of the credentials committee of that hospital would not come within the privilege provided by this section where the information on the tape did not relate to treatment of patients but related basically the facts included in the death certificates of patients which were a matter of public records. Smith v. State, 298 N.C. 115, 257 S.E.2d 399 (1979).

Cross-examination of defendant's psychiatrist concerning incriminating statements made by defendant did not violate defendant's statutory right to privileged communication with his doctor on the basis that no bona fide doctor-patient relationship existed between defendant and his expert witness, or on the basis that, even assuming a valid relationship, defendant waived his right to the privilege by putting the doctor on the stand. State v. Clark, 301 N.C. 176, 270 S.E.2d 425 (1980).

III. WAIVER.

Privilege Is That of Patient. — A physician or surgeon may not refuse to testify; the privilege is that of the patient. Sims v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 257 N.C. 32, 125 S.E.2d 326 (1962); Neese v. Neese, 1 N.C. App. 426, 161 S.E.2d 841 (1968); State v. Bryant, 5 N.C. App. 21, 167 S.E.2d 841 (1969).

The records of patients at a hospital are privileged but the privilege is that of the patient — not the hospital. Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Davis Hosp., 36 F.R.D. 434 (W.D.N.C. 1965).

The privilege created by this statute is for the benefit of the patient alone. In re Farrow, 41 N.C. App. 680, 255 S.E.2d 777 (1979).

The privilege is not absolute, but qualified. Sims v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 257 N.C. 32, 125 S.E.2d 326 (1962); State v. Bryant, 5 N.C. App. 21, 167 S.E.2d 841 (1969).

The privilege created by this statute may be waived by the patient, and in any event is a qualified, rather than an absolute, privilege in that the judge has discretion, either at the trial or prior thereto, to "compel such disclosure, if in his opinion the same is necessary to a proper administration of justice." In re Farrow, 41 N.C. App. 680, 255 S.E.2d 777 (1979).

Only Patient or Court May Authorize Disclosure. — The law protects the patient's secrets, and makes it the duty of the doctor to keep them, a duty he cannot waive. The veil of secrecy can be drawn aside only by the patient or by court, and only when the ends of justice require it. Yow v. Pittman, 241 N.C. 69, 84 S.E.2d 297 (1954).

Privilege May Be Waived. — The privilege given by this section is for the benefit of the patient alone, and it may be insisted on or waived at his discretion, subject to the exceptions included in the section. Fuller v. Knights of Pythias, 129 N.C. 318, 40 S.E. 65 (1901); Smith v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 147 N.C. 62, 60 S.E. 717 (1908). See Creech v. Sovereign Camp, W.O.W., 211 N.C. 658, 191 S.E. 840 (1937); Capps v. Lynch, 253 N.C. 18, 116 S.E.2d 137 (1960).

Since the privilege is that of the patient alone, it may be waived by him expressly or impliedly, and cannot be taken advantage of by any other person. Neese v. Neese, 1 N.C. App. 426, 161 S.E.2d 841 (1968).

The privilege is waived by implication where the patient calls the physician as a witness and examines him as to patient's physical condition, where patient fails to object when the opposing party causes the physician to testify, or where the patient testifies to the communication between himself and physician. Neese v. Neese, 1 N.C. App. 426, 161 S.E.2d 841 (1968).

Where plaintiff used an affidavit of his physician for the purpose of obtaining a temporary restraining order pending the hearing of his case on the merits, such use did not waive the physician-patient privilege. Neese v. Neese, 1 N.C. App. 426, 161 S.E.2d 841 (1968).

By Patient's Testimony Describing Nature of Injuries in Detail. — While a patient does not waive his right to assert that a communication between himself and his physician is privileged by merely testifying as to his own physicial condition, where the patient voluntarily goes into detail regarding the nature of his injuries, he waives the privilege, and the physician is competent and compellable to testify in regard thereto, since the patient will not be allowed to close the mouth of the only witness in a position to contradict him and fully explain the facts. Capps v. Lynch, 253 N.C. 18, 116 S.E.2d 137 (1960).

A patient may surrender his privilege in a personal injury case by testifying to the nature and extent of his injuries and the examination and treatment by the physician or surgeon. Whether the testimony of the patient amounts to a waiver of privilege depends upon the provisions of the applicable statute and the extent and ultimate materiality of the testimony given with respect to the nature, treatment, and effect of the injury or ailment. The question of waiver is to be determined largely by the facts and circumstances of the particular case on trial. Neese v. Neese, 1 N.C. App. 426, 161 S.E.2d 841 (1968).

Judge's Finding of Record That Testimony Necessary. — Before a physician may testify to matters arising in his confidential relationship with his patient, this section requires that the trial judge find that in his opinion such testimony is "necessary to a proper administration of justice," and in the absence of such finding appearing of record on appeal, it is reversible error for the trial judge upon defendant's exception to admit testimony of the insured's physician tending to show that the insured in his application for life insurance had made misstatements of material facts that would avoid the insurer's liability in his suit to cancel the policy issued thereon. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Boddie, 194 N.C. 199, 139 S.E. 228 (1927). See Creech v. Sovereign Camp, W.O.W., 211 N.C. 658, 191 S.E. 840 (1937); Yow v. Pittman, 241 N.C. 69, 84 S.E.2d 297 (1954).

If the statements were privileged under this section, then in the absence of a finding by the presiding judge, duly entered upon the record, that the testimony was necessary to a proper administration of justice, it was incompetent, and upon defendant's objection should have been excluded. Sawyer v. Weskett, 201 N.C. 500, 160 S.E. 575 (1931).

Where the presiding judge compels disclosure, as provided by this section, he shall enter upon the record his finding that the testimony is necessary to a proper administration of justice. Sims v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 257 N.C. 32, 125 S.E.2d 326 (1962).

In the absence of a finding by the trial court that, in its opinion, the admission of hospital records was necessary to a proper administration of justice, the appellate court is compelled to hold that their exclusion was not error. Sims v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 257 N.C. 32, 125 S.E.2d 326 (1962).

The superior court's finding, inserted in the record, that the evidence of a physician was necessary to a proper administration of justice, takes the physician's evidence out of the privileged communication rule provided in this section. State v. Howard, 272 N.C. 519, 158 S.E.2d 350 (1968).

A judge of superior court at term may, in his discretion, compel disclosure of physician-patient communications if, in his opinion, it is necessary to a proper administration of justice and he so finds and enters such finding on the record. Neese v. Neese, 1 N.C. App. 426, 161 S.E.2d 841 (1968).

In construing this section it is incumbent on the presiding judge to find the fact, and this should appear in the record in substance, that, in his opinion, the disclosure is necessary to a proper administration of justice. State v. Bryant, 5 N.C. App. 21, 167 S.E.2d 841 (1969).

Express Recital of Findings Held Unnecessary. — Although the trial judge made no express recital of findings that the testimony of a pyschiatrist in a sterilization proceeding was necessary to the proper administration of justice, his opinion that such was the case was implicit when he overruled respondent's objection to the testimony asserting the privilege under this section. It must be assumed that the judge was aware of the statute when he made the ruling, and that under these circumstances the very act of ruling was in itself a finding that its admission was necessary to a proper administration of justice. In re Johnson, 36 N.C. App. 133, 243 S.E.2d 386 (1978).

IV. COMPELLED DISCLOSURE.

Intent as to Phrase "May Compel Such Disclosure". — The legislature intended to employ the phrase "may compel such disclosure" in this section in such manner as to authorize the court to require disclosure in all situations governed by this section without exception, when disclosure "is necessary to a proper administration of justice." In re Albemarle Mental Health Center, 42 N.C. App. 292, 256 S.E.2d 818, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 297, 259 S.E.2d 298 (1979).

Disclosure May Be Compelled Prior to Trial or Filing of Charges. — Construing this section and § 8-53.3 so as to give effect to the obvious intention of the legislature as manifested in the entire act and other acts in pari materia, the language of both of these sections is sufficient to allow the trial court to compel disclosure prior to trial and prior to the filing of criminal charges when such action is necessary to the exercise of its implied or inherent powers to provide for the proper administration of justice. In re Albemarle Mental Health Center, 42 N.C. App. 292, 256 S.E.2d 818, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 297, 259 S.E.2d 298 (1979).

Trial Judge May Compel Disclosure. — The legislature was careful to make provision to avoid injustice and suppression of truth by putting it in the power of the trial judge to compel disclosure. Sims v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 257 N.C. 32, 125 S.E.2d 326 (1962).

The judge, in the exercise of discretion and by the authority of the proviso in this section, may follow the procedure for the admission of testimony and admit hospital records in evidence. Sims v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 257 N.C. 32, 125 S.E.2d 326 (1962).

In a prosecution for possession of heroin, the trial court did not err in ruling that a physician should be required in the interest of justice to give testimony concerning a matchbox containing heroin found on defendant's person when she was undressed in a hospital emergency room in order that the physician could determine the cause of her unconsciousness. State v. Wooten, 18 N.C. App. 269, 196 S.E.2d 603, appeal dismissed, 283 N.C. 670, 197 S.E.2d 879 (1973).

The statutory privilege is a qualified one, and the judge may compel disclosure by the physician if he finds, in his discretion, that it is necessary for the proper administration of justice. State v. Mayhand, 298 N.C. 418, 259 S.E.2d 231 (1979).

But Only as to Matters Necessary to Proper Administration of Justice. — The trial judge may ascertain from the physician the nature of the evidence involved and may determine what part, if any, should be disclosed as necessary to the proper administration of justice. Obviously, the proper administration of justice might require disclosure as to certain but not as to all matters under the privilege. Lockwood v. McCaskill, 261 N.C. 754, 136 S.E.2d 67 (1964).

This section requires, and the decisions of the Supreme Court are to the effect, that the trial judge may admit communication between physician and patient if in his opinion such is necessary to a proper administration of justice. State v. Bryant, 5 N.C. App. 21, 167 S.E.2d 841 (1969).

And He Should Not Hesitate to Do So. — Judges should not hesitate to require disclosure where it appears to them to be necessary in order that the truth be known and justice be done. Sims v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 257 N.C. 32, 125 S.E.2d 326 (1962); State v. Bryant, 5 N.C. App. 21, 167 S.E.2d 841 (1969).

But Appellate Court Cannot Exercise Trial Judge's Authority. — The appellate court cannot exercise the authority and discretion vested in the trial judge by the proviso in this section, nor can it repeal or amend the statute by judicial decree. If the spirit and purpose of the law is to be carried out, it must be at the superior court level. Sims v. Charlotte Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 257 N.C. 32, 125 S.E.2d 326 (1962).

§ 8-53.1. Physician-patient privilege waived in child abuse.

Notwithstanding the provisions of G.S. 8-53, the physician-patient privilege shall not be ground for excluding evidence regarding the abuse or neglect of a child under the age of 16 years or regarding an illness of or injuries to such child or the cause thereof in any judicial proceeding related to a report pursuant to the North Carolina Juvenile Code, Subchapter XI of Chapter 7A of the General Statutes of North Carolina. (1965, c. 472, s. 2; 1971, c. 710, s. 2; 1981, c. 469, s. 24.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, substituted "North Carolina Juvenile Code, Subchapter XI of Chapter 7A" for "Child Abuse Reporting Law, Article 8 of Chapter 110" near the end of the section.

§ 8-53.2. Communications between clergymen and communicants.

No priest, rabbi, accredited Christian Science practitioner, or a clergyman or ordained minister of an established church shall be competent to testify in any action, suit or proceeding concerning any information which was communicated to him and entrusted to him in his professional capacity, and necessary to enable him to discharge the functions of his office according to the usual course of his practice or discipline, wherein such person so communicating such information about himself or another is seeking spiritual counsel and advice relative to and growing out of the information so imparted, provided, however, that this section shall not apply where communicant in open court waives the privilege conferred. (1959, c. 646; 1963, c. 200; 1967, c. 794.)

CASE NOTES

Statutory Privilege. — Apart from this statute, there is no privilege with reference to communications between a clergyman, or other spiritual advisor, and his communicants or others who seek his advice and comfort. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967). Commented on in 45 N.C.L. Rev. 863, 884, 924 (1967).

§ 8-53.3. Communications between psychologist and client.

No person, duly authorized as a practicing psychologist or psychological examiner, nor any of his employees or associates, shall be required to disclose any information which he may have acquired in rendering professional psychological services, and which information was necessary to enable him to render professional psychological services: Provided, that the presiding judge of a superior court may compel such disclosure, if in his opinion the same is necessary to a proper administration of justice. (1967, c. 910, s. 18.)

CASE NOTES

Section 8-53 and this section are to be read in pari materia. In re Albemarle Mental Health Center, 42 N.C. App. 292, 256 S.E.2d 818, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 297, 259 S.E.2d 298 (1979).

Thus, Disclosure May Be Compelled Prior to Trial or Filing of Charges. — Construing § 8-53 and this section so as to give effect to the obvious intention of the legislature as manifested in the entire act and other acts in pari materia, the language of both of these sections is sufficient to allow the trial court to compel disclosure prior to trial and prior to the filing of criminal charges when such action is necessary to the exercise of its implied or inherent powers to provide for the proper administration of justice. In re Albemarle Mental Health Center, 42 N.C. App. 292, 256 S.E.2d 818, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 297, 259 S.E.2d 298 (1979).

While the proviso contained in this section does not contain the precise language of the proviso to § 8-53 specifically providing that the required disclosure may be prior to trial, such was the legislative intent. It would be wholly inconsistent to allow disclosure in the case of a physician-patient relationship while, in a statute extending the rule to the psychologist-client relationship, precluding the required disclosure until the time of trial. In re Albemarle Mental Health Center, 42 N.C. App. 292, 256 S.E.2d 818, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 297, 259 S.E.2d 298 (1979).

This section as written favors a policy of nondisclosure. Flora v. Hamilton, 81 F.R.D. 576 (M.D.N.C. 1978).

But judges should not hesitate where it appears to them that disclosure is necessary in order that the truth be known and justice done. Flora v. Hamilton, 81 F.R.D. 576 (M.D.N.C. 1978).

Applied in State v. Crews, 296 N.C. 607, 252 S.E.2d 745 (1979).

§ 8-53.4. School counselor privilege.

No person certified by the State Department of Public Instruction as a school counselor and duly appointed or designated as such by the governing body of a public school system within this State or by the head of any private school within this State shall be competent to testify in any action, suit, or proceeding concerning any information acquired in rendering counseling services to any student enrolled in such public school system or private school, and which information was necessary to enable him to render counseling services; provided, however, that this section shall not apply where the student in open court waives the privilege conferred; provided further that the presiding judge may compel such disclosure, if in his opinion the same is necessary to a proper administration of justice. (1971, c. 943.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment surveying North Carolina law of relational privielge, see 50 N.C.L. Rev. 630 (1972).

§ 8-53.5. Communications between marital and family therapist and client(s).

No person, duly authorized as a certified marital and family therapist, nor any of his employees or associates, shall be required to disclose any information which he may have acquired in rendering professional marital and family therapy services, and which information was necessary to enable him to render professional marital and family therapy services: provided, that the presiding judge of a superior court may compel such disclosure, if in his opinion the same is necessary to a proper administration of justice. (1979, c. 697, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 697, s. 4, provides: "This act shall become effective October 1, 1979, and shall expire October 1, 1985."

§ 8-54. Defendant in criminal action competent but not compellable to testify.

In the trial of all indictments, complaints, or other proceedings against persons charged with the commission of crimes, offenses or misdemeanors, the person so charged is, at his own request, but not otherwise, a competent witness, and his failure to make such request shall not create any presumption against him. But every such person examined as a witness shall be subject to cross-examination as other witnesses. Except as above provided, nothing in this section shall render any person, who in any criminal proceeding is charged with the commission of a criminal offense, competent or compellable to give evidence against himself, nor render any person compellable to answer any question tending to criminate himself. (1856-7, c. 23; 1866, c. 43, s. 3; 1868-9, c. 209, s. 4; 1881, c. 89, s. 3; c. 110, ss. 2, 3; Code ss. 1353, 1354; Rev., ss. 1634, 1635; C. S., s. 1799.)

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Change From Common Law. — To correctly interpret and apply this section, it should be remembered that at common law, both in England and in this country, parties were not competent witnesses and were not permitted to testify. Nonetheless, an admission of guilt by defendant was competent evidence just as it is competent today. Then, as now, the law applied and gave effect to the assumption that one charged with crime and wrongful conduct would not remain silent when he had an opportunity to speak. Such silence was evidence of guilt. Thus, when the barrier was removed, preventing the accused from testifying and according him a privilege, it was proper to provide that his failure to utilize the privilege so given should not be regarded as an implied admission. State v. Walker, 251 N.C. 465, 112 S.E.2d 61, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 832, 81 S. Ct. 45, 5 L. Ed. 2d 58 (1960).

Prior to the adoption of this section defendants in criminal actions were not competent to testify in their own behalf. The prevailing theory prior to the adoption of this section was that the frailty of human nature and the overpowering desire for freedom would ordinarily induce a person charged with crime, if permitted to testify, to swear falsely. State v. Williams, 6 N.C. App. 611, 170 S.E.2d 640 (1969).

When the common-law rules of evidence, which declared that parties were incompetent to testify, were changed by this section, an important privilege was extended to defendants, guarded by the provision that a failure to exercise it should raise no presumption of guilt against them. State v. Smith, 290 N.C. 148, 226 S.E.2d 10, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 932, 97 S. Ct. 339, 50 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1976).

The common-law disqualification against interested parties testifying was removed by this section. State v. Howard, 222 N.C. 291, 22 S.E.2d 917 (1942).

Privilege and Not a Duty. — A defendant in a criminal matter can only be examined as a witness by his own request. State v. Ellis, 97 N.C. 447, 2 S.E. 525 (1887).

This section gives a criminal defendant the privilege of testifying in his own behalf. It is not his duty to do so, and he cannot be compelled to testify. If he does, however, he occupies the position of any other witness. He is entitled to the same privileges and is equally liable to be impeached or discredited. State v. Austin, 20 N.C. App. 539, 202 S.E.2d 293, rev'd on other grounds, 285 N.C. 364, 204 S.E.2d 675 (1974).

The word "presumption" as used in this section is equivalent to what is at present generally understood by the word "inference." State v. Bailey, 4 N.C. App. 407, 167 S.E.2d 24 (1969).

The law is that the jury is not to infer guilt from the fact that the defendant neither testifies nor presents evidence. State v. Willis, 22 N.C. App. 465, 206 S.E.2d 729 (1974).

Defendant Treated as Other Witnesses. — When the defendant exercises this privilege he is treated just as any other witness and thereby subjects himself to all the disadvantages of that position. State v. Efler, 85 N.C. 585 (1881); State v. Hawkins, 115 N.C. 712, 20 S.E. 623 (1894); State v. Auston, 223 N.C. 203, 25 S.E.2d 613 (1943).

Where a defendant in a criminal prosecution testifies in his own behalf he waives his constitutional privilege not to answer questions tending to incriminate him and is subject to cross-examination for the purpose of impeaching his credibility as other witnesses. State v. Griffin, 201 N.C. 541, 160 S.E. 826 (1931).

If a defendant in a criminal action testifies, he occupies the position of any other witness, and he is entitled to the same privileges and is equally liable to be impeached or discredited. State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971).

Contradiction of Testimony. — Defendant's privilege against self-incrimination was not violated where State was permitted to show for purposes of impeachment that defendant had not voluntarily turned himself in to the police, and defendant had already testified to the contrary. State v. Lester, 289 N.C. 239, 221 S.E.2d 268 (1976).

Evidence of Other Offenses Where Defendant Does Not Testify. — When the defendant in a criminal trial does not testify, evidence of other offenses is inadmissible if its only relevancy is to show the character of the accused or his disposition to commit an offense of the nature of the one charged; such evidence will be admissible, however, if that evidence is used to show intent, design, guilty knowledge, or scienter or to make out the res gestae or to exhibit a chain of circumstances in respect of the matter on trial, when the other offenses are so connected with the offense charged as to throw light on one or more of these questions. State v. Allen, 50 N.C. App. 173, 272 S.E.2d 785 (1980).

Where There Are Two or More Defendants. — Even prior to the enactment of this section on a trial for an affray, one defendant could not oppose the testifying of his codefendant for himself, the State's counsel not objecting. State v. Hamlett, 85 N.C. 520 (1881).

Failure of Codefendant to Take Stand. — A codefendant on trial cannot be required over his own objection to testify as a witness for defendant. State v. Hanford, 16 N.C. App. 353, 191 S.E.2d 910, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 428, 192 S.E.2d 841 (1972).

Defendant may properly raise a violation of this section for the first time on appeal. State v. Fleming, 33 N.C. App. 216, 234 S.E.2d 431, cert. denied, 293 N.C. 161, 236 S.E.2d 705 (1977).

Testimony May Be Used in Subsequent Trial. — Where a defendant, in a prosecution for another crime, testified in his own behalf, after having been informed of his privilege not to testify, admissions made by him are competent evidence against him in a subsequent trial. State v. Simpson, 133 N.C. 676, 45 S.E. 567 (1903).

Applied in State v. Turner, 253 N.C. 37, 116 S.E.2d 194 (1960); State v. Stephens, 262 N.C. 45, 136 S.E.2d 209 (1964); State v. Boone, 39 N.C. App. 218, 249 S.E.2d 817 (1978).

Quoted in State v. Paige, 272 N.C. 417, 158 S.E.2d 522 (1968).

Cited in State v. Colson, 194 N.C. 206, 139 S.E. 230 (1927); State v. McLeod, 198 N.C. 649, 152 S.E. 895 (1930); State v. Spivey, 198 N.C. 655, 153 S.E. 255 (1930); State v. Vernon, 208 N.C. 340, 180 S.E. 590 (1935); York v. York, 212 N.C. 695, 194 S.E. 486 (1938); State v. Davis, 272 N.C. 102, 157 S.E.2d 671 (1967); State v. II. EVIDENCE OF DEFENDANT'S CHARACTER.

General Character Can Be Shown. — When a prosecutor or defendant in a criminal action goes upon the stand as a witness he becomes just as any other witness, and his general character can be proven, not only as it was before a charge affecting it was made, but as it is at the date he goes upon the stand. State v. Spurling, 118 N.C. 1250, 24 S.E. 533 (1896).

Same — Not in Issue Unless So Placed. — Where a defendant goes on the witness stand and testifies, he does not thereby put his character in issue, but only puts his testimony in issue, and the State may introduce evidence tending to show the bad character of the witness solely for the purpose of contradicting him. State v. Foster, 130 N.C. 666, 41 S.E. 284 (1902); State v. Cloninger, 149 N.C. 567, 63 S.E. 154 (1908).

When defendant does not go upon the stand, and does not offer evidence of good character, his character is not in issue and it may not be impeached by the State. State v. Proctor, 213 N.C. 221, 195 S.E. 816 (1938).

Unless a defendant in a criminal prosecution testifies as a witness, thereby subjecting himself to impeachment, or produces evidence of his good character to repel the charge of crime, the State may not show his bad character for any purpose. State v. McLamb, 235 N.C. 251, 69 S.E.2d 537 (1952).

Same — Where Introduced by Defendant. — The right of the defendant to offer testimony of his good character does not depend upon his having been examined as a witness in his own behalf. State v. Hice, 117 N.C. 782, 23 S.E. 357 (1895); State v. McKinnon, 223 N.C. 160, 25 S.E.2d 606 (1943).

When the defendant introduces evidence himself to prove his good character, then that evidence is substantive evidence, and may be considered by the jury as such. State v. Cloninger, 149 N.C. 567, 63 S.E. 154 (1908).

Same — Put in Issue by State. — Where, in the trial of a criminal action, the defendant testified in his own behalf and introduced no evidence as to his general character, but the State introduced evidence to show that such character was bad, it was held that such evidence by the State could be considered only as affecting the credibility of the defendant as a witness and not as a circumstance in determining the question of his guilt or innocence. State v. Traylor, 121 N.C. 674, 28 S.E. 493 (1897).

III. CROSS-EXAMINATION OF DEFENDANT.

A. Scope of Questioning.

Extent of Cross-Examination Permitted. — Cross-examination of a defendant under this section is not confined to matters brought out on direct examination, but questions are admissible to impeach, diminish or impair the credit of the witness. State v. Dickerson, 189 N.C. 327, 127 S.E. 256 (1925).

When a defendant voluntarily becomes a witness in his own behalf, he is subject to cross-examination and impeachment as any other witness, and it is proper for the solicitor (now district attorney) to ask him questions concerning his prior criminal record for the purpose of impeaching him, provided the questions are based on information and are asked in good faith. State v. Weaver, 3 N.C. App. 439, 165 S.E.2d 15 (1969).

It is permissible, for purposes of impeachment, to cross-examine a witness, including the defendant in a criminal case, by asking disparaging questions concerning collateral matters relating to his criminal and degrading conduct. State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971); State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975); State v. Poole, 289 N.C. 47, 220 S.E.2d 320 (1975); State v. Alford, 289 N.C. 372, 222 S.E.2d 222 (1976).

In order to impeach a defendant's credibility as a witness, the solicitor (now district attorney) is permitted to cross-examine the defendant as to collateral matters, including other criminal offenses, if the questions are based upon information and are asked in good faith. State v. Lea, 17 N.C. App. 71, 193 S.E.2d 383 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 674, 194 S.E.2d 154 (1973).

While defendant in a criminal action may not be required to become a witness unless he voluntarily does so, once he does so, he becomes subject to cross-examination and may be required to answer questions designed to impeach or discredit him as a witness. State v. Noell, 284 N.C. 670, 202 S.E.2d 750 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 902, 96 S. Ct. 3203, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1205 (1976); State v. Waddell, 289 N.C. 19, 220 S.E.2d 293 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

Cross-examination by the State is permitted for the purpose of impeaching the credibility of a witness, including a defendant in a criminal case, and not for the purpose of proving prior offenses. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975).

In cross-examination, the witness, including a defendant in a criminal case, may be asked all sorts of disparaging questions and he may be particularly asked whether he has committed specified criminal acts or has been guilty of specified reprehensible or degrading conduct. State v. Waddell, 289 N.C. 19, 220 S.E.2d 293 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

A testifying defendant is subject to impeachment by cross-examination, generally to the same extent as any other witness. State v. Lester, 289 N.C. 239, 221 S.E.2d 268 (1976).

Once a defendant testifies, he assumes the status of any other witness and is subject to impeachment by the questions and arguments of opposing counsel. These arguments may include comments on the witness's failure to explain or deny incriminating evidence since, if an innocent explanation exists or a denial can properly be made, the witness may reasonably be expected to provide it. State v. Smith, 294 N.C. 365, 241 S.E.2d 674 (1978).

For purposes of impeachment, a defendant as witness may be cross-examined by the district attorney concerning prior inconsistent statements, prior convictions, and any specific acts of misconduct which tend to impeach his character. State v. Herbin, 298 N.C. 441, 259 S.E.2d 263 (1979).

Same — Discretion of Trial Judge. — The limits of legitimate cross-examination of a defendant are largely within the discretion of the trial judge and, absent a showing that the verdict was improperly influenced by his rulings on the scope of that cross-examination, those rulings will not be held for error. State v. Lea, 17 N.C. App. 71, 193 S.E.2d 383 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 674, 194 S.E.2d 154 (1973).

The scope of cross-examination of a criminal defendant is subject to the discretion of the trial judge and the questions must be asked in good faith. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975); State v. Alford, 289 N.C. 372, 222 S.E.2d 222 (1976).

The scope of the cross-examination of a defendant with regard to specific acts of criminal and degrading conduct for which there has been no conviction is normally subject to the discretion of the trial judge, and the questions must be asked in good faith. The purpose of this rule permitting such a wide scope for impeachment is that such evidence is a proper and relevant means of aiding the jury in assessing and weighing the credibility of the defendant. State v. Ross, 295 N.C. 488, 246 S.E.2d 780 (1978).

B. Particular Areas of Inquiry.

Cross Examination as to Unproved Accusations or Arrests for Unrelated Offenses Not Allowed. — For purposes of impeachment, a witness, including the defendant in a criminal case, may not be cross-examined as to whether he has been accused, either informally or by affidavit on which a warrant is issued, of a criminal offense unrelated to the case on trial, nor cross-examined as to whether he has been arrested for such unrelated criminal offense. State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971).

Witness, including a defendant in a criminal case, cannot be impeached by cross-examination as to whether he has been arrested for, indicted for or accused of an unrelated criminal offense. State v. Waddell, 289 N.C. 19, 220 S.E.2d 293 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

A defendant may not be asked on cross-examination for impeachment purposes if he has been accused, arrested or indicted for a particular crime, but he may be asked if he in fact committed the crime. State v. Poole, 289 N.C. 47, 220 S.E.2d 320 (1975); State v. Alford, 289 N.C. 372, 222 S.E.2d 222 (1976).

It is improper to cross-examine a witness, including a defendant in a criminal trial, as to indictments, warrants or arrests which may have been made against him. State v. Lester, 289 N.C. 239, 221 S.E.2d 268 (1976).

Cross-Examination as to Other Offenses for Which Defendant Has Been Indicted. — For purposes of impeachment, a witness, including the defendant in a criminal case, may not be cross-examined as to whether he has been indicted or is under indictment for a criminal offense other than that for which he is then on trial. In respect of this point, State v. Maslin, 195 N.C. 537, 143 S.E. 3 (1928), and decisions in accord with Maslin, are overruled, on the basic ground that an indictment cannot rightly be considered as more than an unproved accusation. State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971).

The rule that a witness, including the defendant in a criminal case, may no longer be cross-examined for impeachment purposes as to whether he has been indicted or is under indictment for a criminal offense other than that for which he is then on trial applies only to trials begun after December 15, 1971, the date of the decision in State v. Williams, 279 N.C. 663, 185 S.E.2d 174 (1971). State v. Harris, 281 N.C. 542, 189 S.E.2d 249 (1972).

Cross-Examination with Respect to Prior Convictions. — A witness, including the defendant in a criminal case, may be cross-examined for purposes of impeachment with respect to prior convictions of crime. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975); State v. Ross, 295 N.C. 488, 246 S.E.2d 780 (1978).

Cross-examination for impeachment purposes is not limited to conviction of crimes. State v. Poole, 289 N.C. 47, 220 S.E.2d 320 (1975).

Trial judge did not err in admitting defendant's testimony under cross-examination of prior criminal convictions where the district attorney repeatedly asked defendant what he had been convicted of, not what he had been charged with, it was defendant who unresponsively volunteered information as to charges, and defendant's motion to strike all testimony as to charges was allowed and the judge instructed the jury to disregard all of it. State v. Lester, 289 N.C. 239, 221 S.E.2d 268 (1976).

Inquiry of a witness, including a defendant, into prior convictions for certain crimes is relevant to impeach the witness. State v. Collins, 29 N.C. App. 120, 223 S.E.2d 575 (1976).

Where the defendant on cross-examination testified about an additional conviction for assault with a firearm which he had failed to mention during his direct examination, this was relevant impeachment evidence, thus, it was not only proper, it was also prudent for the prosecutor to attempt to elicit further details about defendant's prior convictions. State v. Edwards, 49 N.C. App. 547, 272 S.E.2d 384 (1980).

And Specific Acts of Misconduct. — Where a defendant in a criminal case testifies in his own behalf, specific acts of misconduct may be brought out on cross-examination to impeach his testimony. State v. Poole, 289 N.C. 47, 220 S.E.2d 320 (1975).

An accused person who testifies as a witness may be cross-examined regarding prior acts of misconduct. State v. Lester, 289 N.C. 239, 221 S.E.2d 268 (1976).

Trial judge did not err in allowing cross-examination of defendant concerning the circumstances of his undesirable discharge from military service. State v. Lester, 289 N.C. 239, 221 S.E.2d 268 (1976).

Cross-examination for purposes of impeachment of a defendant who testifies in his own behalf is not limited to questions concerning prior convictions, but also extends to questions relating to specific acts of criminal and degrading conduct for which there has been no conviction. State v. Ross, 295 N.C. 488, 246 S.E.2d 780 (1978).

Cross-Examination as to Conviction Subsequently Set Aside. — While it was improper for the solicitor (now district attorney) to cross-examine defendant concerning a conviction for felonious assault when this conviction had been subsequently set aside and on retrial defendant had been convicted only of simple assault — if the solicitor (now district attorney) knew such was the case — defendant was hardly prejudiced when he had admitted convictions for a large number of different criminal offenses committed over a long period of years. State v. Weaver, 3 N.C. App. 439, 165 S.E.2d 15 (1969).

Denial of Impeaching Questions. — When defendant denies impeaching questions as to his prior criminal record, his answers are conclusive in the sense that they cannot be rebutted by other evidence, but the solicitor is not precluded from rephrasing his questions to include such details as the docket number of the case, the name of the court, the date of trial, the offense charged, and the sentence imposed.

State v. Weaver, 3 N.C. App. 439, 165 S.E.2d 15 (1969).

Contradicting Witness's Denial of Prior Offenses. — Denial of prior offenses by a witness, including a defendant in a criminal case, may not be contradicted by introducing the record of his conviction or otherwise proving by other witnesses that he was, in fact, convicted. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975).

Defendant May Be Recalled for Further Cross-Examination. — A defendant who avails himself of the privilege of testifying in his own behalf is subject to being recalled for further cross-examination, since the court has full discretion to allow a witness to be examined at any stage of the trial out of the usual order or to be recalled for reexamination. State v. Austin, 20 N.C. App. 539, 202 S.E.2d 293, rev'd on other grounds, 285 N.C. 364, 204 S.E.2d 675 (1974).

IV. DEFENDANT NOT TESTIFYING.

A. Effect.

Failure to Take Stand. — The failure of a defendant charged with homicide to take the witness stand voluntarily will not create a presumption against him. State v. Bynum, 175 N.C. 777, 95 S.E. 101 (1918).

Where defendant moved to set aside the verdict on ground that the jury, without defendant's consent, took into its room the complaint in a civil action relating to the subject matter of the prosecution, which had been admitted in evidence without objection, and typed notes of the argument of counsel for the prosecution containing reference to defendant's failure to testify, it was error to permit the jury to take such papers into the jury room and retain same while in its deliberations, and defendant's motion to set aside the verdict should have been allowed. State v. Stephenson, 218 N.C. 258, 10 S.E.2d 819 (1940).

A defendant's failure to testify may not be considered an admission of the truth of testimony which tends to incriminate him. State v. McCall, 286 N.C. 472, 212 S.E.2d 132 (1975).

North Carolina cases do not prescribe any mandatory formula with regard to defendant's failure to testify not creating any presumption against him, but instead look to see if the spirit of this section has been complied with. State v. Sanders, 288 N.C. 285, 218 S.E.2d 352 (1975), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1091, 96 S. Ct. 886, 47 L. Ed. 2d 102 (1976).

B. Fact Commented on by Prosecution.

Same — How Far Subject to Comment. — It is the privilege, but not the duty, of a party to an action to offer himself as a witness in his own behalf, and he is not the proper subject for unfriendly criticism because he declines to exercise a privilege conferred upon him for his own benefit merely. The fact is not the subject of comment at all, certainly not unless under very peculiar circumstances, which must be necessarily passed upon by the judge presiding at the trial, as a matter of sound discretion. Gragg v. Wagner, 77 N.C. 246 (1877).

The introduction or nonintroduction of a party as a witness in his own behalf should be the subject of comment only as the introduction or nonintroduction of any other witness might be. Goodman v. Sapp, 102 N.C. 477, 9 S.E. 483 (1889).

The failure of defendant to testify in his own behalf should not be made the subject of comment by the court except to inform the jury that a defendant may or may not testify in his own behalf as he may see fit, and that his failure to testify does not create any presumption against him. State v. McNeill, 229 N.C. 377, 49 S.E.2d 733 (1948); State v. Bovender, 233 N.C. 683, 65 S.E.2d 323 (1951); State v. Bailey, 4 N.C. App. 407, 167 S.E.2d 24 (1969); State v. Bryant, 283 N.C. 227, 195 S.E.2d 509 (1973); State v. Caron, 288 N.C. 467, 219 S.E.2d 68 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 971, 96 S. Ct. 2168, 48 L. Ed. 794 (1976).

This section is interpreted as denying the right of counsel to comment on the failure of a defendant to testify. The reason for the rule is that extended comment from the court or from counsel for the State or defendant would tend to nullify the declared policy of the law that the failure of one charged with crime to testify in his own behalf should not create a presumption against him or be regarded as a circumstance indicative of guilt or unduly accentuate the significance of his silence. To permit counsel for a defendant to comment upon or offer explanation of the defendant's failure to testify would open the door for the prosecution and create a situation that this section was intended to prevent. State v. Bovender, 233 N.C. 683, 65 S.E.2d 323 (1951).

Where a defendant's wife and three other women, and several men testified in his behalf, but he did not testify, to say that the defendant was "hiding behind his wife's coat tail" was tantamount to commenting on his failure to testify, which is not permitted by this section. State v. McLamb, 235 N.C. 251, 69 S.E.2d 537 (1952).

Statement by solicitor (now district attorney) in the presence of the jury that he had not said a word about defendant not going to the witness stand violated this section. State v. Roberts, 243 N.C. 619, 91 S.E.2d 589 (1956).

The effect of this section has been to prohibit the district attorney from making any reference to or comment on defendant's failure to testify. State v. McCall, 286 N.C. 472, 212 S.E.2d 132 (1975).

Counsel may not comment upon the failure of a defendant in a criminal prosecution to testify. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975).

This section unquestionably prohibits any mention before the jury of a defendant's failure to testify in his own behalf. State v. Taylor, 289 N.C. 223, 221 S.E.2d 359 (1976).

This section does not restrict the prosecuting attorney from making such comments upon the evidence and drawing such deductions therefrom as would have been legitimate before the passage of the act, for, while enlarging the rights of the defendants, this section did not abridge the privileges of the prosecution. State v. Smith, 290 N.C. 148, 226 S.E.2d 10, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 932, 97 S. Ct. 339, 50 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1976); State v. Peplinski, 290 N.C. 236, 225 S.E.2d 568, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 932, 97 S. Ct. 339, 50 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1976).

A bare statement by the prosecution to the effect that the State's evidence was uncontradicted was not an improper reference to the defendant's failure to testify. State v. Smith, 290 N.C. 148, 226 S.E.2d 10, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 932, 97 S. Ct. 339, 50 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1976).

The effect of this section is to prohibit the district attorney from commenting on defendant's failure to testify. State v. Peplinski, 290 N.C. 236, 225 S.E.2d 568, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 932, 97 S. Ct. 339, 50 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1976).

The State may fairly draw the jury's attention to the failure of the defendant to produce exculpatory evidence or to contradict the State's case. State v. Tilley, 292 N.C. 132, 232 S.E.2d 433 (1977).

The district attorney had a right to comment on defendant's failure to account for the hours between 4:30 and 6:45 P.A., especially after the defendant had offered evidence tending to establish an alibi. The prosecutor's remarks were directed solely at defendant's failure to offer evidence rebutting the State's case, rather than at his failure to take the stand. State v. Stanfield, 292 N.C. 357, 233 S.E.2d 574 (1977).

Exception to improper remarks of counsel during the argument must be taken before verdict. The rationale for this rule is that a party cannot be allowed to speculate upon his chances for a verdict, and then complain because counsel were not arrested in their comments upon the case. Such exceptions, like those to the admission of incompetent evidence, must be made in apt time, or else be lost. State v. Hopper, 292 N.C. 580, 234 S.E.2d 580 (1977).

Exception in Death Cases. — The general rule that exception to improper remarks of counsel during the argument must be taken before verdict has been modified in recent years so that it does not apply to death cases, when the argument of counsel is so prejudicial to the defendant that in this court's opinion, it is doubted that the prejudicial effect of such argument could have been removed from the jurors' minds by any instruction the trial judge might have given. State v. Hopper, 292 N.C. 580, 234 S.E.2d 580 (1977).

A slip of the tongue in an instruction on defendants' failure to testify will not be held to be prejudicial error if not called to the attention of the court and if it does not appear that the jury could have been prejudiced thereby. State v. Willis, 22 N.C. App. 465, 206 S.E.2d 729 (1974).

C. Instructions to Jury.

1. Curative.

Prejudice Removed by Instruction. — If the defendant elects not to testify as a witness in his own defense any comment by the solicitor (now district attorney), calling attention to this failure, is improper; but where the presiding judge carefully instructs the jury that defendant's failure to testify in his own defense should not be construed in anywise to his prejudice, the presiding judge properly and effectively removes any prejudicial effect that might result from the solicitor's (now district attorney) argument. State v. Lewis, 256 N.C. 430, 124 S.E.2d 115 (1962).

If the district attorney improperly comments on defendant's failure to testify, the error may be cured by a withdrawal of the remark or by a statement from the court that it was improper, followed by an instruction to the jury not to consider the failure of the accused to offer himself as a witness. State v. McCall, 286 N.C. 472, 212 S.E.2d 132 (1975); State v. Peplinski, 290 N.C. 236, 225 S.E.2d 568, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 932, 97 S. Ct. 339, 50 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1976); State v. Soloman, 40 N.C. App. 600, 253 S.E.2d 270 (1979).

Improper comment on defendant's failure in a criminal case to testify may be cured by an instruction from the court that the argument is improper followed by prompt and explicit instructions to the jury to disregard it. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975).

New Trial If No Curative Instruction on Improper Argument Given. — When there is an objection to prohibited statements on the failure of the defendant to testify, it is the duty of the court not only to sustain objection to the prosecuting attorney's improper and erroneous argument but also to instruct the jury that the argument was improper with prompt and explicit instructions to disregard it. If no proper curative instruction is given, the prejudicial effect of the argument requires a new trial. State v. Soloman, 40 N.C. App. 600, 253 S.E.2d 270 (1979).

2. Necessity of Request.

Instruction Discretionary Absent Request. — Court need not charge that failure of defendant to testify should not be considered against him in absence of request. State v. Jordan, 216 N.C. 356, 5 S.E.2d 156 (1939).

Ordinarily, it would seem better to give no instruction concerning a defendant's failure to testify unless such an instruction is requested by the defendant. State v. Powell, 11 N.C. App. 465, 181 S.E.2d 754, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 396, 183 S.E.2d 243 (1971); State v. Rankin, 282 N.C. 572, 193 S.E.2d 740 (1973); State v. Bryant, 283 N.C. 227, 195 S.E.2d 509 (1973); State v. Caron, 288 N.C. 467, 219 S.E.2d 68 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 971, 96 S. Ct. 2168, 48 L. Ed. 2d 794 (1976).

The failure of the trial court to instruct the jury upon the effect of defendant's failure to testify is not error because such an instruction is not required unless specifically requested by defendant. State v. Smith, 24 N.C. App. 498, 211 S.E.2d 539 (1975).

It is the better practice not to instruct on the defendant's failure to testify. State v. Covington, 290 N.C. 313, 226 S.E.2d 629 (1976).

Absent a special request, the trial court is not required to instruct the jury that defendant's failure to testify creates no presumption against him. State v. Warren, 292 N.C. 235, 232 S.E.2d 419 (1977).

3. Proper.

Proper Instruction. — The court's remarks to the jury in instructing them that defendant was within his rights in not testifying, and that his failure to testify should not be considered against him, were held without error upon defendant's exception. State v. Horne, 209 N.C. 725, 184 S.E. 470 (1936).

A charge to the effect that a defendant has a right not to testify and that his failure to testify should not be considered as a circumstance against him, will not be held for error on the ground that it called to the jury's attention the fact of defendant's absence from the stand. State v. Wood, 230 N.C. 740, 55 S.E.2d 491 (1949).

There is no hard and fast form of expression or consecrated formula required, but the jury may be instructed that as to the defendant the jury should scrutinize his testimony in the light of his interest in the outcome of the prosecution but that if after such scrutiny the jury believes that the witness has told the truth, it should give his testimony the same weight it would give the testimony of any other credible witness. It is not mandatory that the judge charge the jury in this respect, but the charge is permissible and it appears to be the uniform practice. State v. Williams, 6 N.C. App. 611, 170 S.E.2d 640 (1969).

Giving unrequested proper instructions relating to the failure of the defendant to exercise his right to testify or refrain from testifying under the provisions of this section is not reversible error. State v. Powell, 11 N.C. App. 465, 181 S.E.2d 754, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 396, 183 S.E.2d 243 (1971).

The trial judge's statement in his charge to the jury did not constitute prejudicial error where the charge, taken as a whole, did not give the jury the impression that defendant's failure to present evidence was to be taken against him. State v. Harlow, 16 N.C. App. 312, 191 S.E.2d 900 (1972).

Although it is the better practice to give no instruction concerning the failure of defendant to testify unless he requests it, the trial court's instruction in a first degree murder case to the effect that defendant's failure to testify should not be considered by the jury was not prejudicial to defendant. State v. Bryant, 283 N.C. 227, 195 S.E.2d 509 (1973).

While it is the better practice to give no instructions on the defendant's failure to testify, there is no error in giving an unrequested instruction on defendants' failure to testify if it correctly states the law. State v. Willis, 22 N.C. App. 465, 206 S.E.2d 729 (1974).

Any instruction is incomplete and prejudicially erroneous unless it makes clear to the jury that the defendant has the right to offer or to refrain from offering evidence as he sees fit and that his failure to testify should not be considered by the jury as basis for any inference adverse to him. State v. Sanders, 288 N.C. 285, 218 S.E.2d 352 (1975), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1091, 96 S. Ct. 886, 47 L. Ed. 2d 102 (1976); State v. Caron, 288 N.C. 467, 219 S.E.2d 68 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 971, 96 S. Ct. 2168, 48 L. Ed. 2d 794 (1976).

Where an instruction was unduly repetitious, but stripped of unnecessary verbiage, the instruction was that a defendant may or may not testify in his own behalf as he sees fit, and that his failure to testify shall not be held against him to any extent, this instruction met the requirements of this section. State v. Caron, 288 N.C. 467, 219 S.E.2d 68 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 971, 96 S. Ct. 2168, 48 L. Ed. 2d 794 (1976).

A nontestifying defendant has the right, upon proper request, to have the court tell the jury in substance that his failure to take the witness stand and testify in his own behalf does not create any presumption against him. State v. Leffingwell, 34 N.C. App. 205, 237 S.E.2d 550 (1977).

The trial court did not err in instructing the jury regarding defendant's failure to testify even though defendant did not request the instruction. State v. Hill, 34 N.C. App. 347, 238 S.E.2d 201 (1977).

Language of Statute Should Be Used. — The better practice is for the trial judge to use the language employed in this section without additions if there is a request for such instructions. State v. Powell, 11 N.C. App. 465, 181 S.E.2d 754, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 396, 183 S.E.2d 243 (1971).

Trial court's instruction that the jury must be very careful not to allow defendant's silence to influence their decision in any way did not constitute prejudicial error, though an instruction more nearly in the language of this section would have been preferable. State v. House, 17 N.C. App. 97, 193 S.E.2d 327 (1972); State v. Phifer, 17 N.C. App. 101, 193 S.E.2d 413 (1972), cert. denied, 283 N.C. 108, 194 S.E.2d 636 (1973).

An instruction which incorporates the precise language of this section is not only acceptable, but it has often been suggested as being the preferred instruction. State v. Penland, 20 N.C. App. 73, 200 S.E.2d 672 (1973), appeal dismissed, 284 N.C. 621, 201 S.E.2d 692 (1974).

Trial judge's instruction to the jury that they "should" not consider defendant's failure to take the stand against him, rather than that they "shall" not consider his failure to take the stand against him, was not error. State v. Sellers, 289 N.C. 268, 221 S.E.2d 264 (1976).

While it is better practice to use the words of the statute, i.e., "shall not create any presumption against him," the use of the words "should not" in an instruction concerning defendant's failure to testify was not such error as to require a new trial. State v. Boone, 293 N.C. 702, 239 S.E.2d 459 (1977).

4. Improper.

Erroneous Instructions. — While the interpretations of this section require defendant's testimony to be scrutinized, it was the province of the jury to determine from his demeanor and the attending circumstances the weight which they would accord his testimony, and a charge of the court that "the law presumes" that he is naturally laboring under the temptation to testify to whatever he thinks may be necessary to clear himself and that the jury should take into consideration what a conviction would mean to defendant, etc., was held to impose a burden and cast a shadow upon his testimony greater than the law required and constituted reversible error. State v. Wilcox, 206 N.C. 691, 175 S.E. 122 (1934).

While it is proper for the court to instruct the jury to scrutinize testimony of a defendant in a criminal prosecution because of his interest in the verdict, it was error for the court to fail to follow such instructions with a charge that if after such scrutiny the jury found him worthy of belief they should give his testimony as full credit as they would that of any other witness. State v. Dee, 214 N.C. 509, 199 S.E. 730 (1938).

A charge to the jury to "very carefully and very cautiously scrutinize" defendant's testimony is not to be commended. State v. Auston, 223 N.C. 203, 25 S.E.2d 613 (1943).

Instruction that the defendants "did not offer any evidence as they have the right to do" was incomplete and prejudicially erroneous. State v. Baxter, 285 N.C. 735, 208 S.E.2d 696 (1974).

§ 8-55. Testimony enforced in certain criminal investigations; immunity.

If any justice, judge or magistrate of the General Court of Justice shall have good reason to believe that any person within his jurisdiction has knowledge of the existence and establishment of any faro bank, faro table or other gaming table prohibited by law, or of any place where intoxicating liquors are sold contrary to law, in any town or county within his jurisdiction, such person not being minded to make voluntary information thereof on oath, then it shall be lawful for such justice, magistrate, or judge to issue to the sheriff of the county in which such faro bank, faro table, gaming table, or place where intoxicating liquors are sold contrary to law is supposed to be a subpoena, capias ad testificandum, or other summons in writing, commanding such person to appear immediately before such justice, magistrate, or judge and give evidence on oath as to what he may know touching the existence, establishment and whereabouts of such faro bank, faro table or other gaming table, or place where intoxicating liquors are sold contrary to law, and the name and personal description of the keeper thereof. Such evidence, when obtained, shall be considered and held in law as an information on oath, and the justice, magistrate or judge may thereupon proceed to seize and arrest such keeper and destroy such table, or issue process therefor as provided by law. No person shall be excused, on any prosecution, from testifying touching any unlawful gaming done by himself or others; but no discovery made by the witness upon such examination shall be used against him in any penal or criminal prosecution, and he shall be altogether pardoned of the offenses so done or participated in by him. (R. C., c. 35, s. 50; 1858-9, c. 34, s. 1; Code, ss. 1050, 1215; 1889, c. 355; Rev., ss. 1637, 3721; 1913, c. 141; C. S., s. 1800; 1969, c. 44, s. 22; 1971, c. 381, s. 4.)

CASE NOTES

Section Constitutional. — This section is not unconstitutional by reason of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, because it does not apply to the State; nor does it violate N.C. Const., Art. I, § 11 (now see Const., Art. I, § 23), for the reason that the said statute grants a pardon to the witness. In re Briggs, 135 N.C. 118, 47 S.E. 403 (1904).

Witness Compellable to Testify. — In a prosecution for gaming a witness may be compelled to testify, although his answer tends to criminate him, since he is pardoned for the offense. State v. Morgan, 133 N.C. 743, 45 S.E. 1033 (1903).

§ 8-56. Husband and wife as witnesses in civil action.

In any trial or inquiry in any suit, action or proceeding in any court, or before any person having, by law or consent of parties, authority to examine witnesses or hear evidence, the husband or wife of any party thereto, or of any person in whose behalf any such suit, action or proceeding is brought, prosecuted, opposed or defended, shall, except as herein stated, be competent and compellable to give evidence, as any other witness on behalf of any party to such suit, action or proceeding. Nothing herein shall render any husband or wife competent or compellable to give evidence for or against the other in any action or proceeding in consequence of adultery, or in any action or proceeding for divorce on account of adultery; or in any action or proceeding for or on account of criminal conversation, except that in actions of criminal conversation brought by a married person in which the character of the spouse is assailed, that spouse shall be a competent witness to testify in refutation of such charges: Provided, however, that in all such actions and proceedings, the husband or wife shall be competent to prove, and may be required to prove, the fact of marriage. No husband or wife shall be compellable to disclose any confidential communication made by one to the other during their marriage. (1866, c. 43, ss. 3, 4; C. C. P., s. 341; Code, s. 588; Rev., s. 1636; 1919, c. 18; C. S., s. 1801; 1945, c. 635; 1977, c. 547.)

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Design of Section. — This legislation is based upon the gravest reasons of public policy and is designed, not only to prevent collusion where the same exists, but to remove the opportunity for it. Hicks v. Hicks, 4 N.C. App. 28, 165 S.E.2d 681, reversed on other grounds, 275 N.C. 370, 167 S.E.2d 761 (1969).

Coverage of Section. — Husbands and wives are competent and compellable to give evidence for or against each other, save only in the particular cases mentioned in the section. Barringer v. Barringer, 69 N.C. 179 (1873).

Common Law. — At common law, husband and wife could not testify in an action to which either was a party. Hicks v. Hicks, 275 N.C. 370, 167 S.E.2d 761 (1969); Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Section Applies to Answers to Interrogatories. — The provisions of this section and § 50-10 which render a husband or wife an incompetent witness apply to answers to interrogatories as well as to testimony at trial. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

The provision of Rule 26(b) of the Rules of Civil Procedure that "it is not ground for objection that the testimony will be inadmissible at the trial if the testimony [now "information"] sought appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence" refers only to testimony that will or might be inadmissible at trial. This section and § 50-10 are distinguishable from Rule 26(b) in that they relate to the disqualification of husband or wife as a witness with reference to specific matters, not to the admissibility or inadmissibility of the testimony of a qualified witness. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Applied in Rouse v. Creech, 203 N.C. 378, 166 S.E. 174 (1932); Watts v. Watts, 44 N.C. App. 46, 260 S.E.2d 170 (1979).

Cited in Nelson v. Nelson, 197 N.C. 465, 149 S.E. 585 (1929).

II. AS WITNESS IN PARTICULAR ACTIONS.

A. Proceeding in Consequence of Adultery.

Public policy demands that the wife be protected against the absolute defense of adultery which the husband seeks to prove by his own testimony. Hicks v. Hicks, 275 N.C. 370, 167 S.E.2d 761 (1969).

Action for Alimony as Action "in Consequence of Adultery". — A husband's interposition of the plea of adultery in the wife's action for alimony and alimony pendente lite converted the action into an "action or proceeding in consequence of adultery" within the meaning of this section. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

Neither Husband Nor Wife May Testify in Action or Proceeding in Consequence of Adultery. — Under this section and § 50-10, neither a husband nor a wife is a competent witness in any action inter se to give evidence for or against the other in any action or proceeding in consequence of adultery, or in any action or proceeding for divorce on account of adultery, and may not be compelled to give such evidence. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972); Greene v. Greene, 15 N.C. App. 314, 190 S.E.2d 258, appeal withdrawn, 282 N.C. 151, 191 S.E.2d 365 (1972).

B. Divorce on Account of Adultery.

Divorce for Adultery. — In divorce action for alleged adultery, neither the husband nor the wife is a competent witness. Horne v. Horne, 75 N.C. 101 (1876); Perkins v. Perkins, 88 N.C. 41 (1883); Becker v. Becker, 262 N.C. 685, 138 S.E.2d 507 (1964).

A husband could not be compelled to testify in support of the admissibility of photographs showing him engaged in various acts of adultery in an action by the wife for alimony on the ground of adultery, since the action for alimony without divorce was a divorce action encompassed by the provisions of this section and § 50-10 and a husband cannot be compelled to give testimony in support of his wife's allegation that he committed adultery. VanDooren v. VanDooren, 37 N.C. App. 333, 246 S.E.2d 20, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 653, 248 S.E.2d 258 (1978).

C. Criminal Conversation.

In a wife's action for criminal conversation with her husband and the alienation of his affections, testimony by the wife relative to statements made to her by her husband tending to show his illicit relationship with defendant were incompetent. Knighten v. McClain, 227 N.C. 682, 44 S.E.2d 79 (1947).

Action by Husband. — In an action for criminal conversation wherein the husband had testified to immoral relations between his wife and the defendant, the wife was a competent witness for the defendant for the purpose of refuting the charges made against her character. Chestnut v. Sutton, 204 N.C. 476, 168 S.E. 680 (1933).

III. CONFIDENTIAL COMMUNICATIONS.

A. What Constitutes.

Confidential Communications — Defined. — The confidential communications made between husband and wife which neither will be compelled to disclose, are those which are communicated "during their marriage." Whitford v. North State Life Ins. Co., 163 N.C. 223, 79 S.E. 501 (1913).

Same — Protected. — The confidential communications between husband and wife cannot, on the grounds of public policy, be admitted in evidence. State v. Brittain, 117 N.C. 783, 23 S.E. 433 (1895).

A confidential communication between husband and wife is privileged and neither spouse may be compelled to disclose it when testifying as a witness. Hicks v. Hicks, 271 N.C. 204, 155 S.E.2d 799 (1967).

Whatever is known by reason of that intimacy [marriage] should be regarded as knowledge confidentially acquired, and neither husband nor wife should be allowed to divulge it to the danger or disgrace of the other. Hicks v. Hicks, 271 N.C. 204, 155 S.E.2d 799 (1967).

A tape recording, made by the husband without the wife's knowledge, of a conversation between them while alone, except for the presence of their eight-year-old child who was singing and playing at the time, was incompetent evidence over the wife's objection. Hicks v. Hicks, 271 N.C. 204, 155 S.E.2d 799 (1967).

Letters from Husband to Wife. — In a suit in equity to set aside a judgment rendered in an action at law for fraud, letters from the plaintiff in the former action to his wife respecting fraud in that action were properly excluded, when the letters were obtained by a third party with the consent of the wife, the letters being privileged communications and inadmissible against either the husband or the wife. McCoy v. Justice, 199 N.C. 602, 155 S.E. 452 (1930).

Acts of Sexual Intercourse Are "Confidential Communications". — In the wife's action for alimony and alimony pendente lite, the wife may not be compelled to answer interrogatories which seek to elicit her answers under oath as to acts of sexual intercourse between the husband and wife, since such an act is a "confidential communication" within the meaning of this section. Wright v. Wright, 281 N.C. 159, 188 S.E.2d 317 (1972).

B. Unprotected.

Communications Not Protected. — Only confidential communications are within the rule; hence a communication made in the known presence of a third person, or one relating to business matters which in their nature might be expected to be divulged, is not protected. Hicks v. Hicks, 271 N.C. 204, 155 S.E.2d 799 (1967).

Where a witness for the State had written a letter to his wife, and his wife, without his knowledge or consent, had given the letter to the defendant, the witness could not be cross-examined relative to the letter in an attempt to prove bias. State v. Banks, 204 N.C. 233, 167 S.E. 851 (1933).

Admission of a police officer's testimony that he heard defendant say to his wife, "I am in real trouble this time" did not violate the marital privilege since the communication was not confidential as it was made within the hearing of a third party, and at any rate the privilege refers only to testimony by a spouse about the confidential communication. State v. Setzer, 42 N.C. App. 98, 256 S.E.2d 485 (1979).

Testimony by plaintiff-wife concerning unnatural sex acts between the plaintiff and the defendant-husband was not rendered inadmissible by this section which establishes a spousal privilege applicable to the testimony of husband or wife in any action or proceeding in consequence of adultery. An application of this section is not proper when the testimony regarding sexual conduct is offered to establish constructive abandonment in a temporary alimony proceeding. Haddon v. Haddon, 42 N.C. App. 632, 257 S.E.2d 483 (1979).

§ 8-57. Husband and wife as witnesses in criminal actions.

The husband or wife of the defendant, in all criminal actions or proceedings, shall be a competent witness for the defendant, but the failure of such witness to be examined shall not be used to the prejudice of the defense. Every such person examined as a witness shall be subject to be cross-examined as are other witnesses. No husband or wife shall be compellable to disclose any confidential communication made by one to the other during their marriage. Nothing herein shall render any spouse competent or compellable to give evidence against the other spouse in any criminal action or proceeding, except to prove the fact of marriage and facts tending to show the absence of divorce or annulment in cases of bigamy and in cases of criminal cohabitation in violation of the provisions of G.S. 14-183, and except that in all criminal prosecutions of a spouse for an assault upon the other spouse, all criminal prosecutions of a spouse for communicating a threat to the other spouse, or in any criminal prosecution of a spouse for trespass in or upon the separate residence of the other spouse when living separate and apart from each other by mutual consent or by court order, or for any criminal offense against a legitimate or illegitimate or adopted or foster minor child of either spouse, or for abandonment, or for neglecting to provide for the spouse's support, or the support of the children of such spouse, it shall be lawful to examine a spouse in behalf of the State against the other spouse: Provided that this section shall not affect pending litigation relating to a criminal offense against a minor child. (1856-7, c. 23; 1866, c. 43; 1868-9, c. 209; 1881, c. 110; Code, ss. 588, 1353, 1354; Rev., ss. 1634, 1635, 1636; C. S., s. 1802; 1933, c. 13, s. 1; c. 361; 1951, c. 296; 1957, c. 1036; 1967, c. 116; 1971, c. 800; 1973, c. 1286, s. 11.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
A. Spouse Incompetent to Testify.
B. Application in Particular Actions.
II. Failure to Testify.
III. Cross-Examination of Spouse.
IV. Confidential Communications.
V. Actions in Which Spouse Competent to Testify.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

A. Spouse Incompetent to Testify.

Common Law. — At common law the husband or wife of the defendant in a criminal case was incompetent to testify either for the State or for the defense. State v. Alford, 274 N.C. 125, 161 S.E.2d 575 (1968).

At common law, a husband or a wife was incompetent to testify either for or against his or her defendant-spouse in a criminal action. This section changed this rule to the effect that a husband or a wife can testify for a defendant-spouse. The common law rule remains in effect, however, regarding testimony against a spouse in a criminal action. State v. Suits, 296 N.C. 553, 251 S.E.2d 607 (1979).

Effect of Section. — Under this section the husband or wife is a competent witness for the defendant in all criminal actions or proceedings. But neither is competent or compellable to give evidence against the other in any criminal proceeding. State v. Harbison, 94 N.C. 885 (1886). See State v. Watson, 215 N.C. 387, 1 S.E.2d 886 (1939).

Under this section a wife is neither competent nor compellable to testify against her husband in a criminal proceeding, hence, hearsay evidence of her declarations, not made in his presence or by his authority, which would be prejudicial to the husband, is inadmissible. State v. Reid, 178 N.C. 745, 101 S.E. 104 (1919). See State v. Cotton, 218 N.C. 577, 12 S.E.2d 246 (1940).

This section in effect forbids the testimony of one spouse against another in criminal proceedings unless the case falls within one of the exceptions enumerated in the statute. State v. Reavis, 19 N.C. App. 497, 199 S.E.2d 139 (1973).

Applicability to Common-Law Marriages. — Common-law marriages are invalid in North Carolina. Hence, the husband-wife testimonial privilege granted in this section may not be asserted by a criminal defendant to disqualify a witness alleged to be his spouse by virtue of a common-law marriage contracted in North Carolina. This State, however, will recognize as valid a common-law marriage if the acts alleged to have created it took place in a state in which such a marriage is valid. State v. Alford, 298 N.C. 465, 259 S.E.2d 242 (1979).

Effect of Termination of Marital Relation. — When the marital relationship terminates, the asserted reasons for this section, the preservation of the sanctity of the home and the fictional oneness of husband and wife, are no longer pertinent; but evidence that defendant and his wife were experiencing less than harmonious marital relations is insufficient to terminate the privilege. State v. Reavis, 19 N.C. App. 497, 199 S.E.2d 139 (1973).

This section is an evidentiary rule and applies to a spouse testifying, or to the admission of a statement by a spouse into evidence. State v. Cousin, 291 N.C. 413, 230 S.E.2d 518 (1976).

This section was not intended to prohibit, and it does not prohibit, a husband or wife from making voluntary statements to police officers during the investigatory stage of a criminal proceeding. State v. Aaron, 29 N.C. App. 582, 225 S.E.2d 117, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 663, 228 S.E.2d 455 (1976), cert. denied, 430 U.S. 908, 97 S. Ct. 1180, 51 L. Ed. 2d 585 (1977).

Act May Be Declaration. — An act by a spouse, such as a gesture, can be a declaration within the meaning of this rule. State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

An oral statement is not the only type of evidence that must be excluded as a "declaration" of a spouse. An act, such as gesture, can be a declaration within the meaning of this rule. State v. Suits, 296 N.C. 553, 251 S.E.2d 607 (1979).

Failure to Exclude Incompetent Testimony. — When evidence rendered incompetent by this section was admitted, it became the duty of the trial judge to exclude the testimony, and his failure to do so must be held reversible error whether exception was noted or not. State v. Porter, 272 N.C. 463, 158 S.E.2d 626 (1968).

Where evidence is rendered incompetent by this section, it is the duty of the trial judge to exclude it, and his failure to do so is reversible error, whether objection is interposed and exception noted or not. State v. Thompson, 290 N.C. 431, 226 S.E.2d 487 (1976); State v. McKenzie, 46 N.C. App. 34, 264 S.E.2d 391 (1980).

B. Application in Particular Actions.

Discretion of Trial Judge. — Where the defendant husband was alleged to have stolen certain property, it was competent for him to introduce his wife as a witness to prove from what source he got the money to pay for such property, but unless he introduced her in proper time it rested within the discretion of the trial judge whether her testimony would be received. State v. Lemon, 92 N.C. 790 (1885).

Consolidation of Prosecutions against Husband and Wife. — Where husband and wife were separately indicted for the same homicide and the prosecutions were consolidated and tried together over their objections, and the wife's testimony, though admitted only as to her, was to the effect that her husband killed deceased and forced her, through fear, to confess and attempt to exculpate him, her testimony was necessarily inculpatory of the husband and impinged this section, and his motion for a mistrial and severance at the conclusion of the State's evidence should have been granted. State v. Cotton, 218 N.C. 577, 12 S.E.2d 246 (1940).

A wife under this section was not competent to testify against her husband in a prosecution for felonious burning and the admission of her testimony entitled him to a new trial. State v. Kluttz, 206 N.C. 726, 175 S.E. 81 (1934).

Husband's Extrajudicial Statement Implicating Codefendant Wife. — Where testimony disclosed that any part of the husband's extrajudicial statement implicating the codefendant wife was deleted by the State, there was no violation of the rule of this section. State v. Mathis, 13 N.C. App. 359, 185 S.E.2d 448 (1971).

Spouse's Conduct As Declaration. — Where in response to the officer's inquiry as to whether the defendant had a knife, the jury was informed that the defendant's wife left the room and returned with a pocket knife, identified as State's Exhibit Number 3, this conduct was equivalent to the wife stating, "Yes, the defendant has a knife, and here it is." Thus, the court committed prejudicial error in allowing the police officer to testify to the wife's actions. State v. Suits, 296 N.C. 533, 251 S.E.2d 607 (1979).

Adultery Prior to Marriage. — Where a man and woman are indicted for fornication and adultery, and a nol. pros. is entered as to the feme defendant, the husband of the woman is a competent witness to show adultery between the defendants committed before the marriage of the woman and the witness. State v. Wiseman, 130 N.C. 726, 41 S.E. 884 (1902).

Competency of Divorced Parties. — A divorced husband is incompetent to testify against the divorced wife in the trial of an indictment against her for fornication and adultery which occurred prior to the divorce. State v. Raby, 121 N.C. 682, 28 S.E. 490 (1877).

Where the former husband or wife is prosecuted for a felony, the divorced spouse is a competent witness to testify for the State as to what occurred during the subsistence of their marriage in his or her presence when the alleged felony was being committed. State v. Alford, 274 N.C. 125, 161 S.E.2d 575 (1968).

Applied in State v. Spain, 3 N.C. App. 266, 164 S.E.2d 486 (1968); State v. Ward, 34 N.C. App. 598, 239 S.E.2d 291 (1977).

Stated in State v. Jones, 280 N.C. 322, 185 S.E.2d 858 (1972).

Cited in State v. Byrd, 21 N.C. App. 734, 205 S.E.2d 326 (1974); State v. Phifer, 290 N.C. 203, 225 S.E.2d 786 (1976); State v. Thompson, 293 N.C. 713, 239 S.E.2d 465 (1977).

II. FAILURE TO TESTIFY.

Failure of Wife to Appear and Testify. —The failure of the wife to be examined as a witness in behalf of a husband tried for a criminal offense, is expressly excluded as evidence to the husband's prejudice by this section, though she was competent to testify. State v. Harris, 181 N.C. 600, 107 S.E. 466 (1921).

Where the trial judge had properly excluded from the consideration by the jury, testimony relating to the wife's failure to appear and testify in behalf of her husband on his trial for a homicide, the defendant could not successfully complain of error on appeal in the failure of the trial judge to again instruct the jury thereon, when there had been no exception taken to the charge of the court or the refusal of any prayer for instruction on the subject. State v. Harris, 181 N.C. 600, 107 S.E. 466 (1921).

During the absence of the judge, the solicitor [now district attorney] in his argument to the jury called the jury's attention to the fact that defendant's wife had not testified in his behalf, and persisted in the argument after objection by defendant's counsel. Upon its return, the court sustained the objection, and near the conclusion of its charge to the jury stated that the law did not permit such comment and that the jury should not let the argument influence it. The solicitor's [now district attorney] comment violated this section, and was prejudicial, and called for prompt peremptory and certain caution by the court, not only that the argument should be disregarded, but that the failure of defendant's wife to testify should not be considered to his prejudice, and the action of the court in merely sustaining the objection and the caution later given by the court near the conclusion of the charge was insufficient to free the case of prejudice. State v. Helms, 218 N.C. 592, 12 S.E.2d 243 (1940).

Failure to Instruct as to Failure of Wife to Appear and Testify. — In a prosecution for first-degree murder, where the district attorney in his argument to the jury used the failure of defendant's wife to testify on defendant's behalf to the prejudice of the defense, the failure of the trial judge to intervene on his own motion and promptly instruct the jury that the wife's failure to testify and the improper argument regarding that fact must be disregarded and under no circumstances used to the prejudice of the defendant was reversible error. State v. McCall, 289 N.C. 570, 223 S.E.2d 334 (1976).

Or Instruct Concerning Such Evidence Improperly Placed before Jury. — When evidence forbidden by this section was argumentatively placed before the jury and used to the prejudice of the defense, it was the duty of the judge ex mero motu to intervene and promptly instruct the jury that the wife's failure to testify and the improper argument concerning that fact had to be disregarded and under no circumstances used to the prejudice of the defendant. State v. Thompson, 290 N.C. 431, 226 S.E.2d 487 (1976).

III. CROSS-EXAMINATION OF SPOUSE.

Scope. — A wife cannot be compelled to testify against her husband in a criminal action; but when she takes the stand in his behalf, she is subject to cross-examination in the same manner and to the same extent as any other witness. State v. Tola, 222 N.C. 406, 23 S.E.2d 321 (1942).

Where defendant's wife testifies in his behalf, she is subject to be cross-examined to the same extent as if unrelated to him. State v. Bell, 249 N.C. 379, 106 S.E.2d 495 (1959).

When defendant's wife was examined as witness for defendant, she was therefore subject to be cross-examined to the same extent as if unrelated to him. State v. Carey, 288 N.C. 254, 218 S.E.2d 387 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3209, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976).

As to Prior Inconsistent Statements. — In a prosecution for murder committed in the perpetration of an armed robbery and for conspiracy to commit armed robbery, if based on information and asked in good faith, it was permissible for the district attorney to ask defendant's wife about her prior inconsistent statements as they related to her previous relationship with the trigger man for purposes of impeachment. State v. Carey, 288 N.C. 254, 218 S.E.2d 387 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3209, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976).

IV. CONFIDENTIAL COMMUNICATIONS.

Admission Prohibited. — The confidential communications between husband and wife cannot, on the grounds of public policy, be admitted in evidence. State v. Brittain, 117 N.C. 783, 23 S.E. 433 (1895).

Declarations of Wife Not Made in Husband's Presence. — Testimony of a State's witness of a declaration of defendant's wife to the effect that if defendant had not been driving so slow "he wouldn't have been caught" entitled defendant to a new trial notwithstanding his failure to move to strike the answer, since testimony of the wife against the husband was forbidden by this section, and a fortiori her declarations against him not made in his presence or by his authority were precluded by this section. State v. Warren, 236 N.C. 358, 72 S.E.2d 763 (1952); State v. Dillahunt, 244 N.C. 524, 94 S.E.2d 479 (1956).

The statutory prohibition against compelling a spouse to give evidence against the other spouse has been extended to testimony concerning declarations made by the husband or wife of the defendant, while not in the presence of the defendant, even though there was no objection interposed to such testimony. State v. Fulcher, 294 N.C. 503, 243 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

Communication Not Included. — Testimony of a witness, that at the time of the arrest of the defendant by the officers of the law, his wife was present and said to him: "I told you that you would get into it if you did not stay with me like I wanted you to," to which he replied: "hush," was not a confidential communication between husband and wife within the contemplation of this section and could be testified to by the witness who was present and heard it, and was some evidence of guilt in connection with the other evidence in the case. State v. Freeman, 197 N.C. 376, 148 S.E. 450 (1929).

V. ACTIONS IN WHICH SPOUSE COMPETENT TO TESTIFY.

Abandonment of Wife. — Under this section the wife is a competent witness against her husband as to the fact of abandonment, or neglect to provide adequate support. State v. Brown, 67 N.C. 470 (1872).

Proof of Marriage. — The wife is competent to prove the fact of marriage under an indictment against her husband for abandonment. State v. Chester, 172 N.C. 946, 90 S.E. 697 (1916).

Same — Bigamy. — In an indictment for bigamy the first wife of the defendant is a competent witness to prove the marriage, public cohabitation as man and wife being public acknowledgments of the relation and not coming within the nature of the confidential relations which the policy of the law forbids either to give in evidence. State v. Melton, 120 N.C. 591, 26 S.E. 933 (1897). See also State v. McDuffie, 107 N.C. 885, 12 S.E. 83 (1890).

By the express provisions of this section, defendant's legal wife was a comptent witness before the grand jury, which was considering an indictment against him charging him with a violation of the provisions of § 14-183, "to prove the fact of marriage . . . ." State v. Vandiver, 265 N.C. 325, 144 S.E.2d 54 (1965).

Same — Bigamous Cohabitation. — Prior to the 1957 amendment to this section, it was held, while in a prosecution for bigamous cohabitation, as in a prosecution for bigamy, the wife was competent to testify against the husband to prove the face of marriage, her testimony was limited to proof of the fact of marriage and any testimony by her as to other incriminating facts, such as testimony tending to show that they had not been divorced, was incompetent. State v. Setzer, 226 N.C. 216, 37 S.E.2d 513 (1946); State v. Hill, 241 N.C. 409, 85 S.E.2d 411 (1955).

Assault. — In case of assault and battery with intent to kill by poison, with evidence tending to show the previous threats of the wife, and that the poison was put into the food prepared by the daughter in her mother's presence at their home, and that the husband was poisoned from eating thereof, the testimony of the husband as to his wife's previous threats was not inadmissible under the provisions of this section, but was admissible for the purpose of showing knowledge and identifying the perpetrators of the crime, and was distinguishable from the rule that threats are ordinarily inadmissible on trials for assault and battery. State v. Alderman, 182 N.C. 917, 110 S.E. 59 (1921).

The rule that neither the husband nor wife is competent to testify against the other in criminal cases does not apply to proof of assault by the one upon the other. State v. French, 203 N.C. 632, 166 S.E. 747 (1932).

Effect of Marriage Subsequent to Assault. — The fact that subsequent to an assault the defendant married the prosecuting witness did not render her an incompetent witness against him at the trial. State v. Price, 265 N.C. 703, 144 S.E.2d 865 (1965).

Felony Committed by One Spouse against the Other. — It appears that an exception the general common-law rule that one spouse is not a competent witness against the other in a criminal proceeding is applicable where one spouse is tried for a felony committed against the other spouse. State v. Robinson, 15 N.C. App. 362, 190 S.E.2d 270, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 762, 191 S.E.2d 363 (1972).

Where defendant was charged with a serious felony which she and others allegedly perpetrated against the man she contended was her husband, the public's interest in having her brought to justice far outweighed any conceivable interest the public might have in precluding her alleged husband from testifying against her. State v. Robinson, 15 N.C. App. 362, 190 S.E.2d 270, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 762, 191 S.E.2d 363 (1972).

Threats. — In a homicide case, where there was a plea and evidence of self-defense, it was competent for defendant's wife to testify to a threat made by deceased against her husband, which she communicated to defendant before the killing. State v. Rice, 222 N.C. 634, 24 S.E.2d 483 (1943).

§ 8-57.1. Husband-wife privilege waived in child abuse.

Notwithstanding the provisions of G.S. 8-56 and G.S. 8-57, the husband-wife privilege shall not be ground for excluding evidence regarding the abuse or neglect of a child under the age of 16 years or regarding an illness of or injuries to such child or the cause thereof in any judicial proceeding related to a report pursuant to the Child Abuse Reporting Law, Article 8 of Chapter 110 of the General Statutes of North Carolina. (1971, c. 710, s. 3.)

Editor's Note. — Article 8 of Chapter 110, referred to in this section, was repealed by Session Laws 1979, c. 815, s. 2, effective Jan. 1, 1980. For present provisions as to the screening of abuse and neglect complaints, see §§ 7A-542 through 7A-552.

Legal Periodicals. — For comment surveying North Carolina law of relational privilege, see 50 N.C.L. Rev. 630 (1972).

§ 8-57.2. Presumed father or mother as witnesses where paternity at issue.

Whenever an issue of paternity of a child born or conceived during a marriage arises in any civil or criminal proceeding, the presumed father or the mother of such child is competent to give evidence as to any relevant matter regarding paternity of the child, including nonaccess to the present or former spouse, regardless of any privilege which may otherwise apply. No parent offering such evidence shall thereafter be prosecuted based upon that evidence for any criminal act involved in the conception of the child whose paternity is in issue and/or for whom support is sought, except for perjury committed in this testimony. (1981, c. 634, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws, 1981, c. 634, s. 2, makes the act effective Oct. 1, 1981.

§ 8-58: Repealed by Session Laws 1973, c. 1286, ss. 11, 26.

Article 7A.

Restrictions on Evidence in Rape Cases.

§ 8-58.6. Restrictions on evidence in rape or sex offenses cases.

(a) As used in this section, the term "sexual behavior" means sexual activity of the complainant other than the sexual act which is at issue in the indictment on trial.

(b) The sexual behavior of the complainant is irrelevant to any issue in the prosecution unless such behavior:

(1) Was between the complaint and the defendant; or

(2) Is evidence of specific instances of sexual behavior offered for the purpose of showing that the act or acts charged were not committed by the defendant; or

(3) Is evidence of a pattern of sexual behavior so distinctive and so closely resembling the defendant's version of the alleged encounter with the complainant as to tend to prove that such complainant consented to the act or acts charged or behaved in such a manner as to lead the defendant reasonably to believe that the complainant consented; or

(4) Is evidence of sexual behavior offered as the basis of expert psychological or psychiatric opinion that the complainant fantasized or invented the act or acts charged.

(c) No evidence of sexual behavior shall be introduced at any time during the trial of a charge of rape or any lesser included offense thereof or a sex offense or any lesser included offense thereof, nor shall any reference to any such behavior be made in the presence of the jury, unless and until the court has determined that such behavior is relevant under subsection (b). Before any questions pertaining to such evidence are asked of any witness, the proponent of such evidence shall first apply to the court for a determination of the relevance of the sexual behavior to which it relates. The proponent of such evidence may make application either prior to trial pursuant to G.S. 15A-952, or during the trial at the time when the proponent desired to introduce such evidence. When application is made, the court shall conduct an in-camera hearing, which shall be transcribed, to consider the proponent's offer of proof and the arguments of counsel, including any counsel for the complainant, to determine the extent to which such behavior is relevant. In the hearing, the proponent of the evidence shall establish the basis of admissibility of such evidence. If the court finds that the evidence is relevant, it shall enter an order stating that the evidence may be admitted and the nature of the questions which will be permitted.

(d) The record of the in-camera hearing and all evidence relating thereto shall be open to inspection only by the parties, the complainant, their attorneys and the court and its agents, and shall be used only as necessary for appellate review. At any probable cause hearing, the judge shall take cognizance of the evidence, if admissible, at the end of the in-camera hearing without the questions being repeated or the evidence being resubmitted in open court. (1977, c. 851, s. 1; 1979, c. 682, s. 8.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 682, ss. 13 and 14, provide: "Sec. 13, All laws and clauses of laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed, provided however, nothing in this act shall be construed to repeal any portion of Article 26 of Chapter 14 which relates to offenses against public morality and decency.

"Sec. 14. This act shall become effective January 1, 1980, and shall apply to offenses occurring on and after that date. Nothing herein shall be construed to render lawful acts committed prior to the effective date of this act [January 1, 1980] and unlawful at the time the said acts occurred; and nothing contained herein shall be construed to affect any prosecution instituted under any section repealed by this act pending on the effective date hereof."

CASE NOTES

Codification of Rule of Relevance. — This section is nothing more than a codification of this jurisdiction's rule of relevance as that rule specifically applies to the past sexual behavior of rape victims. State v. Fortney, 301 N.C. 31, 269 S.E.2d 110 (1980).

Section Does Not Violate Defendant's Right to Confront Witnesses. — This section, referred to as the rape victim shield statute, does not violate a rape defendant's constitutional right to confront the witnesses against him because it prevents him from automatically questioning the victim about her prior sexual experience since (1) there is no constitutional right to ask a witness questions that are irrelevant, (2) the statute is primarily procedural in its impact and application and does not alter any of the defendant's substantive rights, and (3) there are valid policy reasons, aside from questions of relevance, which support the statute. State v. Fortney, 301 N.C. 31, 269 S.E.2d 110 (1980).

This section changes the rule of evidence in such a way that matters collateral to the issues on trial may not be introduced into evidence, and this change in the rule of evidence does not violate a defendant's constitutional right to cross-examine witnesses who appear against him. State v. Porter, 48 N.C. App. 565, 269 S.E.2d 266 (1980).

Naked inferences of prior sexual activity by a rape victim with third persons, without more, are irrelevant to the defense of consent in a rape trial. State v. Fortney, 301 N.C. 31, 269 S.E.2d 110 (1980).

Evidence of Discussion Between Complainant and Defendant Inadmissible. — In a prosecution for rape, evidence of a discussion between the complainant and defendant concerning the complainant's sexual problems was not admissible under subdivision (b)(1) of this section since such discussion did not constitute sexual behavior or activity between the complainant and defendant. State v. Smith, 45 N.C. App. 501, 263 S.E.2d 371 (1980).

Evidence of Different Semen Stains on Victim's Clothing. — This section was not unconstitutionally applied to defendant when the trial court excluded evidence that three different semen stains were found on clothing worn by an alleged rape victim since the inference raised by such evidence — that the victim had had sex with two persons other than defendant at some time prior to the sexual acts in question — was not probative of the victim's consent to those acts. State v. Fortney, 301 N.C. 31, 269 S.E.2d 110 (1980).

Evidence of Prosecutrix' Moral Environment Irrelevant Where Defendant Denies Act of Intercourse. — Whether the prosecutrix in a prosecution for second degree rape lived in an environment of sexual immorality or in a cloistered convent has no relevance to the issues in a case where defendant denies that any act of intercourse or other assault took place. State v. McLean, 294 N.C. 623, 242 S.E.2d 814 (1978), decided prior to the effective date of this section.

Decisions of Trial Court at Voir Dire Hearing Held Proper. — In a prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape, the trial court did not err in refusing to permit defendant to testify at a voir dire hearing to determine whether testimony as to prior conduct of the prosecutrix was admissible under subdivision (b)(3) of this section as evidence of a pattern of sexual behavior closely resembling defendant's version of the alleged encounter and in postponing its ruling on the admissibility of the testimony of prior conduct until after it had heard defendant's version of the events in question. State v. White, 48 N.C. App. 589, 269 S.E.2d 323 (1980).

Applied in State v. Milano, 297 N.C. 485, 256 S.E.2d 154 (1979).

Article 7B.

Expert Testimony.

§ 8-58.12. Hypothetical question not required.

There shall be no requirement that expert testimony be in response to a hypothetical question. (1981, c. 543, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1981, c. 543, s. 4, makes the act effective Oct. 1, 1981.

§ 8-58.13. Opinion testimony permitted.

If scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge will assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue, a witness qualified as an expert by knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education, may testify thereto in the form of an opinion. (1981, c. 543, s. 2.)

§ 8-58.14. Disclosure of facts or data underlying expert opinion.

Upon trial the expert may testify in terms of opinion or inference and give his reasons therefor without prior disclosure of the underlying facts or data, unless an adverse party requests, otherwise, in which event the expert will be required to disclose such underlying facts or data on direct examination or voir dire before stating the opinion. The expert may in any event be required to disclose the underlying facts or data on cross-examination. (1981, c. 543, s. 3.)

Article 8.

Attendance of Witness.

§ 8-59. Issue and service of subpoena.

In obtaining the testimony of witnesses in causes pending in the trial divisions of the General Court of Justice, subpoenas shall be issued and served in the manner provided in Rule 45 of the Rules of Civil Procedure for civil actions. Provided that in criminal cases any law-enforcement officer authorized to make arrests and employed by a local law-enforcement agency may effect service of a subpoena for the attendance of witnesses by telephone communication with the person named. However, in the case of a witness served by telephone communication pursuant to this section, neither an order to show cause nor an order for arrest shall be issued until such person has been served personally with the written subpoena. (1777, c. 115, s. 36, P. R.; R. C., c. 31, s. 59; Code, s. 1355; Rev., s. 1639; C. S., s. 1803; 1959, c. 522, s. 2; 1967, c. 954, s. 3; 1971, c. 381, s. 5; 1981, c. 267.)

§ 8-63. Witnesses attend until discharge; effect of nonattendance.

Every witness, being summoned to appear in any of the said courts, in manner before directed, shall appear accordingly, and, subject to the provisions of G.S. 6-51, continue to attend from session to session until discharged, when summoned in a civil action or special proceeding, by the court or the party at whose instance such witness shall be summoned, or, when summoned in a criminal prosecution, until discharged by the court, the prosecuting officer, or the party at whose instance he was summoned; and in default thereof shall forfeit and pay, in civil actions or special proceedings, to the party at whose instance the subpoena issued, the sum of forty dollars ($40.00), to be recovered by motion in the cause, and shall be further liable to his action for the full damages which may be sustained for the want of such witness's testimony; or if summoned in a criminal prosecution shall forfeit and pay eighty dollars ($80.00) for the use of the State, or the party summoning him. If the civil action or special proceeding shall, in the vacation, be compromised and settled between the parties, and the party at whose instance such witness was summoned should omit to discharge him from further attendance, and for want of such discharge he shall attend the next session, in that case the witness, upon oath made of the facts, shall be entitled to a ticket from the clerk in the same manner as other witnesses, and shall recover from the party at whose instance he was summoned the allowance which is given to witnesses for their attendance, with costs.

No execution shall issue against any defaulting witness for the forfeiture aforesaid but after notice made known to him to show cause against the issuing thereof; and if sufficient cause be shown of his incapacity to attend, execution shall not issue, and the witness shall be discharged of the forfeiture without costs; but otherwise the court shall, on motion, award execution for the forfeiture against the defaulting witness. (1777, c. 115, ss. 37, 38, 43, P. R.; 1799, c. 528, P. R.; 1801, c. 591, P. R.; R. C., c. 31, ss. 60, 61, 62; Code, s. 1356; Rev., s. 1643; C. S., s. 1807; 1965, c. 284; 1971, c. 381, s. 12.)

CASE NOTES

Duty to Attend. — When a subpoena has been served on a witness, he is required by this section to attend from term to term until discharged. State v. Gwynn, 61 N.C. 445 (1868).

Same — Attorney Not Exempt. — A witness who fails to appear when the case is called in which he has been subpoenaed to testify is not justified in his default because he is a practicing attorney at law and has cases to try in another county at the date upon which the case was called wherein he was a witness, and the party who subpoenaed him can recover the penalty, with the costs of the motions. In re Pierce, 163 N.C. 247, 79 S.E. 507 (1913).

Same — Where Service Had on Transient. — A witness, who is summoned in this State, while casually here, but who resides in another state, cannot be required to pay a forfeiture for nonattendance, if he has returned to his own state and is there at his domicile. Kinzey v. King, 28 N.C. 76 (1845).

Test of Inability to Attend. — Where a witness alleges that he was unable to attend court, this inability must be decided by reference to the modes of traveling which are in use in the community. Eller v. Roberts, 25 N.C. 11 (1842).

Nonattendance Need Not Be Willful. — This section does not require that the failure of the witness to attend should be "willful." In re Pierce, 163 N.C. 247, 79 S.E. 507 (1913).

When Witness May Elect. — Where two subpoenas are served upon a witness, requiring his attendance on the same day at different places distant from each other, he is not bound to obey the writ which may have been first served, but may make his election between them. Icehour v. Martin, 44 N.C. 478 (1853).

An issue in bastardy is not a "criminal prosecution" so as to subject a defaulting witness to the fine of eighty dollars ($80.00), prescribed by this section. Ward v. Bell, 52 N.C. 79 (1859).

Applied in State v. Wells, 290 N.C. 485, 226 S.E.2d 325 (1976).

§ 8-64. Witnesses exempt from civil arrest.

Every witness shall be exempt from arrest in civil actions or special proceedings during his attendance at any court, or before a commissioner, arbitrator, referee, or other person authorized to command the attendance of such witness, and during the time such witness is going to and returning from the place of such attendance, allowing one day for every thirty miles such witness has to travel to and from his place of residence. (1777, c. 115, s. 44, P. R.; R. C., c. 31, s. 70; Code, s. 1367; Rev., s. 1644; C.S., s. 1808.)

CASE NOTES

Common-Law Rule Not Repealed. — This section does not serve to repeal the common-law rule of exemption of witnesses from civil arrest. Cooper v. Wyman, 122 N.C. 784, 29 S.E. 947 (1898).

Exemption Not Applicable to Criminal Proceeding. — The exemption of witnesses from civil arrest accorded by this section, and of nonresident parties and witnesses voluntarily attending court here, on grounds of public policy does not apply to parties arrested in criminal proceedings. White v. Underwood, 125 N.C. 25, 34 S.E. 104 (1899).

Nonresident Attorney. — This section does not prevent service of summons on a nonresident attorney in this State to represent his clients in a matter pending in the federal court. Greenleaf v. People's Bank, 133 N.C. 292, 45 S.E. 638 (1903).

Procedure for Claiming Exemption. — Where a party has not been granted the exemption from service of summons (which the courts seem to have placed on the same plane as the exemption from civil arrest), his remedy is not a motion to dismiss the action, but a motion, on special appearance, to set aside the return of service. Dell School v. Pierce, 163 N.C. 424, 79 S.E. 687 (1913). This is because the service is not void but voidable. Cooper v. Wyman, 122 N.C. 784, 29 S.E. 947 (1898).

Attendance of Witnesses from without State.

Depositions.

§§ 8-71 to 8-73: Repealed by Session Laws 1967, c. 954, s. 4.

§ 8-74. Depositions for defendant in criminal actions.

In all criminal actions, hearings and investigations it shall be lawful for the defendant in any such action to make affidavit before the clerk of the superior court of the county in which said action is pending, that it is important for the defense that he have the testimony of any person, whose name must be given, and that such person is so infirm, or otherwise physically incapacitated, or nonresident of this State, that he cannot procure his attendance at the trial or hearing of said cause. Upon the filing of such affidavit, it shall be the duty of the clerk to appoint some responsible person to take the deposition of such witness, which deposition may be read in the trial of such criminal action under the same rules as now apply by law to depositions in civil actions: provided, that the district attorney or prosecuting attorney of the district, county or town in which such action is pending have 10 days' notice of the taking of such deposition, who may appear in person or by representative to conduct the cross-examination of such witness. (Code, s. 1357; 1891, c. 522; 1893, c. 80; Rev., s. 1652; 1915, c. 251; C. S., s. 1812; 1971, c. 381, s. 6; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Section Does Not Entitle Defendant to List of State's Witnesses. — This section provides for taking the deposition of an incapacitated defense witness, whose name must be given to the court. Patently this section has no application to defendant's motion for a list of the State's witnesses. State v. Hoffman, 281 N.C. 727, 190 S.E.2d 842 (1972).

In the absence of a statute requiring the State to furnish it, the defendant in a criminal case is not entitled to a list of the State's witnesses who are to testify against him. There is no such statute in this State. State v. Hoffman, 281 N.C. 727, 190 S.E.2d 842 (1972).

Where there are several defendants in the same bill of indictment, it is not necessary to notify each of the others of the taking of a deposition by one for use as evidence on his behalf. State v. Finley, 118 N.C. 1161, 24 S.E. 495 (1896).

A deposition taken under this section is competent to be read in favor of one prisoner, although it contains testimony charging his codefendant with committing the crime. When so read, it is the duty of the presiding judge to instruct the jury that they are not to consider it as evidence against the codefendant thus charged with the crime, but only as evidence in favor of the prisoner who offers it. State v. Finley, 118 N.C. 1161, 24 S.E. 495 (1896).

§ 8-75: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 381, s. 13.

§ 8-76. Depositions before municipal authorities.

Any board of aldermen, board of town or county commissioners or any person interested in any proceeding, investigation, hearing or trial before such board, may take the depositions of all persons whose evidence may be desired for use in said proceeding, investigation, hearing or trial; and to do so, the chairman of such board or such person may apply in person or by attorney to the superior court clerk of that county in which such proceeding, investigation, hearing or trial is pending, for a commission to take the same, and said clerk, upon such application, shall issue such commission, or such deposition may be taken by a notary public of this State or of any other state or foreign country without a commission issuing from the court; and the notice and proceedings upon the taking of said depositions shall be the same as provided for in civil actions; and if the person upon whom the notice of the taking of such deposition is to be served is absent from or cannot after due diligence be found within this State, but can be found within the county in which the deposition is to be taken, then, and in that case, said notice shall be personally served on such person by the commissioner appointed to take such deposition or by the notary taking such deposition, as the case may be; and when any such deposition is returned to the clerk it shall be opened and passed upon by him and delivered to such board, and the reading and using of such deposition shall conform to the rules of the superior court. (1889, c. 151; Rev., s. 1653; C. S., s. 1814; 1943, c. 543.)

§ 8-77. Depositions in quo warranto proceedings.

In all actions for the purpose of trying the title to the office of clerk of the superior court, register of deeds, county treasurer or sheriff of any county, it shall be competent and lawful to take the deposition of witnesses before a commissioner or commissioners to be appointed by the judge of the district wherein the case is to be tried, or the judge holding the court of said district, or the clerk of the court wherein the case is pending, or a notary public, under the same rules as to time of notice and as to the manner of taking and filing the same as is now provided by law for the taking of depositions in other cases; and such depositions, when so taken, shall be competent to be read on the trial of such action, without regard to the place of residence of such witness or distance of residence from said place of trial: Provided, that the provisions of this section shall not be construed to prevent the oral examination, by either party on the trial, of such witnesses as they may summon in their behalf. (1889, c. 428; Rev., s. 1654; C. S., s. 1815; 1943, c. 543.)

§ 8-78. Commissioner may subpoena witness and punish for contempt.

Commissioners to take depositions appointed by the courts of this State, or by the courts of the states or territories of the United States, arbitrators, referees, and all persons acting under a commission issuing from any court of record in this State, are hereby empowered, they or the clerks of the courts respectively in this State, to which such commission shall be returnable, to issue subpoenas, specifying the time and place for the attendance of witnesses before them, and to administer oaths to said witnesses, to the end that they may give their testimony. And any witness appearing before any of the said persons and refusing to give his testimony on oath touching such matters as he may be lawfully examined unto shall be committed, by warrant of the person before whom he shall so refuse, to the common jail of the county, there to remain until he may be willing to give his evidence; which warrant of commitment shall recite what authority the person has to take the testimony of such witness, and the refusal of the witness to give it. (1777, c. 115, s. 42, P. R.; 1805, c. 685, ss. 1, 2, P. R.; 1848, c. 66; 1850, c. 188; R. C., c. 31, s. 64; Code, s. 1362; Rev., s. 1649; C. S., s. 1816.)

Cross References. — As to willful refusal to be sworn or to testify amounting to criminal contempt, see § 5A-11(4).

CASE NOTES

Power Not Exclusively in Commissioner. — The power to commit to jail a person refusing to testify before a commissioner, as provided for in this section, is not given exclusively, if at all, to the commissioner, but he may invoke the aid of the judge from whom he derives his appointment and whose authority is defied. Bradley Fertilizer Co. v. Taylor, 112 N.C. 141, 17 S.E. 69 (1893).

§ 8-79. Attendance before commissioner enforced.

The sheriff of the county where the witness may be shall execute all such subpoenas, and make due return thereof before the commissioner, or other person, before whom the witness is to appear, in the same manner, and under the same penalties, as in case of process of a like kind returnable to court; and when the witness shall be subpoenaed five days before the time of his required attendance, and shall fail to appear according to the subpoena and give evidence, the default shall be noted by the commissioner, arbitrator, or other person aforesaid; and in case the default be made before a commissioner acting under authority from courts without the State, the defaulting witness shall forfeit and pay to the party at whose instance he may be subpoenaed fifty dollars, and on the trial for such penalty the subpoena issued by the commissioner, or other person, as aforesaid, with the indorsement thereon of due service by the officer serving the same, together with the default noted as aforesaid and indorsed on the subpoena, shall be prima facie evidence of the forfeiture, and sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to judgment for the same, unless the witness may show his incapacity to have attended. (1848, c. 66, s. 2; 1850, c. 188, ss. 1, 2; R. C., c. 31, s. 65; Code, s. 1363; Rev., s. 1650; C. S., s. 1817.)

§ 8-80. Remedies against defaulting witness before commissioner.

But in case the default be made before a commissioner, arbitrator, referee or other person, acting under a commission or authority from any of the courts of this State, then the same shall be certified under his hand, and returned with the subpoena to the court by which he was commissioned or empowered to take the evidence of such witness; and thereupon the court shall adjudge the defaulting witness to pay to the party at whose instance he was summoned the sum of forty dollars ($40.00); but execution shall not issue therefor until the same be ordered by the court, after such proceedings had as shall give said witness an opportunity to show cause, if he can, against the issuing thereof. (1850, c. 188, s. 2; R. C., c. 31, s. 66; Code, s. 1364; Rev., s. 1651; C. S., s. 1818.)

§ 8-81. Objection to deposition before trial.

At any time before the trial, or hearing of an action or proceeding, any party may make a motion to the judge or court to reject a deposition for irregularity in the taking of it, either in whole or in part, for scandal, impertinence, the incompetency of the testimony, for insufficient notice, or for any other good cause. The objecting party shall state his exceptions in writing. (1869-70, c. 227, ss. 13, 17; Code, s. 1361; 1895, c. 312; 1903, c. 132; Rev., s. 1648; C. S., s. 1819.)

CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — The purpose of this section is to settle the depositions as evidence before the trial or hearing and thus prevent surprise, misapprehension, confusion and delay on the trial. Carroll v. Hodges, 98 N.C. 418, 4 S.E. 199 (1887).

The purpose of this section is to give the party in whose behalf a deposition has been taken notice of any objection to the deposition and of the grounds for same before the trial. Pratt v. Bishop, 257 N.C. 486, 126 S.E.2d 597 (1962).

Time and Manner of Objection. — As stated by this section, exceptions to a deposition, especially those which relate to its regularity, should be disposed of, at the latest, before the trial is entered upon. Barnhardt v. Smith, 86 N.C. 473 (1882); Carroll v. Hodges, 98 N.C. 418, 4 S.E. 199 (1887); Ivey v. Bessemer City Cotton Mills, 143 N.C. 189, 55 S.E. 613 (1906). Such objection must be made in writing. Brittain v. Hitchcock, 127 N.C. 400, 37 S.E. 474 (1900).

Objection to the incompetency of testimony and motion to reject the evidence must be made in writing before trial unless the parties shall consent to a waiver of this provision. Pratt v. Bishop, 257 N.C. 486, 126 S.E.2d 597 (1962).

Same — When Allowed at Trial. — Where it appeared that no notice had been given to the adverse party of the taking of a deposition, and that it had not been passed upon by the clerk, it was held that an objection to its reception might be taken on the trial of the action. Bryan v. Jeffreys, 104 N.C. 242, 10 S.E. 167 (1889).

When Trial Begins. — Once the case is reached on the calendar and the jury called into the box, "the hurry of a trial" has begun and the time for deliberation and scrutiny of a deposition has passed. The purpose of this section would not be served by a holding that the trial did not begin until after the jury was impaneled. Pratt v. Bishop, 257 N.C. 486, 126 S.E.2d 597 (1962); State v. Swann, 5 N.C. App. 385, 168 S.E.2d 429, rev'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 644, 170 S.E.2d 611 (1969).

The trial begins when the jurors are called into the box for examination as to their qualifications — when the work of impaneling the jury begins — and the calling of a jury is a part of the trial. State v. Swann, 5 N.C. App. 385, 168 S.E.2d 429, rev'd on other grounds, 275 N.C. 644, 170 S.E.2d 611 (1969).

Waiver of Formal Defects. — Where a party attends upon and takes part in taking depositions, he thereby waives all objections of a formal character, but a void process will not be vitalized unless there is an amendment without prejudice to third parties. McArter v. Rhea, 122 N.C. 614, 30 S.E. 128 (1898).

The failure to insert the name of the commissioner in the commission to take the deposition is waived by the objecting party appearing at the taking of the deposition and making no objection thereto until after the trial was begun. Womack v. Gross, 135 N.C. 378, 47 S.E. 464 (1904); Tomlinson Chair Mfg. Co. v. Townsend, 153 N.C. 244, 69 S.E. 145 (1910).

Where the provisions of this section as to making the objection before trial and in writing are not complied with, the objection to the deposition is waived. Woodley v. Hassell, 94 N.C. 157 (1886).

Cited in Hood Sys. Indus. Bank v. Dixie Oil Co., 205 N.C. 778, 172 S.E. 360 (1934); State v. Montgomery, 33 N.C. App. 693, 236 S.E.2d 390 (1977).

§ 8-82. Deposition not quashed after trial begun.

No deposition shall be quashed, or rejected, on objection first made after a trial has begun, merely because of an irregularity in taking the same, provided it shall appear that the party objecting had notice that it had been taken, and it was on file long enough before the trial to enable him to present his objection. (1869-70, c. 227, s. 12; Code, s. 1360; Rev., s. 1647; C. S., s. 1820.)

Legal Periodicals. — For an article entitled, "The 1980 Amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and Proposals for North Carolina Practice," see 16 Wake Forest L. Rev. 915 (1980).

CASE NOTES

Objection Should Be Made before Trial. — Where a deposition was open and on file before the trial, and an objection thereto was made for the first time on the trial, it was held that the objection could not be sustained. Morgan v. Royal Fraternal Ass'n, 170 N.C. 75, 86 S.E. 975 (1915). And this is true whether the motion is to quash the deposition in whole or in part. Carroll v. Hodges, 98 N.C. 418, 4 S.E. 199 (1887).

Where deposition of a witness is duly taken with full opportunity of cross-examination by the adverse party, with no objection before trial, and the witness is out of the State at the time of trial, exception to the deposition at the trial is without merit. Fleming v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 236 N.C. 568, 73 S.E.2d 544 (1952).

Filing as Notice. — Where the deposition had been on file for two or three months before the trial, the appellant's counsel having notice and being present when it was opened by the clerk and ordered by him to be read in evidence on the trial, and they making no objections thereto, it was held that such deposition could not be quashed on oral objection made at the trial. Carroll v. Hodges, 98 N.C. 418, 4 S.E. 199 (1887).

Manner of Objection. — Since a deposition can be quashed only for irregularities in the taking or the incompetency of witnesses, objection should be taken to the questions and answers of the deponent by way of exception and not by motion to quash the depositions. Jeffords v. Albemarle Waterworks, 157 N.C. 10, 72 S.E. 624 (1911).

Preservation of Exception. — Where a commissioner to take depositions has, over the objection and exceptions of a party litigant, denied him the right of cross-examination of a witness of his opponent, and the litigant has appealed therefrom to the trial court, and preserved his right, the exception gives notice of the grounds upon which it was based, and on his motion on the trial, the deposition relating to that part of the evidence will be stricken. Sugg v. St. Mary's Oil Engine Co., 193 N.C. 814, 138 S.E. 169 (1927).

When Objection Allowed At Trial. — See note of Bryan v. Jeffreys, 104 N.C. 242, 10 S.E. 167 (1889), under § 8-81.

Stated in Gulf States Steel Co. v. Ford, 173 N.C. 195, 91 S.E. 844 (1917).

§ 8-83. When deposition may be read on the trial.

Every deposition taken and returned in the manner provided by law may be read on the trial of the action or proceeding, or before any referee, in the following cases, and not otherwise:

(1) If the witness is dead, or has become insane since the deposition was taken.

(2) If the witness is a resident of a foreign country, or of another state, and is not present at the trial.

(3) If the witness is confined in a prison outside the county in which the trial takes place.

(4) If the witness is so old, sick or infirm as to be unable to attend court.

(5) If the witness is the President of the United States, or the head of any department of the federal government, or a judge, district attorney, or clerk of any court of the United States, and the trial shall take place during the term of such court.

(6) If the witness is the Governor of the State, or the head of any department of the State government, or the president of the University, or the head of any other incorporated college in the State, or the superintendent or any physician in the employ of any of the hospitals for the insane for the State.

(7) If the witness is a justice of the Supreme Court, judge of the Court of Appeals, or a judge, presiding officer, clerk or district attorney of any court of record, and the trial shall take place during the term of such court.

(8) If the witness is a member of the Congress of the United States, or a member of the General Assembly, and the trial shall take place during a session of the body of which he is a member.

(9) If the witness has been duly summoned, and at the time of the trial is out of the State, or is more than seventy-five miles by the usual public mode of travel from the place where the court is sitting, without the procurement or consent of the party offering his deposition.

(10) If the action is pending in a magistrate's court the deposition may be read on the trial of the action, provided the witness is more than 75 miles by the usual public mode of travel from the place where the court is sitting.

(11) If the witness is a physician duly licensed to practice medicine in the State of North Carolina, and resides or maintains his office outside the county in which the action is pending. (1777, c. 115, ss. 39, 40, 41, P. R.; 1803, c. 633, P. R.; 1828, ch. 24, ss. 1, 2; 1836, c. 30; R. C., c. 31, s. 63; 1869-70, c. 227, s. 11; 1881, c. 279, ss. 1, 3; Code, s. 1358; 1905, c. 366; Rev., s. 1645; 1919, c. 324; C. CASE NOTES

To the extent they are in conflict, Rule 32 of the Rules of Civil Procedure takes precedence over this section. Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

This section is not a "differing procedure" from that of Rule 32 of the Rules of Civil Procedure within the contemplation of the language of Rule 1. Nytco Leasing, Inc. v. Southeastern Motels, Inc., 40 N.C. App. 120, 252 S.E.2d 826 (1979).

Selected Parts of Depositions. — It is not permissible to introduce selected portions of depositions without offering the whole. Sternberg v. Crockon & Roden Co., 172 N.C. 731, 90 S.E. 935 (1916); Enloe v. Charlotte Coca-Cola Bottling Co., 210 N.C. 262, 186 S.E. 242 (1936).

Meaning of "Duly Summoned". — By reasonable construction the ninth subdivision of this section means that where the deposition has been regularly taken, and where the witness is more than 75 miles from the place of trial without the consent of the party, and the presence of the witness cannot be procured, the deposition may be read if a subpoena has been duly issued — not necessarily served. Tomlinson Chair Mfg. Co. v. Townsend, 153 N.C. 244, 69 S.E. 145 (1910). See Sparrow v. Blount, 90 N.C. 514 (1884).

Where Plaintiff Dies But Action Survives. — Where the deposition de bene esse of the plaintiff in an action has been taken in accordance with law, and the plaintiff has since died, but the cause of action survives, the deposition may properly be read in evidence in behalf of those who survive him in interest, and have properly been made parties to the original action. Barbee v. Cannady, 191 N.C. 529, 132 S.E. 572 (1926).

Witness Unable to Talk. — The deposition of a witness adjudged to be unable to talk or remain in court is admissible in evidence under this section. Willeford v. Bailey, 132 N.C. 402, 43 S.E. 928 (1903).

Deposition Taken in Prior Action. — In the trial of an action a deposition regularly taken in another action between the same parties and involving the same subject matter is admissible as substantive evidence. Hartis v. Charlotte Elec. Ry., 162 N.C. 236, 78 S.E. 164 (1913). It may be introduced whether the deponent was examined as a witness in the case being tried or not. Mabe v. Mabe, 122 N.C. 552, 29 S.E. 843 (1898).

Article 11.

Perpetuation of Testimony.

§ 8-85. Court reporter's certified transcription.

Testimony taken and transcribed by a court reporter and certified by the reporter or by the judge who presided at the trial at which the testimony was given, may be offered in evidence in any court as the deposition of the witness whose testimony is so taken and transcribed, in the manner, and under the rules governing the introduction of depositions in civil actions. (1971, c. 377, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — The above section is the seventh paragraph of former § 7-89. It was revised and transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1971, c. 377, s. 1, effective Oct. 1, 1971. Former § 8-85 was repealed by Session Laws 1967, c. 954, s. 4, effective Jan. 1, 1970.

8A-1. [Recodified.]

§ 8A-1: Recodified as §§ 8B-1 to 8B-8.

Editor's Note. — This Chapter was rewritten by Session Laws 1981, c. 937, s. 1, and has been recodified as Chapter 8B.

Interpreters for Deaf Persons.

Sec.
8B-1. Definitions; right to interpreter; determination of competence.
8B-2. Appointment of interpreters in certain judicial, legislative, and administrative proceedings; removal.
8B-3. Waiver of appointed interpreter.
8B-4. Notice of need for interpreter; proof of deafness.
8B-5. Privileged communications.
8B-6. List of interpreters; coordination of interpreter services.
8B-7. Oath.
8B-8. Compensation.
8B-9. Responsibility for payment of funds to implement Chapter.

§ 8B-1. Definitions; right to interpreter; determination of competence.

As used in this Chapter:

(1) "Appointing authority" means the presiding judge or clerk of superior court in a judicial proceeding, or a hearing officer, examiner, commissioner, chairman, presiding officer or similar official in a legislative or administrative proceeding.

(2) "Deaf person" means a person whose hearing impairment is so significant that the individual is impaired in processing linguistic information through hearing, with or without amplification.

(3) "Qualified interpreter" means an interpreter certified as qualified under standards and procedures promulgated by the Department of Human Resources. If the appointing authority finds that an interpreter possessing these qualifications is not available, an interpreter without these qualifications may be called and used as a qualified interpreter if the interpreter's actual qualifications have otherwise been determined to be adequate for the present need. In no event will an interpreter be considered qualified if the interpreter is unable to communicate effectively with and simultaneously and accurately interpret for the deaf person.

A deaf person who does not utilize sign language may request an aural/oral interpreter. Before this interpreter is appointed, the appointing authority shall satisfy itself that the aural/oral interpreter is competent to interpret the proceedings to the deaf person and to present the testimony, statements, and any other information tendered by the deaf person. (1981, c. 937, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — This Chapter is former Chapter 8A, as rewritten by Session Laws 1981, c. 937, s. 1, and recodified. Former Chapter 8A consisted of only a single section, § 8A-1.

Session Laws 1981, c. 937, s. 4, provides: "This act shall become effective October 1, 1981, and applies to all trial court, legislative, or administrative proceedings initiated or in process on or after that date."

Legal Periodicals. — For an article entitled, "The 1980 Amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and Proposals for North Carolina Practice," see 16 Wake Forest L. Rev. 915 (1980).

§ 8B-2. Appointment of interpreters in certain judicial, legislative, and administrative proceedings; removal.

(a) When a deaf person is a party to or a witness in any civil or criminal proceeding in any superior or district court of the State, including juvenile proceedings, special proceedings, and proceedings before the magistrate, the court shall appoint a qualified interpreter to interpret the proceedings to the deaf person and to interpret the deaf person's testimony, if any.

(b) When a deaf person is a witness before any legislative committee or subcommittee or legislative research or study committee or subcommittee or commission authorized by the General Assembly, the appointing authority conducting the proceeding shall appoint a qualified interpreter to interpret the proceedings to the deaf person and to interpret the deaf person's testimony.

(c) When a deaf person is a party to or a witness in an administrative proceeding before any department, board, commission, agency or licensing authority of the State, or of any county or city of the State, the appointing authority conducting the proceeding shall appoint a qualified interpreter to interpret the proceedings to the deaf person and to interpret the deaf person's testimony, if any.

(d) If a deaf person is arrested for an alleged violation of criminal law of the State, including a local ordinance, the arresting officer shall immediately procure a qualified interpreter from the appropriate court for any interrogation, warning, notification of rights, arraignment, bail hearing or other preliminary proceeding, but no arrestee otherwise eligible for release on bail under Article 26 of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes shall be held in custody pending the arrival of an interpreter. No answer, statement or admission taken from the deaf person without a qualified interpreter present and functioning is admissible in court for any purpose.

(e) Whenever a juvenile whose parent or parents are deaf is brought before a court for any reason whatsoever, the court shall appoint a qualified interpreter to interpret the proceedings and testimony for the deaf parent or parents, and to interpret any statements or testimony the deaf parent or parents may be called upon to give to the court.

(f) A qualified interpreter shall not be appointed until the appointing authority makes a preliminary determination that the interpreter is able to communicate effectively with and to interpret accurately for the deaf person. If no qualified interpreter can be found who can successfully communicate with this person, he may select his own interpreter without regard to whether the interpreter is "qualified" within the meaning set forth under this statute.

(g) The appointing authority may, on its own motion or on the request of the deaf person, remove an interpreter for inability to communicate or because his services have been waived. (1981, c. 937, s. 1.)

§ 8B-3. Waiver of appointed interpreter.

(a) A deaf person entitled to the services of an interpreter under this Chapter may waive these services. The waiver must be approved in writing by the person's attorney. If the person does not have an attorney, approval must be made in writing by the appointing authority.

(b) A deaf person who has waived an interpreter under this section may provide his own interpreter at his own expense, without regard to whether such interpreter is qualified under this Chapter. (1981, c. 937, s. 1.)

§ 8B-4. Notice of need for interpreter; proof of deafness.

A deaf person entitled to an interpreter under this Chapter shall, if practicable, notify the appropriate appointing authority of his need prior to his appearance. A failure to notify or to request an interpreter is not a waiver of the right to an interpreter. Before appointing an interpreter, an appointing authority may require satisfactory proof of the requesting person's deafness if he has reason to believe the person is not hearing impaired. (1981, c. 937, s. 1.)

§ 8B-5. Privileged communications.

If a communication made by the deaf person through an interpreter is privileged, the privilege extends also to the interpreter. (1981, c. 937, s. 1.)

§ 8B-6. List of interpreters; coordination of interpreter services.

The Department of Human Resources shall prepare and maintain an up-to-date list of qualified and available interpreters. A copy of the list shall be provided to each clerk of superior court. When requested by an appointing authority to provide an interpreter the North Carolina Council for the Hearing Impaired shall assist in arranging for an interpreter at the time and place needed through its program of community services for the hearing impaired. (1981, c. 937, s. 1.)

§ 8B-7. Oath.

Before acting, an interpreter shall take an oath or affirmation that he will make a true interpretation in an understandable manner of the proceedings to the person for whom he is appointed and that he will convey the statements of the person in the English language to the best of his skill and judgment. (1981, c. 937, s. 1.)

§ 8B-8. Compensation.

(a) An interpreter appointed under this Chapter is entitled to a reasonable fee for his services, including waiting time, and reimbursement for necessary travel and subsistence expenses. The fee shall be fixed by the appointing authority who shall consider any fee schedule for interpreters recommended by the Department of Human Resources. Reimbursement for necessary travel and subsistence expenses shall be at rates provided by law for State employees generally.

(b) The fees and expenses of interpreters who serve before any superior or district court criminal and juvenile proceeding are payable from funds appropriated to the Administrative Office of the Courts.

(c) The fees and expenses of interpreters who serve in civil cases and special proceedings are also payable from funds appropriated to the Administrative Office of the Courts.

(d) Fees and expenses of interpreters who serve before a legislative body described in this Article are payable from funds appropriated for operating expenses of the General Assembly.

(e) Fees and expenses of interpreters who serve before any State administrative agency are payable by that agency. The agency shall, upon application to the Department of Administration, be reimbursed for payments made.

(f) Fees and expenses of interpreters who serve before city or county administrative proceedings are payable by the respective city or county. During the fiscal biennium 1981-83, the city or county shall, upon application to the Department of Administration, be reimbursed for payments made.

(g) The Department of Administration and the Office of State Budget and Management shall report to the 1983 General Assembly on the satisfactoriness of the funding of this act by special reserve funds and shall recommend whether this funding be continued and new appropriations made or whether continued reserve funding is unnecessary. (1981, c. 937, s. 1.)

§ 8B-9. Responsibility for payment of funds to implement Chapter.

Responsibility for payment of funds to implement this Chapter rests with the particular entity specified in G.S. 8B-8 whose procedure required the service. (1981, c. 937, s. 2.)

Jury Commissions, Preparation of Jury Lists, and Drawing of Panels.

§ 9-1. Jury commission in each county; membership; selection; oath; terms.

Not later than July 1, 1967, there shall be appointed in each county a jury commission of three members. One member of the commission shall be appointed by the senior regular resident superior court judge, one member by the clerk of superior court, and one member by the board of county commissioners. The appointees shall be qualified voters of the county, and shall serve for terms of two years. Appointees may be reappointed to successive terms. A vacancy in the commission shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment, for the unexpired term. Each commissioner shall take an oath or affirmation that, without favor or prejudice, he will honestly perform the duties of a member of the jury commission during his term of service. The compensation of commissioners shall be fixed by the board of county commissioners, and shall be paid from the general fund of the county, The clerk of superior court shall furnish clerical assistance to the commission, as necessary. (1967, c. 218, s. 1; 1981, c. 720, s. 3.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "July" for "October" in the first sentence.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the cases cited in the annotations to this Chapter were decided under the Chapter as it stood before its revision in 1967.

Stated in State v. Harbison, 293 N.C. 474, 238 S.E.2d 449 (1977); State v. Vaughn, 296 N.C. 167, 250 S.E.2d 210 (1978).

§ 9-2. Preparation of jury list; sources of names.

(a) It shall be the duty of the jury commission beginning July 1, 1981, (and each biennium thereafter) to prepare a list of prospective jurors qualified under this Chapter to serve in the biennium beginning January 1, 1982, (and each biennium thereafter).

(b) In preparing the list, the jury commission shall use the voter registration records of the county. The commission may use fewer than all the names from the voter list if it uses a random method of selection. The commission may use other sources of names deemed by it to be reliable.

(c) Effective July 1, 1983, the list of licensed drivers residing in each county, as supplied to the county by the Division of Motor Vehicles pursuant to G.S. 20-43.4, shall also be required as a source of names for use by the commission in preparing the jury list.

(d) When more than one source is used to prepare the jury list the jury commission shall take randomly a sample of names from the list of registered voters and each additional source used. The same percentage of names must be selected from each list. The names selected from the voter registration list shall be compared with the entire list of names, from the second source. Duplicate names shall be removed from the voter registration sample, and the remaining names shall then be combined with the sample of names selected from the second source to form the jury list. If more than two source lists are used, the same procedure must be used to remove duplicates.

(e) As an alternative to the procedure set forth in subsection (d), the jury commission may merge the entire list of names of each source used, remove the duplicate names, and randomly select the desired number of names to form the jury list.

(f) The jury list shall contain not less than one and one-quarter times and not more than three times as many names as were drawn for jury duty in all courts in the county during the previous biennium, but in no event shall the list include fewer than 500 names, except that in counties in which a different panel of jurors is selected for each day of the week, there is no limit to the number of names that may be placed on the jury list.

(g) The custodian of the appropriate election registration records in each county shall cooperate with the jury commission in its duty of compiling the list required by this section.

(h) As used in this section "random" or "randomly" refers to a method of selection that results in each name on a list having an equal opportunity to be selected. (1806, c. 694, P. R.; Code, ss. 1722, 1723; 1889, c. 559; 1897, cc. 117, 539; 1899, c. 729; Rev., s. 1957; C. S., s. 2312; 1947, c. 1007, s. 1; 1967, c. 218, s. 1; 1969, c. 205, s. 1; c. 1190, s. 49½; 1973, c. 83, ss. 1, 2; 1981, c. 430, s. 1; c. 720, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, added to the first paragraph of the section as it stood before the second 1981 amendment a sentence reading as follows: "In counties in which a different panel of jurors is summoned for each day of the week, there is no limit to the number of names that may be placed on the juror list." A similar provision appears in subsection (f) of the section as rewritten by the second 1981 amendment.

The second 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, rewrote the section to read as set out above.

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Sources of List.
III. Proof of Discrimination.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — The annotations under this section are from cases decided prior to the 1981 amendments.

The plan in this section for the selection and drawing of jurors is constitutional and provides a jury system completely free of discrimination to any cognizable group. State v. Cornell, 281 N.C. 20, 187 S.E.2d 768 (1972); State v. Foddrell, 291 N.C. 546, 231 S.E.2d 618 (1977); State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

Constitutionality of Former Chapter. — See State v. Wilson, 262 N.C. 419, 137 S.E.2d 109 (1964).

Power of State to Prescribe Qualifications of Jurors. — Absent discrimination by race or other identifiable group or class, a state is at liberty to prescribe such qualifications for jurors as it deems proper without offending the Fourteenth Amendment. State v. Rogers, 275 N.C. 411, 168 S.E.2d 345, cert. denied, 396 U.S. 1024, 90 S. Ct. 599, 24 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1970).

The legislative intent of this section is to provide a system for objective selection of veniremen. State v. Avery, 299 N.C. 126, 261 S.E.2d 803 (1980).

The procedure set forth in this Article is objective and systematic. State v. Hough, 299 N.C. 245, 262 S.E.2d 268 (1980).

Provisions of Former § 9-1 as to Jury List Directory and Not Mandatory. — See State v. Smarr, 121 N.C. 669, 28 S.E. 549 (1897); State v. Perry, 122 N.C. 1018, 29 S.E. 384 (1898); State v. Bonner, 149 N.C. 519, 63 S.E. 84 (1908); State v. Brown, 233 N.C. 202, 63 S.E.2d 99, cert. denied, 341 U.S. 943, 71 S. Ct. 997, 95 L. Ed. 1369 (1951); State v. Yoes, 271 N.C. 616, 157 S.E.2d 386 (1967).

Special Statute Allowing Other Method. — Where a statute creating a special criminal court for certain counties allows every facility to the accused for getting a fair and impartial jury, it is not unconstitutional because it does not follow the same methods of drawing the jury which are provided for by the superior courts. State v. Jones, 97 N.C. 469, 1 S.E. 680 (1887).

Applied in State v. Barnwell, 17 N.C. App. 299, 194 S.E.2d 63 (1973); State v. Hubbard, 19 N.C. App. 431, 199 S.E.2d 146 (1973); State v. Lynch, 300 N.C. 534, 268 S.E.2d 161 (1980).

Stated in State v. Vaughn, 296 N.C. 167, 250 S.E.2d 210 (1978).

Cited in Garner v. State, 8 N.C. App. 109, 174 S.E.2d 92 (1970).

II. Sources of List.

A jury commission is not limited to the sources specifically designated by this section. State v. Cornell, 281 N.C. 20, 187 S.E.2d 768 (1972).

Selection of Names Only from Certain Letters of Alphabet. — Names for the list of grand and petit jurors were not chosen arbitrarily or nonsystematically in violation of this section where every fourth name from the tax list was taken only from the letters A, B, C, D and M rather than from the entire alphabet. However, the practice of choosing names only from certain letters of the alphabet is not approved, since this section seems to contemplate systematic selection of names from the entire alphabet. State v. King, 299 N.C. 707, 264 S.E.2d 40 (1980).

Jury List Not Discriminatory Because Made from Tax List. — A jury list is not discriminatory merely because it is made from the tax list. The tax list is perhaps the most comprehensive list available for the names of male citizens. State v. Wilson, 262 N.C. 419, 137 S.E.2d 109 (1964), decided under former § 9-1.

A jury list is not discriminatory or unlawful because it is drawn from the tax list of the county. State v. Cornell, 281 N.C. 20, 187 S.E.2d 768 (1972).

Even if the tax lists contained a disproportionate male-female ratio, such disproportion did not result from a systematic, arbitrary and intentionally discriminatory process on the part of the jury commission. State v. Tant, 16 N.C. App. 113, 191 S.E.2d 387, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 429, 192 S.E.2d 839 (1972), 414 U.S. 938, 94 S. Ct. 240, 38 L. Ed. 2d 165 (1973).

But commissioners are not limited to use of tax list, and the use of other lists might result in the selection of more women jurors. State v. Wilson, 262 N.C. 419, 137 S.E.2d 109 (1964), decided under former § 9-1.

Failure to Use List of Names Not Appearing on Tax Lists. — The fact that the county commissioners did not also use a list of names of persons who do not appear on the tax lists does not show racial discrimination in the selection of prospective jurors. State v. Rogers, 275 N.C. 411, 168 S.E.2d 345 (1969), cert. denied, 396 U.S. 1024, 90 S. Ct. 599, 24 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1970).

Use of a jury box containing only the names of property owner is not per se discriminatory as to race and does not unfairly narrow the choice of jurors so as to impinge defendant's statutory or constitutional rights. State v. Rogers, 275 N.C. 411, 168 S.E.2d 345, cert. denied, 396 U.S. 1024, 90 S. Ct. 599, 24 L. Ed. 2d 518 (1970).

Absence of Names of Persons between Ages of 18 and 21. — See note to § 9-3.

Mere irregularity on the part of the jury commissioners in preparing the jury list, unless obviously, designedly or intentionally discriminatory, will not vitiate the list or afford a basis for a challenge to the array. State v. Tant, 16 N.C. App. 113, 191 S.E.2d 387, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 429, 192 S.E.2d 839 (1972), 414 U.S. 938, 94 S. Ct. 240, 38 L. Ed. 2d 165 (1973).

Jury Commission Need Not Ascertain Validity of Procedures Used in Compiling Lists. — To hold that a jury commission must ascertain the validity of the procedures used by independent bodies in compiling tax and voter registration lists before using such lists as sources of names of prospective jurors would be to impose an impossible burden. State v. Tant, 16 N.C. App. 113, 191 S.E.2d 387, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 429, 192 S.E.2d 839 (1972), 414 U.S. 938, 94 S. Ct. 240, 38 L. Ed. 2d 165 (1973).

Removal of Certain Names From Lists. — Where commissioners laid aside names of several persons, otherwise qualified, because they did not know whether they were residents of the county, and the jury list was completed by the names of other duly qualified persons, if there was any irregularity it did not affect the action of the jurors so drawn and summoned. State v. Wilcox, 104 N.C. 847, 10 S.E. 453 (1889), decided under former § 9-1.

Merely purging the jury list of the names of those who had not paid their taxes, without adding any new names thereto, does not vitiate the venire in the absence of bad faith or corruption on the part of the county commissioners. State v. Dixon, 131 N.C. 808, 42 S.E. 944 (1902), decided under former § 9-1.

Rejection of prospective jurors for want of good moral character and sufficient intelligence was available to the county commissioners as a general objection only when the jury list was being prepared, and not after the names were in the box. State v. Speller, 229 N.C. 67, 47 S.E.2d 537 (1948); State v. Wilson, 262 N.C. 419, 137 S.E.2d 109 (1964), decided under former § 9-1.

III. Proof of Discrimination.

Discrimination on Account of Race. — See State v. Daniels, 134 N.C. 641, 46 S.E. 743 (1904); State v. Brown, 233 N.C. 202, 63 S.E.2d 99, cert. denied, 341 U.S. 943, 71 S. Ct. 997, 95 L. Ed. 1369 (1951); Miller v. State, 237 N.C. 29, 74 S.E.2d 513, cert. denied, 345 U.S. 930, 73 S. Ct. 792, 97 L. Ed. 1360 (1953); Rice v. Rigsby, 259 N.C. 506, 131 S.E.2d 469 (1963); State v. Wilson, 262 N.C. 419, 137 S.E.2d 109 (1964).

How Prima Facie Case of Purposeful Discrimination Established. — The petitioner has the initial burden of establishing a prima facie case of purposeful discrimination. A prima facie case of jury discrimination can be established through a showing of a substantial disparity between the percentage of Negro residents in the county as a whole and on the jury lists, or by a showing of such disparity between the percentages of Negroes on the tax rolls, from which the jury lists are drawn, and on the jury lists. Such a showing is strengthened where the disparity originated, at least in part, at the one point in the selection process where the jury commissioners invoked their subjective judgment rather than objective criteria. Parker v. Ross, 330 F. Supp. 13 (E.D.N.C. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 470 F.2d 1092 (4th Cir. 1972).

The disparity between the percentage of Negroes over 21 years of age in a county (45.5%) and on the jury list (4.5%) constituted a prima facie case of systematic exclusion of Negroes from the county grand and petit jury lists. Parker v. Ross, 330 F. Supp. 13 (E.D.N.C. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 470 F.2d 1092 (4th Cir. 1972).

To establish a prima facie case of systematic racial exclusion, defendants are generally required to produce not only statistical evidence establishing that blacks were underrepresented on the jury but also evidence that the selection procedure itself was not racially neutral, or that for a substantial period in the past relatively few Negroes have served on the juries of the county notwithstanding a substantial Negro population therein, or both. State v. Foddrell, 291 N.C. 546, 231 S.E.2d 618 (1977).

In order to establish a prima facie case that there has been a violation of the requirement that a jury be composed of persons who represent a fair cross section of the community, defendant must document that the group alleged to have been excluded is a distinctive group; that the representation of the group in question within the venire is not fair and reasonable with respect to the number of such persons in the community; and that this underrepresentation is due to systematic exclusion of the group in the jury selection process. State v. Price, 301 N.C. 437, 272 S.E.2d 103 (1980).

Distinctiveness of Excluded Group. — In determining whether a group is distinctive or cognizable for the purpose of a challenge to a jury selection plan, three factors which must be considered are whether there is some quality or attribute in existence which defines or limits the membership of the alleged group, whether there is a cohesiveness of attitudes, ideas, or experiences which serves to distinguish the purported group from the general social mileau, and whether a community of interest must be present within the alleged group which may not be represented by other segments of the populace. State v. Price, 301 N.C. 437, 272 S.E.2d 103 (1980).

The North Carolina Supreme Court does not recognize "young people" between the ages of 18 and 29 as a distinct group for the purpose of determining whether a jury panel represents a fair cross section of the community. State v. Price, 301 N.C. 427, 272 S.E.2d 103 (1980).

Effect of State's Failure to Justify Disparity. — If a prima facie case of jury discrimination is proven, the State must justify the disparity. However, the State's failure to do so does not mean that a guilty defendant must go free. The State may indict and try him again by the procedure which conforms to constitutional requirements. Parker v. Ross, 330 F. Supp. 13 (E.D.N.C. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 470 F.2d 1092 (4th Cir. 1972).

Discrimination Not Established. — There was no systematic exclusion of blacks, women and 18- through 21-year-olds where jury commissions used a neutral systematic selection procedure (e.g., every 6th name) in selecting names from the source lists as required by this section, and it appears that the only criteria used in striking names from the jury lists were the permissible disqualifications set out in § 9-3. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

Discrimination Not Established. — Although the defendant's proof showed that during the period in question blacks made up 17.1 percent of the jury pool but 31.1 percent of the county's population, and young people between the ages of 18 and 29 made up 22.5 percent of the jury pool but 33.3 percent of the county's population, the defendant failed to show that such misrepresentation was the result of a systematic exclusion of those groups by the jury selection process, since the jury commission had fairly and reasonably selected every second name from the county tax listing and every third name from the county voter registration list. State v. Price, 301 N.C. 437, 272 S.E.2d 103 (1980).

Requiring Defense Counsel to Investigate Jury Selection Procedures. — It places no undue burden on defense counsel to require them to make investigations into jury composition and selection procedures with regard to possible systematic racial exclusion prior to the time of trial, so long as the time between retention or appointment of counsel, the date the jury panel is drawn, and the date of trial is not so brief as to make such investigation impractical. State v. Harbison, 293 N.C. 474, 238 S.E.2d 449 (1977).

Reasonable Time Allowed Defendant to Investigate Improper Procedures. — A defendant must be allowed a reasonable time and opportunity to inquire into and present evidence regarding the alleged systematic exclusion of Negroes because of their race from serving on the grand or petit jury in his case. Whether he was afforded a reasonable time and opportunity must be determined from the facts in each particular case. State v. Harbison, 293 N.C. 474, 238 S.E.2d 449 (1977).

§ 9-2.1. Alternate procedure in certain counties.

In counties having access to electronic data processing equipment, the functions of preparing and maintaining custody of the list of prospective jurors, the procedure for drawing and summoning panels of jurors, and the procedure for maintaining records of names of jurors who have served, been excused, been delayed in service, or been disqualified, may be performed by this equipment, except that decisions as to mental or physical competency of prospective jurors shall continue to be made by jury commissioners. The procedure for performing these functions by electronic data processing equipment shall be in writing, adopted by the jury commission, and kept available for public inspection in the office of the clerk of court. The procedure must effectively preserve the authorized grounds for disqualification, the right of public access to the list of prospective jurors, and the time sequence for drawing and summoning a jury panel. (1977, c. 220, s. 1; 1981, c. 430, s. 3.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, substituted "having access to electronic" for "having electronic" near the beginning of the first sentence.

§ 9-3. Qualifications of prospective jurors.

All persons are qualified to serve as jurors and to be included on the jury list who are citizens of the State and residents of the county, who have not served as jurors during the preceding two years, who are 18 years of age or over, who are physically and mentally competent, who can hear and understand the English language, who have not been convicted of a felony or pleaded guilty or nolo contendere to an indictment charging a felony (or if convicted of a felony or having pleaded guilty or nolo contendere to an indictment charging a felony have had their citizenship restored pursuant to law), and who have not been adjudged non compos mentis. Persons not qualified under this section are subject to challenge for cause. (1806, c. 694, P. R.; Code, ss. 1722, 1723; 1889, c. 559; 1897, cc. 117, 539; 1899, c. 729; Rev., s. 1957; C. S., s. 2312; 1947, c. 1007, s. 1; 1967, c. 218, s. 1; 1971, c. 1231, s. 1; 1973, c. 230, ss. 1, 2; 1977, c. 711, s. 10.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 39, as amended by Session Laws 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1147, s. 32, effective July 1, 1978, provides: "This act shall become effective July 1, 1978, and applies to all matters addressed by its provisions without regard to when a defendant's guilt was established or when judgment was entered against him, except that the provisions of this act regarding parole shall not apply to persons sentenced before July 1, 1978."

CASE NOTES

The North Carolina plan which imposes a two-year lapse in preparation of new jury lists is constitutional and provides a jury system completely free of discrimination to any cognizable group. State v. Kirby, 15 N.C. App. 480, 190 S.E.2d 320, appeal dismissed, 281 N.C. 761, 191 S.E.2d 363 (1972).

The law guarantees the right of trial by a proper jury; that is to say, a jury possessing the qualifications contemplated by law. It was the manifest purpose of the legislature that all those and only those citizens who possess the proper qualifications of character and intelligence should be selected to serve on juries. State v. Ingram, 237 N.C. 197, 74 S.E.2d 532 (1953).

Mere Showing of Violation of Statutory Procedures Does Not Merit Quashing Indictment. — In the absence of statutory language indicating that preparation of jury lists shall be void if the directions of the act be not strictly observed, a mere showing of a violation of the statutory procedures will not merit the quashing of an indictment. State v. Vaughn, 296 N.C. 167, 250 S.E.2d 210 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 935, 99 S. Ct. 2060, 60 L. Ed. 2d 665 (1979).

In order to justify a dismissal of an indictment on grounds that statutory procedures were violated in the compilation of the jury list, a party must show either corrupt intent, discrimination, or irregularities which affect the actions of the jurors actually drawn and summoned. State v. Vaughn, 296 N.C. 167, 250 S.E.2d 210 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 935, 99 S. Ct. 2060, 60 L. Ed. 2d 665 (1979).

And even a showing that certain qualified persons were improperly disqualified would not require a dismissal of an indictment absent a showing of corrupt intent or systematic discrimination in the compilation of the list, or a showing of the presence upon the grand jury itself of a member not qualified to serve. State v. Vaughn, 296 N.C. 167, 250 S.E.2d 210 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 935, 99 S. Ct. 2060, 60 L. Ed. 2d 665 (1979).

The judge is not required to make findings in the absence of evidence that any qualified person was excluded from jury service, and in the absence of contradictory and conflicting evidence as to the material facts. State v. Vaughn, 296 N.C. 167, 250 S.E.2d 210 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 935, 99 S. Ct. 2060, 60 L. Ed. 2d 665 (1979).

There was no systematic exclusion of blacks, women and 18- through 21-year-olds where jury commissions used a neutral systematic selection procedure (e.g., every 6th name) in selecting names from the source lists as required by § 9-2, and it appears that the only criteria used in striking names from the jury lists were the permissible disqualifications set out in this section. State v. Hardy, 293 N.C. 105, 235 S.E.2d 828 (1977).

In order for a defendant to preserve his exception to the court's denial of a challenge for cause, he must (1) excuse the challenged juror with a peremptory challenge, (2) exhaust his peremptory challenges before the panel is completed, and (3) thereafter seek, and be denied, peremptory challenge to an additional juror. State v. Spencer, 37 N.C. App. 739, 246 S.E.2d 837 (1978).

Mere Summons Does Not Disqualify Person for Two Years. — It is actual service as a juror rather than a mere summons for jury duty which disqualifies him for service for the next two years. State v. Berry, 35 N.C. App. 128, 240 S.E.2d 633, cert. denied, 294 N.C. 737, 244 S.E.2d 155 (1978).

The absence from the jury list of the names of persons between the ages of 18 and 21 during the period from July 21, 1971, the effective date of the amendment of § 9-3 lowering the age requirement for jurors from 21 years to 18 years, and September 21, 1971, the date of defendant's trial, was not unreasonable and did not constitute systematic exclusion of this age group from jury service. State v. Cornell, 281 N.C. 20, 187 S.E.2d 768 (1972); State v. Harris, 281 N.C. 542, 189 S.E.2d 249 (1972); State v. Barnwell, 17 N.C. App. 299, 194 S.E.2d 63, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 106, 194 S.E.2d 634 (1973).

The petit jury which served at the trial of a 20-year-old defendant was not invalidated by the fact that the jury list had not been revised to include the names of persons under 21 years of age. State v. Long, 14 N.C. App. 508, 188 S.E.2d 690 (1972).

Alienage. — Alienage is disqualification of a juror. Hinton v. Hinton, 196 N.C. 341, 145 S.E. 615 (1928).

That a juror had forfeited his citizenship by reason of conviction of a criminal offense was ground for challenge of the juror for cause under former § 9-1. Young v. Southern Mica Co., 237 N.C. 644, 75 S.E.2d 795 (1953).

Challenges in Particular Actions, for Bias, etc. — Former § 9-1, providing that good and lawful men, required by the Constitution to serve on juries, should be men found by the county commissioners to have paid taxes for the preceding year, of good moral character, and of sufficient intelligence, did not abolish challenges to jurors, in particular actions, for bias, interest, kinship, etc. State v. Vick, 132 N.C. 995, 43 S.E. 626 (1903).

Applied in State v. Hubbard, 19 N.C. App. 431, 199 S.E.2d 146 (1973).

Stated in Glover v. North Carolina, 301 F. Supp. 364 (E.D.N.C. 1969).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Person's Mental and Physical Competency Must Be Considered Each Time Person's Name Appears on Prospective Jury List. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. J.C. Taylor, 43 N.C.A.G. 292 (1973).

§ 9-4. Preparation and custody of list.

As the jury list is prepared, the name and address of each qualified person selected for the list shall be written on a separate card. The cards shall then be alphabetized and permanently numbered, the numbers running consecutively with a different number on each card. These cards shall constitute the jury list for the county. They shall be filed with the register of deeds of the county, together with a statement of the sources used and procedures followed in preparing the list. The list shall be kept under lock and key, but shall be available for public inspection during regular office hours. (1967, c. 218, s. 1; 1969, c. 205, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Requiring Defense Counsel to Investigate Jury Selection Procedures. — It places no undue burden on defense counsel to require them to make investigations into jury composition and selection procedures with regard to possible systematic racial exclusion prior to the time of trial, so long as the time between retention or appointment of counsel, the date the jury panel is drawn, and the date of trial is not so brief as to make such investigation impractical. State v. Harbison, 293 N.C. 474, 238 S.E.2d 449 (1977).

Reasonable Time Allowed Defendant to Investigate Improper Procedures. — A defendant must be allowed a reasonable time and opportunity to inquire into and present evidence regarding the alleged systematic exclusion of Negroes because of their race from serving on the grand or petit jury in his case. Whether he was afforded a reasonable time and opportunity must be determined from the facts in each particular case. State v. Harbison, 293 N.C. 474, 238 S.E.2d 449 (1977).

§ 9-5. Procedure for drawing panel of jurors; numbers drawn.

The board of county commissioners in each county shall provide the clerk of superior court with a jury box, the construction and dimensions of which shall be prescribed by the administrative officer of the courts. At least 30 days prior to January 1 of any year for which a list of prospective jurors has been prepared, a number of discs, squares, counters or markers equal to the number of names on the jury list shall be placed in the jury box. The discs, squares, counters, or markers shall be uniform in size, weight, and appearance, and may be made of any suitable material. They shall be numbered consecutively to correspond with the numbers on the jury list. The jury box shall be of sufficient size to hold the discs, squares, counters or markers so that they may be easily shaken and mixed, and the box shall have a hinged lid through which the discs, squares, counters or markers can be drawn. The lid shall have a lock, the key to which shall be kept by the clerk of superior court.

At least 30 days prior to any session or sessions of superior or district court requiring a jury, the clerk of superior court or his assistant or deputy shall, in public, after thoroughly shaking the box, draw therefrom the number of discs, squares, counters, or markers equal to the number of jurors required for the session or sessions scheduled. For each week of a superior court session, the senior regular resident superior court judge shall specify the number of jurors to be drawn. For each week of a district court jury session, the chief district judge shall specify the number of jurors to be drawn. Pooling of jurors between or among concurrent sessions of various courts is authorized in the discretion of the senior regular resident superior court judge. When pooling is utilized, the senior regular resident superior court judge, after consultation with the chief district judge when a district court jury is required, shall specify the total number of jurors to be drawn for such concurrent sessions. When grand jurors are needed, nine additional numbers shall be drawn.

As the discs, squares, counters, or markers are drawn, they shall be separately stored by the clerk until a new jury list is prepared.

The clerk of superior court shall deliver the list of numbers drawn from the jury box to the register of deeds, who shall match the numbers received with the numbers on the jury list. The register of deeds shall within three days thereafter notify the sheriff to summon for jury duty the persons on the jury list whose numbers are thus matched. The persons so summoned may serve as jurors in either the superior or the district court, or both, for the week for which summoned. Jurors who serve each week shall be discharged at the close of the weekly session or sessions, unless actually engaged in the trial of a case, and then they shall not be discharged until their service in that case is completed. (1806, c. 694, P. R.; 1868-9, c. 9, ss. 5, 6; c. 175; Code, ss. 1726, 1727, 1731; 1889, c. 559; 1897, c. 117; 1901, c. 28, s. 3; c. 636; 1903, c. 11; 1905, c. 38; c. 76, s. 4; c. 285; Rev., ss. 1958, 1959; C. CASE NOTES

No language in this Chapter requires the clerk personally, or through an assistant or deputy clerk, to make the random drawing of names of those on the panel from the box so as to render illegal such drawing by someone else. State v. Vinson, 287 N.C. 326, 215 S.E.2d 60 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 902, 96 S. Ct. 3204, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1206 (1976).

Former § 9-3 Partly Mandatory and Partly Directory. — See State v. Watson, 104 N.C. 735, 10 S.E. 705 (1889); State v. Perry, 122 N.C. 1018, 29 S.E. 384 (1898); Moore v. Navassa Guano Co., 130 N.C. 229, 41 S.E. 293 (1902); State v. Banner, 149 N.C. 519, 63 S.E. 84 (1908).

§ 9-6. Jury service a public duty; excuses to be allowed in exceptional cases; procedure.

(a) The General Assembly hereby declares the public policy of this State to be that jury service is the solemn obligation of all qualified citizens, and that excuses from the discharge of this responsibility should be granted only for reasons of compelling personal hardship or because requiring service would be contrary to the public welfare, health, or safety, or as provided in G.S. 9-6.1.

(b) Pursuant to the foregoing policy, the chief district judge of each district shall promulgate procedures whereby he or any district judge designated by him, prior to the date that a jury session (or sessions) of superior or district court convenes, shall receive, hear, and pass on applications for excuses from jury duty. The procedures shall provide for the time and place, publicly announced, at which applications for excuses will be heard, and prospective jurors who have been summoned for service shall be so informed. In districts that have a trial court administrator, the chief district judge may assign the duty of passing on applications for excuses from jury service to the administrator. In all cases concerning excuses, the clerk of court or the trial court administrator in districts that have a trial court administrator, shall notify prospective jurors of the disposition of their excuses.

(c) A prospective juror excused by a judge in the exercise of the discretion conferred by subsection (b) may be required by the judge to serve as a juror in a subsequent session of court. If required to serve subsequently, the juror shall be considered on such occasion the same as if he were a member of the panel regularly summoned for jury service at that time.

(d) A judge hearing applications for excuses from jury duty shall excuse any person disqualified under § 9-3.

(e) The judge shall inform the clerk of superior court of persons excused under this section, and the clerk within 10 days shall so notify the register of deeds, who shall note the excuse on the juror's card and file it separately from the jury list.

(f) The discretionary authority of a presiding judge to excuse a juror at the beginning of or during a session of court is not affected by this section. (1967, c. 218, s. 1; 1969, c. 205, ss. 4, 5; 1971, c. 377, s. 30; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1207, s. 1; 1981, c. 430, s. 2.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1980, added "or as provided in G.S. 9-6.1" at the end of subsection (a).

The 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, added the third and fourth sentences of subsection (b).

§ 9-6.1. Excuses on account of age.

Any person summoned as a juror who is 65 years or older may establish his exemption without appearing in person by filing a signed statement of the ground of his exemption with the chief district judge of that district, or the district judge or trial court administrator designated by him pursuant to G.S. 9-6(b) at any time five days before the date upon which he is summoned to appear. In the case of supplemental jurors summoned under G.S. 9-11, such notice may be given when summoned. In case the chief district judge, or the judge or trial court administrator designated by him pursuant to G.S. 9-6(b), shall reject the request for exemption, the prospective juror shall be immediately notified by the trial court administrator or the clerk of court by telephone, letter, or personally. (1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1207, s. 2; 1981, c. 9, ss. 1, 2; c. 430, ss. 4, 5.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1207, s. 4, makes the act effective Oct. 1, 1980.

Effect of Amendments. — The first 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, substituted "chief district judge of that district, or the district judge designated by him pursuant to G.S. 9-6(b)" for "chief judge of the district court of the judicial district" near the end of the first sentence, and added the third sentence.

The second 1981 amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1981, inserted "or trial court administrator" preceding "designated by him pursuant to G.S. 9-6(b)" in the first and third sentences and "by the trial court administrator or the clerk of court" in the third sentence.

§ 9-7. Removal of names of jurors who have served from jury list; retention.

As persons are summoned for jury service, the cards upon which their names appear shall be withdrawn from the jury list and filed separately. The date for which each juror serves shall be noted on his card.

All cards removed from the jury list because of service, or having been excused from service, or because of disqualification, shall be retained for reference in compiling the next jury list. When the succeeding list has been prepared, the list of persons who have served shall be retained for a period of two years. (1967, c. 218, s. 1.)

§ 9-9: Repealed by Session Laws 1967, c. 218, s. 1.

Editor's Note. — Section 9-9, which derived from Session Laws 1967, c. 218, s. 1, was repealed effective Jan. 1, 1968, by its own terms.

ARTICLE 2.

Petit Jurors.

§ 9-10. Summons to jurors.

(a) The register of deeds shall, within three days after the receipt of numbers drawn, deliver the list of prospective jurors to the sheriff of the county, who shall summon the persons named therein. The summons shall be served personally, or by leaving a copy thereof at the place of residence of the juror, or by telephone or first-class mail, at least 15 days before the session of court for which the juror is summoned. Service by telephone, or by first-class mail if mailed to the correct current address of the juror on or before the fifteenth day before the day the court convenes, shall be valid and binding on the person served, and he shall be bound to appear in the same manner as if personally served. The summons shall contain information as to the time, place, and authority before whom applications for excuses from jury service may be heard.

(b) All summons served personally or by mail under this section or under G.S. 9-11 shall inform the prospective juror that persons 65 years of age or older are entitled to exemption from jury service for good cause, shall contain a statement for claiming such exemption and stating the cause and a place for the prospective juror's signature, and shall state the mailing address of the clerk of superior court and the date by which such request for exemption must be received. (1779, c. 157, ss. 4, 6, P. R.; R. C., c. 31, s. 29; 1868-9, c. 9, s. 12; Code, s. 1733; Rev., s. 1976; C. S., s. 2320; 1967, c. 218, s. 1; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1207, s. 3.)

Cross References. — As to penalty for disobeying summons, see § 9-13.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective Oct. 1, 1980, designated the former provisions of this section as subsection (a) and added subsection (b). Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1207, s. 4, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1326 and Session Laws 1981, c. 908, s. 1, provides that the amendment to this section shall not become effective in Mecklenburg and Buncombe Counties until July 1, 1981, and shall not become effectve in Wake County until July 1, 1982.

§ 9-11. Supplemental jurors; special venire.

(a) If necessary, the court may, without using the jury list, order the sheriff to summon from day to day additional jurors to supplement the original venire. Jurors so summoned shall have the same qualifications and be subject to the same challenges as jurors selected for the regular jury list. If the presiding judge finds that service of summons by the sheriff is not suitable because of his direct or indirect interest in the action to be tried, the judge may appoint some suitable person in place of the sheriff to summon supplemental jurors. The clerk of superior court shall furnish the register of deeds the names of those additional jurors who are so summoned and who report for jury service.

(b) The presiding judge may, in his discretion, at any time before or during a session direct that supplemental jurors or a special venire be selected from the jury list in the same manner as is provided for the selection of regular jurors. Jurors summoned under this subsection may be discharged by the court at any time during the session and are subject to the same challenges as regular jurors, and to no other challenges. CASE NOTES

The language of this section is clear and unambiguous, and its provisions authorize the trial judge to order the summoning of supplemental jurors in order to ensure orderly, uninterrupted, and speedy trials. State v. Fountain, 282 N.C. 58, 191 S.E.2d 674 (1972).

Discretion of Judge. — See State v. Brogden, 111 N.C. 656, 16 S.E. 170 (1892); State v. Smarr, 121 N.C. 669, 28 S.E. 549 (1897); State v. Levy, 187 N.C. 581, 122 S.E. 386 (1924); State v. Casey, 212 N.C. 352, 193 S.E. 411 (1937), overruled on other grounds, 248 N.C. 695, 104 S.E.2d 837 (1958); State v. Strickland, 229 N.C. 201, 49 S.E.2d 469 (1948).

A motion for a change of venue or for a special venire from another county, upon the ground that the minds of the residents in the county in which the crime was committed had been influenced against the defendant, is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. State v. Ledbetter, 4 N.C. App. 303, 167 S.E.2d 68 (1969).

Discretion of Selecting Officer. — Where an officer is empowered to select and summon talesmen he is vested with some discretion. It is his right and duty to use his best judgment in securing men of intelligence, courage, and good moral character, but he must act with entire impartiality. State v. White, 6 N.C. App. 425, 169 S.E.2d 895 (1969).

There is no statutory or case authority prescribing the methods by which tales jurors must be selected. State v. White, 6 N.C. App. 425, 169 S.E.2d 895 (1969).

Nowhere in the statute is there a provision delineating discretionary restrictions to be placed on an officer in fulfilling the court's order. The statutory recognition that tales jurors may be needed and the statutory language used contemplate a system easily and expeditiously administered. To place procedural restrictions unnecessarily on their selection would defeat the purpose of the system, which is to facilitate the dispatch of the business of the court. State v. White, 6 N.C. App. 425, 169 S.E.2d 895 (1969).

Tales jurors are selected infrequently and only to provide a source from which to fill the unexpected needs of the court. They must still possess the statutory qualifications and are still subject to the same challenges as regular jurors and may be examined by both parties on voir dire. In order to retain the flexibility needed in the administration of such a system, the summoning official must be permitted some discretion, whether he be located in a relatively small community or a more heavily populated area, and to restrict the discretion placed in the summoning official, without proven cause, is to presume he is not worthy of the office which he holds. State v. White, 6 N.C. App. 425, 169 S.E.2d 895 (1969).

Mere Possibility of Discrimination Does Not Make Panel Objectionable. — Obviously it would be possible for a sheriff, sent out to execute an order of the court under this section to discriminate in the selection of persons to be summoned. This mere possibility does not make the panel actually summoned by him objectionable where the record shows that he did not so discriminate. State v. White, 6 N.C. App. 425, 169 S.E.2d 895 (1969).

An accused is not prejudiced because he is not furnished a list of persons called as supplemental jurors where it became necessary to summon them after the court had properly excluded jurors from the original venire. State v. Fountain, 282 N.C. 58, 191 S.E.2d 674 (1972).

Special Venire Selected without Partiality. — A challenge to the array on the ground that the sheriff and his deputies, under instructions by the sheriff, selected for the special venire freeholders of good character, who had not served on the jury within the past two years and who lived in townships in the county other than the township in which the crime was committed and townships contiguous thereto, was properly refused, the action of the sheriff and the deputies showing no partiality, misconduct and irregularity in making out the list. State v. Dixon, 215 N.C. 438, 2 S.E.2d 371 (1939).

The failure of the trial judge to sign the order for a special venire does not alone invalidate the special venire, it having been ordered and summoned in all other respects in conformity with statute. State v. Anderson, 228 N.C. 720, 47 S.E.2d 1 (1948).

Order Substantially a Special Writ of Venire Facias. — A written order entitled as of the action, commanding the sheriff to summon a special venire of twenty-five freeholders from the body of the county to appear on a specified date to act as jurors in the case, is in substance a special writ of venire facias. State v. Anderson, 228 N.C. 720, 47 S.E.2d 1 (1948).

Challenge for Cause. — Under this section where a special venire has been ordered by the court for the trial of a capital felony, the veniremen, being selected by the sheriff in his discretion, not from the jury box, are subject to the same challenges for cause as tales jurors. State v. Avant, 202 N.C. 680, 163 S.E. 806 (1932).

Objections Made by Challenges to the Array. — Objections to the special venire based on partiality, misconduct of the sheriff, or irregularity in making out the jury list, are properly made by challenges to the array. State v. Shaw, 284 N.C. 366, 200 S.E.2d 585 (1973).

A motion challenging the array of special jurors was properly denied where the motion did not challenge the order of the court directing the sheriff to select six supplemental jurors, nor the action of the sheriff in selecting the jurors, nor contend that members of the Negro race were systematically excluded by the sheriff in his selection of the six jurors. State v. Hollingsworth, 11 N.C. App. 674, 182 S.E.2d 26 (1971).

Special Venire Exhausted. — When a special venire is exhausted without completing the jury, the court may order a further venire to be summoned at once from the bystanders. State v. Stanton, 118 N.C. 1182, 24 S.E. 536 (1896).

Accessory May Be Tried by Special Venire. — Where two persons are indicted for murder, one as principal and the other as accessory before the fact, the latter may be tried by a jury selected from a special venire ordered in the case. State v. Register, 133 N.C. 746, 46 S.E. 21 (1903).

Applied in State v. Brown, 13 N.C. App. 261, 185 S.E.2d 471 (1971).

§ 9-12. Supplemental jurors from other counties.

(a) On motion of any party or the State, or on his own motion, any judge of the superior court, if he is of the opinion that it is necessary in order to provide a fair trial in any case, and regardless of whether he will preside over the trial of that case, may order as many jurors as he deems necessary to be summoned from any county or counties in the same judicial district as the county of trial or in any adjoining judicial district. These jurors shall be selected and shall serve in the manner provided for selection and service of supplemental jurors selected from the jury list. These jurors shall be subject to the same challenges as other jurors, except challenges for nonresidence in the county of trial.

(b) Transportation may be furnished in lieu of mileage.

(c) Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 377, s. 32. (1913, c. 4, ss. 1, 2; C. S., s. 473; 1931, c. 308; 1933, c. 248; 1961, c. 110; 1967, c. 218, s. 1; 1971, c. 377, s. 32.)

CASE NOTES

Discretion of Court. — The trial judge, when he refused defendant's motion to remove an action for homicide to another county, in the exercise of his sound discretion, could have had the jurors summoned from any adjoining county, or from any county in the same judicial district, or had jurors drawn from the jury box of such county. State v. Kincaid, 183 N.C. 709, 110 S.E. 612 (1922); State v. Baxter, 208 N.C. 90, 179 S.E. 450 (1935), decided under former § 1-86.

Discretion of Court. — The granting of a solicitor's (now district attorney's) motion that the jury be drawn from the body of another county is within the court's discretion. State v. Shipman, 202 N.C. 518, 163 S.E. 657 (1932).

A motion for change of venue or, in the alternative, that a jury be summoned from another county, on the ground that defendant could not obtain a fair trial because of widespread and unfavorable publicity, is addressed to the discretion of the trial court, and where the record disclosed that the trial judge conducted a hearing, read all the affidavits, and examined the press releases; that each juror selected stated that he could render a verdict uninfluenced by the publicity; and that defendant did not exhaust his peremptory challenges, abuse of discretion in denying the motion was not disclosed. State v. Porth, 269 N.C. 329, 153 S.E.2d 10 (1967), decided under former § 1-86.

The motion of the defendants that a jury be summoned from another county was addressed to the sound discretion of the presiding judge. State v. Yoes, 271 N.C. 616, 157 S.E.2d 386 (1967).

A defendant's motion for a change of venue and his alternative motion for a special venire from another county were addressed to the sound legal discretion of the trial court. State v. Penley, 6 N.C. App. 455, 170 S.E.2d 632 (1969).

This section places the matter of ordering jurors to be summoned from another county in the sound discretion of the judge of the superior court. State v. Edwards, 286 N.C. 140, 209 S.E.2d 789 (1974).

Order Tantamount to Denial of Motion to Remove. — When the judge entered an order directing that venire of jurors be drawn from another county to serve as jurors in the trial, it was tantamount to a denial of a motion to remove the cases to another county for trial. State v. Moore, 258 N.C. 300, 128 S.E.2d 563 (1962), decided under former § 1-86.

Order Justified. — Due to the prior trials and the widespread publicity, the court on motion of the State was justified in ordering the trial jury drawn from another county. State v. Cutshall, 281 N.C. 588, 189 S.E.2d 176 (1972).

Review of Discretion. — A judge's order, entered by virtue of authority vested in him by this section, is not reviewable, unless there has been a manifest abuse of his discretion. State v. Childs, 269 N.C. 307, 152 S.E.2d 453 (1967), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2278, 29 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1971), decided under former § 1-86 and holding that no abuse of discretion appeared.

A motion for change of venue or for a special venire may be granted or denied in the discretion of the trial judge, and his decision in the exercise of such discretion is not reviewable in the Court of Appeals unless gross abuse of discretion is shown. State v. Ledbetter, 4 N.C. App. 303, 167 S.E.2d 68 (1969).

A defendant's motions for a change of venue or for a special venire from another county, on the ground that he could not get a fair and impartial trial in the county because of extensive publicity and public discussion of the cases, were addressed to the sound legal discretion of the trial court, whose ruling in denying these motions was not disturbed on appeal because (1) the newspaper articles filed in support of the motions were not unduly inflammatory in nature, (2) the articles were published three months prior to the trial and there was no evidence of repeated or excessive publication, and (3) those of the prospective jurors who had read the newspaper accounts stated that they could return an impartial verdict. State v. Penley, 6 N.C. App. 455, 170 S.E.2d 632 (1969).

The courts have consistently held that a motion for removal to an adjacent county or to cause a jury to be selected from an adjacent county on the grounds of unfavorable publicity is addressed to the sound discretion of the court, and that, absent a showing of abuse of discretion, the decision of the trial court is not reviewable. State v. Jackson, 24 N.C. App. 394, 210 S.E.2d 876, rev'd on other grounds, 287 N.C. 470, 215 S.E.2d 123 (1975).

Motions for change of venue or special venire are addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge and, absent abuse of discretion, his rulings will not be disturbed on appeal. State v. Brower, 289 N.C. 644, 224 S.E.2d 551 (1976); State v. Hopper, 292 N.C. 580, 234 S.E.2d 580 (1977).

Applied in State v. Roseboro, 276 N.C. 185, 171 S.E.2d 886 (1970); State v. Jackson, 287 N.C. 470, 215 S.E.2d 123 (1975); Kinston City Bd. of Educ. v. Board of Comm'rs, 29 N.C. App. 544, 225 S.E.2d 145 (1976).

Cited in State v. Mitchell, 283 N.C. 462, 196 S.E.2d 736 (1973).

§ 9-13. Penalty for disobeying summons.

Every person summoned to appear as a juror who has not been excused, and who fails to appear and attend until duly discharged, shall be subject to a fine of not more than fifty dollars ($50.00), to be imposed by the court, unless he renders an excuse deemed sufficient. The forfeiture so imposed if not paid forthwith shall be entered as a judgment against the defaulting juror, and the clerk of superior court shall issue an execution against his estate. (1779, c. 157, s. 4, P. R.; 1783, c. 189, P. R.; 1806, c. 694, P. R.; R. C., c. 31, s. 30; Code, ss. 405, 1734; Rev., s. 1977; C. S., s. 2323; 1967, c. 218, s. 1.)

§ 9-14. Jury sworn; judge decides competency.

The clerk shall, at the beginning of court, swear all jurors who have not been selected as grand jurors. Each juror shall swear or affirm that he will truthfully and without prejudice or partiality try all issues in criminal or civil actions that come before him and render true verdicts according to the evidence. Nothing herein shall be construed to disallow the usual challenges in law to the whole jury so sworn or to any juror; and if by reason of such challenge any juror is withdrawn from a jury being selected to try a case, his place on that jury shall be taken by another qualified juror. The presiding judge shall decide all questions as to the competency of jurors. (1790, c. 321, P. R.; 1822, c. 1133, s. 1, P. R.; R. C., c. 31, s. 34; Code, s. 405; Rev., s. 1966; C. S., s. 2324; 1967, c. 218, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Challenge to Jurors.
III. Competency of Jurors.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

A defendant is not entitled to a jury of his selection or choice but only to a jury selected pursuant to law and without unconstitutional discrimination against a class or substantial group of the community from which the jury panel is drawn. He has no vested right to a particular juror. State v. Atkinson, 275 N.C. 288, 167 S.E.2d 241 (1969), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2283, 29 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1971).

Applied in State v. Boyd, 287 N.C. 131, 214 S.E.2d 14 (1975); State v. Vinson, 287 N.C. 326, 215 S.E.2d 60 (1975); State v. Wetmore, 287 N.C. 344, 215 S.E.2d 51 (1975).

Cited in State v. Waddell, 279 N.C. 442, 183 S.E.2d 644 (1971); State v. Moye, 12 N.C. App. 178, 182 S.E.2d 814 (1971); State v. Zigler, 42 N.C. App. 148, 256 S.E.2d 479 (1979).

II. CHALLENGE TO JURORS.

The right of challenge is not one to accept, but to reject. It is not given for the purpose of enabling the defendant, or the State, to pick a jury, but to secure an impartial one. State v. Allred, 275 N.C. 554, 169 S.E.2d 833 (1969); State v. Chavis, 24 N.C. App. 148, 210 S.E.2d 555 (1974), appeal dismissed, 287 N.C. 261, 214 S.E.2d 434 (1975), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1080, 96 S. Ct. 868, 47 L. Ed. 2d 91 (1976).

Challenges for Cause. — It has been held in many cases that the right to challenge a juror for cause is given to afford a litigant fair opportunity to remove objectionable jurors, and was not intended to enable him to select a jury of his own choosing. See Blevins v. Erwin Cotton Mills, 150 N.C. 493, 64 S.E. 428 (1909). The expression of an opinion is sometimes ground for challenge, but is not if the juror states that the opinion could be eliminated and a fair and impartial verdict rendered. State v. Bailey, 179 N.C. 724, 102 S.E. 406 (1920); State v. Winder, 183 N.C. 776, 111 S.E. 530 (1922). The challenge for this cause can be made only by that party against whom the opinion was formed and expressed. State v. Benton, 19 N.C. 196 (1836).

A juror may be examined as to opinions honestly formed, and honestly expressed, manifesting a bias of judgment, not referable to personal partiality, or malevolence; but if the opinion has been made up and expressed under circumstances which involve dishonor and guilt, and where such expression may be visited with punishment, he ought not to be required to testify so as to incriminate himself. State v. Benton, 19 N.C. 196 (1836); State v. Mills, 91 N.C. 581 (1884).

Other grounds for challenge are relation within the ninth degree of affinity (State v. Potts, 100 N.C. 457, 6 S.E. 657 (1888)); opposition to capital punishment (State v. Vick, 132 N.C. 995, 43 S.E. 626 (1903)); nonresidence (State v. Bullock, 63 N.C. 570 (1869); State v. Upton, 170 N.C. 769, 87 S.E. 328 (1915)); employment by party (Oliphant v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 171 N.C. 303, 88 S.E. 425 (1916)). But in an indictment for illegal sale of liquor, challenges for cause, in that the jurors belonged to the Anti-Saloon League, were properly disallowed, where the jurors had taken no part in prosecuting or aiding in the prosecution of the defendant. State v. Sultan, 142 N.C. 569, 54 S.E. 841 (1906).

The desire of a prospective juror to affirm rather than take an oath is not, of itself, cause for challenge in this State. State v. Atkinson, 275 N.C. 288, 167 S.E.2d 241 (1969), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2283, 29 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1971); State v. Harris, 283 N.C. 46, 194 S.E.2d 796, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 850, 94 S. Ct. 143, 38 L. Ed. 2d 99 (1973).

A juror, who was related to the defendant by blood or marriage within the ninth degree of kinship, was properly rejected when challenged by the State for cause on that ground. State v. Allred, 275 N.C. 554, 169 S.E.2d 833 (1969); State v. Watson, 281 N.C. 221, 188 S.E.2d 289, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1043, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 493 (1972).

A relationship within the ninth degree between a juror and a State's witness, standing alone, is not legal ground for challenge for cause. Where such relationship exists and is known and recognized by the juror, a defendant's challenge for cause should be rejected only if it should appear clearly that, under the circumstances of the particular case, the challenged juror would have no reason or disposition to favor his kinsman by giving added weight to his testimony or otherwise. State v. Allred, 275 N.C. 554, 169 S.E.2d 833 (1969); State v. Watson, 281 N.C. 221, 188 S.E.2d 289, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1043, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 493 (1972).

The trial court did not err in the denial of defendant's challenge for cause directed to the district solicitor's (now district attorney's) father-in-law as a juror, where the challenge was denied only after the juror stated, upon being questioned by the court, that he would not convict on his relationship to the solicitor (now district attorney), and after it was ascertained that the district solicitor (now district attorney) was not prosecuting defendant's case. State v. Watson, 281 N.C. 221, 188 S.E.2d 289, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1043, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 493 (1972).

Excluding Jurors for Opposition to Capital Punishment. — Under the decision of Witherspoon v. Illinois, 391 U.S. 510, 88 S. Ct. 1770, 20 L. Ed. 2d 776 (1968), a sentence of death cannot be carried out if the jury that imposed or recommended it was chosen by excluding veniremen for cause simply because they voiced general objections to the death penalty or expressed conscientious or religious scruples against its infliction. State v. Ruth, 276 N.C. 36, 170 S.E.2d 897 (1969).

Judgment of the superior court sentencing defendant to death for first-degree murder had to be vacated under the decision of Witherspoon v. Illinois, 391 U.S. 510, 88 S. Ct. 1770, 20 L. Ed. 2d 776 (1968), where the trial court allowed the State's challenges for cause to seven prospective jurors who stated simply a general objection to or conscientious scruples against capital punishment, notwithstanding the trial occurred prior to the Witherspoon decision, since that decision was fully retroactive. State v. Ruth, 276 N.C. 36, 170 S.E.2d 897 (1969).

A trial judge should allow challenge for cause when a venireman is not willing to consider all possible penalties provided by State law and when the venireman is unalterably committed to vote against the death penalty, regardless of the evidence which might be presented at trial. State v. Watson, 281 N.C. 221, 188 S.E.2d 289, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1043, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 493 (1972).

In a capital case, if a prospective juror states that under no circumstances could he vote for a verdict that would result in the imposition of the death penalty no matter how aggravated the case and regardless of the evidence shown, the trial court can properly dismiss the juror upon a challenge for cause. State v. Fowler, 285 N.C. 90, 203 S.E.2d 803 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3212, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1212 (1976).

In a capital case a juror may be properly challenged for cause if he indicates he could not return a verdict of guilty knowing the penalty would be death, even though the State proved to him by the evidence and beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused was guilty of the capital crime charged. State v. Honeycutt, 285 N.C. 174, 203 S.E.2d 844 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3205, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1207 (1976).

In a first-degree murder trial where prospective juror stated that knowing that the death penalty would be imposed he did not feel that he could vote for a verdict of guilty even though he was satisfied of defendant's guilt, the trial judge, in his discretion, and at the request of the prospective juror, in excusing the prospective juror did not commit prejudicial error. State v. Waddell, 289 N.C. 19, 220 S.E.2d 293 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

Time of Challenge. — The court may, in its discretion, permit a juror to be challenged by the State for cause, after he has been tendered to the defendant and before the jury is impaneled. State v. Green, 95 N.C. 611 (1886).

Excusing Unchallenged Juror. — The trial judge could excuse a juror, before the jury was impaneled, although the solicitor (now district attorney) had passed him to the defendant and had not challenged him for cause. State v. Vick, 132 N.C. 995, 43 S.E. 626 (1903).

It is the right and duty of the court to see that a competent, fair and impartial jury is inpaneled and, to that end, the court, in its discretion, may excuse a prospective juror without a challenge by either party. It is immaterial that this is done as the result of information voluntarily disclosed by the prospective juror without questioning. State v. Atkinson, 275 N.C. 288, 167 S.E.2d 241 (1969), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2283, 29 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1971); State v. Harris, 283 N.C. 46, 194 S.E.2d 796, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 850, 94 S. Ct. 143, 38 L. Ed. 2d 99 (1973).

It is the duty of the trial judge to see that a competent, fair and impartial jury is impaneled, and to that end the judge may, in his discretion, excuse a prospective juror even without challenge from either party. State v. Waddell, 289 N.C. 19, 220 S.E.2d 293 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

Method of Taking Advantage of Error. — The action of a trial judge in determining the qualifications of a juryman, if erroneous, was ground for a challenge to the array by a motion to quash and set aside the entire panel, and in the absence of such challenge a defendant could not be allowed to take advantage of the alleged error after trial and judgment. State v. Moore, 120 N.C. 570, 26 S.E. 697 (1897).

The erroneous allowance of an improper challenge for cause did not entitle the adverse party to a new trial, so long as only those who were competent and qualified to serve were actually impaneled upon the jury which tried his case. This was especially true where the adverse party did not exhaust his peremptory challenges. State v. Atkinson, 275 N.C. 288, 167 S.E.2d 241 (1969), death sentence vacated,

III. COMPETENCY OF JURORS.

The question of whether a juror is competent is one for the trial judge to determine in his discretion, and his rulings thereon are not reviewable on appeal unless accompanied by some imputed error of law. State v. Blount, 4 N.C. App. 561, 167 S.E.2d 444 (1969); State v. Johnson, 280 N.C. 281, 185 S.E.2d 698 (1972); State v. Watson, 281 N.C. 221, 188 S.E.2d 289, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1043, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 493 (1972); State v. Cameron, 17 N.C. App. 229, 193 S.E.2d 485 (1972), aff'd, 283 N.C. 191, 195 S.E.2d 481 (1973); State v. Harris, 283 N.C. 46, 194 S.E.2d 796, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 850, 94 S. Ct. 143, 38 L. Ed. 2d 99 (1973); State v. Noell, 284 N.C. 670, 202 S.E.2d 750 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 902, 96 S. Ct. 3203, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1205 (1976).

The trial court has broad discretion in the voir dire selection of jurors, and the exercise of the party's right to examine prospective jurors should be carefully supervised by the trial court. State v. Wood, 20 N.C. App. 267, 201 S.E.2d 231 (1973).

The competency of jurors to serve is left largely to the sound legal discretion of the trial judge, and his rulings thereon are not subject to review on appeal unless accompanied by some imputed error of law. State v. Chavis, 24 N.C. App. 148, 210 S.E.2d 555 (1974), appeal dismissed, 287 N.C. 261, 214 S.E.2d 434 (1975), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1080, 96 S. Ct. 868, 47 L. Ed. 2d 91 (1976).

Ruling on motion for competency of jurors is discretionary with the trial judge and will not be reviewed absent a showing of abuse of discretion or an error of law. State v. Moore, 24 N.C. App. 582, 211 S.E.2d 470 (1975).

Decisions as to a juror's competency at the time of selection and his continued competency to serve are matters resting in the trial judge's sound discretion and are not subject to review unless accompanied by some imputed error of law. State v. Waddell, 289 N.C. 19, 220 S.E.2d 293 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

Unquestionably the trial judge is vested with broad discretionary powers in determining the competency of jurors and that discretion will not ordinarily be disturbed on appeal. State v. Lee, 292 N.C. 617, 234 S.E.2d 574 (1977).

Review of Discretion. — The rulings of the judge on questions as to the competency of jurors are not subject to review on appeal unless accompanied by some imputed error of law. State v. DeGraffenreid, 224 N.C. 517, 31 S.E.2d 523 (1944); State v. Davenport, 227 N.C. 475, 42 S.E.2d 686 (1947); State v. Suddreth, 230 N.C. 239, 52 S.E.2d 924 (1949); State v. Gibbs, 5 N.C. App. 457, 168 S.E.2d 507 (1969); State v. Johnson, 280 N.C. 281, 185 S.E.2d 698 (1972); State v. Noell, 284 N.C. 670, 202 S.E.2d 750 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 902, 96 S. Ct. 3203, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1205 (1976); State v. Tatum, 291 N.C. 73, 229 S.E.2d 562 (1976); State v. Sweezy, 291 N.C. 366, 230 S.E.2d 524 (1976).

Since a juror during homicide trial had sister of deceased as one of his passengers in a four-mile automobile trip, the defendant moved to set aside the verdict. The juror stated upon oath that he did not know his passenger was the sister of the deceased, and the court found upon investigation that the case was not discussed during the ride. It was held that exception to refusal of motion was not reviewable. State v. Suddreth, 230 N.C. 239, 52 S.E.2d 924 (1949).

The trial court's findings, upon supporting evidence, that persons of defendant's race were not excluded from the petit jury on account of race or color, were conclusive on appeal, and defendant's exception to the overruling of his challenge to the array on that ground presented no reviewable question of law. State v. Reid, 230 N.C. 561, 53 S.E.2d 849, cert. denied, 338 U.S. 876, 70 S. Ct. 138, 94 L. Ed. 537 (1949).

Defendant moved for a new trial on the ground that during the trial he discussed the case with one of the jurors before recognizing him as a juror. The court found that the defendant had not shown that he was in anywise prejudiced by the occurrence, and denied defendant's motion for a new trial. The ruling of the court was not reviewable. State v. Scott, 242 N.C. 595, 89 S.E.2d 153 (1955).

A ruling in respect to the impartiality of a juror presents no question of law for review. State v. Chavis, 24 N.C. App. 148, 210 S.E.2d 555 (1974), appeal dismissed, 287 N.C. 261, 214 S.E.2d 434 (1975), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1080, 96 S. Ct. 868, 47 L. Ed. 2d 91 (1976).

Defendant seeking to establish on appeal that the exercise of judicial discretion constituted reversible error must show harmful prejudice as well as clear abuse of discretion. State v. Young, 287 N.C. 377, 214 S.E.2d 763 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3207, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1208 (1976).

§ 9-15. Questioning jurors without challenge; challenges for cause.

(a) The court, and any party to an action, or his counsel of record shall be allowed, in selecting the jury, to make direct oral inquiry of any prospective juror as to the fitness and competency of any person to serve as a juror, without having such inquiry treated as a challenge of such person, and it shall not be considered by the court that any person is challenged as a juror until the party shall formally state that such person is so challenged.

(b) It shall not be a valid cause for challenge that any juror, regular or supplemental, is not a freeholder or has not paid the taxes assessed against him.

(c) In civil cases if any juror has a suit pending and at issue in the court in which he is serving, he may be challenged for cause, and he shall be withdrawn from the trial panel, and may be withdrawn from the venire in the discretion of the presiding judge. In criminal cases challenges are governed by Article 72, Selecting and Impaneling the Jury, of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes. (1806, c. 694, P. R.; 1868-9, c. 9, s. 7; Code, s. 1728; Rev., s. 1960; 1913, c. 31, ss. 5, 6, 7; C. S., ss. 2316, 2325, 2326; 1933, c. 130; 1967, c. 218, s. 1; 1973, c. 95; 1977, c. 711, s. 11.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 39, as amended by Session Laws 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1147, s. 32, effective July 1, 1978, provides: "This act shall become effective July 1, 1978, and applies to all matters addressed by its provisions without regard to when a defendant's guilt was established or when judgment was entered against him, except that the provisions of this act regarding parole shall not apply to persons sentenced before July 1, 1978."

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

A motion to examine jurors individually, rather than collectively, is directed to the sound discretion which the trial court possesses for regulating the jury selection process. State v. Thomas, 294 N.C. 105, 240 S.E.2d 426 (1978).

Defendant seeking to establish on appeal that the exercise of judicial discretion constituted reversible error must show harmful prejudice as well as clear abuse of discretion. State v. Young, 287 N.C. 377, 214 S.E.2d 763 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3207, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1208 (1976).

II. QUESTIONING PROSPECTIVE JURORS.

A. Nature and Scope of Inquiry.

Purpose of Voir Dire. — The voir dire examination of jurors is a right secured to the defendant by the statutes and has a definite double purpose: first, to ascertain whether there exist grounds for challenge for cause; and, second, to enable counsel to exercise intelligently the peremptory challenges allowed by law. State v. Allred, 275 N.C. 554, 169 S.E.2d 833 (1969); State v. Dawson, 281 N.C. 645, 190 S.E.2d 196 (1972); State v. Carey, 285 N.C. 497, 206 S.E.2d 213 (1974); State v. Young, 287 N.C. 377, 214 S.E.2d 763 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3207, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1208 (1976); In re Will of Worrell, 35 N.C. App. 278, 241 S.E.2d 343, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 90, 244 S.E.2d 263 (1978); State v. Brown, 39 N.C. App. 548, 251 S.E.2d 706, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 302, 254 S.E.2d 923 (1979).

The purpose of the voir dire examination and the exercise of challenges, either peremptory or for cause, is to eliminate extremes of partiality and to assure both the defendant and the State that the persons chosen to decide the guilt or innocence of the accused will reach that decision solely upon the evidence produced at trial. State v. Honeycutt, 285 N.C. 174, 203 S.E.2d 844 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3205, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1207 (1976).

The primary purpose of the voir dire of prospective jurors is to select an impartial jury. State v. Lee, 292 N.C. 617, 234 S.E.2d 574

(1977); In re Will of Worrell, 35 N.C. App. 278, 241 S.E.2d 343 (1978).

Any party to an action, whether civil or criminal, is entitled to inquire into the fitness and competency of any prospective juror. State v. Wood, 20 N.C. App. 267, 201 S.E.2d 231 (1973).

The right of inquiry concerning a prospective juror's competency and fitness to serve may be exercised by or on behalf of the defendant as well as the State. State v. Carey, 285 N.C. 497, 206 S.E.2d 213 (1974).

Each defendant is entitled to full opportunity to face the prospective jurors, make diligent inquiry into their fitness to serve, and to exercise his right to challenge those who are objectionable to him. State v. Boykin, 291 N.C. 264, 229 S.E.2d 914 (1976); State v. Thomas, 294 N.C. 105, 240 S.E.2d 426 (1978).

Voir Dire Should Be Based on Questions Phrased in Witherspoon Language. — Since Witherspoon v. Illinois, 391 U.S. 510, 88 S. Ct. 1770, 20 L. Ed. 2d 776 (1968) has so clearly specified the ultimate questions that must be answered, the voir dire examination of prospective jurors should be based on questions phrased in Witherspoon language, because unless this course is followed, new trials will often be necessary in cases otherwise free from prejudicial error. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975).

Prospective jurors may be asked questions which will elicit information not per se a ground for challenge in order that the party, propounding the question, may exercise intelligently his or its peremptory challenges. State v. Jarrette, 284 N.C. 625, 202 S.E.2d 721 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3205, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1206 (1976).

Questions Regarding Right to Make a Will. — In view of the possibility that many people, for one reason or another, do not agree with the statutory right of a person to make a will, propounders of a will should be allowed to question prospective jurors with respect to their feelings on that question. In re Will of Worrell, 35 N.C. App. 278, 241 S.E.2d 343, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 90, 244 S.E.2d 263 (1978).

Questioning of Jurors by Court or by Counsel. — Although this section assures a defendant of the right to have due inquiry made as to the competency and fitness of any person to serve as a juror, the actual questioning of prospective jurors to elicit the pertinent information may be conducted either by the court or by counsel for the State and counsel for the defendant. The trial judge, in his discretion, may decide which course to pursue in a particular case. State v. Dawson, 281 N.C. 645, 190 S.E.2d 196 (1972); State v. Harris, 283 N.C. 46, 194 S.E.2d 796, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 850, 94 S. Ct. 143, 38 L. Ed. 2d 99 (1973); State v. Girley, 27 N.C. App. 388, 219 S.E.2d 301 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 141, 220 S.E.2d 799 (1976).

Prohibiting Ambiguous or Confusing Questions. — Discretion over the inquiry on voir dire was properly exercised when the trial court prohibited ambiguous or confusing hypothetical questions. State v. Denny, 294 N.C. 294, 240 S.E.2d 437 (1978).

Refusal of Court to Ask Question Requested by Counsel. — If the court, when it conducted the questioning, declined to ask a question requested by the defendant's counsel, an exception should have been noted so that an appellate court could consider the propriety, pertinence and substance of such question. This procedure avoids repetitive questioning without precluding or restricting any inquiry suggested and requested by defendant's counsel, and is not violative of this section or otherwise objectionable. State v. Dawson, 281 N.C. 645, 190 S.E.2d 196 (1972).

Effect of District Attorney's Improper Statements During Voir Dire. — In a capital case, improper statements made by a district attorney in the presence of prospective jurors during their voir dire examination may well be as prejudicial as a similar statement made by him during argument to the jury. State v. Hines, 286 N.C. 377, 211 S.E.2d 201 (1975).

Regulation of Voir Dire Rests in Trial Judge's Discretion. — Counsel's exercise of the right to inquire into the fitness of jurors is subject to the trial judge's close supervision, and the regulation of the manner and the extent of the inquiry rests largely in the trial judge's discretion. State v. Bryant, 282 N.C. 92, 191 S.E.2d 745 (1972), cert. denied, 410 U.S. 958, 93 S. Ct. 1432, 35 L. Ed. 2d 691 (1973).

Regulation of the manner and the extent of the inquiry on voir dire rests largely in the trial judge's discretion. State v. Young, 287 N.C. 377, 214 S.E.2d 763 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3207, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1208 (1976).

Counsel's exercise of the right to inquire into the fitness of jurors is subject to the trial judge's close supervision. The regulation of the manner and the extent of the inquiry rests largely in the trial judge's discretion. State v. Boykin, 291 N.C. 264, 229 S.E.2d 914 (1976).

The manner and extent of the inquiry of prospective jurors are matters committed largely to the discretion of the trial judge and are subject to his close supervision. State v. Denny, 294 N.C. 294, 240 S.E.2d 437 (1978).

Judge's Discretion Subject to Review. — While the regulation of the manner and extent of the inquiry on voir dire rests largely in the trial judge's discretion, his exercise of discretion is not absolute and is subject to review on appeal. In re Will of Worrell, 35 N.C. App. 278, 241 S.E.2d 343, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 90, 244 S.E.2d 263 (1978).

B. Concerning Capital Punishment.

Examining Jurors Attitudes. — In order to ensure a fair trial before an unbiased jury, it is entirely proper in a capital case for both the State and the defendant to make appropriate inquiry concerning a prospective juror's moral or religious scruples, beliefs, and attitudes toward capital punishment. State v. Honeycutt, 285 N.C. 174, 203 S.E.2d 844 (1974), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 903, 96 S. Ct. 3205, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1207 (1976); State v. Hunt, 289 N.C. 403, 222 S.E.2d 234, death sentence vacated, 429 U.S. 809, 97 S. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1976).

In a capital case both the State and the defendant may, on the voir dire examination of prospective jurors, make inquiry concerning a prospective juror's moral or religious scruples, his beliefs and attitudes toward capital punishment, to the end that both the defendant and the State may be ensured a fair trial before an unbiased jury. State v. Britt, 285 N.C. 256, 204 S.E.2d 817 (1974).

In many capital cases solicitors (now district attorneys) may ask prospective jurors whether they have moral or religious scruples against capital punishment, and if so, whether they are willing to consider all of the penalties provided by law, or are irrevocably committed to vote against a verdict carrying the death penalty regardless of the facts and circumstances that might be revealed by the evidence. State v. Carey, 285 N.C. 497, 206 S.E.2d 213 (1974).

There was no error in permitting questions to be propounded to prospective jurors concerning their views about the death penalty. State v. Williams, 286 N.C. 422, 212 S.E.2d 113 (1975).

Subject to Trial Judge's Control and Supervision. — The extent of the inquiries to prospective jurors concerning their attitudes toward capital punishment remains under the control and supervision of the trial judge. State v. Williams, 286 N.C. 422, 212 S.E.2d 113 (1975).

III. CHALLENGES FOR CAUSE.

The right to challenge is not given so as to allow a party to pick a jury, but so that he may obtain an impartial jury. State v. Bryant, 282 N.C. 92, 191 S.E.2d 745 (1972), cert. denied, 410 U.S. 958, 93 S. Ct. 1432, 35 L. Ed. 2d 691 (1973).

Excluding Jurors for Opposition to Capital Punishment. — If a prospective juror states that under no circumstances could he vote for a verdict that would result in the imposition of the death penalty no matter how aggravated the case and regardless of the evidence shown, the trial court can properly dismiss the juror upon a challenge for cause. State v. Avery, 286 N.C. 459, 212 S.E.2d 142 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3209, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1209 (1976).

Jurors who indicated they were irrevocably committed to vote against a verdict carrying the death penalty regardless of the facts and circumstances that might be revealed by the evidence were properly excused for cause. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975); State v. Foddrell, 291 N.C. 546, 231 S.E.2d 618 (1977).

Where juror voiced general reservations about the death penalty, but made no affirmative, unequivocal statement that she was unwilling to consider the death penalty or that she was irrevocably committed to vote against it regardless of the facts and circumstances that might be revealed by the evidence, she was erroneously excused for cause. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975).

In a first-degree murder trial where prospective juror stated that knowing that the death penalty would be imposed he did not feel that he could vote for a verdict of guilty even though he was satisfied of defendant's guilt, the trial judge, in his discretion, and at the request of the prospective juror, in excusing the prospective juror did not commit prejudicial error. State v. Waddell, 289 N.C. 19, 220 S.E.2d 293 (1975), death sentence vacated, 428 U.S. 904, 96 S. Ct. 3211, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1210 (1976).

It is settled law that a challenge for cause should be sustained where the veniremen challenged states unmistakably that he would, by reason of the death penalty, automatically vote against conviction without regard to any evidence developed at trial. State v. Smith, 291 N.C. 505, 231 S.E.2d 663 (1977).

Veniremen may not be challenged for cause simply because they voice general objections to the death penalty or express conscientious or religious scruples against its infliction. State v. Foddrell, 291 N.C. 546, 231 S.E.2d 618 (1977).

Erroneous allowance of an improper challenge for cause did not entitle the adverse party to a new trial, so long as only those who were competent and qualified to serve were actually impaneled upon the jury which tried his case. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975).

Excusal of Juror without Challenge by Party. — In spite of the last phrase of subsection (a) of this section, it is the right and duty of the court to see that a competent, fair and impartial jury is impaneled and, to that end, the court, in its discretion, may excuse a prospective juror without a challenge by either party. State v. Smith, 290 N.C. 248, 226 S.E.2d 10, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 932, 97 S. Ct. 339, 50 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1976).

IV. DISQUALIFIED JURORS.

Subsection (c) is designed to protect the prospective juror's adversary in his pending case rather than to protect parties to cases in which he might serve as a juror. State

v. Williams, 293 N.C. 102, 235 S.E.2d 248 (1977).

Subsection (c) subjects a litigant rather than a witness to disqualification as a juror when he has a suit pending and at issue in the court in which he is called to serve as a juror. State v. Williams, 293 N.C. 102, 235 S.E.2d 248 (1977).

§ 9-16. Exemption from civil arrest.

No sheriff or other officer shall arrest under civil process any juror during his attendance at or going to and returning from any session of the superior or district court. Any such arrest shall be invalid, and the defendant on motion shall be discharged. (1779, c. 157, s. 10, P. R.; R. C., c. 31, s. 31; Code, s. 1735; Rev., s. 1979, C. S., s. 2328; 1967, c. 218, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Section Does Not Repeal Common-Law Exemption. — This section does not by implication repeal the common-law exemption of nonresidents from service of process while in the State in attendance in court either as witnesses or as suitors. Cooper v. Wyman, 122 N.C. 784, 29 S.E. 947 (1898). See Greenlief v. People's Bank, 133 N.C. 292, 45 S.E. 638 (1903).

§ 9-17. Jurors impaneled to try case furnished with accommodations; separation of jurors.

A jury, impaneled to try any cause, shall be put in charge of an officer of the court and shall be furnished with such accommodations as the court may order, and the accommodations shall be paid for by the parties or by the State, as ordered by the presiding judge. When sequestration of the jury is ordered in a criminal case, however, the State shall pay for all accommodations of jurors.

The presiding judge, in his discretion, may direct any jury to be sequestered while it has a case or issue under consideration. (1876-7, c. 173; Code, s. 1736; 1889, c. 44; Rev., s. 1978, C. S., s. 2327; 1947, c. 1007, s. 2; 1967, c. 218, s. 1; 1977, c. 711, s. 12.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 39, as amended by Session Laws 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1147, s. 32, effective July 1, 1978, provides: "This act shall become effective July 1, 1978, and applies to all matters addressed by its provisions without regard to when a defendant's guilt was established or when judgment was entered against him, except that the provisions of this act regarding parole shall not apply to persons sentenced before July 1, 1978."

CASE NOTES

No Federal Constitutional Issue Presented. — Petitioner's contention that he was denied a fair and impartial trial in that the jurors were not sequestered does not present a federal constitutional issue. It is a matter of state procedural law and does not reach constitutional proportions. Baldwin v. Blackledge, 330 F. Supp. 183 (E.D.N.C. 1971).

Whether or not a jury is to be sequestered is within the discretion of the trial court. There being no showing of an obvious abuse of discretion, the matter is not subject to review. Baldwin v. Blackledge, 330 F. Supp. 183 (E.D.N.C. 1971).

A motion for the sequestration of witnesses is addressed to the discretion of the court. State v. Monk, 291 N.C. 37, 229 S.E.2d 163 (1976).

Effect on Verdict of Refusal to Furnish Refreshments. — Where a jury retired at 11 A.M., to consider their verdict, which was returned at 3 P.M. such verdict could not be impeached on the grounds that the sheriff declined to give them refreshments, except water, until they agreed on a verdict, or until the judge should tell him to take them to dinner. Gaither v. Hascall-Richards Steam Generator Co., 121 N.C. 384, 28 S.E. 546 (1897).

Applied in State v. Swift, 290 N.C. 383, 226 S.E.2d 652 (1976).

§ 9-18. Alternate jurors.

(a) Civil Cases. Whenever the presiding judge deems it appropriate, one or more alternate jurors may be selected in the same manner as the regular trial panel of jurors in the case. Each party shall be entitled to two peremptory challenges as to each such alternate juror, in addition to any unexpended challenges the party may have after the selection of the regular trial panel. Alternate jurors shall be sworn and seated near the jury with equal opportunity to see and hear the proceedings and shall attend the trial at all times with the jury and shall obey all orders and admonitions of the court to the jury. When the jurors are ordered kept together in any case, the alternate jurors shall be kept with them. An alternate juror shall receive the same compensation as other jurors and, except as hereinafter provided, shall be discharged upon the final submission of the case to the jury. If before that time any juror dies, becomes incapacitated or disqualified, or is discharged for any reason, an alternate juror shall become a part of the jury and serve in all respects as those selected on the regular trial panel. If more than one alternate juror has been selected, they shall be available to become a part of the jury in the order in which they were selected.

(b) Criminal Cases. Procedures relating to alternate jurors in criminal cases are governed by Article 72, Selecting and Impaneling the Jury, of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes. (1931, c. 103; 1939, c. 35; 1951, cc. 82, 1043; 1967, c. 218, s. 1; 1977, c. 406, ss. 3-5; c. 711, s. 13; 1979, c. 711, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, c. 406, s. 8, provides: "The provisions of this act shall apply to murders committed on or after the effective date of this act."

Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 39, as amended by Session Laws 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1147, s. 32, effective July 1, 1978, provides: "This act shall become effective July 1, 1978, and applies to all matters addressed by its provisions without regard to when a defendant's guilt was established or when judgment was entered against him, except that the provisions of this act regarding parole shall not apply to persons sentenced before July 1, 1978."

CASE NOTES

The essential attributes of trial by jury guaranteed by former N.C. Const., Art. I, § 13 (now see N.C. Const., Art. I, § 24), are the number of jurors, their impartiality and a unanimous verdict, the alternate not being technically a juror until a member of the jury has died or been discharged and the alternate is made a juror by order of the court, and the verdict being finally returned by the unanimous verdict of 12 good and lawful persons. State v. Dalton, 206 N.C. 507, 174 S.E. 422 (1934).

Requirements of this section and N.C. Const., Art. I, § 24 are mandatory. State v. Bindyke, 288 N.C. 608, 220 S.E.2d 521 (1975).

Defendant Cannot Assent to Trial by More Than 12 Jurors. If a defendant in a felony trial cannot consent to a trial by fewer than 12 jurors, it is clear that he cannot assent to deliberations by more than 12. State v. Rowe, 30 N.C. App. 115, 226 S.E.2d 231 (1976).

Participation of Alternate Juror in Deliberation is Error. — A decision that a deliberation by 13 jurors is error is compelled both by this section and by the appellate decisions of the State. State v. Alston, 21 N.C. App. 544, 204 S.E.2d 860 (1974).

Alternate Juror's Presence in Jury Room Reversible Error Per Se. — Where the alternate juror was not discharged when the jury retired as required by this section, and although the record showed that the court corrected its mistake after only three or four minutes had elapsed, and the alternate did not participate in the deliberation and verdict of the other 12, his brief visit to the jury room was reversible error per se. State v. Bindyke, 288 N.C. 608, 200 S.E.2d 521 (1975); State v. Rowe, 30 N.C. App. 115, 226 S.E.2d 231 (1976).

At any time an alternate juror is in the jury room during deliberations, he participates by his presence and, whether he says little or nothing, his presence will void the trial. State v. Rowe, 30 N.C. App. 115, 226 S.E.2d 231 (1976).

The presence of an alternate juror, either during the entire period of deliberation preceding the verdict, or his presence at any time during the deliberations of the 12 regular jurors, is a fundamental irregularity of constitutional proportions which requires a mistrial or vitiates the verdict, if rendered. And this is the result notwithstanding the fact that the defendant's counsel consented, or failed to object, to the presence of the alternate. State v. Rowe, 30 N.C. App. 115, 226 S.E.2d 231 (1976).

The presence of an alternate juror in the jury room during the jury's deliberations violates N.C. Const., Art. I, § 24 of the State Constitution and this section, and constitutes reversible error per se. State v. Turner, 48 N.C. App. 606, 269 S.E.2d 270 (1980).

If alternate juror's presence in jury room is inadvertent and momentary, and it occurs under circumstances from which it can be clearly seen or immediately determined that the jury has not begun its function as a separate entity, then the rule of per se reversible error is not applicable. State v. Bindyke, 288 N.C. 608, 220 S.E.2d 521 (1975).

Inquiry into Effect of Presence of Alternate Juror. — If the judge, from his trial experience and knowledge of the circumstances of the particular case, believes it probable that the jury has not begun its consideration of the evidence, he may properly recall the jury and the alternate and, in open court, inquire of them whether there had been any discussion of the case. If the answer is "no," the alternate will be excused and the jury returned to consider its verdict. If the answer is "yes," there must be a mistrial. No inquiry into the extent or nature of the deliberations is permissible. State v. Bindyke, 288 N.C. 608, 220 S.E.2d 521 (1975).

Quoted in State v. Fox, 277 N.C. 1, 175 S.E.2d 561 (1970).

Article 3.

Peremptory Challenges.

§ 9-19. Peremptory challenges in civil cases.

The clerk, before a jury is impaneled to try the issues in any civil suit, shall read over the names of the prospective jurors in the presence and hearing of the parties or their counsel; and the parties, or their counsel for them, may challenge peremptorily eight jurors without showing any cause therefor, and the challenges shall be allowed by the court. (1796, c. 452, s. 2, P. R.; 1812, c. 833, P. R.; R. C., c. 31, s. 35; Code, s. 406; Rev., s. 1964; C. S., s. 2331; 1935, c. 475, s. 1; 1965, c. 1182; 1967, c. 218, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Peremptory Challenge Defined. — A peremptory challenge is a challenge which may be made or omitted according to the judgment, will, or caprice of the party entitled thereto, without assigning any reason therefor, or being required to assign a reason therefor. State ex rel. Freeman v. Ponder, 234 N.C. 294, 67 S.E.2d 292 (1951).

Reasons for Challenge Need Not Be Given. — A party's reason for peremptorily challenging cannot be inquired into. Dupree v. Virginia Home Ins. Co., 92 N.C. 417 (1885).

Not a Right to Select Jurors. — As in the case of challenges for cause, the right is given to challenge but such right does not constitute the right to select jurors. Ives v. Atlantic & N.C.R.R., 142 N.C. 131, 55 S.E. 74 (1906); Medlin v. Simpson, 144 N.C. 397, 57 S.E. 24 (1907).

A litigant cannot exercise more peremptory challenges than the number allowed to him by law. State ex rel. Freeman v. Ponder, 234 N.C. 294, 67 S.E.2d 292 (1951).

Number of Plaintiffs or Defendants Immaterial. — Whether there are one or more plaintiffs or defendants, only eight peremptory challenges to the jury on either side are allowable. Bryan v. Harrison, 76 N.C. 360 (1877); State ex rel. Freeman v. Ponder, 234 N.C. 294, 67 S.E.2d 292 (1951).

In a quo warranto proceeding, the general stautory right to eight peremptory challenges devolving upon the relators as all the parties on one side of the case was not annulled or impaired by their assertion that justice lay with one of the defendants or by the latter's concurrence in that assertion. State ex rel. Freeman v. Ponder, 234 N.C. 294, 67 S.E.2d 292 (1951).

Challenge After Acceptance. — Where a juror has been accepted it is error to permit a peremptory challenge. Dunn v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 131 N.C. 446, 42 S.E. 862 (1902).

§ 9-20. Civil cases having several defendants; challenges apportioned; discretion of judge.

When there are two or more defendants in a civil action, the presiding judge, if it appears that there are antagonistic interests between the defendants, may in his discretion apportion among the defendants the challenges now allowed by law, or he may increase the number of challenges to not exceeding six for each defendant or class of defendants representing the same interest. In either event, the same number of challenges shall be allowed each defendant or class of defendants representing the same interest. The decision of the judge as to the nature of the interests and number of challenges shall be final. (1905, c. 357; Rev., s. 1965; C. S., s. 2332; 1967, c. 218, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Decision of Trial Judge is Final. — This section, which creates the exception to the general rule laid down by § 9-19 regarding peremptory challenges, clothes with finality the decision of the trial judge as to how many challenges the several defendants will be allowed. State ex rel. Freeman v. Ponder, 234 N.C. 294, 67 S.E.2d 292 (1951).

§ 9-21. Peremptory challenges in criminal cases governed by Chapter 15A.

Peremptory challenges in criminal cases are governed by Article 72, Selecting and Impaneling the Jury, of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes. (22 Hen. VIII, c. 14, s. 6; 33 Edw. The Secretary of State may, from time to time, at his discretion, appoint one or more fit persons in every county to act as notaries public and shall issue to each a commission upon payment of a fee of ten dollars ($10.00). The commission shall show that it is for a term of five years and shall show the effective date and the date of expiration. The term of the commission shall be computed by including the effective date and shall end at midnight of the day preceding the anniversary of the effective date, five years thereafter. The commission shall be sent to the register of deeds of the county in which the appointee lives and a copy of the letter of transmittal to the register of deeds shall be sent to the appointee concerned. The commission shall be retained by the register of deeds until the appointee has qualified in the manner provided in G.S. 10-2.

Any commission so issued by the Secretary of State or his predecessor, shall be revocable by him in his discretion upon complaint being made against such notary public and when he shall be satisfied that the interest of the public will be best served by the revocation of said commission. Whenever the Secretary of State shall have revoked the commission of any notary public appointed by him, or his predecessor in office, it shall be his duty to file with the register of deeds in the county of such notary public a copy of said order and mail a copy of same to said notary public.

Any person holding himself out to the public as a notary public, or any person attempting to act in such capacity after his commission shall have been revoked by the Secretary of State, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined or imprisoned, or both, in the discretion of the court. CASE NOTES

Origin. — The office of notary public has long been known both to the civil and to the common law. State ex rel. Attorney Gen. v. Knight, 169 N.C. 333, 85 S.E. 418 (1915).

In Loan Co. v. Turrell, 19 Ind. 469, it was said: "The office originated in the early Roman jurisprudence, and was known in England before the Conquest." State ex rel. Attorney Gen. v. Knight, 169 N.C. 333, 85 S.E. 418 (1915).

Modern Status of Office. — The office of notary public is in most of the states a state office, although in few states it has been regarded as a county office, and its functions, once simple, have now a wider scope. State ex rel. Attorney Gen. v. Knight, 169 N.C. 333, 85 S.E. 418 (1915).

Who Eligible. — It has been said that "at common law a minor is eligible to the position of notary public." State ex rel. Attorney Gen. v. Knight, 169 N.C. 333, 85 S.E. 418 (1915).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Oath of Office for Notary Public. — The notary public to be duly qualified should now take the oath of office before the register of deeds, not the clerk of the superior court. See opinion of Attorney General to Mrs. Susan Lobinger, Governor's Office, 40 N.C.A.G. 605 (1969).

§ 10-2. To qualify before register of deeds; record of qualification.

Upon appearing before the register of deeds to which their commissions were delivered, the notaries shall be duly qualified by taking before the register an oath of office, and the oaths prescribed for officers. Following the administration of the oaths of office, the notary shall place his signature in a book designated as "The Record of Notaries Public." The Record of Notaries Public shall contain the name of the notary, the signature of the notary, the effective date and expiration date of the commission, the date the oath was administered, and the date of revocation if the commission is revoked by the Secretary of State. The information contained in The Record of Notaries Public shall constitute the official record of the qualification of notaries public, and the register of deeds shall deliver the commission to the notary following his qualification and notify the Secretary of State of such qualification. (Code, ss. 3304, 3305; Rev., ss. 2347, 2348; C. S., s. 3173; 1969, ch. 912, s. 2; 1973, c. 680, s. 1.)

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Oath of Office for Notary Public. — The notary public to be duly qualified should now take the oath of office before the register of deeds, not the clerk of the superior court. See opinion of Attorney General to Mrs. Susan Lobinger, Governor's Office, 40 N.C.A.G. 605 (1969).

§ 10-3. Clerks notaries ex officio; may certify own seals.

The clerks of the superior court may act as notaries public, in their several counties, by virtue of their offices as clerks, and may certify their notarial acts under the seals of their respective courts. (1833, c. 7, ss. 1, 2; R. C., c. 75, s. 3; Code, s. 3306; Rev., s. 2349; C. S., s. 3174; 1973, c. 680, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

A clerk of the superior court, is, by virtue of his office, a notary public, and the taking of acknowledgments must be referred to the exercise of his notarial authority. Lawrence v. Hodges, 92 N.C. 672 (1885).

§ 10-4. Register of deeds notary ex officio with respect to certain instruments; to use seal of office.

With respect to instruments offered for registration in their county, the register of deeds and his assistants and deputies may act as notaries public by virtue of their office, and may certify their notarial acts under the seal of the office of the register of deeds. (1969, c. 664, s. 1; 1973, c. 680, s. 1.)

§ 10-5. Powers of notaries public.

(a) Subject to the exception stated in subsection (c), a notary public commissioned under the laws of this State acting anywhere in this State may:

(1) Take and certify the acknowledgment of a contract, release, or separation agreement between a husband or wife as prescribed by the provisions of G.S. 52-10 or 52-10.1, and take and certify the acknowledgment or proof of the execution or signing of any other instrument or writing;
(2) Take affidavits and depositions;
(3) Administer oaths and affirmations, including oaths of office, except when such power is expressly limited to some other public officer;
(4) Protest for nonacceptance or nonpayment, notes, bills of exchange and other negotiable instruments; and
(5) Perform such acts as the law of any other jurisdiction may require of a notary public for the purposes of that jurisdiction.

(b) Any act within the scope of subsection (a) performed in another jurisdiction by a notary public of that jurisdiction has the same force and effect in this State as fully as if such act were performed in this State by a notary public commissioned under the laws of this State.

(c) A notary public who, individually or in any fiduciary capacity, is a party to any instrument, cannot take the proof or acknowledgment of himself in such fiduciary capacity or of any other person thereto.

(d) A notary public who is a stockholder, director, officer, or employee of a corporation is not disqualified to exercise any power, which he is authorized by this section to exercise, with respect to any instrument or other matter to which such corporation is a party or in which it is interested unless he is individually a party thereto. (1866, c. 30; 1879, c. 128; Code, s. 3307; Rev., s. 2350; C. S., s. 3175; 1951, c. 1006, s. 1; 1967, c. 24, s. 22; 1973, c. 680, s. 1; 1977, c. 375, s. 5.)

Legal Periodicals. — For comment on the seal in North Carolina and the need for reform, see 15 Wake Forest L. Rev. 251 (1979).

CASE NOTES

Scope of Powers. — A notary public is recognized by the universal law of civilized and commercial nations; but his powers are confined to the authentication of commercial papers and to the protesting of bills of exchange and the like. Benedict, Hall & Co. v. Hall, 76 N.C. 113 (1877).

By statute in this State the powers of notaries public have been extended beyond those which were incident to the office by the universal law merchant, and pertained to the presentment of bills of exchange for acceptance or payment and the protest thereof for nonpayment or refusal to accept; they may now take and certify the acknowledgment or proof of powers of attorney, mortgages, deeds and other instruments of writing, etc. McNeal Pipe & Foundry Co. v. Woltman, Keith & Co., 114 N.C. 178, 19 S.E. 109 (1894).

Duty in Taking Acknowledgments. — The notary is required "to take and certify the acknowledgment or proof" and this imposes upon him the duty of ascertaining (1) that the persons who present themselves are the grantors in the deed; (2) that they acknowledge the executions of it; (3) that the wife signed the deed freely and voluntarily, and that she voluntarily assents thereto. Young v. Jackson, 92 N.C. 144 (1885); Darden v. Neuse & Trent River Steamboat Co., 107 N.C. 437, 12 S.E. 46 (1890); State ex rel. Attorney Gen. v. Knight, 169 N.C. 333, 85 S.E. 418 (1915).

Acknowledgment Quasi Judicial Act. — An acknowledgment of a deed, taken before a notary public, is a judicial, or at least a quasi judicial, act. Long v. Crews, 113 N.C. 256, 18 S.E.499 (1893).

Protest as Evidence. — The protest of a notary establishes the facts stated in it in respect to each and all of these points to the full extent the notary could do it if he were examined as a witness and were believed. McNeal Pipe & Foundry Co. v. Woltman, Keith & Co., 114 N.C. 178, 19 S.E. 109 (1894).

This was for convenience of commerce and to dispense with the necessity of bringing witnesses from a distance or of taking depositions to prove the facts certified to in the protest, the certificate being prima facie true. Elliott v. White, 51 N.C. 98 (1858); McNeal Pipe & Foundry Co. v. Woltman, Keith & Co., 114 N.C. 178, 19 S.E. 109 (1894).

Certificate Prima Facie Evidence. — The certificate of the notary established prima facie that electors were sworn as required by statute when they signed the affidavits accompanying their absentee ballots. State ex rel. Owens v. Chaplin, 229 N.C. 797, 48 S.E.2d 37 (1948).

With the extension of the powers of notaries to take probate of deeds, the same quality attaches to their certificates of probate or acknowledgment; it is prima facie evidence of the truth of its pertinent recitals. McNeal Pipe & Foundry Co. v. Woltman, Keith & Co., 114 N.C. 178, 19 S.E. 109 (1894).

Not Disqualified to Act Because Employee of Grantee. — A notary public was not disqualified to take acknowledgment of grantors and privy examination of married women to conveyances of land when he was an employee of the grantee, without any interest in the land conveyed. Smith v. Ayden Lumber Co., 144 N.C. 47, 56 S.E. 555 (1907).

Incurable Incompetency. — Where a notary public was interested in a deed of trust, he was disqualified to take the acknowledgment, his attempted action was a nullity, and such defect could not be cured by probate upon such acknowledgment before the clerk and registration. Long v. Crews, 113 N.C. 256, 18 S.E. 499 (1893).

§ 10-6. May exercise powers in any county.

Notaries public have full power and authority to perform the functions of their office in any and all counties of the State, and full faith and credit shall be given to any of their official acts wheresoever the same shall be made and done. CASE NOTES

Fees Created by Statute. — The fees of notaries public are created and regulated by statute. Price & Luca Cider & Vinegar Co. v. Carroll, 124 N.C. 555, 32 S.E. 959 (1899).

§ 10-9. Official acts of notaries public; signatures; appearance of names; notarial stamps or seals; expiration of commissions.

Official acts of notaries public in the State of North Carolina shall be attested:

(1) By their proper signatures;

(2) By the readable appearance of their names, either from their signatures or otherwise;

(3) By the clear and legible appearance of their notarial stamps or seals;

(4) By a statement of the date of expiration of their commissions; provided, that the failure to comply with the provisions of subdivisions (2) and (4) shall not invalidate their official acts. (Rev., s. 2352; C. S., s. 3179; 1953, c. 836; 1961, c. 733; 1967, c. 984; 1973, c. 680, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Courts Take Judicial Notice. — It was said in Pierce v. Indseth, 106 U.S. 546, 1 S. Ct. 418, 27 L. Ed. 254 (1882): "The court will take judicial notice of the seals of notaries public, for they are officers recognized by the commercial law of the world." State ex rel. Attorney Gen. v. Knight, 169 N.C. 333, 85 S.E. 418 (1915).

Name in Seal. — The statute authorizing a notary public to take acknowledgment of deeds does not require that his name or any name shall be used in the notarial seal, and the seal appended to the certificate is presumably his in the absence of evidence to the contrary; hence, where the fact of the execution of deed by a notary public was adjudged to have been proved by such seal and certificate, it was not rebutted by the mere fact that the notary signed his name, "Geo. Theo. Somner" and the seal had on it the name of "Theo. Somner." Deans v. Pate, 114 N.C. 194, 19 S.E. 146 (1894).

Failure to Attest by Seal. — A motion for judgment for want of an answer was properly allowed when the complaint was duly verified and what purported to be the verification of the answer was attested only by a person signing his name with the letters "N. P." added thereto, but without an official seal. Tucker v. Inter-States Life Ass'n, 112 N.C. 796, 17 S.E. 532 (1893).

The acknowledgment of a deed before a notary public in due form is not defective because not attested by his notarial seal. Peel v. Corey, 196 N.C. 79, 144 S.E. 559 (1928).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Notarial Stamp Need Not Contain the Word "Stamp". — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Mark Stewart, Guilford County Register of Deeds, 40 N.C.A.G. 604 (1970), issued prior to the 1973 revision of this Chapter.

It Is Essential That Notary Specify Expiration Date of His Commission. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Alex T. Wood, Register of Deeds, Franklin County, 41 N.C.A.G. 225 (1971), issued prior to the 1973 revision of this Chapter.

§ 10-10. Notarial stamp or seal.

It shall be the duty of a notary public to replace a seal which has become so worn that it can no longer clearly show or legibly reproduce under photographic methods the information required by this section. Provided, that a notary public appointed prior to July 1, 1973, who has adopted and is using a seal which does not meet the requirements of this section, shall be entitled to continue to use such seal until the expiration of his current commission. § 10-12. Acts of certain notaries prior to qualification or after expiration of commission validated.

(a) All acknowledgments taken and other official acts done by any person who has heretofore been appointed or reappointed as a notary public, but who at the time of acting had failed to qualify as provided by law, shall, notwithstanding, be in all respects valid and sufficient; and property conveyed by instruments in which the acknowledgments were taken by such notary public are hereby validated and shall convey the properties therein purported to be conveyed as intended thereby.

(b) All acknowledgments taken and other official acts done by any person who has heretofore been appointed as a notary public, but whose commission has expired at the time of acting, shall be in all respects valid and sufficient. Instruments conveying property acknowledged by this notary public are validated and convey the properties they purport to convey. "Section 2 of this act shall apply only to those acts performed on or before the effective date of this act." The act was ratified March 29, 1979 and made effective on ratification.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment designated the former provisions of this section as subsection (a), inserted "or reappointed" following "heretofore been appointed" near the beginning of subsection (a), and added subsection (b).

Session Laws 1981, c. 164, ss. 3 and 4, provide that nothing contained in the act shall affect pending litigation, and that the act shall apply only to those acts performed on or before the effective date of the act.

§ 10-13. Acts of notaries public in certain instances validated.

The acts of any person heretofore performed after appointment as a notary public and prior to qualification as a notary public or upon reappointment and prior to qualification:

(1) In taking any acknowledgment, or

(2) In notarizing any instrument, are all hereby declared to be valid and of the same legal effect as if such person had qualified as a notary public prior to performing any such acts. (1947, c. 313; 1949, c. 1; 1965, c. 37; 1969, c. 716, s. 1; 1971, c. 229, s. 1; 1973, c. 680, s. 1; 1977, c. 734, s. 1; 1979, c. 226, s. 2.)

§ 10-14. Validation of acknowledgment wherein expiration of notary's commission erroneously stated.

All deeds, deeds of trust, mortgages, conveyances, affidavits, and all other paper writings similar or dissimilar to those enumerated herein, whether or not permitted or required to be recorded or filed under the laws of this State heretofore or hereafter executed, bearing an official act of a notary public in which the date of the notary's commission is erroneously stated, are, together with all subsequent acts or actions taken thereon, including but not limited to probate and registration, hereby declared in all respects to be valid to the extent as if the correct expiration date had been stated and shall be binding on the parties of such paper writings and their privies; and such paper writings, together with their certificates may, if otherwise competent, be read in evidence as a muniment of title for all intents and purposes in any of the courts of this State: provided, that at the date of such official act the notary's commission was actually in force. (1961, c. 483; 1973, c. 680, s. 1.)

Article 1.

General Provisions.

§ 11-1. Oaths to be administered with solemnity.

Whereas, lawful oaths for the discovery of truth and establishing right are necessary and highly conducive to the important end of good government; and being most solemn appeals to Almighty God, as the omniscient witness of truth and the just and omnipotent avenger of falsehood, such oaths, therefore, ought to be taken and administered with the utmost solemnity. (1777, c. 108, s. 2, P. R.; R. C., c. 76, s. 1; Rev., s. 2353; C. S., s. 3188.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article entitled, "Toward a Codification of the Law of Evidence in North Carolina", see 16 Wake Forest L. Rev. 669 (1980).

CASE NOTES

The "solemnity" applies not only to the substance of the oath, but to the form and manner of taking it and of administering it. State v. Davis, 69 N.C. 383 (1873).

Double Sanction to Oath of Witness. — The law requires two guarantees of the truth of what a witness is about to state; he must be in the fear of punishment by the laws of man, and he must also be in the fear of punishment by the laws of God, if he states what is false; in other words, there must be a temporal and also a religious sanction to his oath. Shaw v. Moore, 49 N.C. 25 (1856).

Sufficiency of Belief. — A person who believes in the obligation of an oath on the Bible; who believes in God and Jesus Christ, and that God will punish in this world, all violators of his law, and that the sinner will inevitably be punished in this world for each and every sin committed; but there will be no punishment after death, and that in another world all will be happy and equal to the angels, is competent to be sworn. Shaw v. Moore, 49 N.C. 25 (1856).

In Omychund v. Barker, 1 Atk. 19, and Wiles, 538, it was decided that a Gentoo, who was an infidel, who did not believe in either the Old or New Testament, but who believed in a God, as the Creator of the Universe, and that he is a rewarder of those who do well, and an avenger of those who do ill, according to the common law, may be sworn in that form which is the most sacred and obigatory upon his religious sense. The case establishes the rule to be, that an infidel is competent to be sworn, provided he believes in the existence of a Supreme Being, who punishes the wicked, without reference to the time of punishment. Shaw v. Moore, 49 N.C. 25 (1856).

Finding of the Judge Conclusive. — The finding of the judge as to the competency of a witness to take oath is conclusive, and not reviewable. State v. Pitt, 166 N.C. 268, 80 S.E. 1060 (1914).

Objection to Manner of Administering after Verdict. — Where a juror was sworn in the presence of the defendant, and his counsel let him acquiesce in the manner in which the oath was taken, to object after the verdict would simply make a trial not a decision upon the merits but a series of pitfalls for the State. Not having spoken when he was called upon to speak, the prisoner should not be heard after the verdict has gone against him. State v. Ward, 9 N.C 443 (1823); Briggs v. Byrd, 34 N.C. 377 (1851); State v. Patrick, 48 N.C. 443 (1856); State v. Boon, 82 N.C. 637 (1880); State v. Council, 129 N.C. 511, 39 S.E. 814 (1901).

Failure to Administer. — In State v. Gee, 92 N.C. 756 (1885), where a witness was not sworn at all, the court held that this was not ground of objection after verdict. State v. Council, 129 N.C. 511, 39 S.E. 814 (1901).

Objection to Oath of Incompetent after Verdict. — Where a juror, was incompetent to be sworn because an atheist (State v. Davis, 80 N.C. 412 (1879)) and the objection was not discovered till after verdict, setting aside the verdict rested in the discretion of the trial judge. State v. Lamber, 93 N.C. 618 (1885); State v. Council, 129 N.C. 511, 39 S.E. 814 (1901).

§ 11-2. Administration of oath upon the Gospels.

Judges and other persons who may be empowered to administer oaths, shall (except in the cases in this Chapter excepted) require the party sworn to lay his hand upon the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, in token of his engagement to speak the truth, as he hopes to be saved in the way and method of salvation pointed out in that blessed volume; and in further token that, if he should swerve from the truth, he may be justly deprived of all the blessings of the Gospel, and made liable to that vengeance which he has imprecated on his own head. (1777, c. 108, s. 2, P. R.; R. C., c. 76, s. 1; Code, s. 3309; Rev., s. 2354; C. S., s. 3189; 1941, c. 11; 1971, c. 381, s. 9.)

CASE NOTES

Application to Witnessess. — Every witness, except as otherwise provided, must be sworn in the matter stated in this section. State v. Davis, 69 N.C. 383 (1873).

Sufficiency of Juror's Oath. — An oath administered to a juror in the manner prescribed by statute is sufficient; the juror need not repeat the words "so help me God." State v. Paylor, 89 N.C. 539 (1883).

Ministerial Act. — The administration of an oath is a ministerial act and may be done by anyone in the presence and by the direction of the court, but is the act of the court. State v. Knight, 84 N.C. 789 (1881).

Partially Directory. — As to the form of the oath, when it is prescribed by statute, the statute is to be construed in some sense directory only, so far at least that a departure from the words, in matter not of substance but of form merely, does not exempt the person taking it from the pains of perjury. State v. Mazon, 90 N.C. 676 (1884).

Same—Validity of Irregular Oath. — To hold invalid an oath that did not follow the very words of the statute could prove disastrous to the public interests. State v. Mazon, 90 N.C. 676 (1884).

Same—Juror's Oath in Capital Cases. — Although the omission of the words "you swear" at the commencement of the oath of jurors in a capital case looks awkward and mars the comeliness of judicial proceedings, it does not vitiate the oath. State v. Owen, 72 N.C. 605 (1875).

The manner of swearing is merely a form adapted to the religious belief of the general mass of citizens for the sake of convenience and uniformity. State v. Pitt, 166 N.C. 268, 80 S.E. 1060 (1914).

Presumption. — The administration of an oath to a witness is an official act of the court; and it being shown affirmatively that an oath was administered to the defendant in open court on the Bible, a presumption arises that it was rightly done. State v. Mace, 86 N.C. 668 (1882).

Willful Violation. — The general rule is that a willful violation of such an oath is a material matter is perjury, and no other is. State v. Davis, 69 N.C. 383 (1873).

When Deputy Clerk May Administer.— The deputy of the clerk of the superior court is authorized to take the affidavit of the plaintiff in an action of claim and delivery. Jackson v. Buchanan, 89 N.C. 74 (1883).

A deputy sheriff is not authorized to administer oath to homestead appraisers. Oates v. Munday, 127 N.C. 439, 37 S.E. 457 (1900).

Cited in State v. Beal, 199 N.C. 278, 154 S.E. 604 (1930).

§ 11-3. Administration of oath with uplifted hand.

When the person to be sworn shall be conscientiously scrupulous of taking a book oath in manner aforesaid, he shall be excused from laying hands upon, or touching the Holy Gospel; and the oath required shall be administered in the following manner, namely: He shall stand with his right hand lifted up towards heaven, in token of his solemn appeal to the Supreme God, and also in token that if he should swerve from the truth he would draw down the vengeance of heaven upon his head, and shall introduce the intended oath with these words, namely:

I, A.B., do appeal to God, as a witness of the truth and the avenger of falsehood, as I shall answer the same at the great day of judgment, when the secrets of all hearts shall be known (etc., as the words of the oath may be). (1777, c. 108, s. 3, P. R.; R. C., c. 76, s. 2; Code, s. 3310; Rev., s. 2355; C. S., s. 3190.)

CASE NOTES

Conscientious Scruples. — If the usual form of oaths upon the Holy Evangelists is dispensed with and an "appeal" or "affirmation" is substituted, it must appear that the person sworn had conscientious scruples, else the "appeal" or "affirmation" is invalid. State v. Davis, 69 N.C. 383 (1873); Pearre v. Folb, 123 N.C. 239, 31 S.E. 475 (1898).

Presumption as to Witness. — When a witness comes before a tribunal to be sworn it is to be presumed that he has settled the point with himself in what manner he will be sworn, and he should make it known to the officer of the court; and should he be sworn with uplifted hand, though not conscientiously scrupulous of swearing on the Gospels, and depose falsely, he subjects himself to the pains and penalties of perjury. State v. Whisenhurst, 9 N.C. 458 (1823).

Presumption as to Manner. — Where it appeared that the registrar administered the prescribed oath to electors, but that he did not swear them on the Bible, it would be inferred, in the absence of direct proof to the contrary, that the oath was taken with uplifted hand, as specified by this section, and was accepted as a valid mode of administering it, by both the registrar and the elector. Administering the oath in such manner was sufficient to meet the requirements of the election law. State ex rel. DeBerry v. Nicholson, 102 N.C. 465, 9 S.E. 545 (1889).

Cited in State v. Beal, 199 N. C. 278, 154 S.E. 604 (1930).

§ 11-4. Affirmation of Quakers and others.

The solemn affirmation of Quakers, Moravians, Dunkers and Mennonites, made in the manner heretofore used and accustomed, shall be admitted as evidence in all civil and criminal actions; and in all cases where they are required to take an oath to support the Constitution of the State, or of the United States, or an oath of office, they shall make their solemn affirmation in the words of the oath beginning after the word "swear"; which affirmation shall be effectual to all intents and purposes. (1777, c. 108, s. 4, P. R.; c. 115, s. 42, P. R.; 1819, c. 1019, P. R.; 1821, c. 1112, P. R.; R. C., c. 76, s. 3; Code, s. 3311; Rev., s. 2356; C. S., s. 3191.)

§ 11-5. Oaths of corporations.

In all cases where a corporation is appointed administrator, executor, collector, or to any other fiduciary position, of which fiduciary an oath is required by law, such oath may be taken by such corporation by and through any officer or agent of said corporation who is authorized by law to verify pleadings in behalf of such corporation; and any oath so taken shall be valid as the oath of such corporation. Any oath heretofore taken in the manner aforesaid in behalf of a corporation as such fiduciary is hereby validated as the oath of such corporation. (1919, c. 89, ss. 1, 2; C. S., s. 3192.)

§ 11-6. Oath to support Constitution of United States; all officers to take.

All members of the General Assembly, and all officers who shall be elected or appointed to any office of trust or profit within the State, shall, agreeably to act of Congress, take the following oath or affirmation:

I, A.B., do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be) that I will support the Constitution of the United States; so help me, God.)

Which oath shall be taken before they enter upon the execution of the duties of the office. (1791, c. 342, s. 2, P. R.; R. C., c. 76, s. 5; Code, s. 3313; Rev., s. 2357; C. S., s. 3193.)

CASE NOTES

Oath Incidental. — The oath required of public officers is merely incidental to and constitutes no part of the office. State ex rel. Clark v. Stanley, 66 N.C. 59 (1872).

Failure to Take Oath. — Public officers who have not taken the required oaths of office are not entitled to the salaries attached to such offices. Wiley v. Worth, 61 N.C. 171 (1867).

§ 11-7. Oath or affirmation to support State Constitution; all officers to take.

Every member of the General Assembly, and every person who shall be chosen or appointed to hold any office of trust or profit in the State, shall, before taking his seat or entering upon the execution of the office, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation:

I, A.B., do solemnly and sincerely swear (or affirm) that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to the State of North Carolina, and to the constitutional powers and authorities which are or may be established for the government thereof; and that I will endeavor to support, maintain and defend the Constitution of said State, not inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States, to the best of my knowledge and ability; so help me, God.

Where such person shall be of the people called Quakers, Moravians, Mennonites or Dunkers, he shall take and subscribe the following affirmation:

I, A.B., do solemnly and sincerely declare and affirm that I will truly and faithfully demean myself as a peaceful citizen of North Carolina; that I will be subject to the powers and authorities that are or may be established for the good government thereof, not inconsistent with the Constitution of the State and Constitution of the United States, either by yielding an active or passive obedience thereto, and that I will not abet or join the enemies of the State, by any means, in any conspiracy whatever, against the State; that I will disclose and make known to the legislative, executive or judicial powers of the State all treasonable conspiracies which I shall know to be made or intended against the State. (1781, c. 342, s. 1, P. R.; R. C., c. 76, s. 4; Code, s. 3312; Rev., s. 2358; C. S., s. 3194.)

§ 11-7.1. Who may administer oaths of office.

(a) Except as otherwise specifically required by statute, an oath of office may be administered by:

(1) A justice, judge, magistrate, clerk, assistant clerk, or deputy clerk of the General Court of Justice, a retired justice or judge of the General Court of Justice, or any member of the federal judiciary;

§ 11-8. When deputies may administer.

In all cases where any civil officer, in the discharge of his duties, is permitted by the law to administer an oath, the deputy of such officer, when discharging such duties, shall have authority to administer it, provided he is a sworn officer; and the oath thus administered by the deputy shall be as obligatory as if administered by the principal officer, and shall be attended with the same penalties in case of false swearing. (1836, c. 27, s. 2; R. C., c. 76, s. 7; Code, s. 3316; Rev., s. 2359; C. S., s. 3195.)

CASE NOTES

Disclosures Not Prohibited by Grand Jurors' Oath. — The grand jurors' oath of secrecy does not prohibit the disclosure in court of proceedings before the grand jury whenever the ends of justice require it. State v. Colson, 262 N.C. 506, 138 S.E.2d 121 (1964).

Action of the grand jury in returning two fictitious bills of indictment charging undercover agents with narcotics violations, including the undercover agent who was the principal witness against defendant, was improper, but did not necessarily taint all processes of that grand jury so as to require as a matter of law that a bill of indictment charging defendant with transportation of marijuana be quashed. State v. Long, 14 N.C. App. 508, 188 S.E.2d 690 (1972).

The desire of a prospective juror to affirm rather than take an oath is not, of itself, cause for challenge in this State. State v. Atkinson, 275 N.C. 288, 167 S.E.2d 241 (1969), death sentence vacated, 403 U.S. 948, 91 S. Ct. 2283, 29 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1971); State v. Harris, 283 N.C. 46, 194 S.E.2d 796, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 850, 94 S. Ct. 143, 38 L. Ed. 2d 99 (1973).

Jury Need Not Be Resworn for Prosecution of Less than Capital Offense. — Where, upon an indictment charging homicide, the solicitor announced that he was not seeking a higher verdict than murder in the second degree, the prosecution was no longer for a capital offense, and it was not required that the jury be again sworn to try the particular prosecution, but under the provisions of this section it was sufficient that the jurors and all others summoned as jurors for the session of court were administered oath to truly try all issues which would come before the jury during the term. State v. Smith, 268 N.C. 659, 151 S.E.2d 596 (1966), cert. denied, 386 U.S. 1032, 87 S. Ct. 1481, 18 L. Ed. 2d 593 (1967).

Statutory Construction.

Sec.
12-1. [Repealed.]
12-2. Repeal of statute not to affect actions.
12-3. Rules for construction of statutes.
12-3.1. Fees and charges by agencies.
12-4. Construction of amended statute.

§ 12-1: Repealed by Session Laws 1957, c. 783, s. 3.

§ 12-2. Repeal of statute not to affect actions.

The repeal of a statute shall not affect any action brought before the repeal, for any forfeitures incurred, or for the recovery of any rights accruing under such statute. (1830, c. 4; R. C., c. 108, s. 1; 1879, c. 163; 1881, c. 48; Code, s. 3764; Rev., s. 2830; C. S., s. 3948.)

CASE NOTES

Section Not Obligatory. — As the laws of our legislature do not bind another, except insofar as they may be absolute contracts, this section must be taken as merely a rule of construction having no application where the intention of the legislature clearly and explicitly appears to the contrary. Dyer v. Ellington, 126 N.C. 941, 36 S.E. 177 (1900).

General Rule — Prospective Effect. — The general rule is that a statute will be given prospective effect only, unless the law in question clearly forbids such a construction. Corporation of Elizabeth City v. Commissioners of Pasquotank, 146 N.C. 539, 60 S.E. 416 (1908); Mann v. Allen, 171 N.C. 219, 88 S.E. 235 (1916); Waddill v. Masten, 172 N.C. 582, 90 S.E. 694 (1916).

Same — Remedial Legislation. — In case of a remedial legislation, the general rule is not so insistent, and such statutes are not infrequently given retrospective effect where the language permits and such a construction will best promote the meaning and purpose of the legislature. Waddill v. Masten, 172 N.C. 582, 90 S.E. 694 (1916).

Maxim "Leges Posteriores Priores Contrarias Abrogant". — To give operation to the maxim, leges posteriores priores contrarias abrogant, the latter law must be in conflict with the former; therefore, when a later statute is almost in ipsissimis verbis with a former one, there is no repeal of the former. Kesler v. Smith, 66 N.C. 154 (1872).

Repeals by implication are not favored by the law. State v. Williams, 286 N.C. 422, 212 S.E.2d 113 (1975).

Action Commenced before Repeal. — By express terms of this section, the repeal of a statute does not affect an action theretofore commenced under it. Smith v. Morganton Ice Co., 159 N.C. 151, 74 S.E. 961 (1912).

Same — For Penalty or Forfeiture. — Under the provisions of this section a suit for a forfeiture or penalty is not discontinued by a repeal of the statute giving the penalty. State v. Williams, 97 N.C. 455, 2 S.E. 55 (1887); Epps v. Smith, 121 N.C. 157, 28 S.E. 359 (1897); Lexington Grocery Co. v. Southern R.R., 136 N.C. 396, 48 S.E. 801 (1904).

A vested right of action is property in the same sense in which tangible things are property, and is equally protected against interferences. Where it springs from contract, or from the principles of the common law, it is not competent for the legislature to take it away. Williams v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 153 N.C. 360, 69 S.E. 402 (1910).

Limitation of Actions. — While the legislature has the power to extend or reduce the time in which an action may be brought, this is subject to the restriction that when the limitation is shortened, a reasonable time must be given for the commencement of an action before the statute works a bar. Strickland v. Draughan, 91 N.C. 103 (1884).

Repeal after Services Rendered. — Where a statute was in force when certain services were rendered, it was held that the plaintiff's right had become absolute, and no subsequent repeal could invalidate it. Copple v. Commissioners, 138 N.C. 127, 50 S.E. 574 (1905).

Subject Matter Destroyed by Statute Pending Appeal. — Where, pending an appeal, the subject matter of the action is destroyed or a statute giving the cause of action is repealed, the appellate court will not go into consideration of the abstract question as to which party ought to have prevailed, in order to adjudicate the costs but the judgment below as to costs will be allowed to stand. Wikel v. Board of Comm'rs, 120 N.C. 451, 27 S.E. 117 (1897); Brinson v. Duplin County, 173 N.C. 137, 91 S.E. 708 (1917).

Right of Informer. — An informer had, in a certain sense, an inchoate right when he brought his suit, but he had no vested right to the penalty until judgment. Hence, until his right became vested, it could not be destroyed by the legislature. Dyer v. Ellington, 126 N.C. 941, 36 S.E. 177 (1900).

Action to Recover Arrearages of Taxes. — An action pending to recover arrearages of taxes, brought under an act authorizing the collection of unpaid taxes for past years, was not affected by the repeal of such statute. City of Wilmington v. Cronly, 122 N.C. 388, 30 S.E. 9 (1898).

Modes of Procedure. — Statutes which change modes of procedure may govern suits pending at the time of their enactment. Sumner v. Miller, 64 N.C. 688 (1870).

Mere Court Procedure. — The rule that statutes may be construed to have retrospective effect does not prevail when they concern mere matters of court procedure before action instituted, or the substitution or designation of new parties deemed necessary to a proper determination of a controversy or authorized to maintain and enforce a recognized or existent right. Waddill v. Masten, 172 N.C. 582, 90 S.E. 694 (1916).

Changing Rules of Evidence. — An act of the legislature changing the rules of evidence cannot be construed as operating retrospectively so as to affect existing rights. Lowe v. Harris, 112 N.C. 472, 17 S.E. 539 (1893).

General Rule in Criminal Actions. — The repeal of a statute pending a prosecution for an offense which it creates arrests the prosecution and withdraws all authority to pronounce judgment, even after conviction. State v. Williams, 97 N.C. 455, 2 S.E. 55 (1887); State v. Massey, 103 N.C. 356, 9 S.E. 632 (1889).

Where a repealing statute contains a saving clause as to crimes committed prior to the repeal or as to pending prosecutions, the offender may be tried and punished under the old law. State v. Williams, 286 N.C. 422, 212 S.E.2d 113 (1975).

Same — Legislative Authority to Increase Punishment. — The legislature has no more authority to give a retroactive effect to a statute making the punishment for an offense already created more severe, than to subject persons to punishment under a criminal statute passed after the commission of the act for which they may be indicted. The provision of the federal Constitution, which forbids the enactment by a state of any ex post facto law, could, in either event, be invoked for the protection of the person charged. State v. Williams, 97 N.C. 455, 2 S.E. 55 (1887); State v. Ramsour, 113 N.C. 642, 18 S.E. 707 (1893).

§ 12-3. Rules for construction of statutes.

In the construction of all statutes the following rules shall be observed, unless such construction would be inconsistent with the manifest intent of the General Assembly, or repugnant to the context of the same statute, that is to say:

(1) Singular and Plural Number, Masculine Gender, etc. — Every word importing the singular number only shall extend and be applied to several persons or things, as well as to one person or thing; and every word importing the plural number only shall extend and be applied to one person or thing, as well as to several persons or things; and every word importing the masculine gender only shall extend and be applied to females as well as to males, unless the context clearly shows to the contrary.

(2) Authority, to Three or More Exercised by Majority. — All words purporting to give a joint authority to three or more public officers or other persons shall be construed as giving such authority to a majority of such officers or other persons, unless it shall be otherwise expressly declared in the law giving the authority.

(3) "Month" and "Year". — The word "month" shall be construed to mean a calendar month, unless otherwise expressed; and the word "year," a calendar year, unless otherwise expressed; and the word "year" alone shall be equivalent to the expression "year of our Lord." When a statute refers to a period of one or more months and the last month does not have a date corresponding to the initial date, the period shall expire on the last day of the last month.

(4) Leap Year, How Counted. — In every leap year the increasing day and the day before, in all legal proceedings, shall be counted as one day.

(5) "Oath" and "Sworn". — The word "oath" shall be construed to include "affirmation," in all cases where by law an affirmation may be substituted for an oath, and in like cases the word "sworn" shall be construed to include the word "affirmed."

(6) "Person" and "Property". — The word "person" shall extend and be applied to bodies politic and corporate, as well as to individuals, unless the context clearly shows to the contrary. The words "real property" shall be coextensive with lands, tenements and hereditaments. The words "personal property" shall include moneys, goods, chattels, choses in action and evidences of debt, including all things capable of ownership, not descendable to heirs at law. The word "property" shall include all property, both real and personal.

(7) "Preceding" and "Following". — The words "preceding" and "following," when used by way of reference to any section of a statute, shall be construed to mean the section next preceding or next following that in which such reference is made; unless when some other section is expressly designated in such reference.

(8) "Seal". — In all cases in which the seal of any court or public office shall be required by law to be affixed to any paper issuing from such court or office, the word "seal" shall be construed to include an impression of such official seal, made upon the paper alone, as well as an impression made by means of a wafer or of wax affixed thereto.

(9) "Will". — The term "will" shall be construed to include codicils as well as wills.

(10) "Written" and "in Writing". — The words "written" and "in writing" may be construed to include printing, engraving, lithographing, and any other mode of representing words and letters: Provided, that in all cases where a written signature is required by law, the same shall be in a proper handwriting, or in a proper mark.

(11) "State" and "United States". — The word "state," when applied to the different parts of the United States, shall be construed to extend to and include the District of Columbia and the several territories, so called; and the words "United States" shall be construed to include the said district and territories and all dependencies.

(12) "Imprisonment for One Month," How Construed. — The words "imprisonment for one month," wherever used in any of the statutes, shall be construed to mean "imprisonment for thirty days."

(13) "Governor," "Senator," "Solicitor," "Elector," "Executor," "Administrator," "Collector," "Juror," and "Auditor". — The words "Governor," "Senator," "district attorney," "elector," "executor," "administrator," "collector," "juror," "auditor," and any other words of like character shall when applied to the holder of such office, or occupant of such position, be words of common gender, and they shall be a sufficient designation of the person holding such office or position, whether the holder be a man or woman. (21 Hen. III; R. S., c. 31, s. 113; R. C., c. 31, s. 108; c. 108; Code, s. 3765; Rev., s. 2831; C. S., s. 3949; 1921, c. 30; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; 1977, c. 446, s. 4.)

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Words Given Ordinary Meaning. — When construing a statute the words used therein will be given their ordinary meaning, unless it appears from the context that they should be taken in a different sense. Abernethy v. Board of Comm'rs, 169 N.C. 631, 86 S.E. 577 (1915).

Void for Vagueness. — If a statute be so vague in its terms as to convey no definite meaning to the court or a ministerial officer, it is void. State v. Partlow, 91 N.C. 550 (1884).

Words Cannot Be Construed Away. — The court has no power or right to strike out words or to construe them away. Nance v. Southern Ry., 149 N.C. 366, 63 S.E. 116 (1908).

Specific Words Followed by General Words. — Where particular and specific words or acts, the subject of a statute, are followed by general words, the latter must, as a rule, and by a proper interpretation, be confined to acts and things of the same kind. State v. Craig, 176 N.C. 740, 97 S.E. 400 (1918).

Proviso. — As a general rule in the construction of statutes, a proviso will be considered as a limitation upon the general words preceding, and as excepting something therefrom, but this rule is not absolute, and the meaning of the proviso will be ascertained by the language used in it. Traders Nat'l Bank v. Lawrence Mfg. Co., 96 N.C. 298, 3 S.E. 363 (1887).

Proviso Prevails over Purview. — Where a proviso in a statute was directly contrary to the purview of the statute, the proviso was good and not the purview, because the proviso spoke the later intention of the legislature. Orinoco Supply Co. v. Masonic & E. Star Home, 163 N.C. 513, 79 S.E. 964 (1913).

II. DETERMINATION OF INTENT AND MEANING.

A. In General.

When Statute Is Clear. — It is not allowable to interpret what has no need of interpretation, or, where the words have a definite and precise meaning, to go elsewhere in search of conjecture in order to restrict or extend the meaning. Statutes should be read and understood according to the natural and most obvious import of the language without resorting to subtle and forced construction for the purpose of either limiting or extending their operation. Hamilton v. Rathbone, 175 U.S. 414, 20 S. Ct. 155, 44 L. Ed. 2d 219 (1899); Nance v. Southern Ry., 149 N.C. 366, 63 S.E. 116 (1908); State v. Carpenter, 173 N.C. 767, 92 S.E. 373 (1917).

Where the language of a statute is clear and unambiguous there is no room for judicial construction and the courts must give it its plain and definite meaning; the courts are without power to interpolate, or superimpose, provisions and limitations not contained therein. Begley v. Employment Security Comm'n, 50 N.C. App. 432, — S.E.2d — (1981).

When Court May Interpolate Necessary Words. — When it is necessary to carry out the clear meaning of a statute, and to make it sensible and effective, the court may interpolate the words necessary thereto, which were evidently omitted, as appears from the context, or silently understand them to be incorporated in it. Fortune v. Commissioners, 140 N.C. 322, 52 S.E. 950 (1905); Abernethy v. Board of Comm'rs, 169 N.C. 631, 86 S.E. 577 (1915).

Where Language Is of Doubtful Meaning. —In interpreting a statute where the language is of doubtful meaning, the court will reject an interpretation which would make the statute harsh, oppressive, inequitable and unduly restrictive of primary private rights. Nance v. Southern Ry., 149 N.C. 366, 63 S.E. 116 (1908).

A statute should not be construed in such manner as to render it partly ineffective or inefficient if another construction will make it effective. State v. Williams, 286 N.C. 422, 212 S.E.2d 113 (1975).

Law Existing at Time of Enactment. — To discover the true meaning of a statute, consideration should be given the law as it existed at the time of its enactment, the public policy as declared in judicial opinions and legislative acts, the public interest, and the purpose of the act in question. Kendall v. Stafford, 178 N.C. 461, 101 S.E. 15 (1919).

Objects Embraced. — The meaning of a statute in respect to what it has reference and the objects it embraces, as well as in other respects, is to be ascertained by appropriate means and indicia, such as the purposes appearing from the statute taken as a whole, the phraseology, the words ordinary or technical, the law as it prevailed before the statute, the mischief to be remedied, the remedy, the end to be accomplished, statutes in pari materia, the preamble, the title, and other like means. State v. Partlow, 91 N.C. 550 (1884).

Misdescription or Misnomer. — The question was fully considered by the Supreme Court in Fortune v. Commissioners, 140 N.C. 322, 52 S.E. 950 (1905), and the court there said: "A misdescription or misnomer in a statute will not vitiate the enactment or render it inoperative, provided the means of identifying the person or thing intended, apart from the erroneous description, are clear, certain, and convincing." Under this rule we may call to our aid anything in the act itself, or even in the alleged erroneous description, which sufficiently points to something else as furnishing certain evidence of what was meant, though the reference to the extraneous matter may not in itself be full and accurate. The rule, even when literally or strictly construed, does not require that the erroneous description shall be altogether rejected in making the search for the true meaning; but it may be used in connection with anything outside of the statute to which it refers and which itself, when examined, makes the meaning clear. The erroneous description may in this way be helped out by extraneous evidence. Toomey v. Goldsboro Lumber Co., 171 N.C. 178, 88 S.E. 215 (1916).

The title of a statute is no part thereof. State v. Welsh, 10 N.C. 404 (1824). But it may be construed when the meaning is doubtful. State v. Woolard, 119 N.C. 779, 25 S.E. 719 (1896).

It cannot control the text when it is clear. Blue v. McDuffie, 44 N.C. 131 (1852); Jones v. Hartford Ins. Co., 88 N.C. 499 (1883); Hines & Battle v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 95 N.C. 434 (1886); State v. Woolard, 119 N.C. 779, 25 S.E. 719 (1896). This is especially true as to the headings of a section in the Code. Cram v. Cram, 116 N.C. 288, 21 S.E. 197 (1895); In re Chisholm's Will, 176 N.C. 211, 96 S.E. 1031 (1918).

B. Legislative Intent.

Motive and Purpose of Legislature. — If the language of a statute is doubtful, and the intention of the legislature is clear, the former will be construed in the latter; but where the language is plain, the courts cannot look into the motive or purpose of the legislature in the enactment of the law. State v. Eaves, 106 N.C. 752, 11 S.E. 370 (1890).

A statute must be construed, if possible, so as to give effect to every part of it, it being presumed that the legislature did not intend any of its provisions to be surplusage. State v. Williams, 286 N.C. 422, 212 S.E.2d 113 (1975).

Where a literal reading of a statute will lead to absurd results, the reason and purpose of the law shall control and the strict letter thereof shall be disregarded. Taylor v. Crisp, 286 N.C. 488, 212 S.E.2d 381 (1975).

Same — Understanding of Individual. — Whatever may be the views and purposes of those who procure the enactment of a statute, the legislature contemplates that its intention shall be ascertained from its words as embodied in it. And courts are not at liberty to accept the understanding of any individual as to the legislative intent. State v. Boon, 1 N.C. (Taylor) 103 (1801); Drake v. Drake, 15 N.C. 110 (1833); Adams v. Turrentine, 30 N.C. 147 (1847); State v. Melton, 44 N.C. 49 (1852); Blue v. McDuffie, 44 N.C. 131 (1852); State v. Partlow, 91 N.C. 550 (1884).

Same — Affidavit of Individual Legislators. — In interpreting a statute it was not permissible to show its intent and meaning by affidavit of legislators, for such had to be gathered from the act itself. Goins v. Trustees, 169 N.C. 736, 86 S.E. 629 (1915).

Effectuation of Purpose. — Where the language used is ambiguous, or admits of more than one meaning, it is to be taken in such a sense as will conform to the scope of the act and effectuate its objects. State v. Partlow, 91 N.C. 550 (1884); Fortune v. Commissioners, 140 N.C. 322, 52 S.E. 950 (1905).

Harmonizing Context. — It is the duty of the court to adopt that sense which harmonizes best with the context, and promotes in the fullest manner the apparent policy and objects of the legislature. Nance v. Southern Ry., 149 N.C. 366, 63 S.E. 116 (1908).

As to Whether Statute Mandatory or Directory. — There is no absolutely formal test for determining whether a statutory provision is to be considered mandatory or directory. The meaning and intention of the legislature must govern; and these are to be ascertained, not only from the phraseology of the provision, but also by considering its nature, its design, and the consequences which would follow from construing it in the one way or the other. Spruill v. Davenport, 178 N.C. 364, 100 S.E. 527 (1919).

The use of inapt, inaccurate or improper terms or phrases will not invalidate the statute, provided the real meaning of the legislature can be gathered from the context or from the general purpose and tenor of the enactment. Fortune v. Commissioners, 140 N.C. 322, 52 S.E. 950 (1905).

Mistakes or Omissions. — Legislative enactments are not to be defeated on account of mistakes or omissions, any more than other writings, provided the intention of the legislature can be collected from the whole statute. If the mistake renders the intention doubtful, the courts will look to the title and preamble as well as the body or purview of the act for assistance in arriving at it, and not until all these fail can the act be held inoperative. Toomey v. Goldsboro Lumber Co., 171 N.C. 178, 88 S.E. 215 (1916).

Impossible Requirements. — In the construction of a statute the court will avoid attributing to the legislature the intention to punish the failure to do an impossible thing. Garrison v. Southern Ry., 150 N.C. 575, 64 S.E. 578 (1909).

III. SIMILAR AND RELATED ACTS.

A. In General.

Words and Phrases in One Statute Read in a Subsequent Act. — Words and phrases, the meaning of which in a statute have been ascertained, when read in a subsequent statute, are to be understood in the same sense. And where the terms of a statute which has received judicial construction are used in a later statute, whether passed by the legislature of the same state or county, or by that of another, that construction is to be given to the later statute. It is presumed that the legislature which passed the latter statute knew the judicial construction which had been placed on the former one, and such a construction becomes a part of the law. Bridgers v. Taylor, 102 N.C. 86, 8 S.E. 893 (1889).

Permissible to Look at Other Statutes. — To ascertain the mischief which an act of the legislature was intended to remove, it is permissible, in the interpretation thereof, to consider other statutes, related to the particular subject, or to one under construction. Abernethy v. Board of Comm'rs, 169 N.C. 631, 86 S.E. 577 (1915); In re Hickerson, 235 N.C. 716, 71 S.E.2d 129 (1952).

It is not permissible, if it can be reasonably avoided, to put such a construction upon a law as will raise a conflict between different parts of it, but effect should be given to each and every clause and provision. But when there is no way of reconciling conflicting clauses of a statute and nothing to indicate which the legislature regarded as of paramount importance, force should be given to those clauses which would make the statute in harmony with the other legislation on the same subject, and which would tend most completely to secure the rights of all persons affected by such legislation. State Bd. of Agriculture v. White Oak Buckle Drainage Dist., 177 N.C. 222, 98 S.E. 597 (1919).

B. Statutes in Pari Materia.

Statutes relating to the same subject matter should should be construed in connection with each other as together constituting one law, giving effect to all parts of the statute when possible; and the history of the legislation may be considered in the effort to ascertain the uniform and consistent purpose of the legislature. Allen v. Town of Reidsville, 178 N.C. 513, 101 S.E. 267 (1919).

Same — Apparent Conflict. — Where two statutes on the same subject, or on related subjects, are apparently in conflict with each other they are to be reconciled, by construction, so far as may be, on any fair hypothesis, and validity and effect given to both, if this can be done without destroying the evident intent and meaning of the later act. Peoples Bank v. Loven, 172 N.C. 666, 90 S.E. 948 (1916); State Bd. of Agriculture v. White Oak Buckle Drainage Dist., 177 N.C. 222, 98 S.E. 597 (1919).

Acts of Same Session of Legislature. — All acts of the same session of the legislature upon the same subject matter are considered as one act, and must be construed together, under the doctrine of "in pari materia." They should be considered in pari materia, whether passed at the same session or not. State ex rel. Wilson v. Jordan, 124 N.C. 683, 33 S.E. 139 (1899).

Where there are different statutes in pari materia, though made at different times, or even where they have expired, and not referring to each other, they shall be taken and considered together as one system, and as explanatory of each other. State ex rel. Wilson v. Jordan, 124 N.C. 683, 33 S.E. 139 (1899).

Act Declaratory of Intent of Previous Act. — An act of the legislature declaratory of the intent of a previous act will not control the judiciary in the contruction of the first act in actions prior to the declaratory act. Rodwell v. Harrison, 132 N.C. 45, 43 S.E. 540 (1903).

Private and Local Acts. — Private as well as local acts are, as a whole, and in every clause, unaffected by any repugnant provision of the general law. State v. Womble, 112 N.C. 862, 17 S.E. 491 (1893).

C. Amendatory and Repealing Acts.

When Act Purports to Be Amendatory. — Where a statute refers to a prior legislative enactment, and in the caption and body of the act purports to be amendatory, substituting and amending different sections, the legislative intent cannot be construed to repeal the former act. Toomey v. Goldsboro Lumber Co., 171 N.C. 178, 88 S.E. 215 (1916).

Amended and Amending Acts Construed Together. — Where an amendment to an existing statute is enacted, the proper method of arriving at their true intent and meaning is by construing them together. Keith v. Lockhart, 171 N.C. 451, 88 S.E. 640 (1916); Township Rd. Comm'n v. Board of Comm'rs, 178 N.C. 61, 100 S.E. 122 (1919).

When Amendatory Act Refers to Wrong Section. — If a section in an amendatory act refers to a section of the act amended by number, and the section referred to does not express the legislative intent, but another section is found which does express that intent, the reference will be treated as being made to the latter section. Toomey v. Goldsboro Lumber Co., 171 N.C. 178, 88 S.E. 215 (1916).

Erroneous Statement of Date. — An act of the legislature subsequent to and in amendment of a former act of the same session and correcting an ambiguity therein, is not invalidated by the fact that the date of ratification of the amended act is erroneously stated, provided it sufficiently appears beyond cavil, what prior act is referred to. State v. Woolard, 119 N.C. 779, 25 S.E. 719 (1896).

Rules for Construing Repealing Acts. — In Winslow v. Morton, 118 N.C. 486, 24 S.E. 417 (1896), it was said: Upon a perusal of the authorities it appears that the courts have universally given their sanction to the following rules of construction: (1) That the law does not favor a repeal of an older statute by a later one by mere implication. State ex rel. County Trustee v. Woodside, 30 N.C. 104 (1847); Simonton v. Lanier, 71 N.C. 498 (1874). (2) The implication, in order to be operative, must be necessary, and if it arises out of repugnancy between the two acts the later abrogates the older only to the extent that it is inconsistent and irreconcilable with it. A later and older statute will, if it is possible and reasonable to do so, be always construed together, so as to give effect not only to the distinct parts or provisions of the latter, not inconsistent with the new law, but to give effect to the older law as a whole, subject only to restrictions or modifications of its meaning, where such seems to have been the legislative purpose. A law will not be deemed repealed because some of its provisions are repeated in a subsequent statute, except insofar as the latter plainly appears to have been intended by the legislature as a substitute. State v. Custer, 65 N.C. 339 (1871). (3) Where a later or revising statute clearly covers the whole subject matter of antecedent acts, and it plainly appears to have been the purpose of the legislature to give expression in it to the whole law on the subject, the latter is held to be repealed by a necessary implication.

When Acts Irreconcilably Inconsistent. — A later statute repeals, by implication, an older statute, with which it is irreconcilably inconsistent, to the extent of such repugnancy. But the two statutes must be reconciled if that can be done by any fair construction. State v. Massey, 103 N.C. 356, 9 S.E. 632 (1889).

Repeal of Act Giving Forfeiture. — The repeal of an act of assembly giving a forfeiture for an offense is a repeal of all forfeitures incurred under the act repealed, unless there be a special exception to the contrary. Governor v. Howard, 5 N.C. 465 (1810).

Repeal of Repealing Act. — The repeal of a statute repealing a former statute leaves the latter in force. Brinkley v. Swicegood, 65 N.C. 626 (1871).

Implied Repeal by Lessening Degree of Crime. — It is perfectly settled as a rule of construction that if, by the common or statute law, an offense, for example, be a felony, and subsequent statute by an enactment merely affirmatively lessen its grade or mitigate the punishment, the latter is to that extent an implied repeal of the former. State v. Upchurch, 31 N.C. 454 (1849).

IV. STATUTES STRICTLY CONSTRUED.

A. In General.

In Derogation of Common Law. — A statute in derogation of the common law must be strictly construed. Swift & Co. v. Tempelos, 178 N.C. 487, 101 S.E. 8 (1919).

Acts Limiting Rights to Contract. — Statutes restricting or disabling persons capable of contracting in the making of contracts, being in derogation of common right, and especially those penal in their nature, must be strictly construed. W.C. Marriner & Bro. v. John L. Roper Co., 112 N.C. 164, 16 S.E. 906 (1893).

Acts Restricting Private Acts. — Statutes which restrict the private rights of persons or the use of property in which the public has no concern should be strictly construed. Nance v. Southern Ry., 149 N.C. 366, 63 S.E. 116 (1908).

Statutes depriving courts of jurisdiction once attached are strictly construed, and every requirement of such statute must be met before the court will yield its jurisdiction. State v. Sullivan, 110 N.C. 513, 14 S.E. 796 (1892).

Statutes providing for forfeitures should be strictly construed and not extended beyond the meaning of the words employed. Skinner v. Thomas, 171 N.C. 98, 87 S.E. 976 (1916).

Ordinarily a strict or narrow construction is applied to statutory exceptions to the operation of laws. News & Observer Publishing Co. v. Interim Bd. of Educ., 29 N.C. App. 37, 223 S.E.2d 580 (1976).

Local Lien Law. — In Orinoco Supply Co. v. Masonic & E. Star Home, 163 N.C. 513, 79 S.E. 964 (1913), it was held that a lien law applicable to certain counties only, was local in its nature, and being contrary to the general lien laws of the State, had to be strictly construed.

A remedial statute should be liberally construed, according to its intent, so as to advance the remedy and repress the evil. Cape Lookout Co. v. Gold, 167 N.C. 63, 83 S.E. 3 (1914).

B. Criminal Statutes.

Rule for Construction of Penal Statutes. — Penal statutes must be strictly construed, and the plaintiff, before he is entitled to recover the penalty, must bring his case strictly within the language and meaning of the statute. They must be construed sensibly, as all other instruments, but not liberally, so as to stretch their meaning beyond what the words will warrant. Coble v. Schoffner, 75 N.C. 42 (1876); State v. Godfrey, 97 N.C. 507, 1 S.E. 779 (1887); Sears v. Whitaker, 136 N.C. 37, 48 S.E. 517 (1904); Alexander v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 144 N.C. 93, 56 S.E. 697 (1907); Hamlet Grocery Co. v. Southern Ry., 170 N.C. 241, 87 S.E. 57 (1915).

Rule Explained. — The rule that a penal statute must be strictly construed, means no more than that the court, in ascertaining the meaning of such a statute, cannot go beyond the plain meaning of the words and phraseology employed in search of an intention not certainly implied by them, and when there is a reasonable doubt as to the meaning of the words used in the statute, the court will not give them such an interpretation as to impose the penalty, nor will the purpose of the statute be extended by implication, so as to embrace cases not clearly within its meaning. Hines & Battle v. Wilmington & W.R.R., 95 N.C. 434 (1886).

Supplying Omission and Strained Constructions. — As a matter of policy it is more dangerous for the appellate court to usurp the powers of the legislative department by supplying omissions in, or putting strained constructions upon, criminal statutes, than that some criminals should go unpunished. State v. Massey, 103 N.C. 356, 9 S.E.2d 632 (1889).

Whether a criminal intent is a necessary element of a statutory offense is a matter of construction to be determined from the language of the statute in view of its manifest purpose and design. State v. Abrams, 29 N.C. App. 144, 223 S.E.2d 516 (1976).

A statute will not be construed to operate retrospectively so as to take away a penalty or condone a crime unless such intention is clearly expressed. State v. Williams, 286 N.C. 422, 212 S.E.2d 113 (1975).

V. CONSTRUCTION IN ACCORD WITH CONSTITUTION.

A. Construction.

General Rule. — Whenever an act of the legislature can be so construed and applied as to avoid conflict with the Constitution, and give it the force of law, such construction will be adopted by the court. State v. Pool, 74 N.C. 402 (1876).

Construction so as to Avoid Constitutional Question. — If a statute is reasonably susceptible of two constructions, one of which will raise a serious question as to its constitutionality and the other will avoid such question, the courts should construe the statute so as to avoid the constitutional question. In re Arcadia Diary Farms, Inc., 289 N.C. 456, 223 S.E.2d 323 (1976).

Presumption in Favor of Validity. — Every presumption is in favor of the validity of an act of the legislature and all doubts are resolved in support of the act. Lowery v. School Trustees, 140 N.C. 33, 52 S.E. 267 (1905).

When the constitutionality of a statute is challenged, "every presumption is to be indulged in favor of its validity." Martin v. North Carolina Hous. Corp., 277 N.C. 29, 175 S.E.2d 665 (1970).

Existence of Facts Preserving Constitutionality Presumed. — If the constitutionality of a statute depends on the existence of certain facts and circumstances, the existence of such facts and circumstances will generally be presumed for the purpose of giving validity to the statute, if such a state of facts can reasonably be presumed to exist, and if any such facts may be reasonably conceived in the mind of the court. This rule does not apply if the evidence is to the contrary, or if facts judicially known or proved, compel otherwise. Martin v. North Carolina Hous. Corp., 277 N.C. 29, 175 S.E.2d 665 (1970).

Valid and Invalid Portions of Same Act. — Where there are distinct and valid provisions of a statute, with unconstitutional provisions, the two portions of the law being separate and it appearing from a perusal of the statute that the legislature intended the valid portion to be effective independently of the invalid part, the valid provisions may be enforced. Archer v. Joyner, 173 N.C. 75, 91 S.E. 699 (1917).

If the invalid portions can be separated from the rest, and if, after their excision, there remains a complete, intelligible, and valid statute capable of being executed, and conforming to the general purpose and intent of the legislature as shown in the act, the same will not be adjudged unconstitutional in toto, but sustained to that extent. Keith v. Lockhart, 171 N.C. 451, 88 S.E. 640 (1916).

That position, however, is not allowed to prevail when the parts of the statute are so connected and dependent, the one upon the other, that to eliminate one will work substantial change to the portion which remains. If the unconstitutional clause cannot be rejected without causing the statute to enact what the legislature did not intend, the whole statute must fall. Riggsbee v. Town of Durham, 94 N.C. 800 (1886); State ex rel. Greene v. Owen, 125 N.C. 212, 34 S.E. 424 (1899); Keith v. Lockhart, 171 N.C. 451, 88 S.E. 640 (1916). See State v. Godwin, 123 N.C. 697, 31 S.E. 221 (1898).

Resort to Implication. — Courts may resort to an implication to sustain an act, but not to destroy it. Lowery v. School Trustees, 140 N.C. 33, 52 S.E. 267 (1905).

B. Effect.

Liability of Public Officer under Unconstitutional Act. — An individual officeholder is not required to be wiser than the whole people represented in their General Assembly; therefore, he is not indictable for obeying an unconstitutional legislative act; nor is he indictable for refusing to perform certain duties under a former law repealed by a subsequent unconstitutional statute, until at least after a decision by competent authority. State v. Godwin, 123 N.C. 697, 31 S.E. 221 (1898).

When Court Reverses Itself Decision Not Retroactive. — Where property rights are acquired in accordance with a decision of the Supreme Court, in the interpretation of a statute, which is subsequently overruled, the effect of the later decision will not be retroactive in effect . S.W. Fowle & Son v. Ham, 176 N.C. 12, 96 S.E. 639 (1918).

VI. DEFINITIONS.

Subdivision (1) of this section was intended to avoid the very awkward expressions, "such person or persons," "he, she, or they," "himself or themselves," to be met with in some badly drawn statutes. Von Glahn v. Harris, 73 N.C. 323 (1875).

"Person" Extends to "Persons". — The word "person" is construed to extend to "persons" under the authority of subdivision (1) of this section. State v. Wilkerson, 98 N.C. 696, 3 S.E. 683 (1887); State v. Dunn, 134 N.C. 663, 46 S.E. 949 (1904).

Authority to Three or More. — The authority granted by a statute to a board of property appraisers was not terminated by the death of one of its five members so long as three or more of them remained. Ballard v. City of Charlotte, 235 N.C. 484, 70 S.E.2d 575 (1952).

Month. — The lunar month, when spoken of in statutes, consists of twenty-eight days; a calendar month contains the number of days ascribed to it in the calendar, varying from twenty-eight to thirty-one. State v. Upchurch, 72 N.C. 146 (1875). In this respect our statute has adopted the computation of the civil instead of the common law. Satterwhite v. Burwell, 51 N.C. 92 (1858); Adcock v. Town of Fuquay Springs, 194 N.C. 423, 140 S.E. 24 (1927).

The term "thirty days" and the term "one month" are not synonymous, although where the particular calendar month is composed of exactly thirty days the number of days involved happen to be the same. Kennedy v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 4 N.C. App. 77, 165 S.E.2d 676 (1969).

The words "twelve months," in the absence of any legislative definition of the word "month" and the word "year," will be interpreted to mean twelve calendar, not lunar, months. Muse v. London Assurance Corp., 108 N.C. 240, 13 S.E. 94 (1891); Green v. Patriotic Order Sons of America, 242 N.C. 78, 87 S.E.2d 14 (1955); Kennedy v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 4 N.C. App. 77, 165 S.E.2d 676 (1969).

Does Not Affect Constitution. — The provisions of subdivision (6) of this section could not affect the meaning of the terms employed in the Constitution; indeed, it purports to apply only to statutes, and to them, when the meaning is manifestly otherwise than as therein provided and defined. Redmond v. Commissioners of Tarboro, 106 N.C. 122, 10 S.E. 845 (1890).

"Property" Used in Limited Sense. — While the term "property," in its broadest and most general signification, embraces all kinds of property, including choses in action, rights and credits, and the like things, it is very often and conveniently used in its limited sense, and this is so notwithstanding the statutory provision. Redmond v. Commissioners of Tarboro, 106 N.C. 122, 10 S.E. 845 (1890).

The word "estate" has a broader meaning than the word "property." The latter word could not include choses in action, unless there be something in the context which would require it to receive this interpretation, except by force of the definition contained in this section. Vaughan v. Town of Murfreesboro, 96 N.C. 317, 2 S.E. 676 (1887).

A chose in action is property, and embraced in the terms of subdivision (6) of this section. Winfree v. Bagley, 102 N.C. 515, 9 S.E. 198 (1889).

A promissory note or due bill being an "evidence of debt" is embraced in the term "personal property." State v. Sneed, 121 N.C. 614, 28 S.E. 365 (1897).

Money. — While the word "property" in its legal sense ordinarily includes money, yet where it can be seen from other parts of a will in which it is used that it was not intended, that interpretation will be given it by the court with which the testator had evidently employed it. Patterson v. Wilson, 101 N.C. 584, 8 S.E. 229 (1888).

§ 12-3.1. Fees and charges by agencies.

(a) In the construction of a statute, unless that construction would be inconsistent with the manifest intent of the General Assembly or repugnant to the context of the statute, the legislative grant of authority to an agency to make and promulgate rules shall not be construed as a grant of authority to the agency to establish by rule a fee or a charge for the rendering of any service or fulfilling of any duty to the public, unless the statute expressly provides for the grant of authority to establish a fee or charge for that specific service.

(b) For purposes of this section:

"Agency" means every agency, institution, board, commission, bureau, department, division, council, member of the Council of State, or officer of the legislative, executive or judicial branches of State government. "Agency" does not include counties, cities, towns, villages, other municipal corporations or political subdivisions of the State or any agencies of such subdivisions, the University of North Carolina, community colleges, technical institutes, industrial education centers, hospitals, county or city boards of education, other local public districts, units, or bodies of any kind, or private corporations created by act of the General Assembly.

"Rule" means every rule, regulation, ordinance, standard, and amendment thereto adopted by any agency and includes rules and regulations regarding substantive matters, standards for products, procedural rules for complying with statutory or regulatory authority or requirements and executive orders of the Governor.

(c) This section does not apply to rules establishing fees or charges to State, federal or local governmental units, nor to any reasonable fee or charge for copying, transcripts of public hearings, State publications, registration fees covering the cost of a conference or workshop, or user fees covering the cost of providing data processing services. (1979, c. 559, s. 1; 1981, c. 695, ss. 1, 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 559, s. 2, provides: "This act shall become effective May 1, 1981, and shall apply to all rules then in existence or adopted thereafter."

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment deleted "or" preceding "State publications" near the end of subsection (c), and added "registration fees covering the cost of a conference or workshop, or user fees covering the cost of providing data processing services" at the end of subsection (c).

§ 12-4. Construction of amended statute.

Where a part of a statute is amended it is not to be considered as having been repealed and reenacted in the amended form; but the portions which are not altered are to be considered as having been the law since their enactment, and the new provisions as having been enacted at the time of the amendment.

Whenever the General Assembly (i) enacts a bill which purports to amend an existing general statute by deleting, adding, or substituting specific words or figures, and (ii) such bill also purports to set out the wording of the amended statute, or a portion thereof, as it will read after the amendment is accomplished, and (iii) there is a variance between the latter and the former, then, in such case, the latter shall control and be presumed to express the amendatory intent of the General Assembly. (1868-9, c. 270, s. 22; 1870-1, c. 111; Code, s. 3766; Rev., s. 2832; C. S., s. 3950; 1971, c. 115.)

CASE NOTES

Discovering Legislative Intent of Original Enactment Through Amendatory Legislation.—An amendment to an act may be resorted to for the discovery of the legislative intention in the enactment amended, as where the act amended is ambiguous. Taylor v. Crisp, 286 N.C. 488, 212 S.E.2d 381 (1975).

Amending Act Presumed Not to Repeal. — Where a statute only undertakes to amend one already on the statute books, it will be presumed that it did not intend to repeal it, unless there is an express repealing clause. State v. Massey, 97 N.C. 465, 2 S.E. 445 (1887); State v. Broadway, 157 N.C. 598, 72 S.E. 987 (1911).

Repeals by implication are not favored by the law. State v. Williams, 286 N.C. 422, 212 S.E.2d 113 (1975).

Amendment of a statute operates from its enactment, leaving in force the portions which are not altered. Nichols v. Board of Councilmen, 125 N.C. 13, 34 S.E. 71 (1899).

Nonconflicting Portions of Original Act Remain in Force. — Where a statute is amended, all portions of the original act which are not in conflict with the provisions of the amendment remain in the force with the same meaning and effect that they had before the amendment. Rice v. Rigsby, 259 N.C. 506, 131 S.E.2d 469 (1963); Begley v. Employment Security Comm'n, 50 N.C. App. 432, — S.E.2d — (1981).

Bill of Indictment. — If a statute creating an offense is amended in any important particular, a bill of indictment for an offense committed before the act was amended, but which was found after the passage of the amending act, should charge the offense under the old act, and contain an averment that the offense was committed before the amendment was passed. State v. Massey, 97 N.C. 465, 2 S.E. 445 (1887).

Misdemeanor Made Punishable by Fine or Imprisonment. — A public-local law making an act a misdemeanor was not repealed by a statute making the same offense for the first time punishable by "a fine or imprisonment in the discretion of the court," and a felony for the second offense; the latter statute expressly stating in the heading of the chapter that it was amendatory, and for the better enforcement, of the former statute, and that it was to take effect from and after its ratification; and where the prohibited offense had been committed prior to the enactment of the latter act, it was punishable under the prior law. State v. Mull, 178 N.C. 748, 101 S.E. 89 (1919).

Where amendatory legislation carries a saving clause as to prior offenses, the law as it stood at the time of the offense is applied to the prosecution and sentencing of the violator. State v. Williams, 286 N.C. 422, 212 S.E.2d 113 (1975).

Reenactment Contemporaneous with Repeal.—It was held in State v. Williams, 117 N.C. 753, 23 S.E. 250 (1895), that: "The reenactment by the legislature of a law in the terms of a former law at the same time it repeals the former law, is not, in contemplation of law, a repeal, but it is a reaffirmance of the former law, whose provisions are thus continued without any intermission." State v. Sutton, 100 N.C. 474, 6 S.E. 687 (1888); State ex rel. Walser v. Bellamy, 120 N.C. 212, 27 S.E. 113 (1897); State v. Southern Ry., 125 N.C. 666, 34 S.E. 527 (1899).

13-3. Issuance, service and filing of warrant of unconditional pardon.
13-4. Endorsement of warrant, service and filing of conditional pardon.
13-5 to 13-10. [Repealed.]

§ 13-1. Restoration of citizenship.

Any person convicted of a crime, whereby the rights of citizenship are forfeited, shall have such rights restored upon the occurrence of any one of the following conditions:

(1) The unconditional discharge of an inmate by the State Department of Correction or the North Carolina Department of Correction, of a probationer by the State Department of Correction, or of a parolee by the Department of Correction; or of a defendant under a suspended sentence by the court.

(2) The unconditional pardon of the offender.

(3) The satisfaction by the offender of all conditions of a conditional pardon.

(4) With regard to any person convicted of a crime against the United States, the unconditional discharge of such person by the agency of the United States having jurisdiction of such person, the unconditional pardon of such person or the satisfaction by such person of a conditional pardon. (1971, c. 902; 1973, c. 251; c. 1262, s. 10; 1977, c. 813, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Legislative Intent. — The 1971 General Assembly, in rewriting this Chapter, intended to substantially relax the requirements necessary for a convicted felon to have his citizenship restored. These requirements were further relaxed by the 1973 amendments to this Chapter. State v. Currie, 284 N.C. 562, 202 S.E.2d 153 (1974).

Statute Revising This Chapter Given Retroactive Application. — Chapter 251, Session Laws of 1973, which revised this Chapter, must be given retroactive application in order to be constitutionally valid. State v. Currie, 19 N.C. App. 241, 198 S.E.2d 491 (1973), aff'd, 284 N.C. 562, 202 S.E.2d 153 (1974).

Though the 1973 revision of this section was enacted after a defendant was indicted for felonious possession of a firearm, it was applicable. State v. Williams, 20 N.C. App. 639, 202 S.E.2d 284 (1974).

Loss of citizenship does not form a part of the judgment of the court, but follows as a consequence of such judgment. State v. Jones, 82 N.C. 685 (1880).

Cited in Young v. Southern Mica Co., 237 N.C. 644, 75 S.E.2d 795 (1953).

§ 13-2. Issuance and filing of certificate or order of restoration.

The agency, department, or court having jurisdiction over the inmate, probationer, parolee or defendant at the time his rights of citizenship are restored under the provisions of G.S. 13-1(1) shall immediately issue a certificate or order in duplicate evidencing the offender's unconditional discharge and specifying the restoration of his rights of citizenship.

The original of such certificate or order shall be promptly transmitted to the clerk of the General Court of Justice in the county where the official record of the case from which the conviction arose is filed. The clerk shall then file the certificate or order without charge with the official record of the case.

In the case of a person convicted of a crime against the United States, whose rights to citizenship have been restored according to G.S. 13-1, the following provisions shall apply:

(1) It shall be the duty of the clerk of the court in the county where such person resides, upon a showing by such person or his representative that the conditions of G.S. 13-1 have been met, to issue the certificate described in this section. For purposes of this section, the fulfillment of the conditions of G.S. 13-1 shall be considered met upon the presentation to the clerk of any paper writing from the agency of the United States government which had jurisdiction over such person, which shows that the conditions of G.S. 13-1 have been met.

(2) The certificate described in this section shall be filed by the clerk of the General Court of Justice in the county in which such person resides as though it were a civil action bearing such person's name.

(3) The provisions of this section apply equally to conditional and unconditional pardons by the President of the United States, as well as unconditional discharges by the agency of the United States having jurisdiction over said person. (1971, c. 902; 1973, c. 251; 1977, c. 813, s. 2.)

§ 13-3. Issuance, service and filing of warrant of unconditional pardon.

In the event the rights of citizenship are restored by an unconditional pardon as specified in G.S. 13-1(2), the Governor, under the provisions of G.S. 147-23, shall issue his warrant therefor specifying the restoration of rights of citizenship to the offender; and the officer to whom the Governor issues his warrant to effect the release of the offender shall deliver a copy of the warrant to the offender under the provisions of G.S. 147-25. The original warrant bearing the officer's return as specified in G.S. 147-25 shall be filed by the clerk of the General Court of Justice without charge in the county where the official record of the case from which the conviction arose is filed. (1971, c. 902; 1973, c. 251.)

§ 13-4. Endorsement of warrant, service and filing of conditional pardon.

When the offender has satified all of the conditions of a conditional pardon, and his rights of citizenship have been restored under the provisions of G.S. 13-1(3), the Governor shall issue an endorsement to the original warrant which specified the conditions of the pardon. Such endorsement shall acknowledge that the offender has satisfied all of the conditions of the pardon.

The Governor shall then deliver the endorsement to the officer specified in G.S. 147-25 for service and delivery to the clerk. Service and delivery to the clerk and filing by the clerk shall be done in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 13-3 so that the endorsement reflecting satisfaction of all conditions of the pardon will be served and recorded as if it were a warrant of unconditional pardon. SUBCHAPTER I. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

ARTICLE 1.

Felonies and Misdemeanors.

§ 14-1. Felonies and misdemeanors defined.

A felony is a crime which:
(1) Was a felony at common law;
(2) Is or may be punishable by death;
(3) Is or may be punishable by imprisonment in the State's prison; or
(4) Is denominated as a felony by statute.

Any other crime is a misdemeanor. (1891, c. 205, s. 1; Rev., s. 3291; C. S., s. 4171; 1967, c. 1251, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Section Constitutional. — This section was held to be constitutional in State v. Lytle, 138 N.C. 738, 51 S.E. 66 (1905).

Common-Law Provisions. — Up to the time this section was passed the somewhat arbitrary common-law rule was followed as to what crimes were felonies, and what were misdemeanors and under that, conspiracy, and even such grave crimes as perjury and forgery, were misdemeanors. State v. Mallett, 125 N.C. 718, 34 S.E. 651 (1899), aff'd, Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U.S. 589, 21 S. Ct. 730, 45 L. Ed. 1015 (1901); State v. Holder, 153 N.C. 606, 69 S.E. 66 (1910). See State v. Hill, 91 N.C. 561 (1884).

Punishment Determines Classification of Offenses. — By this section, North Carolina adopted the rule, then almost universally prevalent, by which the nature of the punishment determined the classification of offenses; those which could be punished capitally or by imprisonment in the penitentiary were felonies (as to which there was no statute of limitations), and all others were misdemeanors, as to which prosecutions in this State were barred by two years. State v. Mallett, 125 N.C. 718, 34 S.E. 651 (1899), aff'd, Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U.S. 589, 21 S. Ct. 730, 45 L. Ed. 1015 (1901).

The measure of punishment is the test of the nature of a crime, whether felony or misdemeanor. State v. Hyman, 164 N.C. 411, 79 S.E. 284 (1913); Jones v. Brinkley, 174 N.C. 23, 93 S.E. 372 (1917).

Offense Need Not Be Specified. — It is not necessary to prescribe that an act is a misdemeanor or felony, as the punishment affixed determines that. State v. Lewis, 142 N.C. 626, 55 S.E. 600 (1906).

Penitentiary Unknown to Common Law. — The penitentiary, being a modern device, unknown to the common law, punishment in the penitentiary could not be imposed by the common law. State v. McNeill, 75 N.C. 15 (1876).

The use of the word "penitentiary," in prescribing the punishment for one convicted under a criminal statute has the same legal significance as the words "State's prison," both meaning the place of punishment in which convicts sentenced to imprisonment and hard labor are confined by the authority of law. State v. Burnett, 184 N.C. 783, 115 S.E. 57 (1922).

Concurrence of General and Local Laws. — This State's general prohibition statutes, prohibiting the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors, expressly provided that they would not have the effect of repealing local or special statutes upon the subject, but they would continue in full force and in concurrence with the general law except where otherwise provided by law; and where the local law applicable made the offense a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment, in the county jail or penitentiary not exceeding two years, etc., the person convicted thereunder was guilty of a felony, by this section, and the two-year statute of limitations was not a bar to the prosecution. State v. Burnett, 184 N.C. 783, 115 S.E. 57 (1922).

Conspiracy. — A conspiracy to commit a felony is a felony and a conspiracy to commit a misdemeanor is a misdemeanor. State v. Abernethy, 220 N.C. 226, 17 S.E.2d 25 (1941), holding that a conspiracy to interfere with election officials in the discharge of their duties is a misdemeanor.

An assault with intent to commit rape is a felony. State v. Gay, 224 N.C. 141, 29 S.E.2d 458 (1944).

Suicide. — At common law suicide was a felony, and attempted suicide was a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment. State v. Willis, 255 N.C. 473, 121 S.E.2d 854 (1961).

An attempt to commit suicide is a indictable misdemeanor in North Carolina. State v. Willis, 255 N.C. 473, 121 S.E.2d 854 (1961).

Applied in State v. Johnson, 227 N.C. 587, 42 S.E.2d 685 (1947); State v. Miller, 237 N.C. 427, 75 S.E.2d 242 (1953); State v. Roberts, 276 N.C. 98, 171 S.E.2d 440 (1970).

§ 14-1.1. Punishment for felonies occurring on and after July 1, 1981.

(a) For felonies that occur on or after the effective date of Article 81A of Chapter 15A [July 1, 1981] of the General Statutes, the following punishments shall be applicable:

(1) A Class A felony shall be punishable by death or life imprisonment as provided by Article 100 of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes;
(2) A Class B felony shall be punishable by life imprisonment;
(3) A Class C felony shall be punishable by imprisonment up to 50 years, or by life imprisonment, or a fine, or both imprisonment and fine;
(4) A Class D felony shall be punishable by imprisonment up to 40 years, or a fine or both;
(5) A Calss E felony shall be punishable by imprisonment up to 30 years, or a fine or both;
(6) A Class F felony shall be punishable by imprisonment up to 20 years, or a fine or both;
(7) A Class G felony shall be punishable by imprisonment up to 15 years, or a fine or both;
(8) A Class H felony shall be punishable by imprisonment up to 10 years, or a fine or both;
(9) A Class I felony shall be punishable by imprisonment up to five years, or a fine or both;
(10) A Class J felony shall be punishable by imprisonment up to three years, or a fine or both.

(b) A felony not assigned by statute to any felony class shall be punishable as a Class J felony. (1979, c. 760, s. 1; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 1; 1981, c. 662, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, rewrote this section. The amendment deleted provisions in subdivisions (2) through (10) of subsection (a) setting maximum fines. The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "by life imprisonment, or a fine, or both imprisonment and fine" for "a fine or both" at the end of subdivision (3) of subsection (a).

§ 14-2. Punishment of felonies occurring before July 1, 1981.

Every person who shall be convicted of any felony for which no specific punishment is prescribed by statute shall be punished by fine, by imprisonment for a term not exceeding 10 years, or by both, in the discretion of the court. This section shall not apply to persons convicted of felonies that occur on or after the effective date of Article 81A of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes [July 1, 1981], but G.S. 14-1.1 shall apply to such persons. (R. C., c. 34, s. 27; Code, s. 1096; Rev., s. 3292; C. S., s. 4172; 1967, c. 1251, s. 2; 1973, c. 1201, s. 6; 1977, c. 711, s. 15; 1979, c. 760, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 39, as amended by Session Laws 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1147, s. 32, provides: "This act shall become effective July 1, 1978, and applies to all matters addressed by its provisions without regard to when a defendant's guilt was established or when judgment was entered against him, except that the provisions of this act regarding parole shall not apply to persons sentenced before July 1, 1978." The 1977 act deleted a provision that a sentence of life imprisonment should be considered a sentence of 80 years.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, added the second sentence. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

Legal Periodicals. — For case law survey as to excessive punishment, see 45 N.C.L. Rev. 910 (1967).

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases cited in the following annotation were decided under this section as it stood before the effective date of the 1979 amendment.

Section Places Ceiling on Court's Power to Punish. — The maximum provided in this section and § 14-3 places a ceiling on the court's power to punish by imprisonment when a ceiling is not otherwise fixed by law. Jones v. Ross, 257 F. Supp. 798 (E.D.N.C. 1966).

Specific Punishment. — A provision in a statute to the effect that punishment shall be in the discretion of the court and the defendant may be fined or imprisoned, or both, is not equivalent to a "specific punishment" within the meaning of this section, and such punishment is controlled by this section. State v. Blackmon, 260 N.C. 352, 132 S.E.2d 880 (1963).

A statutory penalty of fine or imprisonment in the discretion of the court is not a specific punishment, and therefore in the case of felonies the punishment is limited by this section to not more than ten years imprisonment. State v. Grice, 265 N.C. 587, 144 S.E.2d 659 (1965).

Punishment "in the discretion of the court" is not specific punishment and hence is governed by the limits (ten years for felonies and two years for misdemeanors) prescribed in this section and § 14-3. State v. Adams, 266 N.C. 406, 146 S.E.2d 505 (1966).

A statute prescribing punishment "by fine or imprisonment in the State's prison, or both, in the discretion of the court," does not prescribe "specific punishment" within the meaning of that term as used in this section. State v. Stimpson, 279 N.C. 716, 185 S.E.2d 168 (1971).

The fact that others tried on similar charges are given shorter sentences is not ground for legal objection, the punishment imposed in a particular case, if within statutory limits, being within the sound discretion of the trial judge. State v. Best, 11 N.C. App. 286, 181 S.E.2d 138, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 350, 182 S.E.2d 582 (1971); State v. Sligh, 27 N.C. App. 668, 219 S.E.2d 801 (1975).

Excessive Sentence Cannot be Sustained. — See In re Sellers, 234 N.C. 648, 68 S.E.2d 308 (1951).

Excessive Judgment Vacated and Remanded. — See State v. Marsh, 234 N.C. 101, 66 S.E.2d 684 (1951).

Credit for Pretrial Detention. — A prisoner should be given credit for time spent in custody prior to commitment where he has been given a maximum sentence. Culp v. Bounds, 325 F. Supp. 416 (W.D.N.C. 1971).

Same — Failure to Give Credit Violates Constitution. — North Carolina's failure to give a prisoner credit for time served before trial where he has received a maximum sentence violates the Constitution in two ways. First, it constitutes multiple punishment for a single offense, thereby offending the double jeopardy clause of the Fifth Amendment which is applicable to the states through the Fourteenth Amendment. Second, the fact that only those accused who are unable to raise bail are subjected to extra pretrial incarceration when their prison time exceeds the statutory maximum is an invidious discrimination against the poor in violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Culp v. Bounds, 325 F. Supp. 416 (W.D.N.C. 1971).

The state's refusal to give a prisoner credit for pretrial detention is an unconstitutional discrimination on the basis of wealth prohibited by the Fourteenth Amendment. Wealthy defendants (except where no bail is allowed) are able to remain out of prison until conviction and sentencing; the poor stay behind bars. Culp v. Bounds, 325 F. Supp. 416 (W.D.N.C. 1971).

Same — Pretrial Custody Added to Sentence Cannot Exceed Statutory Maximum Punishment. — The time a prisoner spends in custody prior to trial when added to the sentence to be served upon commitment cannot total more than the statutory maximum punishment for the crime involved. Culp v. Bounds, 325 F. Supp. 416 (W.D.N.C. 1971).

Same — New Conviction. — The constitutional guarantee against multiple punishments for the same offense absolutely requires that punishment already exacted must be fully "credited" in imposing sentence upon a new conviction for the same offense. Culp v. Bounds, 325 F. Supp. 416 (W.D.N.C. 1971).

Where Felony and Misdemeanor Counts Consolidated for Judgment. — Where defendant was tried and convicted upon an indictment charging felonious breaking and entering and misdemeanor larceny, and both counts were consolidated for judgment, the fact that the one sentence imposed is in excess of that permissible upon conviction of the misdemeanor is immaterial and is not prejudicial where it does not exceed that permitted upon conviction of the felony. State v. Cleary, 9 N.C. App. 189, 175 S.E.2d 749 (1970).

Applied in State v. Wilson, 270 N.C. 299, 154 S.E.2d 102 (1967); State v. Price, 8 N.C. App. 94, 173 S.E.2d 644 (1970); State v. Batts, 8 N.C. App. 551, 174 S.E.2d 704 (1970); State v. Goode, 16 N.C. App. 188, 191 S.E.2d 241 (1972); State v. Huffman, 16 N.C. App. 653, 192 S.E.2d 621 (1972); State v. Mitchell, 283 N.C. 462, 196 S.E.2d 736 (1973); State v. McNeil, 28 N.C. App. 125, 220 S.E.2d 401 (1975).

Quoted in State v. Efird, 271 N.C. 730, 157 S.E.2d 538 (1967); State v. Gosnell, 38 N.C. App. 679, 248 S.E.2d 756 (1978).

Stated in State v. Hanford, 16 N.C. App. 353, 191 S.E.2d 910 (1972); State v. Daniels, 300 N.C. 105, 265 S.E.2d 217 (1980); State v. Graham, 47 N.C. App. 303, 267 S.E.2d 56 (1980).

§ 14-2.1. Punishment of felonies; second or subsequent offenses; convictions occurring before July 1, 1981.

Notwithstanding the provisions of G.S. 15-197, or any other provisions of law, any person who has been previously convicted of a felony where a deadly weapon was used in the commission of the crime in the courts of this State, upon conviction of a second felony where a deadly weapon was used in the commission of the crime within seven years of the date of the previous felony conviction, provided that the previous felony did not occur within 10 days of the second felony, shall be sentenced to imprisonment for a minimum period of seven years and shall, in every instance, serve the first seven calendar years of his sentence without benefit of parole, probation, suspended sentence, or any other judicial or administrative remedy for release from incarceration. Such term will be computed allowing credit for good behavior, credit for time served while incarcerated awaiting trial, and such other provisions as the Secretary of Correction might make pursuant to G.S. 148-11. Upon completion of service of such term, the prisoner will be eligible to have his case considered for parole if the requisites of G.S. 148-58 regarding time served have been satisfied. The power of the Governor to grant commutations, pardons, and reprieves, and the power of the courts to grant appropriate relief under Article 22 of the General Statutes Chapter 15 will not be affected by the provisions of this section.

For the purpose of this section, the record or records of the prior felony conviction shall be admissible in evidence after conviction and before sentencing, but only for the purpose of proving that said person has been convicted of a previous felony. A judgment of a conviction or plea of guilty to such felony offense certified to a superior court of this State from the custodian of records of any other court of this State under the same name as that by which the defendant is charged shall be prima facie evidence that the identity of such person is the same as the defendant so charged and shall be prima facie evidence of the facts so certified.

For the purpose of this section, felonies committed before a person attains the age of 21 years shall not constitute a previous felony conviction.

Pleas of guilty to or convictions of felony offenses prior to September 1, 1977, shall not be felony offenses within the meaning of this Article. Any felony offense to which a pardon has been extended shall not for the purpose of this Article constitute a felony. The burden of proving such pardon shall rest with the defendant and the State shall not be required to disprove a pardon. This section shall not apply to persons convicted of felonies that occur on or after the effective date of Article 81A of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes [July 1, 1981], but G.S. 15A-1340.5 shall apply to such persons. (1977, c. 1131, s. 1; 1979, c. 760, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — Sections 15-197 and 148-58, and all but one section of Chapter 15, Article 22, referred to in this section, have been repealed. For present provisions as to parole, see § 15A-1370.1 et seq. For present provisions as to post-trial relief, see § 15A-1411 et seq.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, added the last sentence. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

§ 14-2.2. Sentencing of person convicted of repeated felony using deadly weapon.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any person who has been previously convicted in the courts of this State within seven years of a felony in which a deadly weapon was used, provided that the previous felony did not occur within 10 days of the second or subsequent felony, in which a deadly weapon was used, shall serve a term for the second or subsequent felony of not less than seven years in prison, excluding gain time granted under G.S. 148-13. Any person sentenced under this section shall receive a sentence of at least 14 years in the State's prison and shall be entitled to credit for good behavior under G.S. 15A-1340.7. The sentencing judge may not sentence a person sentenced under this section as a committed youthful offender and may not suspend the sentence and place the person sentenced on probation. Sentences imposed pursuant to this section shall run consecutively with and shall commence at the expiration of any sentence being served by the person sentenced hereunder.

For the purpose of this section, the record or records of the prior felony conviction shall be admissible in evidence after conviction and before sentencing, but only for the purpose of proving that the person has been convicted of a previous felony. A judgment of a conviction or plea of guilty or no contest to such felony offense certified to a superior court in this State from the custodian of records of any other court of this State under the same name as that by which the defendant is charged shall be prima facie evidence that the identity of such person is the same as the defendant so charged and shall be prima facie evidence of the facts so certified.

For the purposes of this section, a felony committed before a person attains the age of 18 years does not constitute a previous felony conviction.

Pleas of guilty or no contest to or convictions of felony offenses prior to September 1, 1977, are not felony offenses within the meaning of this section. Any felony offense to which a pardon has been extended does not for the purpose of this section constitute a felony. The burden of proving a pardon rests with the defendant and the State is not required to disprove a pardon. (1979, c. 760, s. 2; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 34.)

Editor's Note. — The above section was enacted by Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 2, as § 15A-1340.5. The 1979 act was originally made effective July 1, 1980, but was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1931, c. 179. The section was transferred and renumbered § 14-2.2 by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 34, effective July 1, 1981 and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date. The 1979, 2nd Sess., act also amended the section by inserting "in which a deadly weapon was used" following "subsequent felony" in the first sentence of the first paragraph and adding the second, third and fourth paragraphs. The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

§ 14-2.3. Forfeiture of gain acquired through felonies.

(a) Except as is otherwise provided in Article 3 of Chapter 31A, in the case of any violation of a general statute constituting a felony other than a nonwillful homicide, any money or other property or interest in property acquired thereby shall be forfeited to the State of North Carolina, including any profits, gain, remuneration, or compensation directly or indirectly collected by or accruing to any felon.

(b) An action to recover such property shall be brought by either a District Attorney or the Attorney General pursuant to G.S. 1-532. The action must be brought within three years from the date of the conviction for the felony.

(c) Nothing in this section shall be construed to require forfeiture of any money or property recovered by law-enforcement officers pursuant to the investigation of a felony when the money or property is readily identifiable by the owner or guardian of the property or is traceable to him. (1981, c. 840, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1981, c. 840, s. 2, provides: "This act shall become effective October 1, 1981, and shall apply to all felonies committed on or after that date."

§ 14-3. Punishment of misdemeanors, infamous offenses, offenses committed in secrecy and malice or with deceit and intent to defraud.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b), every person who shall be convicted of any misdemeanor for which no specific punishment is prescribed by statute shall be punishable by fine, by imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or by both, in the discretion of the court.

(b) If a misdemeanor offense as to which no specific punishment is prescribed be infamous, done in secrecy and malice, or with deceit and intent to defraud, the offender shall, except where the offense is a conspiracy to commit a misdemeanor, be guilty of a Class H felony. (R. C., c. 34, s. 120; Code, s. 1097; Rev., s. 3293; C. S., s. 4173; 1927, c. 1; 1967, c. 1251, s. 3; 1979, c. 760, s. 5; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 2.)

For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, effective July 1, 1981, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, rewrote subsection (b), so as to make a misdemeanor offense committed in secrecy and malice or with deceit and intent to defraud a Class H felony, where no other specific punishment was provided. The amendment also added a new second sentence to subsection (b), making the same provision for an attempt to commit burglary, crime against nature, or any felony where the attempt was made in secrecy or malice or with deceit and intent to defraud. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendment, effective July 1, 1981, and applicable to offenses committed on or after that date, again rewrote subsection (b), restoring the language of the subsection as it stood prior to the 1979 amendment but substituting "Class H felony" for "a felony and punishable as prescribed in § 14-2" at the end of the subsection. The 1979, 2nd Sess., amendatory act was originally made effective March 1, 1981. It was postponed to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Particular Offenses.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Constitutionality. — The punishment provisions of subsection (a) of this section are not unconstitutional. State v. Hullender, 8 N.C. App. 41, 173 S.E.2d 581 (1970).

Section Places Ceiling on Court's Power to Punish. — The maximum provided in this section and § 14-2 places a ceiling on the court's power to punish by imprisonment when a ceiling is not otherwise fixed by law. Jones v. Ross, 257 F. Supp. 798 (E.D.N.C. 1966).

This section has reference to misdemeanors other than those created by Article 3 of Chapter 20 of the General Statutes, which relates to motor vehicles. State v. Massey, 265 N.C. 579, 144 S.E.2d 649 (1965).

This section does not mean that the court may not place offenders on probation, or make use of other State facilities and services in proper cases. State v. Willis, 255 N.C. 473, 121 S.E.2d 854 (1961).

Common-Law Offenses. — Misdemeanors made punishable as at common law, or punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, can be punished by fine, or imprisonment in the county jail, or both. State v. McNeill, 75 N.C. 15 (1876); State v. Powell, 94 N.C. 920 (1886); State v. Brown, 253 N.C. 195, 116 S.E.2d 349 (1960).

If a statute prohibits a matter of public grievance, or commands a matter of public convenience, all acts or omissions contrary to the prohibition or command of the statute are misdemeanors at common law, notwithstanding the fact that no punishment is prescribed in the statute. State v. Bloodworth, 94 N.C. 918 (1886).

Discretion of Trial Judge. — Where the extent of the punishment is referred to the discretion of the trial judge, his sentence may not be interfered with by the appellate court, except in case of manifest and gross abuse. State v. Willer, 94 N.C. 904 (1886); State v. Smith, 174 N.C. 804, 93 S.E. 910 (1917).

The fact that others tried on similar charges are given shorter sentences is not ground for legal objection, the punishment imposed in a particular case, if within statutory limits, being within the sound discretion of the trial judge. State v. Best, 11 N.C. App. 286, 181 S.E.2d 138, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 350, 182 S.E.2d 582 (1971).

The grade or class of a crime is determined by the punishment prescribed therefor and not the nomenclature of the statute, a felony being a crime punishable by death or imprisonment in the State prison, and while all misdemeanors for which no punishment is prescribed are punishable as misdemeanors at common law, where the offense is infamous, or done in secrecy or malice, or with deceit and intent to defraud, it is punishable by imprisonment in the county jail or State prison, under this section, and is a felony. State v. Harwood, 206 N.C. 87, 173 S.E. 24 (1934).

Punishment "in the discretion of the court" is not specific punishment and, hence, is governed by the limits (ten years for felonies and two years for misdemeanors) prescribed in this section and § 14-2. State v. Adams, 266 N.C. 406, 146 S.E.2d 505 (1966).

Where Felony and Misdemeanor Counts Consolidated for Judgment. — Where defendant was tried and convicted upon an indictment charging felonious breaking and entering and misdemeanor larceny, and both counts were consolidated for judgment, the fact that the one sentence imposed is in excess of that permissible upon conviction of the misdemeanor is immaterial and is not prejudicial where it does not exceed that permitted upon conviction of the felony. State v. Cleary, 9 N.C. App. 189, 175 S.E.2d 749 (1970).

Where Statute Repealed before Judgment. — Where a statute prescribing the punishment for a crime is expressly and unqualifiedly repealed after such crime has been committed, but before final judgment, though after conviction, no punishment can be imposed. State v. Cress, 49 N.C. 421 (1857); State v. Nutt, 61 N.C. 20 (1866); State v. Long, 78 N.C. 571 (1878); State v. Massey, 103 N.C. 356, 9 S.E. 632 (1889); State v. Biggers, 108 N.C. 760, 12 S.E. 1024 (1891); State v. Perkins, 141 N.C. 797, 53 S.E. 735 (1906).

Excessive Punishment. — The word "or," in criminal statutes, cannot be interpreted to mean "and," when the effect is to aggravate the offense or increase the punishment. And so where a statute provides that a party guilty of the offense created by it shall be fined or imprisoned, the court has no power to both fine and imprison. State v. Walters, 97 N.C. 489, 2 S.E. 539 (1887).

A sentence of imprisonment for five years in the county jail and a recognizance of $500.00 to keep the peace for five years after the expiration thereof upon a defendant convicted of assault and battery, is excessive and therefore unconstitutional. State v. Driver, 78 N.C. 423 (1878).

The maximum punishment for a general misdemeanor is two years. State v. Burris, 3 N.C. App. 35, 164 S.E.2d 52 (1968).

A misdemeanor punishable in the discretion of the court means a maximum of two years. Atkins v. City of Charlotte, 296 F. Supp. 1068 (W.D.N.C. 1969).

Same — Not Cruel or Unusual. — It is well settled that when no time is fixed by the statute, an imprisonment for two years will not be held cruel and unusual. State v. Driver, 78 N.C. 423 (1878); State v. Miller, 94 N.C. 904 (1886); State v. Farrington, 141 N.C. 844, 53 S.E. 954 (1906).

Where Common-Law Offense Altered by Statute. — Where the grade of a common-law offense has been made higher by statute, the indictment must conclude against the statute, but when the punishment has been mitigated, it may conclude at common law. State v. Lawrence, 81 N.C. 522 (1879).

Effect of Consent of Defendant. — No consent of the defendant can confer a jurisdiction which is denied to the court by the law, and any punishment imposed, other than that prescribed for the offense, is illegal. In re Schenck, 74 N.C. 607 (1876).

Applied in State v. Mounce, 226 N.C. 159, 36 S.E.2d 918 (1946); State v. Thompson, 3 N.C. App. 231, 164 S.E.2d 391 (1968); State v. Batiste, 5 N.C. App. 511, 168 S.E.2d 510 (1969); State v. Crabb, 9 N.C. App. 333, 176 S.E.2d 39 (1970); State v. Shirley, 12 N.C. App. 440, 183 S.E.2d 880 (1971); State v. Wade, 14 N.C. App. 414, 188 S.E.2d 714 (1972); State v. Lewis, 17 N.C. Supp. 376 (W.D.N.C. 1978).

II. PARTICULAR OFFENSES.

Assaults. — Upon the ruling in State v. Rippy, 127 N.C. 516, 37 S.E. 148 (1900), overruled on other grounds, State v. Blackmon, 260 N.C. 352, 132 S.E.2d 880 (1963), § 14-33, bearing directly on the case of assaults, with or without intent to kill, making provision for punishment of such offenses, is to be regarded as specific, within the meaning of this section, and entirely withdraws the case of assault from the operation of this section. State v. Smith, 174 N.C. 804, 93 S.E. 910 (1917).

Conspiracy to Charge with Infanticide. — A conspiracy to charge one with infanticide, being only a common-law misdemeanor, is not punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary. State v. Jackson, 82 N.C. 565 (1880).

Conspiracy to violate the liquor law is a misdemeanor and punishable as at common law, that is, by fine or imprisonment, or both. State v. Brown, 253 N.C. 195, 116 S.E.2d 349 (1960).

Larceny. — The punishment upon conviction of the misdemeanor of larceny may not exceed two years. State v. Cleary, 9 N.C. App. 189, 175 S.E.2d 749 (1970).

Where an indictment charges larceny of property of the value of $200.00 (now $400.00) or less, but contains no allegation the larceny was from a building by breaking and entering, the crime charged is a misdemeanor for which the maximum prison sentence is two years, notwithstanding all the evidence tends to show the larceny was accomplished by means of a felonious breaking and entering. State v. Bowers, 273 N.C. 652, 161 S.E.2d 11 (1968).

Attempt to Obtain Property by False Pretense. — Any attempt to obtain property by false pretense necessarily is done with intent to deceive. By its plain language subsection (b) of this section makes any attempt to obtain property by false pretenses a felony. State v. Page, 32 N.C. App. 478, 232 S.E.2d 460, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 643, 235 S.E.2d 64 (1977).

Destruction of Public Records. — A plea of guilty to an indictment charging defendant with wilfully, feloniously, secretly, and maliciously giving aid and assistance to his codefendant by manufacturing evidence, altering and destroying original records in the office of the Secretary of Revenue, is a confession of a felony under this section, although § 14-76 designates such offense as a misdemeanor. State v. Harwood, 206 N.C. 87, 173 S.E. 24 (1934).

Infamous Offenses. — A statute, which names the punishment for all misdemeanors, where no specific punishment is prescribed, and provides that if the offense be "infamous," it shall be punished as a felony, necessarily refers to the degrading nature of the offense, and not to the measure of punishment. State v. Surles, 230 N.C. 272, 52 S.E.2d 880 (1949).

Subsection (b) and the reported cases leave some lack of certainty as to what crimes may be designated and punished as infamous. State v. Keen, 25 N.C. App. 567, 214 S.E.2d 242 (1975).

Same — An attempt to commit burglary constitutes a felony and is punishable by imprisonment in the State prison for a term not in excess of ten years, since it is an infamous offense or done in secrecy and malice, or both, within the purview of the statute. State v. Surles, 230 N.C. 272, 52 S.E.2d 880 (1949).

Same — Attempted Robbery. — An attempt to commit common-law robbery is an infamous crime. State v. McNeely, 244 N.C. 737, 94 S.E.2d 853 (1956).

An attempt to commit robbery with firearms is an infamous offense. State v. Parker, 262 N.C. 679, 138 S.E.2d 496 (1964).

While at common law an attempt to commit a felony was a misdemeanor, the Supreme Court has held that an attempt to commit the offense of common-law robbery is an infamous crime, and by virtue of subsection (b) has been converted into a felony. State v. Bailey, 4 N.C. App. 407, 167 S.E.2d 24 (1969).

An attempt to commit robbery is an infamous crime. State v. Best, 11 N.C. App. 286, 181 S.E.2d 138, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 350, 182 S.E.2d 582 (1971).

Same — Solicitation to Commit Murder. — Since it appears to be settled that conspiracy to murder is an infamous offense and punishable as a felony, and that solicitation to commit murder is but one step away from conspiracy to murder, sentence of not less than five nor more than 10 years was authorized by law. State v. Keen, 25 N.C. App. 567, 214 S.E.2d 242 (1975).

Same — Assault upon Female Child. — In a prosecution charging assault with intent to commit rape, where at the conclusion of the State's evidence defendant tendered a plea of guilty of an assault upon a female, and the court accepted defendant's plea and found as a fact that the female referred to was a child nine years of age and defendant was thirty-four years of age, and also, that the assault was aggravated, shocking and outrageous, the accepted plea was for a misdemeanor under § 14-33 and not for an "infamous offense" punishable as a felony, and judgment that the defendant be confined to the State's prison for not less than eight nor more than 10 years, was a violation of this section. State v. Tyson, 223 N.C. 492, 27 S.E.2d 113 (1943).

Same — Attempt to Commit Crime against Nature. — While an attempt to commit a felony is a misdemeanor, when such misdemeanor is infamous, or done in secrecy and malice, or with deceit and intent to defraud, it is punishable by imprisonment in the State's prison, and is made a felony by this section, and an attempt to commit the crime against nature is infamous and is punishable by imprisonment in the State's prison as a felony within the definition of this section. State v. Spivey, 213 N.C. 45, 195 S.E. 1 (1938); State v. Mintz, 242 N.C. 761, 89 S.E.2d 463 (1965).

An attempt to commit the crime against nature is an infamous act within the meaning of this section and is punishable as a felony. State v. Harward, 264 N.C. 746, 142 S.E.2d 691 (1965).

Same — Solicitation to commit a crime against nature cannot be construed as an attempt to commit a crime against nature; solicitation to commit a crime against nature is therefore not an "infamous misdemeanor" under this section; and the superior court therefore did not have original jurisdiction of such a charge. State v. Tyner, 50 N.C. App. 206, 272 S.E.2d 626 (1980).

§ 14-4. Violation of local ordinances misdemeanor.

If any person shall violate an ordinance of a county, city, or town, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not more than fifty dollars ($50.00), or imprisoned for not more than 30 days. (1871-2, c. 195, s. 2; Code, s. 3820; Rev., s. 3702; C. S., s. 4174; 1969, c. 36, s. 2.)

Local Modification. — Jacksonville: 1979, c. 511.

CASE NOTES

In General. — While the town or city government has no right to make criminal law, the legislature has made the violation of ordinances a criminal offense. Board of Educ. v. Town of Henderson, 126 N.C. 689, 36 S.E. 158 (1900); State v. Higgs, 126 N.C. 1014, 35 S.E. 473 (1900), overruled on other grounds, Small v. Councilmen of Edenton, 146 N.C. 527, 60 S.E. 413 (1908); State v. Barrett, 243 N.C. 686, 91 S.E.2d 917 (1956).

Section makes violation of municipal ordinance a criminal offense. Walker v. City of Charlotte, 262 N.C. 697, 138 S.E.2d 501 (1964).

The violation of a valid municipal ordinance is a misdemeanor. Frosty Ice Cream, Inc. v. Hord, 263 N.C. 43, 138 S.E.2d 816 (1964).

The legislature in enacting this section made criminal what would otherwise be civil penalties for violations of ordinances. Cauble v. City of Asheville, 301 N.C. 340, 271 S.E.2d 258 (1980).

Prior to Section Violation Not Punishable. — Prior to the passage of this section there was no way provided for the enforcement of obedience to town ordinances; a violation of such ordinances was not a misdemeanor. State v. Parker, 75 N.C. 249 (1876); School Dirs. v. City of Asheville, 137 N.C. 503, 50 S.E. 279 (1905).

Jurisdiction. — The superior court has no original jurisdiction to try indictments for violation of town ordinances. State v. White, 76 N.C. 15 (1877); State v. Threadgill, 76 N.C. 17 (1877).

Costs of Prosecutions. — The criminal offenses created by the violation of town ordinances under this section are State prosecutions, in the name of the State, or for violation of the criminal law of the State, and at the expense of the State (State v. Higgs, 126 N.C. 1014, 35 S.E. 473 (1900)), overruled on other grounds, Small v. Councilmen of Edenton, 146 N.C. 527, 60 S.E. 413 (1908), and the city cannot be charged with the costs of such prosecutions. Board of Educ. v. Town of Henderson, 126 N.C. 689, 36 S.E. 158 (1900).

Ordinance Must Conform to State Law. — It is uniformly held that a town ordinance in violation of a valid State statute appertaining to the question is void. Shaw v. Kennedy, 4 N.C. 591 (1817); State v. Austin, 114 N.C. 855, 19 S.E. 919 (1894); State v. Beacham, 125 N.C. 652, 34 S.E. 447 (1899); State v. Prevo, 178 N.C. 740, 101 S.E. 370 (1919).

And Violation of Invalid Ordinance No Offense. — The violation of a valid ordinance is, under the provision of this section, a misdemeanor, but it is not a criminal offense to disregard one enacted without authority. State v. Hunter, 106 N.C. 796, 11 S.E. 366 (1890), overruled on other grounds, State v. Mobley, 240 N.C. 476, 83 S.E.2d 100 (1954); State v. Webber, 107 N.C. 962, 12 S.E. 598 (1890).

Acting contrary to the provisions of a municipal ordinance is made a misdemeanor by this section. Notwithstanding the all-inclusive language of the statute, guilt must rest on the violation of a valid ordinance. If the ordinance is not valid, there can be no guilt. State v. McGraw, 249 N.C. 205, 105 S.E.2d 659 (1958).

Same — Burden on State. — Where the State fails to show that the original act of incorporation authorized the enactment of an ordinance, it fails to make out the case, for the legislature never intended to make the violation of a void ordinance an indictable misdemeanor. State v. Threadgill, 76 N.C. 17 (1877).

Upon the prosecution of a criminal action for the violation of a city ordinance, under this section the State must show that the ordinance in question was a valid one, as well as the violation as charged in the warrant. State v. Hunter, 106 N.C. 796, 11 S.E. 366 (1890), overruled on other grounds, State v. Mobley, 240 N.C. 476, 83 S.E.2d 100 (1954); State v. Snipes, 161 N.C. 242, 76 S.E. 243 (1912); State v. Prevo, 178 N.C. 740, 101 S.E. 370 (1919).

Failure to Prescribe Penalty. — The violation of a valid town ordinance is made a misdemeanor by this section, and the defense that the ordinance did not prescribe a penalty therefor is untenable. State v. Razook, 179 N.C. 708, 103 S.E. 67 (1920).

Where Fine Provided It Must Be Certain. — An ordinance which imposes a fine is invalid if it is not certain as to the amount of the fine. State v. Irvin, 126 N.C. 989, 35 S.E. 430 (1900).

Provision for Arrest Void. — When a municipal ordinance imposed a penalty for its violation, and provided that the offender should be "arrested and fined $25.00 upon conviction thereof," it was held that so much of the ordinance as provided for the arrest was void, but the other provisions were valid. State v. Earhardt, 107 N.C. 789, 12 S.E. 426 (1890).

Conviction for Fighting No Bar to Prosecution for Assault. — A conviction of violating a city ordinance punishing the disturbance of the good order and quiet of the town by fighting is not a bar to a prosecution by the State for an assault. State v. Taylor, 133 N.C. 755, 46 S.E. 5 (1903).

Personal Notice to Offender Sufficient. — The requirement of the charter of a city or town that its ordinances shall be printed and published, is to bring such ordinances to the attention of the public, and where personal notice has been given to an offender thereunder who afterwards commits the offense prohibited, the requirement of publication, etc., is not necessary for a conviction. State v. Razook, 179 N.C. 708, 103 S.E. 67 (1920).

Defects in Warrant May Be Waived. — Ordinarily defects in the form of a warrant for violating a city ordinance may be waived, and usually it is so considered when a plea of not guilty is entered by the defendants. State v. Prevo, 178 N.C. 740, 101 S.E. 370 (1919).

Form of Indictment. — It is not necessary, in indictments for violations of city ordinances, to set out the ordinance in the warrant. It is sufficient to refer to it by such indicia, as point it out with sufficient certainty. State v. Merritt, 83 N.C. 677 (1880); State v. Cainan, 94 N.C. 880 (1886).

In an indictment under an ordinance for loud and boisterous swearing, it is not necessary to set out the words used by the defendant. State v. Cainan, 94 N.C. 880 (1886).

Fines Used to Maintain Public Schools. — All the fines collected upon prosecutions for violations of the criminal laws of the State, whether for violations of ordinances made criminal by this section, or by other criminal statutes belong to the common school fund of the county; they are thus appropriated by the North Carolina Constitution, and cannot be diverted or withheld from this fund without violating the State Constitution. Cauble v. City of Asheville, 301 N.C. 340, 271 S.E.2d 258 (1980).

Same — Parking Violations. — Moneys voluntarily paid by motorists to a city upon citations for violations of a city overtime parking ordinance constitute a penalty or fine collected for breach of a State penal law and should be used exclusively for maintaining free public schools in the county pursuant to N.C. Const., Art. IX, § 7, since violation of a city ordinance is also a violation of this section which makes the violation of a local ordinance a misdemeanor. Cauble v. City of Asheville, 301 N.C. 340, 271 S.E.2d 258 (1980).

Applied in State v. Walker, 265 N.C. 482, 144 S.E.2d 419 (1965); Brown v. Brannon, 399 F. Supp. 133 (M.D.N.C. 1975).

Article 2.

Principals and Accessories.

§§ 14-5, 14-5.1: Repealed by Session Laws 1981, c. 686, s. 2, effective July 1, 1981.

Cross References. — For present provisions as to punishment of accessories before the fact, see § 14-5.2.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1981, c. 686, ss. 3 and 4, provide: "Sec. 3. This act does not apply to any offense committed before the effective date of this act, and any such offense is punishable under the laws in effect at the time such offense was committed.

"Sec. 4. This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and is applicable to all offenses committed on and after that date."

§ 14-5.2. Accessory before fact punishable as principal felon.

All distinctions between accessories before the fact and principals to the commission of a felony are abolished. Every person who heretofore would have been guilty as an accessory before the fact to any felony shall be guilty and punishable as a principal to that felony. However, if a person who heretofore would have been guilty and punishable as an accessory before the fact is convicted of a capital felony, and the jury finds that his conviction was based solely on the uncorroborated testimony of one or more principals, coconspirators, or accessories to the crime, he shall be guilty of a Class B felony. (1981, c. 686, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The annotations under this section are from cases decided under former § 14-5.

A. In General.
B. Indictment.
C. Evidence.
D. Instructions.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Underlying Principle. — It is a well-established principle, that where two agree to do an unlawful act, each is responsible for the act of the other, provided it be done in pursuance of the original understanding, or in furtherance of the common purpose. State v. Simmons, 51 N.C. 21 (1858).

What Constitutes One a Party to an Offense. — A person is a party to an offense if he either actually commits the offense or does some act which forms a part thereof, or if he assists in the actual commission of the offense or of any act which forms part thereof, or directly or indirectly counsels or procures any person to commit the offense or to do any act forming a part thereof. To constitute one a party to an offense it has been held to be essential that he be concerned in its commission in some affirmative manner, as by actual commission of the crime or by aiding and abetting in its commission and it has been regarded as a general proposition that no one can be properly convicted of a crime to the commission of which he has never expressly or impliedly given his assent. State v. Spears, 268 N.C. 303, 150 S.E.2d 499 (1966).

History of Offense at Common Law. — Accessory before the fact was a common-law offense. State v. Sauls, 29 N.C. App. 457, 224 S.E.2d 702, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 253, 230 S.E.2d 390 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 916, 97 S. Ct. 2178, 53 L. Ed. 2d 226 (1977).

At common law an accessory before the fact could only be convicted when tried at the same time with the principal, and after conviction of the principal, or after the principal had been tried, convicted and sentenced. State v. Duncan, 28 N.C. 98 (1845); State v. Jones, 101 N.C. 719, 8 S.E. 147 (1888).

But the rule that an accessory could not be tried and convicted before the principal had no application as between two principals in first and second degrees. State v. Jarrell, 141 N.C. 722, 53 S.E. 137 (1906).

II. ACCESSORIES BEFORE THE FACT.

Who Is Accessory before the Fact. — An accessory before the fact is one who was absent from the scene when the crime was committed but who procured, counseled, commanded or encouraged the principal to commit it. State v. Benton, 276 N.C. 641, 174 S.E.2d 793 (1970); State v. Wiggins, 16 N.C. App. 527, 192 S.E.2d 680 (1972); State v. Squire, 292 N.C. 494, 234 S.E.2d 563, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 998, 98 S. Ct. 638, 54 L. Ed. 2d 493 (1977).

An accessory before the fact is one who furnishes the means to carry on the crime, whose acts bring about the crime through the agency of or in connection with the perpetrators, who is a confederate, who instigates a crime. State v. Sauls, 29 N.C. App. 457, 224 S.E.2d 702, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 253, 230 S.E.2d 390 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 916, 97 S. Ct. 2178, 53 L. Ed. 2d 226 (1977).

For a defendant, not actually or constructively present at the scene, to be criminally responsible for the acts of others as an accessory before the fact, it must be shown that he counseled, or procured, or commanded the others to perpetrate the crime. State v. Sauls, 29 N.C. App. 457, 224 S.E.2d 702, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 253, 230 S.E.2d 390 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 916, 97 S. Ct. 2178, 53 L. Ed. 2d 226 (1977).

To render one guilty as an accessory before the fact, he must have had the requisite criminal intent; and it has been said that he must have the same intent as the principal. It is well settled, however, that he need not necessarily have intended the particular crime committed by the principal; an accessory is liable for any criminal act which in the ordinary course of things was the natural or probable consequence of the crime that he advised or commanded. State v. Hewitt, 33 N.C. App. 168, 234 S.E.2d 468 (1977).

An accessory before the fact is one who procures, counsels, commands or encourages the principal to commit a crime. State v. Furr, 292 N.C. 711, 235 S.E.2d 193, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 924, 98 S. Ct. 402, 54 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1977).

In this State, one who procures another to commit murder is an accessory before the fact to murder. State v. Furr, 292 N.C. 711, 235 S.E.2d 193, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 924, 98 S. Ct. 402, 54 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1977).

The concept of accessory before the fact has been held to presuppose some arrangement with respect to the commission of the crime in question. State v. Chavis, 24 N.C. App. 148, 210 S.E.2d 555 (1974), appeal dismissed, 287 N.C. 261, 214 S.E.2d 434 (1975), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1080, 96 S. Ct. 868, 47 L. Ed. 2d 91 (1976).

There May Be Accessories before the Fact to Murder in Both Degrees. — Since malice, express or implied, is a constituent element of murder in any degree, there may be accessories before the fact to the crime of murder in both degrees. State v. Benton, 276 N.C. 641, 174 S.E.2d 793 (1970).

Admittedly the concept of accessory before the fact presupposes some arrangement between the accessory and the principal with respect to the commission of the crime. It does not follow, however, that there can be no accessory before the fact to second-degree murder, which imports a specific intent to do an unlawful act. State v. Benton, 276 N.C. 641, 174 S.E.2d 793 (1970).

There may, of course, be accessories before the fact in all kinds of murder with deliberation, or premeditation, or malice aforethought, including murder in the second degree, which involves malice. State v. Benton, 276 N.C. 641, 174 S.E.2d 793 (1970).

III. ELEMENTS OF FORMER OFFENSE.

Elements Generally. — The elements necessary to be proved under former § 14-5 in order to sustain a conviction for accessory before the fact were: (1) that defendant counseled, procured or commanded the principal to commit the offense; (2) that defendant was not present when the principal committed the offense; and (3) that the principal committed the offense. State v. Sauls, 291 N.C. 253, 230 S.E.2d 390 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 916, 97 S. Ct. 2178, 53 L. Ed. 2d 226 (1977).

There were several things that must have concurred in order to justify the conviction of one as an accessory before the fact: (1) That he advised and agreed, or urged the parties or in some way aided them to commit the offense. (2) That he was not present when the offense was committed. (3) That the principal committed the crime. State v. Bass, 255 N.C. 42, 120 S.E.2d 580 (1961); State v. Benton, 275 N.C. 378, 167 S.E.2d 775 (1969); State v. Chavis, 24 N.C. App. 148, 210 S.E.2d 555 (1974), appeal dismissed, 287 N.C. 261, 214 S.E.2d 434 (1975), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1080, 96 S. Ct. 868, 47 L. Ed. 2d 91 (1976); State v. Branch, 288 N.C. 514, 220 S.E.2d 495 (1975), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 907, 97 S. Ct. 2971, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1091 (1977).

Proof of three elements was necessary to sustain a conviction for accessory before the fact. It must have been shown (1) that the defendant counseled, procured, commanded or encouraged the principal to commit the crime, (2) that he was not present when the crime was committed, and (3) that the principal committed the crime. State v. Philyaw, 291 N.C. 312, 230 S.E.2d 370 (1976); State v. Hunter, 290 N.C. 556, 227 S.E.2d 535 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1093, 97 S. Ct. 1106, 51 L. Ed. 2d 539 (1977); State v. Saults, 294 N.C. 722, 242 S.E.2d 801 (1978).

What Constitutes Counseling, Procuring and Commanding. — At a meeting of a board of commissioners of a town, at which the mayor presided, a report of the cemetery committee was adopted, recommending that, unless parties, who had taken lots in the town cemetery and had not paid for them, should pay the amount due within 60 days on notice, the bodies buried in such lots should be removed to the free part of such cemetery. And, in reply to a question of one of the commissioners as to the legal right to remove the bodies, the mayor said: "The way is open, go ahead and remove them." It was held, that the mayor was individually guilty of counseling, procuring and commanding an act within the meaning of former § 14-5, making accessory before the fact a substantive crime. State v. McLean, 121 N.C. 589, 28 S.E. 140 (1897).

The term "counsel" as used in former § 14-5 describes the offense of a person who, not actually doing the felonious act, by his will contributed to it or procured it to be done. State v. Hewitt, 33 N.C. App. 168, 234 S.E.2d 468 (1977).

The meaning of the word "command," as applied to the case of principal and accessory is, where a person, having control over another, as a master over his servant, orders a thing to be done. State v. Mann, 2 N.C. 4 (1791).

IV. PRESENCE AT SCENE.

When Defendant Is "Present". — In order to determine whether a defendant is present, the court must determine whether "he is near enough to render assistance if need be and to encourage the actual perpetration of the felony." State v. Glaze, 37 N.C. App. 155, 245 S.E.2d 575 (1978).

Constructive Presence. — The actual distance of a person from the place where a crime is perpetrated is not always material in determining whether the person is constructively present. A person is deemed to be constructively present if he is near enough to render assistance if need be and to encourage the actual perpetration of the felony. State v. Wiggins, 16 N.C. App. 527, 192 S.E.2d 680 (1972).

Evidence tending to show that defendant drove the automobile that carried men to a store, that to the knowledge of defendant the men entered the store, armed, that defendant stayed with the car, that later they were together when police stopped them and that defendant told police where they could find the stolen money, was sufficient to support an inference that defendant was constructively present at the time of the robbery. State v. Torain, 20 N.C. App. 69, 200 S.E.2d 665 (1973), cert. denied, 284 N.C. 622, 202 S.E.2d 278 (1974).

V. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

A. In General.

Prior Conviction of Principals Unnecessary. — Under the provisions of former § 14-5 it was not required that the principals be first convicted of the charge of murder to convict the accessories thereto, either before or after the fact, upon sufficient evidence. State v. Jones, 101 N.C. 719, 8 S.E. 147 (1888); State v. Walton, 186 N.C. 485, 119 S.E. 886 (1923).

It is not necessary to first convict principals in order to convict an accessory to a crime. State v. Partlow, 272 N.C. 60, 157 S.E.2d 688 (1967).

But Guilt of Principal Must Be Established beyond Reasonable Doubt. — In order to warrant the conviction of an accessory, the guilt of the principal must be established to the same degree of certainty as if he himself were on trial, that is, beyond a reasonable doubt. State v. Benton, 275 N.C. 378, 167 S.E.2d 775 (1969).

No Conviction of Accessory Where Principal Acquitted. — Former § 14-5 did not change the common-law rule that an acquittal of the principal is an acquittal of the accessory. State v. Jones, 101 N.C. 719, 8 S.E. 147 (1888).

Effect of Acquittal of One of Several Principals. — Where there are three charged as principals with murder, the acquittal of one of them, the others having fled the jurisdiction of the court, does not of itself acquit the prisoners on trial as accessories before or after the fact, when the evidence of their guilt of the offense charged is sufficient both as to them as accessories and the principals directly charged with the murder. State v. Walton, 186 N.C. 485, 119 S.E. 886 (1923).

New Trial Where Conviction of Principal Vacated. — Where the conviction of the principal has been vacated by an order for a new trial, a new trial as to the alleged abettor defendant must also be ordered. State v. Spencer, 18 N.C. App. 499, 197 S.E.2d 232 (1973).

Sentences Imposed Need Not Be Equal. — There is no rule of law that sentences imposed upon defendants for a crime jointly committed by them must be equal. State v. Barrow, 292 N.C. 227, 232 S.E.2d 693 (1977).

B. Indictment.

What Indictment Must Aver. — It is not necessary to allege maliciousness in the indictment. State v. Saults, 294 N.C. 722, 242 S.E.2d 801 (1978).

C. Evidence.

The record of the conviction of a principal felon is admissible on the trial of the accessory, and is conclusive evidence of the conviction of the principal, and prima facie evidence of his guilt. State v. Chittem, 13 N.C. 49 (1828).

But not until judgment has been rendered on the verdict. State v. Duncan, 28 N.C. 98 (1845).

Sufficiency for Conviction. — Testimony that the accused had asked the one convicted of the murder of her husband to kill him, and that he accomplished the act the morning afterwards, at the place she designated, is sufficient for a conviction of murder, as an accessory before the fact. State v. Jones, 176 N.C. 702, 97 S.E. 32 (1918).

D. Instructions.

Instruction on Conspiracy. — Evidence sufficient to show defendant's involvement in a criminal conspiracy does not itself establish defendant's liability as a party to the substantive felony committed as a result of the conspiracy; it is reversible error for the court to so instruct the jury. State v. Small, 301 N.C. 407, 272 S.E.2d 128 (1980).

§ 14-6: Repealed by Session Laws 1981, c. 686, s. 2, effective July 1, 1981.

Cross References. — For present provisions as to punishment of accessories before the fact, see § 14-5.2.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1981, c. 686, ss. 3 and 4, provide: "Sec. 3. This act does not apply to any offense committed before the effective date of this act, and any such offense is punishable under the laws in effect at the time such offense was committed.

"Sec. 4. This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and is applicable to all offenses committed on and after that date."

§ 14-7. Accessories after the fact; trial and punishment.

If any person shall become an accessory after the fact to any felony, whether the same be a felony at common law or by virtue of any statute made, or to be made, such person shall be guilty of a felony, and may be indicted and convicted together with the principal felon, or after the conviction of the principal felon, or may be indicted and convicted for such felony whether the principal felon shall or shall not have been previously convicted, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice, and shall be punished as a Class H felon. The offense of such person may be inquired of, tried, determined and punished by any court which shall have jurisdiction of the principal felon, in the same manner as if the act, by reason whereof such person shall have become an accessory, had been committed at the same place as the principal felony, although such act may have been committed without the limits of the State; and in case the principal felony shall have been committed within the body of any county, and the act by reason whereof any person shall have become accessory shall have been committed within the body of any other county, the offense of such person guilty of a felony as aforesaid may be inquired of, tried, determined, and punished in either of said counties: Provided, that no person who shall be once duly tried for such felony shall be again indicted or tried for the same offense. (1797, c. 485, s. 1, P. R.; 1852, c. 58; R. C., c. 34, s. 54; Code, s. 978; Rev., s. 3289; C. S., s. 4177; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "as a Class H felon" for "by imprisonment in the State's prison or county jail for not less than four months nor more than ten years, and may also be fined in the discretion of the court" at the end of the first sentence. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

CASE NOTES

In General. — An accessory after the fact is one who, after a felony has been committed, with knowledge that the felony has been committed, renders personal assistance to the felon in any manner to aid him to escape arrest or punishment knowing, at the time, the person so aided has committed a felony. State v. Potter, 221 N.C. 153, 19 S.E.2d 257 (1942); State v. Williams, 17 N.C. App. 39, 193 S.E.2d 452 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 675, 194 S.E.2d 155 (1973).

An accessory after the fact under this section is one who, knowing that a felony has been committed by another, receives, relieves, comforts or assists such other, the felon, or in any manner aids him to escape arrest or punishment. State v. Squire, 292 N.C. 494, 234 S.E.2d 563, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 998, 98 S. Ct. 638, 54 L. Ed. 2d 493 (1977).

"Accessory after the Fact" Is a Substantive Crime. — Accessory after the fact is a substantive crime. State v. McIntosh, 260 N.C. 749, 133 S.E.2d 652 (1963), cert. denied, 377 U.S. 939, 84 S. Ct. 1345, 12 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1964).

Armed robbery under § 14-87 differs in fact and in law from accessory after the fact under this section. State v. McIntosh, 260 N.C. 749, 133 S.E.2d 652 (1963), cert. denied, 377 U.S. 939, 84 S. Ct. 1345, 12 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1964).

The offense of being an accessory after the fact to manslaughter is a substantive felony offense. State v. Martin, 30 N.C. App. 166, 226 S.E.2d 682 (1976).

And Not a Lesser Degree of the Principal Crime. — See State v. McIntosh, 260 N.C. 749, 133 S.E.2d 652 (1963), cert. denied, 377 U.S. 939, 84 S. Ct. 1345, 12 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1964).

Hence, Participant in Felony Cannot Be Accessory. — A participant in a felony may no more be an accessory after the fact than one who commits larceny may be guilty of receiving the goods which he himself had stolen. State v. McIntosh, 260 N.C. 749, 133 S.E.2d 652 (1963), cert. denied, 377 U.S. 939, 84 S. Ct. 1345, 12 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1964).

Nor Can Acquittal as Accessory Bar Prosecution for Principal Crime. — An acquittal of a charge of accessory after the fact of armed robbery will not support a plea of former jeopardy in a subsequent prosecution of the same defendant for armed robbery. State v. McIntosh, 260 N.C. 749, 133 S.E.2d 652 (1963), cert. denied, 377 U.S. 939, 84 S. Ct. 1345, 12 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1964).

Elements of Crime. — On a charge of accessory after the fact to robbery the State must show: (1) robbery, (2) the accused knew of it and (3) possessing that knowledge, he assisted the robber in escaping detection, arrest and punishment. State v. McIntosh, 260 N.C. 749, 133 S.E.2d 652 (1963), cert. denied, 377 U.S. 939, 84 S. Ct. 1345, 12 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1964); State v. Cox, 37 N.C. App. 356, 246 S.E.2d 152, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 649, 248 S.E.2d 253 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 930, 99 S. Ct. 1268, 59 L. Ed. 2d 487 (1979).

To convict parents of the accused son as accessories to the crime of rape, the State had the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt these essentials of the offense charged, namely: (1) That the son had actually committed the alleged crime of rape; (2) that the parents knew that the son had committed the alleged crime of rape; and (3) that the parents assisted the son in his efforts to avoid detection, arrest and punishment. State v. Overman, 284 N.C. 335, 200 S.E.2d 604 (1973).

To constitute a person an accesory after the fact to manslaughter, these essentials must appear: (1) manslaugher must have been committed; (2) the accused must know that manslaughter has been committed by the person received, relieved or assisted; (3) the accessory must render assistance to the felon personally. State v. Martin, 30 N.C. App. 166, 226 S.E.2d 682 (1976).

One cannot become an accessory after the fact until the offense has become an accomplished fact. Thus, a person cannot be convicted as an accessory after the fact to a murder because he aided the murderer to escape, when the aid was rendered after the mortal wound was given but before death ensued, as a murder is not complete until the death results. State v. Williams, 229 N.C. 348, 49 S.E.2d 617 (1948).

The crime of accessory after the fact has its beginning after the principal offense has been committed. State v. McIntosh, 260 N.C. 749, 133 S.E.2d 652 (1963), cert. denied, 377 U.S. 939, 84 S. Ct. 1345, 12 L. Ed. 2d 302 (1964).

It is not necessary that the aid given by the accessory after the fact be effective to enable the felon to escape all or a part of his punishment. State v. Martin, 30 N.C. App. 166, 226 S.E.2d 682 (1976).

Effect of Directed Verdict to Principal Offense. — Since the crime of accessory after the fact has its beginning after the principal offense has been committed, a directed verdict of not guilty of armed robbery does not decide the issue of whether the defendant joined the criminal scheme after the robbery was complete. State v. Cox, 37 N.C. App. 356, 246 S.E.2d 152, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 649, 248 S.E.2d 253 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 930, 99 S. Ct. 1268, 59 L. Ed. 2d 487 (1979).

A directed verdict of not guilty of armed robbery only removes the issues of whether defendant participated as a principal robber or whether he aided and abetted in the commission of the robbery. The possibility remains that after the robbery was committed, the defendant assisted the felons by transporting them in his car from the scene of the crime. State v. Cox, 37 N.C. App. 356, 246 S.E.2d 152, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 649, 248 S.E.2d 253 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 930, 99 S. Ct. 1268, 59 L. Ed. 2d 487 (1979).

A directed verdict of not guilty of armed robbery foreclosed the State from subsequent prosecutions of defendant for armed robbery or for any lesser included offenses of armed robbery. But, accessory after the fact of armed robbery is not a lesser included offense of armed robbery. Therefore, general double jeopardy motions would not bar the trial of defendant on charges of accessory after the fact to armed robbery. State v. Cox, 37 N.C. App. 356, 246 S.E.2d 152, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 649, 248 S.E.2d 253 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 930, 99 S. Ct. 1268, 59 L. Ed. 2d 487 (1979).

A receiver of stolen goods is not an accessory after the fact. State v. Tyler, 85 N.C. 569 (1881).

Husband of Accessory Not Competent Witness. — The husband of one charged as an accessory is not a competent witness in favor of the one charged as the principal felon. State v. Ludwick, 61 N.C. 401 (1868).

Instructions. — The trial court did not err in failing to instruct as to one defendant on the offenses of accessory before and accessory after the fact to the crimes of armed robbery and murder where the evidence showed that both defendants were present at the scene and were acting together in the commission of the armed robbery, and that the murders occurred in furtherance of their common purpose to commit this crime or as a natural consequence thereof. State v. Oliver, 302 N.C. 28, 274 S.E.2d 183 (1981).

Applied in State v. Poole, 25 N.C. App. 715, 214 S.E.2d 774 (1975).

Article 2A.

Habitual Felons.

§ 14-7.1. Persons defined as habitual felons.

Any person who has been convicted of or pled guilty to three felony offenses in any federal court or state court in the United States or combination thereof is declared to be an habitual felon. For the purpose of this Article, a felony offense is defined as an offense which is a felony under the laws of the State or other sovereign wherein a plea of guilty was entered or a conviction was returned regardless of the sentence actually imposed. Provided, however, that federal offenses relating to the manufacture, possession, sale and kindred offenses involving intoxicating liquors shall not be considered felonies for the purposes of this Article. For the purposes of this Article, felonies committed before a person attains the age of 18 years shall not constitute more than one felony. The commission of a second felony shall not fall within the purview of this Article unless it is committed after the conviction of or plea of guilty to the first felony. The commission of a third felony shall not fall within the purview of this Article unless it is committed after the conviction of or plea of guilty to the second felony. Pleas of guilty to or convictions of felony offenses prior to July 6, 1967, shall not be felony offenses within the meaning of this Article. Any felony offense to which a pardon has been extended shall not for the purpose of this Article constitute a felony. The burden of proving such pardon shall rest with the defendant and the State shall not be required to disprove a pardon. (1967, c. 1241, s. 1; 1971, c. 1231, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — This Article was repealed by Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 4. The repeal, however, never went into effect. The repealing act was originally made effective July 1, 1980, but was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179; and Session Laws 1981, c. 179, s. 10, repealed Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 4.

Legal Periodicals. — For a survey of 1977 criminal law, see 56 N.C.L. Rev. 965 (1978).

CASE NOTES

Being an habitual felon is not a crime but is a status the attaining of which subjects a person thereafter convicted of a crime to an increased punishment for that crime. The status itself, standing alone, will not support a criminal sentence. State v. Allen, 292 N.C. 431, 233 S.E.2d 585 (1977).

Cited in State v. Williams, 295 N.C. 655, 249 S.E.2d 709 (1978).

§ 14-7.2. Punishment.

When any person is charged by indictment with the commission of a felony under the laws of the State of North Carolina and is also charged with being an habitual felon as defined in G.S. 14-7.1, he must, upon conviction, be sentenced and punished as an habitual felon, as in this Chapter provided, except in those cases where the death penalty or a life sentence is imposed. (1967, c. 1241, s. 2; 1981, c. 179, s. 11.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, inserted "or a life sentence" near the end of the section.

CASE NOTES

Being an habitual felon is not a crime but is a status the attaining of which subjects a person thereafter convicted of a crime to an increased punishment for that crime. The status itself, standing alone, will not support a criminal sentence. State v. Allen, 292 N.C. 431, 233 S.E.2d 585 (1977).

The only reason for establishing that an accused is an habitual felon is to enhance the punishment which would otherwise be appropriate for the substantive felony which he has allegedly committed while in such a status. The effect of such a proceeding is to enhance the punishment of those found guilty of crime who are also shown to have been convicted of other crimes in the past. State v. Allen, 292 N.C. 431, 233 S.E.2d 585 (1977).

§ 14-7.3. Charge of habitual felon.

An indictment which charges a person who is an habitual felon within the meaning of G.S. 14-7.1 with the commission of any felony under the laws of the State of North Carolina must, in order to sustain a conviction of habitual felon, also charge that said person is an habitual felon. The indictment charging the defendant as an habitual felon shall be separate from the indictment charging him with the principal felony. An indictment which charges a person with being an habitual felon must set forth the date that prior felony offenses were committed, the name of the state or other sovereign against whom said felony offenses were committed, the dates that pleas of guilty were entered to or convictions returned in said felony offenses, and the identity of the court wherein said pleas or convictions took place. No defendant charged with being an habitual felon in a bill of indictment shall be required to go to trial on said charge within 20 days of the finding of a true bill by the grand jury; provided, the defendant may waive this 20-day period. (1967, c. 1241, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

One basic purpose behind this Chapter is to provide notice to defendant that he is being prosecuted for some substantive felony as a recidivist. Failure to provide such notice where the State accepts a guilty plea on the substantive felony charge may well vitiate the plea itself as not being knowingly entered with full understanding of the consequences. State v. Allen, 292 N.C. 431, 233 S.E.2d 585 (1977).

Separate Indictment Charging Defendant as Habitual Felon Contemplated. — Properly construed, this Chapter clearly contemplates that when one who has already attained the status of an habitual felon is indicted for the commission of another felony, that person may then be also indicted in a separate bill as being an habitual felon. State v. Allen, 292 N.C. 431, 233 S.E.2d 585 (1977).

Defective Indictment. — Since it is clear from the indictment that prior to its return all the substantive felony proceedings upon which it is based had been prosecuted to completion and there was no pending felony prosecution to which the habitual felon proceeding could attach as an ancillary proceeding, the indictment on motion of the defendant should have been dismissed for failure of the bill to charge a cognizable offense. State v. Allen, 292 N.C. 431, 233 S.E.2d 585 (1977).

§ 14-7.4. Evidence of prior convictions of felony offenses.

In all cases where a person is charged under the provisions of this Article with being an habitual felon, the record or records of prior convictions of felony offenses shall be admissible in evidence, but only for the purpose of proving that said person has been convicted of former felony offenses. A prior conviction may be proved by stipulation of the parties or by the original or a certified copy of the court record of the prior conviction. The original or certified copy of the court record, bearing the same name as that by which the defendant is charged, shall be prima facie evidence that the defendant named therein is the same as the defendant before the court, and shall be prima facie evidence of the facts set out therein. (1967, c. 1241, s. 4; 1981, c. 179, s. 12.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted the present second and third sentences for the former second sentence, which read: "A judgment of a conviction or plea of guilty to a felony offense certified to a superior court of this State from the custodian of records of any state or federal court under the same name as that by which the defendant is charged with habitual felon shall be prima facie evidence that the identity of such person is the same as the defendant so charged and shall be prima facie evidence of the facts so certified."

§ 14-7.5. Verdict and judgment.

When an indictment charges an habitual felon with a felony as above provided and an indictment also charges that said person is an habitual felon as provided herein, the defendant shall be tried for the principal felony as provided by law. The indictment that the person is an habitual felon shall not be revealed to the jury unless the jury shall find that the defendant is guilty of the principal felony or other felony with which he is charged. If the jury finds the defendant guilty of a felony, the bill of indictment charging the defendant as an habitual felon may be presented to the same jury. Except that the same jury may be used, the proceedings shall be as if the issue of habitual felon were a principal charge. If the jury finds that the defendant is an habitual felon, the trial judge shall enter judgment according to the provisions of this Article. If the jury finds that the defendant is not an habitual felon, the trial judge shall pronounce judgment on the principal felony or felonies as provided by law. (1967, c. 1241, s. 5.)

Legal Periodicals. — For a survey of 1977 criminal law, see 56 N.C.L. Rev. 965 (1978).

CASE NOTES

It is clear that the proceeding by which the State seeks to establish that defendant is an habitual felon is necessarily ancillary to a pending prosecution for the "principal," or substantive, felony. The Chapter does not authorize a proceeding independent from the prosecution of some substantive felony for the sole purpose of establishing a defendant's status as an habitual felon. State v. Allen, 292 N.C. 431, 233 S.E.2d 585 1977.

§ 14-7.6. Sentencing of habitual felons.

When an habitual felon as defined in this Article shall commit any felony under the laws of the State of North Carolina, he must, upon conviction or plea of guilty under indictment as herein provided (except where the death penalty or a sentence of life imprisonment is imposed) be sentenced as a Class C felon. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a person sentenced under this Article shall serve a term of not less than seven years in prison, excluding gain time granted under G.S. 148-13. A person sentenced under this Article shall receive a sentence of at least 14 years in the State's prison and shall be entitled to credit for good behavior under G.S. 15A-1340.7. The sentencing judge may not suspend the sentence and may not place the person sentenced on probation. Sentences imposed under this Article shall run consecutively with and shall commence at the expiration of any sentence being served by the person sentenced hereunder. (1967, c. 1241, s. 6; 1981, c. 179, s. 13.)

Effect of Amendments. — The 1981 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, rewrote this section.

CASE NOTES

Being an habitual felon is not a crime but is a status the attaining of which subjects a person thereafter convicted of a crime to an increased punishment for that crime. The status itself, standing alone, will not support a criminal sentence. State v. Allen, 292 N.C. 431, 233 S.E.2d 585 (1977).

The only reason for establishing that an accused is an habitual felon is to enhance the punishment which would otherwise be appropriate for the substantive felony which he has allegedly committed while in such a status. The effect of such a proceeding is to enhance the punishment of those found guilty of crime who are also shown to have been convicted of other crimes in the past. State v. Allen, 292 N.C. 431, 233 S.E.2d 585 (1977).

SUBCHAPTER II. OFFENSES AGAINST THE STATE.

ARTICLE 3.

Rebellion.

§ 14-8. Rebellion against the State.

If any person shall incite, set on foot, assist or engage in a rebellion or insurrection against the authority of the State of North Carolina or the laws thereof, or shall give aid or comfort thereto, every person so offending in any of the ways aforesaid shall be guilty of a felony, and shall be punished as a Class G felon. (Const., art. 4, s. 5; 1861, c. 18; 1866, c. 64; 1868, c. 60, s. 2; Code, s. 1106; Rev., s. 3437; C. S., s. 4178; 1979, c. 760, s. 5.)

Cross References. — For statute providing the maximum punishment for felonies, see § 14-1.1.

Effect of Amendments. — The 1979 amendment, effective July 1, 1981, substituted "and shall be punished as a Class G felon" for "and, shall be punished by imprisonment in the State's prison for not more than fifteen years and by a fine of not more than ten thousand dollars" at the end of the section. The 1979 amendatory act was originally made effective July 1, 1980. It was postponed to March 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316; to April 15, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 63; and to July 1, 1981, by Session Laws 1981, c. 179.

Session Laws 1979, c. 760, s. 6, as amended by Session Laws 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1316, s. 47; 1981, c. 63, s. 1; and 1981, c. 179, s. 14, provides: "This act shall become effective on July 1, 1981, and shall apply only to offenses committed on or after that date, unless specific language of the act indicates otherwise."

§ 14-9. Conspiring to rebel against the State.

If two or more persons shall conspire together to overthrow or put down, or to destroy by force, the government of North Carolina, or to levy war against the government of the State, or to oppose by force the authority of such government, or by force or threats to intimidate, or to prevent, hinder or delay the execution of any law of the State, or by force or fraud to seize or take possession of any firearms or other property of the State, against the will or contrary to the authority of such State, every person so offending in any of the ways aforesaid shall be punished as a Class H felon. CASE NOTES

Applicability of Section. — In State v. Bank of Fayetteville, 48 N.C. 450 (1856), it was held that this section, making it an offense to "pass and receive" bank notes, did not apply to a bank, but that the bank should be penalized under another section which made it unlawful to make and issue notes of a less denomination than $3.00.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Purpose. — This section intended to select out of all murders denounced those that were more heinous because committed with premeditation and deliberation, or in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of a felony, etc., as murder in the first degree, punishable with death, and leave other murders deemed less heinous as murder in the second degree, punished by imprisonment. State v. Smith, 221 N.C. 278, 20 S.E.2d 313 (1942).

Division of Murder into Degrees. — At common law, when the intentional killing by a deadly weapon was shown, the law presumed malice aforethought, and the burden of reducing the offense to a lower grade by proof of matters of mitigation or excuse devolved upon the prisoner. The statute dividing murder into two degrees (under this section) contains no reference to this rule, but the Supreme Court of North Carolina in State v. Fuller, 114 N.C. 885, 19 S.E. 797 (1894), overruled on other grounds, State v. McKenna, 289 N.C. 668, 224 S.E.2d 537 (1976), held that one result of the division of murder into two degrees was that proof of intentional killing with a deadly instrument raised a presumption only of murder in the second degree, and the burden was on the State to aggregate the offense to murder in the first degree, as it was on the prisoner, to reduce it. But this applies only to cases of homicide in which premeditation must be shown and not when the homicide is shown or admitted to have been committed by lying in wait, poisoning, starvation, imprisonment or torture. As to these, when intentionally done, the law still raised the presumption of murder in the first degree. But nonetheless if the jury convict of a lesser offense, it is within their power so to do under the statute. Nor is intentional homicide by poisoning necessarily always murder in the first degree. The presumption may be rebutted. State v. Matthews, 142 N.C. 621, 55 S.E. 342 (1906).
